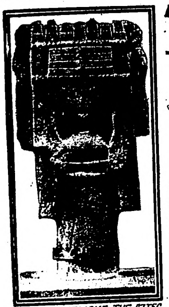
Pausanius, the Greek general, died by self administered poison. When hotly pursued by those sent to apprehend him on a charge of treason and sacrilege he took refuge in the sanctuary of a temple. Unable to remove him by force and also unwilling to violate the sanctuary, the officers walled up the entrance and began to unroof the building. When he could be seen they noticed that he was chewing something which proved to be a quill filled with poison. By the time the work had sufficiently advanced to admit of their entrance he was in a dying condition.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE NATIONAL MUSEUM OF MEXICO

By GEORGE VEST GUYER



CHALCHIUHTLICUE, THE AZTEC GODDESS OF WATER ✦ ✦

STONE IMAGE OF TIGER FOUND IN MEXICO CITY

THE National Museum of Mexico may be said to have just emerged from its infancy, as it is only within the last decade that any real attention has been given to it. It has a wonderfully wide scope, and a most brilliant future, as the republic is probably the richest field in the world today for the archaeologist. Many buried cities are being discovered, and traces of prehistoric civilization in America are constantly throwing an illuminating ray upon the many vexing problems which have for years been the despair of the historian. In fact, Mexico may today very properly claim the title of "The Egypt of America." Why, indeed, should the archaeologist go to Egypt, when Mexico offers to him such rich and inexhaustible fields as Mitla, Monte Alban, Palenque, San Juan de Teotihuacan, the ruins of Uxmal, and of Chi Chen Itza in Yucatan, and many others which are just being unearthed?

The museum located at the national capital is generally the first place sought out by the thousands of tourists who pour into the country each year. And it is well worth a visit, for it offers certain things which no other museum in the world could offer to the eyes of the curious.

The best brief sketch of its history is given by its director, Lic. Genaro Garcia, himself a notable historian and archaeologist, in the introduction of volume 1, No. 1, of the "Annals of the National Museum of Archaeology, History and Ethnology," a most creditable publication which is issued monthly by the institution, under the direct supervision of Lic. Garcia. In speaking of the foundation of the museum which he has brought up to such a creditable standard, Lic. Garcia says:

Under the Spanish domination there existed only a small collection of antiquities in Mexico, consisting, for the greater part, of the codexes and native manuscripts which a cavalier of Milan, Italy, Don Lorenzo de Boturini y Benaduci, Senor de la Tore y Homo, had been able to collect, at the cost of unheard-of sacrifices, and which were confiscated in the most unjust manner by the vice-regal government in 1743. These antiquities were first kept in the office of the viceroy's secretary, and afterward in the library of the Royal and Pontifical University of Mexico, where they were taken by order of His Excellency Antonio Maria de Bucareli y Ursua, viceroy of New Spain. In one and another place they were greatly damaged by neglect, humidity, rats and thefts.

Upon the consummation of Mexico's independence the national government not only directed that the existing antiquities be kept at the same university, but assigned, in addition, the sum of $1,892, 1 real and 1 "grano," for the salaries of a directing professor of botany, a gardener, and the expenses of the garden.

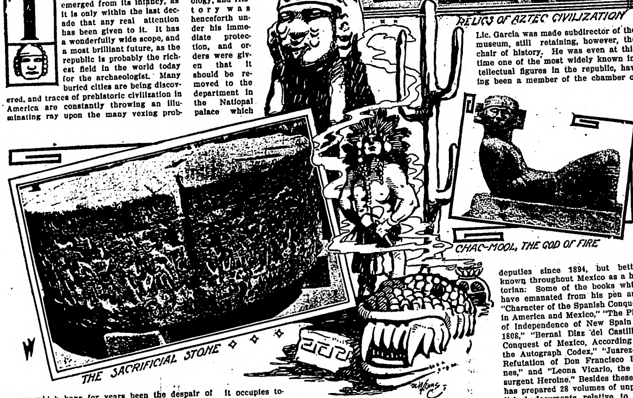
When this appropriation was made the government did not as yet have in mind the establishment of a national museum which, according to Gen. Lucas Alaman, then secretary of state and foreign relations, in a memorial presented to congress on January 11, 1825, was to be a matter for the future. Notwithstanding all this, Don Sebastian Camacho, successor to General Alaman, announced to congress during the latter part of the same year that the National museum had been established, "under the most happy auspices, with a keeper intrusted with its arrangement, safety, and development," and with many projects for "scientific trips, discoveries, excavations, and other operations" which were never made. The museum, therefore, had no other end than that of the conservation of a few antiquities, unclassified, and in generally bad shape.

The museum proper had its birth by virtue of the decree of November 21, which ordered its formal creation and its division into three branches—antiquities, products of natural history and industry, and botanical garden.

The chief executive of the republic proceeded at once to the organization of the museum in accordance with the foregoing decree, and appointed as members of the directive board Messrs. Pable de la Llave, Isidro Ignacio Icaza, Miguel Bustamante, Jose Mariano Sanchez Mora, Ignacio Cubas, Dr. Rafael Olaguibel, and Ignacio Mora. Although the president was empowered to move the museum, from May 20, 1831, to the building formerly occupied by the now extinct Inquisition, the date of removal was indefinitely postponed and the establishment continued its existence at the university without being able to make the slightest development. For many years afterward it was grossly neglected.

Upon the arrival of the Archduke Maximilian, a decree was issued, December 4, 1865, declaring that the Public Museum of Natural History, Archaeology, and History was henceforth under his immediate protection, and orders were given that it should be removed to the department in the National palace which it occupies today, the same having been used before as the Casa de Moneda; that it should have a library, to be formed from books owned by the university and by the convents which had just been abolished, and that the government would provide the expenses of installation, conservation, and development.

RELICS OF AZTEC CIVILIZATION



THE SACRIFICIAL STONE ✦ ✦ ✦

CHAC-MOOL, THE GOD OF FIRE

After the constitutional government triumphed over Maximilian, it appropriated, in the budget for 1867-1868, the sum of $12,000 for the museum; half of which was for expenses and the other half for the salaries of a director, two professors of natural history, a preparador, a clerk, an errand boy, and a porter. Unfortunately the poverty of the public treasury at that time prevented the government for many years from increasing the appropriations for the museum, which only reached $12,160 during the fiscal year 1876-1877, for which reason it had little opportunity to make any progress.

When Gen. Porfirio Diaz came into the supreme magistracy of the republic, he, the indisputable restorer of the public peace and the first factor in the actual progress of Mexico, gave a great impulse to all the federal educational establishments. The museum, which in 1877-1878 only had an appropriation of $13,360, received an increase each year, until in the year 1901 it reached the sum of $24,797.20. In this manner its development was enabled to keep pace with the rest of the country.

The progress of the museum has been very rapid since Lic. Don Justo Sierra, secretary of public instruction, took charge of the educational development of Mexico, and during the past three years it has enlarged its collections until they consist of nearly 70,000 objects. Such an abnormal development made the space occupied by it too small, and it was divided into two departments: National Museum of History, Archaeology, and Ethnology, and National Museum of History. The former remains in the National palace, and the latter is being removed to a new building of sufficient size for its requirements.

A striking proof of the efforts made by the supreme government to perfect its educational establishments is the fact that the present annual appropriation for the museum of $120,000 is almost ten times as great as was the appropriation of 1867-1868.

The publication in which this sketch appeared is of comparatively recent origin, in so far as its actual importance is concerned. It was founded in 1877, its director at that time being Prof. Gumesindo Mendoza, his principal collaborators being Manúel Orozco y Berra, and Lic. Alfredo Chavero. It was not at that time printed in the museum, as it is only since 1885 that the printing plant of the museum, which had a very humble beginning, got its start, the nucleus of which was a small Colombine press, model 2, chiefly used for running off cards, or classification slips for the objects contained in the establishment. From this time on, however, the various directors who came and went, each recognizing the importance of having a well equipped print shop, made important additions, until the plant attained its highest degree of efficiency, a year or so ago, with the acquisition of an Optimus press. To celebrate its acquisition two special studies were written and run off on the new press, one of which, entitled "Porfirio Diaz, Sus Padres, Ninez y Juventud" ("Porfirio Diaz, his parents, childhood and youth"), was written by Lic. Garcia, then professor of history in the museum, and the edition, which was beautifully gotten up, was immediately exhausted.

Shortly after this, or about the middle of 1907, Lic. Garcia was made subdirector of the museum, still retaining, however, the chair of history. He was even at this time one of the most widely known intellectual figures in the republic, having been a member of the chamber of deputies since 1894, but better known throughout Mexico as a historian. Some of the books which have emanated from his pen are: "Character of the Spanish Conquest in America and Mexico," "The Plan of Independence of New Spain in 1808," "Bernal Diaz del Castillo's Conquest of Mexico, According to the Autograph Codex," "Juarez—a Refutation of Don Francisco Bulnes," and "Leona Vicario, the Insurgent Heroine." Besides these he has prepared 28 volumes of unpublished documents relative to the history of Mexico. Upon his promotion to the position Lic. Garcia immediately proceeded to the scientific classification of the many articles contained in the museum, giving to each object a card specifying both its vulgar and scientific name, the place where it originated, and such other observations as would give the public an intelligent idea regarding it. He added greatly to the collections of the museum, acquiring in one year alone 74,000 objects, and perfected the official publication known as "Anales del Museo Nacional," bringing it up to such a high standard that it is today perhaps the best publication of its kind in the world.

Having finally been made director in chief, Lic. Garcia secured the separation of the museum into two departments, thus making a separate branch entirely of the department of natural history and subdividing the national museum of archaeology, history, and ethnology into six departments—archaeology, history, ethnology, industrial retrospective art, publications, and library.

The department of archaeology is composed of seven large halls, which are called "salon azteca," "salon tolteca," "salon tarasco," "salon mixteca," "salon zapoteca," etc., each hall thus representing a distinct division of Mexican archaeology.

The department of history consists of four "salones," situated in the principal inner section of the third floor, in which are exhibited many interesting objects.

The department of ethnology occupies almost the entire second floor and contains mostly objects strictly related to the aborigines—such as plaster casts of heads, hands, and feet; dress, furniture, chattels, etc.; photographs and oil paintings; industrial products, and ethnological maps, all classified in a similar manner to those in the department of archaeology.

The department of industrial retrospective art consists of five "salones," and was created only recently by Lic. Garcia. In the first salon are exhibited a series of oil paintings representing the costumes worn by the citizens of different epochs in the nation's history, from the time of Cortez down. In the second salon are six large glass cases in which are exhibited objects of iron, jewels, costumes, military objects, etc. In the third salon are three large glass cases in which are to be found dining-room articles, all grouped according to classes, among which will be found part of the magnificent table service of the Emperor Maximilian. In the fourth salon Maxilimian's royal carriage is exhibited, as is his road carriage. Close by is the coach which belonged to Juarez, the restorer of the republic, in which he traveled when pursued by the imperialist armies. The fifth salon contains many objects of high artistic value.

The department of publications is one of the most important in the museum, and has charge of all the documents which are printed relative to it. It is at present preparing, in commemoration of Mexico's centennial, which will begin in September, a number of volumes which will treat of the different plans which were formulated for the country's emancipation from Spain.

The library is situated on the lower floor, a few steps from the main entrance, and the books which it contains are classified in perfect order, so that it is an easy matter for the person wishing to look up any certain point in history, archaeology, or ethnology to get full and complete data at very short notice.

AN ACHING BACK

Means Weak Kidneys.

Well kidneys filter the blood of uric acid and other impurities. When the kidneys are sick, waste matter accumulates and backache, headache and urinary troubles result. To eliminate the aches and pains you must cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, and cure them permanently.

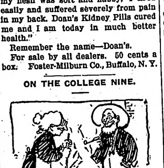
Every Picture Tells A Story

J. N. Markham, Montesano, Wash., says: "Kidney trouble came on me gradually and before long I was suffering from dropsy. My body bloated and my flesh was soft and flabby, I tired easily and suffered severely from pain in my back. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I am today in much better health."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

ON THE COLLEGE NINE.



"'Tain't no use talkin', Cyrus, thet boy of ourn certainly do love th' country. He writ me er letter yesterday an' sez he was overjoyed 'cause ther going ter put him in th' right field next summer."

16 YEARS OF SKIN DISEASE

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse, and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills] and I did not need more than a trial to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true care for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., July 30 and Aug. 8, '09."

A Wonder Worker.

Sapleigh—Ah, speaking of electricity, that makes me think—

Miss Keene—Really, Mr. Sapleigh? Isn't it remarkable what electricity can do!

When our names are blotted out, and our place knows us no more, the energy of each social service will remain.—John Morley.

GNAT CAUSES PELLAGRA.

Committee on Disease in Europe Says Corn Is Not to Blame.

London, May 14.—Dr. Sambon, a member of the Field committee which has been investigating the disease pellagra, telegraphs from Rome that the committee has definitely proved that maize or Indian corn is not the cause of pellagra.

The committee finds that the parasitic conveyor of the disease is the "simulium repans," a species of biting gnat.

Not the Reply He Expected.

"Do you object to smoking?" he asked.

"Not at all. Have you a cigarette?" she replied.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (800 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year.

1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item.

Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions.

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.

For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 116, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
(Use address nearest you) (2)

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable —act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$5, $4, $3.50, $3, $2.50 & $2

THE STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS.

Millions of men wear W. L. Douglas shoes because they are the lowest prices, quality considered, in the world. Made upon honor, of the best leathers, by the most skilled workmen, in all the latest fashions.

W. L. Douglas $5.00 and $4.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00.

Boys' Shoes, $3, $2.50 & $2

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it. Take No Substitute. Fast Color Eyelets.

Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes. If not for sale in your town write for Mail Order Catalog showing how to order by mail. Shoes ordered direct from factory delivered free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

Tea Time Talks

Taste In Tea

is largely due to chance rather than choice. Because Japan teas first came into common use in the United States, many still drink them, although the development of the tea trade gives the choice of such a superior tea as "Salada" Green.

The increasing use of "Salada" Ceylon Tea proves that the public is cultivating a refined taste in tea. To those accustomed to Japan Tea, a cup of "Salada" Green will give a new idea of the deliciousness of this wholsome beverage.

"SALADA" TEA

Yearly Sales Over 20,000,000 Packages

Ask your grocer for "Salada" or send for a free trial package. We mail it without charge. Say whether you use Black, Mixed, Green or Japan Tea.

The "Salada" Tea Co.

Shelby Block, Detroit, Mich.

FREE! FREE! 7,000.00 MONEY VALUE PRIZES FREE!

Consisting of Purchase Checks of $$25^{00}$ to $$150^{00}$ According to Merit.

ALSO:

One Lady's Watch

One Gentleman's Watch

One Lady's Diamond Ring

For Answering this REBUS—

And to advertise the genuine, hand made, sweet toned

Segerstrom Piano

and to advertise our Factory-to-Home Plan of selling pianos, and the fastest growing piano manufacturing business in the United States

MRS. IDEAL is playing the accompaniment for her two little girls' singing. FIND THE TWO LITTLE GIRLS! Mark their outline carefully with pen or pencil on this or a separate sheet of paper.

LOOKS EASY, BUT IS IT?

TRY AT ONCE. Your chance is just as GOOD as any one else's. Enclose self addressed envelope to guard against answer being misdirected.

ADDRESS DEPT. B, SEGERSTROM PIANO MFG. CO.

[illegible] STREET

OMAHA, NEBRASKA

MY HATED RIVAL AND A LAME HORSE

By C. C. HAHN

I had left the lady of my heart at her home in a little village in the northern part of the state while I came to the city to make my fortune. In the meantime, however, Marian Phillips was true, and life would have run along very peacefully had it not been for a hated rival. He had money, while I was, as yet, a mere clerk. And there was no one in the little up-country town to say a word in my defense except one person, her Uncle Tom.

At length there came a heart-rending letter from Marian in which she told me of dire persecution to compel her to marry my rival, and closing with an expression of fear that there was a conspiracy on foot to kidnap her—on some pretext or other to get her over into Canada, where she could be concealed from me.

I did not give much thought to the latter possibility, but the fact that Marian was afraid was enough for me and I started back home the next day. I likewise took along a wedding suit.

At Bronxton we reached the end of our journey by rail; from which place an old-fashioned stage line perpetuated its franchise by means of an open spring wagon with three seats. In the waiting room of the station, I met two fellow travelers whom I had seen on the train but had not recognized. Years had passed since I had met Mr. and Mrs. Giles, the respected uncle and aunt of my hated rival. The revelation of their identity filled me with undefined fears. What was the object of their journey back from Massachusetts to the old home at this most suspicious occasion?

"I Started Back Home the Next Day."

The years which had changed the features of this worthy couple had brought greater changes in my own face. Thankful that they did not recognize me, and unwilling to reveal myself at that time, I gave my name as James Lacey, of Springfield, when we negotiated for seats with the stage driver. A breakdown near a small town created a diversion in the monotony of the trip, and, walking on to the village, which was only a mile away. I hired a two-seated sleigh, and inviting Mr. and Mrs. Giles to accompany me, we renewed our journey. Again Fate seemed to have it laid up for me. We had gone no more than half a dozen miles when one of the horses went dead lame, and we barely reached a halfway house by night. The driver assured us the team would be all right by morning.

Half an hour later, I saw a team standing in front of the tavern—a team so exactly like the one behind which we had labored for half a day, that I ran out to ask our driver what he meant by hitching up again. Rushing around to the barn I found the driver in conversation with a long, loose-hung young man with a feeble jaw and hay-colored hair, dressed in his Sunday best.

"All right, Hank," I heard the driver say, and with an involuntary start I stepped back into the shadows. Hank Collins was my hated rival, and this was he!

"Be sure and rub my team down well, Pat," my rival was saying. "I've got to get back to Elmdale tonight. Came over to hire Johnson's two-seated sleigh. Just got news that I will have to run over into Canada."

"A man doesn't need a two-seated sleigh to do that!"

"He does in my business," was the, to me, suspicious reply.

"There are others going with me and I know a fellow down state that would give his head to know about it. I'd like to see his face when he finds out we have turned the trick without him."

Could anything be more conclusive? Marian's fears were well founded. I had arrived in the nick of time to save her. A shiver passed through me. In an instant I saw the whole plot.

I began to reason. Either Hank Collins must not get to the old home tonight or I must get there before him. But how? Then the thought of how his spirited team exactly matched my own lame and tired one flashed through my mind and my plans were laid in an instant.

"Pat," I said, after the driver had returned with Hank's team and stabled it. "Have you had your supper?"

"Nary a bit."

"Go and get it as soon as you have rubbed down the team. And—here's $5 for saying nothing——"

"Sure I can do that easy."

"I must get on to Elmdale tonight. The lady and gentleman who were with me will come in the morning. Say nothing about it, but after you get your supper come out and hitch up for me."

"But that lame horse!"

"The hour's rest will make him all right!" He mumbled a little, but the $5 bill was a wonderful argument.

As soon as he was gone I changed the location of those two teams, so that the lame horse was in Hank's stall and his fresh team standing where Pat had left my own weary one.

This job safely accomplished, I went in to my own supper, recalling as I stepped inside the house that, in a moment of forgetfulness, I had signed my true name, Mark Hathaway, on the register, and there was my hated rival standing at the desk reading the list of guests.

Whatever scheme might be on foot, I soon noticed that the nephew was making a successful attempt to avoid the uncle, who clung persistently to my side. At length, however, we cornered one another at the hall entrance, and to my amazement the younger man was embarrassed at meeting his relative.

"You here?" was his only greeting as Uncle Silas grabbed him by the hand and hastened to introduce me as "Mr. James Lacey, of Springfield."

"Mr. James Lacey, of Springfield," repeated Hank, open-mouthed in astonishment. "Why, I thought——"

"I am glad to learn," I hastily broke in, "that you have been able to arrange your trip to Canada."

Hank shot a gleam of hate at me as his uncle exclaimed:

"Going to Canada? You don't mean to say——"

I withdrew, and 15 minutes later Pat and I were on our way to Elmdale, conscious that if Hank followed he would have an all-night job with a lame horse. Before midnight I had told the whole story to Uncle Tom, and early in the morning we drove over to Marian's.

Hank was not there, but his father was, and he glared at me in such a belligerent manner that I immediately took Marian in my arms and kissed her.

"Young man," he said, spreading a pious mask over his face, "do you mean to say that you have come up here to take this innocent girl away from her home and friends and marry her against their wishes?"

"I certainly intend to marry her," I replied.

"Oh, Marian, Marian," continued Pa Collins; oh, little Marian, who has been in my Sunday school class and grown up under my eye, kin you, I ask, kin you so far forget yourself as to marry this man?"

"I certainly can and will," came firmly from "little Marian."

"Then," spoke up Uncle Tom, "the laws of the country having been complied with, I as clerk of the county of Wooster certify that you are man and wife."

They — are — man — and — wife!" asked Pa Collins.

"I am glad to hear you pronounce them so," Uncle Tom flashed back before any one else could speak. "That was all that could possibly be necessary to make the marriage regular. Valid it was, anyway."

"What do you mean?" demanded both of Marian's parents in one breath.

"What do I mean? I mean just this: That Mr. Collins being a justice of the peace, having asked each one of these young folks if they would have each other, and both answering 'yes,' he has pronounced them man and wife, and I as clerk of the county court will be obliged to make out a certificate for them to that effect."

"That's so," Pa Collins ejaculated, sinking back under the weight of the blow. "But I never thought of it."

What more might have been said or done no one can conjecture, for just then there was a jingling of sleigh bells and Uncle and Aunt Giles burst into the room.

"Do you know what that scoundrel of a son of yours has done?" Uncle Giles cried, shaking his fist in Pa Collins' face. "I sent him $5,000 to invest in the Canadian Muffler company, with a written agreement that if he should ever wish to sell out he would notify me so that I could protect myself. Last week he made a fraudulent assignment without mentioning me as a creditor, and today he was to have gone to Canada with the three men he assigned to, where the assets were to be turned over, and I would have lost my money. But Providence was on the side of right, for by mistake he got a lame horse out of Johnson's livery stable,

"So it was Hank's horse that got mixed up with yours?" asked Uncle Tom, with a twinkle in his eye.

"It was."

"Then Providence was good to us all around, for I own half the shares in the Canadian muffler business, and Marian's wedding portion would have been considerably reduced if you hadn't managed to make the exchange. Sister, shake hands with your new son."

The DAIRY

DAIRY NOTES.

The feed that produces milk does not produce fat.

Wasted butter-fat is a serious loss and cuts into the profits unmercifully.

The separator cuts down the cost of delivery, thereby increasing the profit.

It is a shame to ask a cow to make milk and butter-fat without proper feed.

The calves that are kept growing from the very start have the best chance.

In dairying as in everything else, if undertaken, be a good one or keep out entirely.

The dairy cow is fed today and tomorrow the cash product is in the milk pail.

Good butter cannot be made out of bad. Butter is a thing that cannot be much improved.

Dairy cattle breeders all over the United States are appreciating the value of advertising.

The vicious cow is always disliked, but nine times out of ten she is the result of careless handling.

The use to which the farmer puts his skimmed milk is a large factor in determining the profits of the dairy.

Milk as it comes from the healthy cow is strictly pure, but it is a very happy home for all kinds of germ life.

Dairy cows are expensive. The profitable way to keep the herd up is to raise the calves from the best milkers.

Dairy products are condensed products, hence the cost of marketing is less and the profits are proportionally larger.

The separator is a clarifier of the milk, but it cannot take the place of careful methods in producing and straining.

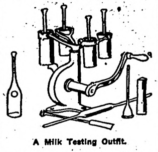
The by-products of the cow, skimmed milk and butter milk, are worth more in raising pigs and calves than for any other possible purpose.

It pays to strip the cows. A recent experiment showed that the strippings are unquestionably the most valuable part of the milk. Further than this, the cow that is not stripped does not hold up as well in her milk flow.

HAND MILK TESTING OUTFIT

Directions Usually Accompany Equipment So That Little Trouble Is Met in Making Tests.

The outfit shown in the illustration is sold complete. Directions usually accompany them so that no trouble will be experienced in making satisfactory tests. The outfit consists of a machine in which bottles are whirled at a high speed. The bottles are graduated so the percentage of fat can be read on the neck of the bottle, writes C. H. Alvord in Missouri Valley Farmer. There is also a pipette in which milk can be accurately measured and a glass in which an equal quantity of sulphuric acid used in testing can be poured. The important thing in making the test is to secure a fair sample of the milk or cream. This may be done by pouring the milk from one vessel into another or by stirring it up thoroughly. When the sample of milk or cream has been prepared for testing and placed in the testing bottle, this bottle is put in the tester and whirled for four or five minutes. Later a second rotation of about one minute is given and the reading of the test may then be taken.



A Milk Testing Outfit.

BREAKING COWS OF SUCKING

Oklahoma Dairyman Has Sure and Simple Method—Animal Can Eat and Drink as Usual.

(By J. C. DENISON, OKLAHOMA.)

Here is a sure and simple way to keep a cow from sucking herself: Get a hollow perforated bit, put it in her mouth with a strap of proper length to pass from one end of the bit behind the horns or pole in front of the ears and fasten it to the other end of the bit. If the bit cannot be procured, a piece of No. 11 smooth wire, loosely twisted, wire doubled, will answer. The theory is this: The wind passing through the bit of wire keeps the cow from drawing any milk. She can eat and drink water all right. Do not have the strap too tight, or the cow's mouth will get sore, especially if wire is used.

Richest Milk at Noon.

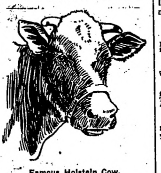
According to some experiments noted by the department of agriculture it was found that where cows were milked three times a day, morning, noon and evening, the milk was richest at noon and poorest in the morning, and when milked morning and evening the milk was slightly richer in the evening.

FACTS ABOUT DAIRY BREEDS

Holsteins, Ayrshires, Guernseys and Jerseys All Possess Excellent Characteristics.

There is no best breed for all localities, and even in any particular locality it is oftentimes difficult to say which is the best breed. In general it may be said that for dairy purposes any of the dairy breeds are superior to the beef or dual purpose breeds. This is true in any or all localities. It cannot be said, however, with the same degree of positiveness which of the dairy breeds is the best. By dairy breeds are meant Holstein, Ayrshire, Guernsey and Jersey. Each of these breeds has certain characteristics which make it adaptable to certain conditions.

The Jersey is the smallest and least adaptable for beef of any of the dairy breeds. The calves are small at birth, and do not grow fast, which makes them undesirable for veal. The Jersey gives, perhaps, the richest milk of the dairy breeds. The Jersey is the earliest maturing of any. Some heifers have been known to calve before reaching the age of fourteen months. Jerseys are noted for the persistence with which they yield milk. Cases are on record where cows have given milk for years with only one calf. One cow gave milk for five years without freshening but once. Jerseys will make a greater amount of butter fat out of the same amount of food than will any other breed.



Famous Holstein Cow.

The Guernseys are very similar to the Jerseys in size, form and general characteristics. They are larger, a little coarser and a little more beefy. The milk is yellower, but not quite so rich. To offset this, however, they will give more milk, which makes the total amount of butter fat practically the same for the two breeds. They are not so persistent in their milking qualities, but are somewhat better breeders than the Jerseys.

The Ayrshires are about the same size as the Guernseys, namely 1,000 to 1,100 pounds for mature cows. They have been developed in Scotland, where the land is rough and the pastures scanty. Consequently we find that they are the hardiest and the best rustlers of any of the breeds. They also carry more natural flesh than the Jerseys and Guernseys, which makes them more suitable for beef, and also for crossing with beef breeds. Ayrshires give more but thinner milk than the Jerseys and Guernseys. Their milk is adapted for retail trade and cheesemaking.

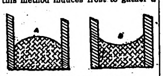
The Holsteins are the largest of any of the dairy breeds. The calves are large at birth and make good veal. The color is black to pure white, varying from almost pure black to pure white. The Holsteins give by far the most milk, and it is the thinnest milk of any breed, whether beef or dairy.

Parthenia Hengerveld, whose likeness is shown above, won the grand championship at the National Dairy show, Milwaukee, 1909. She is an Iowa cow.

PROPER CARE OF ENSILAGE

Accompanying Drawing Fairly Illustrates Right and Wrong Methods of Emptying Silo.

Many a man has learned by experience that silage is less likely to freeze when properly removed from the silo. The accompanying drawing fairly illustrates the wrong and right method of emptying a silo. In figure B the silage has been removed from the center and allowed to remain higher about the walls. Obviously this method induces frost to gather a thick layer of silage to the wall. When the silage is removed as indicated in figure A the center is kept the highest and thereby prevents the accumulation of frozen silage about the edges. A thin layer or thickness of silage is much more liable to freeze than is a large body of the succulence.



Method of Removing Silage.

Care of Skim Milk.

Aim to give as much attention to the care of the skim milk as to the cream or butter. If butter is made at home the same care should be given to the buttermilk. The skim milk and buttermilk may not be directly sold for money, yet when judiciously fed to pigs, poultry and calves they may represent nearly one-half the dairy profits.

Permit No Tobacco in Dairy.

No smoking or chewing of tobacco should be permitted while the milking is being done. The odor of the weed is quickly absorbed by the sensitive milk.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, In Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, paper-bound, sent for 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only. Cloth-bound, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Different.

Windig—Do you mean to say you believe that story Blinks told us this morning?

Hobert—Sure I do.

Windig—Well, I'm surprised. Why, I wouldn't believe it if I had told it myself.

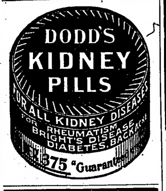
Hobert—Neither would I.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Too many sermons deal out sugar when the world needs moral sand.

PERRY DAVIS' PAINKILLER
for all sorts of cuts, bruises, burns and strains. Taken internally it cures diarrhea and dysentery. Avoid substitutes. 25c, 35c and 50c.

The deeper love's roots the less it runs to flowers of rhetoric.



INVENTORS
and others who have anything to manufacture will do well to write us before placing contract. We manufacture everything in metal, including sheet metal stamping, complicated machine designing and die and tool making. Write for any information desired.
LONG MFG. CO. 415 3rd Av. N., Minneapolis, Minn.

FOR DESSERT TO-DAY.
Deliciously Flavored
JELLYCON
The Perfect Jelly Dessert.
FREE! BEAUTIFUL ALUMINUM JELLY MOLDS.
The offer is fully explained on the circular in every package.
10c. Package.
Sold By All Grocers.

BEST QUALITY ANIMAL DIP
50 CENTS A GALLON
In 10 gallon lots. 5 gallon lots 58 cents per gallon. Samples sent free on request,
PURCHASERS MANUFACTURING CO.
Kalamazoo, Michigan

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.
PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC
Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.
A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.
THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Nothing Too Good
for you. That's why we want you to take CASCARETS for liver and bowels. It's not advertising talk—but merit—the great, wonderful, lasting merit of CASCARETS that we want you to know by trial. Then you'll have faith—and join the millions who keep well by CASCARETS alone. 909
CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use } Thompson's Eye Water

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 24–1910.

Health and Wealth in Colorado

Of course you are familiar with the delights of Colorado's climate and it's scenic grandeur but do you realize that Eastern Colorado has millions of acres of fertile land which can be bought cheap now. This is

Your Opportunity

This land produces wonderful results and big profits. It is a marvelous dairy and poultry country and high price markets with splendid transportation facilities are close at hand. Dairy cows thrive on the natural grasses and are free from many of the troubles elsewhere.

Now is the time to see these rich lands along the Rock Island Lines and learn what others are doing.

Very Low Excursion Fares

are in effect daily to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, via Rock Island Lines, with long return limits.

Why not combine business and pleasure? Enjoy an outing among the Colorado Rockies and investigate the wonderful land opportunities on the way. Write me today and I will give you interesting literature and tell you how easily you can do it.

Rock Island
L. M. ALLEN
Passenger Traffic Manager
236 LaSalle Station Chicago, Illinois

KANTLEAK METAL SHINGLES
Cover your "Lid" with Kantleak Metal Shingles and keep dry! Best metal shingles on the market. If your dealer does not handle them, write to DULUTH CORRUGATING & ROOFING CO.
Manufacturers of Metal Shingles, Roofing, Siding, etc.
DULUTH MINNESOTA

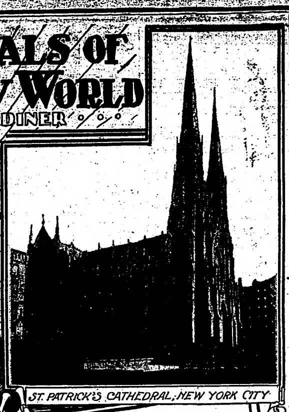
MSB THE GATEWAY TO SUCCESS
Minnesota School of Business
You should select a school as carefully as you would a savings bank. This school has proven its value by a successful existence of over thirty years. It is ready to train you for success. Its catalog is free.
54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

MICA AXLE GREASE
is the turning-point to economy in wear and tear of wagons. Try a box. Every dealer, everywhere
STANDARD OIL CO.
(Incorporated)

CATHEDRALS OF THE NEW WORLD

by FANNY H. GARDINER

CATHEDRAL AT SANTO DOMINGO — FIRST ERECTED IN AMERICA



ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, NEW YORK CITY

WHEN the Spanish discoverers and explorers of America drove the prows of their frail vessels through unknown seas in search of the India of their dreams they left Europe stirring with that new life which was to blossom in the renaissance. The dark ages were just closing and the wealth of knowledge and art so long hoarded in monasteries and castles, barred from the flow of human life, was about to burst forth like a flood to refertilize European civilization. Crumbling architecture was being restored, churches and palaces were being founded, great engineering works undertaken. In many respects, indeed, the wonderful activities and achievements of that time may be compared with those of our own, in spite of the differences in methods, materials and purpose. When Columbus left Palos in 1492 St. Peter's at Rome was in the hands of builders filled with the new ideas, but waiting for the genius of Bramante and Michel Angelo; the cathedral of his native Genoa was being greatly enlarged and embellished; that of Seville was nearing completion; that of Toledo was just finished. For 800 years the Gothic beauty of Burgos had been growing to its perfection in 1521, the year in which Cortez took the City of Mexico; and in the same year the beautiful cathedral at Granada, which enshrines the tombs of the Catholic kings and commemorates the deliverance of Spain from the Moors, was begun.

This passion for building crossed the ocean in the breasts of the Spanish discoverers and first colonists, who, although they celebrated their earliest religious services in tents by the seashore or beneath the branches of unfamiliar foliage, were impelled to erect as soon as possible temples big and splendid enough to express the master motives of their age—religion and art.

As Hispaniola, or the island of San Domingo, was the first land permanently settled, so Isabella, the capital, now the city of Santo Domingo, founded in 1496, contains what is probably the oldest cathedral church in the new world, begun in 1514. Within it rested the body of Columbus until this part of the island was ceded to the French in 1785, when the Spaniards carried what they supposed to be his remains with them to Cuba. Since that time other remains have been found here which the people of Santo Domingo, with justice, claim to be the true relics of the discoverer, and as such they are revered and jealously guarded within a handsome modern monument.

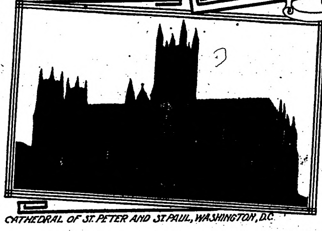
At Port au Prince, Haiti, there is a cathedral, long under construction and yet unfinished, of mixed French Gothic and Romanesque style. The French cathedral at St. Pierre, Martinique, was destroyed by the eruption of Mount Pelee, and the bishop's seat was removed to Fort de France. Owing to the fact that the government of Cuba rested for nearly 40 years at Santiago, from 1518-1582, it happens that this town boasts a cathedral which antedates that of Havana, but it is not remarkable as compared with many of the Spanish colonial edifices. The cathedral at Havana, and indeed that at Santo Domingo, has much to inspire enthusiasm from the artistic standpoint, but Havana has been interesting as the temporary sepulcher of what were called the bones of the great admiral. His sarcophagus and the memorable inscription were set into the wall of the chancel at the left of the high altar until after the war of 1898, when his descendant, the Duke of Veraguas, removed the much-disputed bones to the family mausoleum in Seville.

Cortez landed and burned his ships on the beach near Veracruz in 1519, determined upon the conquest of Mexico in the name of Spain and of the Catholic church. He marked his subjugation of every town and province by founding substantial works of engineering and architecture, wonderful, indeed, when one considers his slight acquaintance with the materials, the labor and the climate that confronted him and the magnitude and beauty of the results. On entering the City of Mexico Cortez destroyed the teocali, or Aztec temple, and erected on its site a small chapel for the Indians, traces of which still remain. In it was installed the seat of the first bishop of Mexico, who came out in 1528 as a suffragan of the bishop of Seville, but the cornerstone of the present cathedral was not laid until 1573. This is the most stupendous of all the Spanish colonial cathedrals, the largest in all the Americas, and said to be outranked only by St. Peter's in Rome and St. Paul's in London. It had cost at the time of its completion about $2,000,000, a sum as colossal in those days as the dimensions of the edifice itself.

Mexico has 22 dioceses and as many cathedrals, although not all the churches so designated were built for that purpose. Among the cathedrals of Mexico deserving mention is that of Puebla, which antedates that of the capital, having been founded by the first bishop in 1536. Its interior adornment is the richest of any in the country.

Central America was subjugated by Alvarado, the envoy of Cortez, in 1523. The capitals of the states into which this part of our continent is divided contain cathedrals for the local heads of the Catholic church. Some of them are very old, some are very imposing and carry out as far as possible the dominant ideas of the age of conquest.

CATHEDRAL OF THE CITY OF MEXICO



CATHEDRAL OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL, WASHINGTON, D.C.

INTERIOR OF THE CATHEDRAL AT ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

We have in the United States two examples of Spanish colonial architecture, although they bear no comparison to those of Mexico in size or wealth of decoration. The earlier is that at St. Augustine, Fla., founded in 1682. It was partially destroyed by fire in 1887, but has been carefully restored so as to preserve the original style, and its ancient bells rehung. The second is that of New Orleans, which, while it occupies the site of two previous French edifices, one destroyed by hurricane in 1723, the other by fire in 1788, was rebuilt in 1794 at the entire charge of a Spanish nobleman resident in the city while the colony was under the dominion of Charles IV. of spain. This is the statement inscribed on his tomb before the altar of St. Francis and mass for his soul is celebrated every Saturday. Nevertheless, the cathedral is dedicated to St. Louis, patron saint of France, and the recent decorations illustrate his life. The original design was of the late heavy Spanish renaissance style, with three round towers, upon which steeples were raised in 1851 and the facade, fronting Jackson square, enlarged and improved.

We are indebted to the French for two large cathedrals on our continent. That of Quebec was founded in 1660 by Mons. Laval, the first bishop of New France. It is 216 feet long by 108 feet broad and its tower is lofty and well proportioned.

Facing the cathedral of the Roman Catholic church in Montreal is that of the Protestant Episcopal, or Church of England. It was begun in 1805 and is a conspicuous ornament to the city of Montreal, although as compared with its neighbor its size is inconsiderable.

The first English explorers of the new world were neither settlers nor builders and very different from the Spanish was the attitude of the Puritans toward the spirit and works of the renaissance. A few Episcopal churches in the south and a few of other denominations and of later date in New England and the old middle states are noble and dignified in their solidity and severity, but it is only recently that church architecture in the United States began to develop its present imposing and artistic proportions. Foremost among the denominations to enlarge and embellish their churches are the Episcopalians, whose traditions, derived from the Church of England, have never been lost sight of. This was wonderfully demonstrated when in September, 1907, the bishop of London visited Washington to assist in laying the cornerstone of the cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. It is claimed that a vision of such a cathedral was an integral part of the scheme of the "federal city" planned by Major L'Enfant under President Washington.

The beautiful Roman Catholic cathedral in process of erection at St. Paul, Minn., is to have "chapels of the nations, six in number, dedicated to the apostles of the several races from which are derived the people of the northwest." The plan of this cathedral follows "the main lines of the original plan of St. Peter's in Rome as laid out by Bramante and Michel Angelo;" that is, the nave and transepts are shorter than usual and their intersection will be crowned with a great dome 96 feet in diameter, the cross over which will stand 280 feet high from the floor. "The main entrance is under a monumental arch which frames the rose window and the three front entrances leading to the vestibule located under the organ gallery. At each end of the vestibule under the towers are two chapels, one to be the founders' chapel, the other to contain the baptismal font," while at the ends of the transepts will be the two great chapels of St. Peter and St. Paul.

It seems to be a fact that American people and architects incline toward the Gothic style more than any other for church purposes and there is perhaps no purer and more pleasing example than the cathedral of St. Patrick, Fifth avenue, New York city. Its harmonious proportions and tones, without and within, charm both soul and sense, and it is one of the greatest ornaments to that city of magnificent constructions. The cornerstone was laid in 1850 and the building completed in 1879.

The cathedral of St. Paul, at Pittsburg, in much the same style, has the advantage of being set high and apart from other buildings, so that its beautiful spires pierce the air without competition from such skyscrapers as dwarf St. Patrick's, old Trinity, Grace and other churches in New York. Baltimore has a cardinal's cathedral, and the beautiful new building for the diocese of Richmond, Va., must be mentioned.

Many are the cathedrals of both the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches whose foundations are being laid or planned in the various dioceses of our country.

The cathedral of Lima, Peru, is the earliest and the largest in South America. It was founded on the same day as the city by Pizarro himself. That a man of uncertain parentage and meager education, little acquainted with any phases of life besides those of the peasant and the rough adventurer should not only have developed a genius for leadership but conceived metropolitan ideas so splendid and complete as his plan of Lima, is nothing short of marvelous. He is comparable in kind if not in degree to some of the cowboy products of the early western life of the United States. In explanation of his vandalism it may be said that Pizarro had just seen his own country delivered from the Moors by the valiant Christian arms and probably he regarded the Inca people as another race of "heretic dogs" whose uncomprehended civilization and religion he destroyed with no more compunction than was shown by the cowboy in "shooting up" an Indian village and its snake dancers, to the regret of the modern ethnologist. In the place of what he destroyed Pizarro substituted one of the most fascinating settlements of the world. It took him 15 years to pacify the outraged people of Peru, but meanwhile he had laid out the city of Lima and dedicated the cornerstone of the cathedral on January 16, 1535. In it he lies buried before a great silver altar surmounted by an image of the virgin Mary. The interior of the cathedral is vast and dim and there are many side chapels and sacred pictures, some of which are by Peruvian artists of considerable merit. There is also a bronze fountain said to have been presented to the city in 1578, probably the oldest in America. Lima is a city of churches and the cathedral is more than equaled by several others in beauty and interest, if not in age.

Confidence Is a Big Aid to Pitcher, Asserts Joss

Clevelander With a Record of Two Hitless Games Tells How He Wins

By ADDIE JOSS.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

I think one of the big helps to a pitcher in winning is confidence—confidence in himself and in the men behind him. It has an effect upon everything the pitcher does.

I think I win because of mixing speed with a fast curve, and I blame the curve for the greater part of such success as I have had. I have had managers and infielders tell me about a million times I did not know how to use them, but on the average I think the results showed.

There is an immense amount of luck in pitching, and no matter what a pitcher has he needs luck in addition to it in order to win. It is in this that confidence in the team behind him helps the pitcher so much. If a pitcher is in trouble and can feel that he can make the batter hit as hard as he pleases and be saved, he escapes scores of times. If he lacks that confidence and tries to do it all himself, the result usually is bases on balls and defeat.

Pitchers lose many games through working too hard, especially during the early stages of the game, and trying to do too much. I try to save myself for the finish, and sometimes succeed through pitching very hard to the first batter up in an inning and, if he is retired, pitching easier to the others and making them hit bad balls if possible. Anyhow, I try to make them hit, and to outguess them on each ball, keeping the overhand and underhand fast balls well mixed up with the curves and slow ones, and using the curve sparingly.

Another big help to me in winning has been in helping the infielders out as much as possible. I believe pitchers ought to learn to field and to practise that part of the game all the time. I was a bad fielder when I started, but have worked hard and improved steadily. Not having speed I had to do the best I could, and it was done by hard work. I learned to knock down those hard bounders through the pitcher's position. I know some pitchers are nervous over those drives that come like a flash. I know I was for a long time, but of recent years, when I get into trouble, I like to have the batters slam them back at me, being confident I can block down the ball. That fielding practise has helped me a lot. The pitcher who can knock down two or three hard drives that are going through over second base if he dodges them, has a big percentage on the pitcher who dodges or who is not skilful in stopping such hits.

Addie Joss.

The pitcher ought to work carefully with his infield. I believe a lot of my success has been due to quick hearing. Many times just as I start to pitch my ears catch some shout from a coacher or from a base runner, and I can pitch out quickly and perhaps break up a hit and run or a steal.

The young pitcher ought to study such points; keep his eyes and ears open all the time, practise fielding steadily, and to learn to watch every move of a batter and figure before pitching a ball the position of the batter, the stage of the game and the probability of the batter hitting or letting the ball go.

Channell Suffers Broken Leg.

Lester Channell of the Highlanders and a former Cub, broke his right leg just above the ankle sliding into third base in a game against the Browns. It will be at least two months before he will be able to play again.

"Bid" McPhee a Red Scout.

Biddy McPhee will be the official scout of the Reds in the future. The famous Red player of a few years ago, is a good judge of talent and should prove a valuable man.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

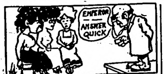
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 17, 1910. NO. 12.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Co-eds Fail in a Test By Munsterberg



BOSTON.—Prof. Hugo Munsterberg gave a demonstration of his psychological method of detecting crime before the class of philosophy in Radcliffe college, the feminine annex of Harvard. Taking three girl volunteers as subjects, the professor proved that no matter how they attempted to evade him, he could read their minds, or rather their actions, as manifestations of what was in their minds.

Besides demonstrating his own theory Professor Munsterberg proved that he has solved the problem of reading a woman's mind, and that in future the thoughts of the wife will be an open book to the husband. The possibilities of the professor's demonstration can hardly be estimated.

The three girls who submitted to the test are Helen Thayer of the class of 1911, Ruby Hobb, a senior, and Miss Beaton of the class of 1912. The professor told the class that he had several clippings from a morning paper on everyday subjects. He would have the three girls each draw a clipping in such a way that he would not see the drawing. Then he would find out from them what clippings they had.

The condition the professor imposed was that when he said a word the girl spoken to should within a second say some other word brought into her mind. Professor Munsterberg asked each of the three girls to try to deceive him as to which clipping they had, just as a criminal would try to mislead him in trying to detect what crime he had committed.

The professor shot several words at random at the first girl, and she answered back as quickly with any word that came into her head. When a word connected prominently with the clipping was sprung, however, there was a significant pause, for the first thought injected into the girl's mind was the clipping and she instantly exposed that before she was able to think up something with which to mislead Munsterberg.

One of the clippings drawn by the girls told of ex-President Roosevelt's reception by the emperor of Germany. When Professor Munsterberg sprung the word emperor on the girl who held the clipping, she could not answer without a pause. The pause in the first test was 18 seconds, in the last two tests about half that time.

This Radcliffe college test was regarded as the most successful demonstration Professor Munsterberg has so far made of the psychologic method of detecting crime. A short time ago, however, he experimented with a man suspected of forging a check, and his plan worked perfectly. A significant pause followed both the word "bank" and "check" when addressed to the suspected man.

Hearty Laughter Death to Pill Trade

HOLY SMOKE WHAT A PAIN! GUESS I'LL LAUGH IT AWAY. HA-H- OW OUCH-OO-O-H

CHICAGO.—Threatening the very livelihood of the physician, the health department continues to disclose professional secrets in its weekly bulletin of "Healthograms," which recently contained free advice for the prevention and cure of dyspepsia without pills or doctor. If you feel a sharp, agonizing series of pains that you suspect might be due to dyspepsia, just laugh.

Keep right on laughing until the pain is gone, and then laugh some more to keep it away. Make a practise of laughing for a few minutes every day, selecting witty companions that the laughter may be heartfelt and therefore more efficacious, for the new healthogram is: "First aid to the dyspeptic—a good laugh."

Seemingly bent on "bearing" the pill market, the literary-scientific writer of the healthograms goes on to admonish Chicagoans, as follows:

"Tight lacing is a narrow practise.

"Hygiene is humanity's hope.

"Too much fresh air is just enough.

"Your worst enemy—the common housefly. 'The typhoid fly.' Swat him.

"Smallpox is a disgrace. Save your reputation and your face by vaccination.

"While mothers are working in factories, infants may be wasting in the homes.

"Seats for women employees and opportunity to use them would leave many hospital beds vacant."

Would Doff the "Pigtail" and Robes

I'LL YANK THAT QUEUE TILL HE REMEMBERS IT FOR THREE GENERATIONS

SAN FRANCISCO.—Deprecating the wearing of the queue, certain Chinese of the Pacific coast are asking the emperor to be allowed to discard the trailing appendange and coif their brunette locks a la American.

Also would they desire to discard the flowing robes of the flowery kingdom and conform their dress exclusively to the attire of their adopted land.

To secure the royal permission a memorial has been intrusted to Prince Tsai Tao, the Chinese minister of war and uncle of the emperor, for presentation to the throne.

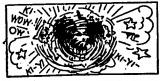
The memorial, it is said, contained these passages:

"As we look around at the various nations of the world, we observe all the strong nations are without the queue. The queue is not necessary to the well-being of man, and it is exceedingly inconvenient.

"It is the custom in China to wear long robes with wide sleeves, making the men of our nation look like the women of other lands. The costume is like that of the Annamese and the Koreans, two nations that have perished.

"Furthermore, our whole costume makes us the laughing stock of every nation."

Bulldog Meets His Match in a Coon



CHICAGO.—Crib, a bull terrier owned by Charles Ayres, an architect of Evanston, and the canine scourge of the neighborhood, is in mourning, and all because of a raccoon that is supposed to have come from the sylvan solitude around Gross point and wandered into the university town one morning.

Crib is "some fighter," according to Evanston chronicles. All the other dogs in the neighborhood curl their tails between their legs and silently slink into the nearest place of refuge when he strolls majestically down the sidewalk. And as for cats—he eats 'em alive.

With the courage born of many victories and no defeats Crib was prowling about the Ayres homestead about two o'clock in the morning. Suddenly around the corner of the back fence there crept across a patch of moonlight a stocky figure, with bushy, upraised tail.

A wild yelp of delight shattered the classic silence of Evanston, and Crib, the champion, "mixed it" with the presumptuous intruder.

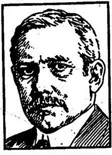
Mr. Ayres was dreaming peacefully when the sounds of fierce combat smote upon his ear. In his pajamas, he dashed down the stairs and into the yard, where he beheld the visiting combatant rapidly reducing the hitherto unlacerated hide of Crib, the terror of itinerant cats, to the proverbial shreds.

An empty cracker box happened to be standing on the porch, and Mr. Ayres grabbed it and placed it firmly over Mr. Coon and then planted himself upon it.

The coon is now on exhibition in a hastily constructed case on the Ayres back porch, but the valiant Crib will not be on exhibition for a week or more.

WHO'S WHO—AND WHY

ROOT INFORMS ROOSEVELT



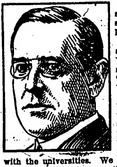
Elihu Root, former secretary of state, now United States senator from New York, has informed Colonel Roosevelt of all that has been going on in America since the mighty lion hunter went away. They met in London a few days ago and, to use a homely expression, Mr. Roosevelt "got an earful." Roosevelt had heard from Gifford Pinchot and the correspondents of the big newspapers in whom he had confidence many things, but he might have had some doubts until he met Senator Root at Dorchester house, the London home of Ambassador Reid. The insurgent movement, the Ballinger hearing, the fight on Cannon and what Taft has been doing, no doubt are now an open book to the former president.

If there is one man in the United States in whom Roosevelt has confidence it is Elihu Root. When he was president Roosevelt listened more closely to the advice of Root than to any other man. Had Root been free of former legal connections with the big corporations it is believed in many places that Roosevelt would have stood for Root instead of Taft for his successor to the presidency.

Senator Root has gone to The Hague to present the argument of American fishermen who claim the right under the treaty of 1818 to take fish and bait within the territorial waters of Newfoundland.

What really is involved is the right of a British colony to curtail the rights conferred upon aliens by treaty. It might easily follow that if The Hague tribunal should sustain the right of Newfoundland to restrict rights conferred by treaty upon Americans, then the various American states and foreign nations might do likewise, involving the parent government in serious complications with the powers with which it has treaty relations.

WILSON FORCASTS DISASTER



"If she loses her self-possession America will stagger like France through fields of blood before she again finds peace and prosperity under the leadership of men who understand her needs."

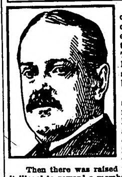
The foregoing is one of the fiery sentences in a hot speech recently delivered by Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, to the sons of Old Nassau at a banquet in Pittsburg. Then, turning to the subject of churches, Dr. Wilson went on to say:

"I trust I may be thought among the last to blame the churches, yet I feel it my duty to say that they, at least the Protestant churches, are serving the classes and not the masses, of the people. They have more regard for pew rents than for the men's souls. They are depressing the level of Christian endeavor. It is the same with the universities. We look for the support of the wealthy and neglect our opportunities to serve the people.

"The processes to which the college man is subjected do not render him serviceable to the country as a whole. It is for this reason that I have dedicated every power in me to a democratic regeneration. The American college must become saturated in the same sympathies as the common people. The colleges of this country must be reconstructed from the top to the bottom. The American people will tolerate nothing that savors of exclusiveness. Their political parties are going to pieces. They are busy with their moral regeneration and they want leaders who can help them to accomplish it."

Pretty hot talk that for the president of a big educational institution like Princeton.

ILLINOIS BRIBE CASE JUDGE



Judge W. H. McSurely, of the Cook county circuit court, the jurist selected to try the first of the Illinois bribery cases, is a former member of the legislature and therefore better qualified than most judges would be to decide the issues. The judge knows the usages of the Illinois legislature and things that others might not understand will be plain to him without explanations by counsel or witnesses.

Learned counsel for Lee O'Neil Browne sought to have Judge McSurely quash the indictment against the accused representative. The lawyers spoke for two days against the true bill and maintained that even if it were good the court had no jurisdiction, for, it was maintained, if a crime was committed at all it was committed in Sangamon, not Cook county.

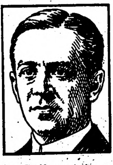
Then there was raised the novel plea that there is no law which makes it illegal to reward a member of the legislature after he has voted for a man for United States senator.

It didn't take Judge McSurely long to smash this sort of argument on the head. In summing up his decision Judge McSurely said:

"It seems clear from the reading of the statute that to give money corruptly to a legislator, in consideration that he has previously voted with partiality or favor, or otherwise contrary to law, is bribery; and whenever that crime is committed in that way, that is, wherever the money is given, there lies the venue.

"The order of the court is that the motion of the defendant to quash the indictment, and each count thereof, is denied."

MILLIKAN IS NEW WIZARD



Robert A. Millikan, professor of physics at the University of Chicago, is a new "wizard" of the electrical world. Professor Millikan broke into the Edison and Marconi class when he captured a single ion. What is an ion? you ask. Well, you needn't be ashamed to ask the question, for Professor Millikan found it necessary to explain it to the Sigma Chi society of the university, before which he was lecturing.

Here's the definition: An ion is an atom, or a piece of an atom, a molecule or a group of molecules which carries the electrical charge. Now you know what an ion is. But listen!

By capturing a single ion and putting a tag on it Professor Millikan has swept away much of the mystery surrounding the nature of the electrical charge since the discovery of electricity. Besides capturing an individual ion, the long-misunderstood carrier of electricity, he has viewed in his laboratory peppery specks of electricity on charged bodies, disproving the theory that electricity is an "imponderable fluid," and upholding the indefinite "ionic hypothesis" of Faraday, who gave his theory to the world in 1830.

Also he has proved the "kinetic theory," that molecules of air are in rapid motion, and has measured the "energy of agitation" of these molecules.

That the university professor has isolated and toyed with one of the elementary units out of which all matter is made is a conclusion to be drawn from the experiments.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Seal Coat Problem Up to Government

I NEVER DID LIKE SEALSKINS
NAW, THEY'RE TOO HOT FOR THIS CLIMATE ANYWAY

STENOGRAPHERS and clerks in the government offices in Washington seldom take more than passing notice of the affairs of state that come before the department chiefs for settlement, but a conversation between two young women in the department of commerce and labor a few days ago showed that one subject at least, had aroused their interest.

It is the question of sealskins. The department faces the terrible catastrophe of an increased cost in sealskin coats for women. The average woman could worry along for a while longer watching prices of meats, eggs and nearly every other article of physical sustenance take flight skyward, but how she is going to survive without a sealskin sacque is what is worrying the benevolently not to say paternally inclined officials of the department of commerce and labor.

"I have been wanting one so badly," Miss Blank was heard to say to the young woman with a great bunch of "rats" in her hair, "but mercy me, if the price is going up I'm sure I will never be able to get it."

"Oh, what's the use?" snapped the one with hair dressed like a Kafir belle. "I wouldn't have one if you'd give it to me. They're too hot for this climate, anyway."

"Sour grapes," was Miss Blank's comment, as she swept out of the room.

The benevolent, not to say paternally inclined officials of the department, however, were confronted with the problem of whether or not the seal grounds of the Pribiolf islands shall be closed under authority granted by congress. If the grounds are closed the price of sealskin coats will go skyward, along with other necessities. If they are left open the price will remain at the present figure for a while longer, but eventually will go up, as the fur-bearing herds of the Bering sea are depleted. So to the officials of the department the issue has resolved itself into the question as to whether it is best to hold down the price for a while by releasing the sealing rights and letting the women of a future period stand the really high prices.

The lease of the North American Commercial company, which for 20 years has enjoyed the exclusive privilege of taking the seals, expired May 1.

Nearly Half of People Superstitious

NOW FOR SOME GOOD LUCK

WASHINGTON.—"If you pick your teeth with a splinter taken from a tree which has been struck by lightning will you ever have toothache?"

This, and three thousand other varieties of superstitious beliefs, having been investigated by Dr. F. B. Dresslar, professor of psychology in the University of Alabama, he found that 45 per cent. of the people whom he questioned believed in them. This was his declaration in an address before the Medico-Psychological association, one of the branches of the American Congress of Physicians and Surgeons.

Superstitions and superstitious beliefs are still powerful factors in human behavior, he said, and, as far as known, superstition is exclusively a human manifestation, not being known among lower animals. It is due, he added, to an animistic conception of the universe which holds that sticks and stones play a part in the life of man and conspire against him. Man's superstitious beliefs are variable, he declared, changing with his condition of mind and body and even with the weather and time of day, "ghosts existing only at night."

The learned professor talked about the "thirteen" hoodoo which so many persons fear, while Friday came in for the usual comment.

Some persons think it is bad luck to dress one foot at a time, that is, to put both stocking and shoe on the right foot or left foot before putting the stocking on the other foot. Of course you all have heard about the good luck that is sure to come if you happen to put a stocking on wrong side out by mistake and wear it that way all day.

Illinois Man Was Sat Upon By a King

FOR GOODNESS SAKE WHAT'S THIS?
AW WAW

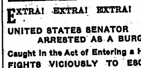
CONGRESSMAN RODENBERG of the East St. Louis district, has a constituent who enjoys the unique distinction of being the only person in the United States who was literally sat upon by a king.

When the late King Edward VII., as prince of Wales (Baron Renfrew), was touring the United States he visited the city of St. Louis. Several miles from the little town of O'Fallon, in St. Clair county, Ill., an accident occurred that necessitated several hours' delay. In those days trains were not equipped with dining cars, so, as it was early in the morning, those having charge of the prince's comfort began to look around for a suitable place in which he might obtain his breakfast.

The nearest farmhouse was that of Mr. Begole, a prosperous and substantial farmer, to which the party at once repaired, and requested that breakfast be furnished the prince. Mrs. Begole responded with alacrity. The prince was taken into the best room, where, while waiting for breakfast, he sat down on the edge of the bed. Immediately a great squall arose from under the covers. Investigation showed that the prince had sat upon the son, Henry Begole, heir apparent of the household, who was at that time about a year old.

The prince apologized to Mrs. Begole and did his best to soothe the injured feelings of the heir apparent. Henry Begole is at present a resident of Belleville, Ill. He has served as treasurer of St. Clair county and has also served a term in the state senate of Illinois.

Dolliver Enters Home With a Jimmy



HA! A ROBBER AT MISTER DOLLIVER'S HOUSE I'LL FIX 'IM
I'LL HELP PA—

EXTRA! EXTRA! EXTRA!

UNITED STATES SENATOR
ARRESTED AS A BURGLAR

Caught in the Act of Entering a House
FIGHTS VICIOUSLY TO ESCAPE

Gives Desperate Battle to Four Policemen, Who Finally Club Him into Insensibility.

These are only imaginary lines from an imaginary newspaper. Such a story would break into the first page of most any newspaper.

There hasn't been any such story and there probably never will be, but a certain distinguished member of the upper house of congress found it necessary a few nights ago to use a "jimmy" to get into his own house. It was all because he has more than one suit of clothes—not an unusual thing for a senator, although he is not a millionaire—and he had left his keys in the other suit.

The certain and distinguished senator is Mr. Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa. The policeman on the beat heard something going on in the rear of the Dolliver home on fashionable Massachusetts avenue, and without making any more noise than his No. 12 shoes could prevent crept around the building to investigate.

Imagine the surprise of the bluecoat, who had drawn revolver and club, at seeing the senator using a "jimmy" on one of the kitchen windows. Senator Dolliver proved a good "burglar" and got into his own home as easily as a trained "yegg" would have done.

The senator had been on a trip with his family to Mount Vernon. When they got back Mr. Dolliver felt for his keys. He didn't have them. Then he remembered that he had left them in his other suit. Hence the "jimmy."

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

TREASURE HUNT SEASON.

The season of the treasure hunt is once more "on," and all along the Atlantic coast, from Labrador to the Gulf of Mexico, with side excursions to the islands of the Caribbean sea, optimistic persons who have resurrected some legend of pirate gold which seems to them convincing, are touring the face of nature in an attempt to find chests of coin and jewels—or casks of rum. At this point the reader will suspect an anti-climax. The statement is not so intended. Buccaneers had to cache their stores of solid and liquid provision, and they did not always find opportunity to dig them up again. A tradition of substance attaches to Oak island, in Mahone bay, Nova Scotia, as the scene of a "plant" of valued beverages, and an amiable vagabond who professes to have assisted at its uncovering and to have "drank some of the rum," is still a questionable ornament of the Bay of Fundy region. Undoubtedly much treasure of a more desirable quality has been exhumed during the last century or two and quietly carried away, there being more than one reason why discoverers of such loot should hold their tongues about it. Probably, however, the legend that gave the clue will persist for centuries to come, inspiring adventurers yet unborn to spend much valuable time in digging on Jewel island or Gardiners island or Campobello or any one of a hundred other places.

The possibilities and the utility of the home garden are getting pretty well understood in Kansas City. Last year's numerous experiments brought profitable results. With the City club and the Athenaeum ready to co-operate, ready to give practical suggestions to those who wish to cultivate garden patches, the home owners of Kansas City should take advantage of this means of bettering the condition of their tables and participating in good, wholesome outdoor exercise at the same time, says Kansas City Star. The cultivation of a little piece of ground can do much toward eliminating the excesses of the grocery bill. The reward is to the enterprising and the industrious. Get the boys and girls interested. It is good for them. It will make them producers.

It is about time to revive those stories about hailstones as big as hen's eggs. And now the yarn comes from the sea—a veritable tale told by, and not to, the marines. The captain of the British steamer Aureole, arrived at Galveston, says the vessel passed through a remarkable storm in the Gulf of Mexico, during which damage was done to the rigging and superstructure by the hail, "which ranged in size to larger than hen's eggs." And as the captain can point to the battered appearance of his ship as proof, it would seem that he is quite beyond suspicion as being a weather faker.

The old proverb, "Never look a gift horse in the mouth," is believed to represent on the subject to which it refers the collective wisdom of the ages. "Never put a campaign cigar in the mouth" might be proposed for its running mate if half is true which is alleged against the campaign cigar. However, there are candidates now and then who use real cigars while working their campaign.

The French seem destined to be the world's great "bird men." They lead in aeroplaning, as they led in the development of automobiling. Germany may fill the air with military dirigibles, but France will soon have swarming clouds of barking planes. In America we have the Wrights and Curtiss; in France they have nearly a dozen inventors whose machines are on the market.

Cuba's prompt dispatch of troops and machine guns to its disaffected provinces shows that it is rapidly learning the art of self-government. Taking to the woods is no longer mistaken for patriotism in that island, but is appraised in its proper relation as an attack on the government.

During his race from London to Manchester, Paulhan, the French aviator, covered 117 miles in two hours and fifty minutes. It begins to look as though flying will be a commercial possibility before the present generation is many years older.

A St. Louis barber will retire and devote his life to philosophical study. When he has finished with one of the sciences he will rub his chin and call "Next!"

That Cornell professor who smoked a cigar for 85 minutes probably wanted to show that he could smoke as long as it took his wife to dress.

An Ohio man was arrested for stealing two slices of bacon. He is charged with grand larceny.

QUAKE ROCKS ITALY

BELIEVED 300 KILLED AND AS MANY INJURED BY EARTHQUAKE.

PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

Extent of Disaster Uncertain Owing to Disrupted Telegraph Wires—Sardinia Is Swept by Violent Cyclone—Damage Estimated $2,000,000.

Naples, June 9.—Earthquake shocks of unusual intensity occurred throughout southern Italy Tuesday and Wednesday, and although the full extent of the disaster has not been definitely learned government officials state that the deaths will probably reach 300. The number of seriously injured is estimated at less than the dead.

The latest advices show the number of known dead as follows:

Avellino, 23; Valetta, 1; San Fele di Potenza, 6; Castel, Basonia, 1; Cianchi, 1; San Sossio, 10; Calitri, 50.

The disturbance disrupted telegraph communication generally in the provinces most affected, and further details are awaited with apprehension. The inhabitants of the various towns which felt the quake were thrown into panic, and the authorities had much difficulty in restoring order. A report received here told of five deaths in San Sele, a village of the province of Potenza, in the compartment of Basilicata.

Not Comparable With Messina.

The king thought that it was not necessary for the queen to go, as the situation in Avellino was not to be compared with that in Messina, where their majesties spent several days in alleviating the distress of the people. In reply to the king's protests, Queen Helena retorted:

"As my presence is necessary at all festivities it must not lack where the people die and weep. In the south Italians suffer; therefore, I must go. It is my place as a woman and a mother."

Twenty Reported Dead.

In Calitri 20 persons are reported dead. It is a town of about 8,000 inhabitants, situated on the Ofanto river, seven miles northeast of Conza. Every house in the village of San Sele was damaged.

Deaths occurred in Valata and it is feared that fatalities will be reported from other villages which for a time are cut off from communication with this city.

The shock came while the people were still in their beds. Many houses in Calitri tumbled, burying the occupants in the ruins. Those who escaped death or serious injury fled terror stricken from their homes into the country. Few waited to put on street clothes, and as a result many subsequently suffered from exposure. The shocks were felt here, but no damage was done in this immediate vicinity.

Sardinia Ravaged by Cyclone.

Rome, June 8.—Misfortune seems to have chosen Italy as a target. While the south has been afflicted by an earthquake the vast region of Sardinia, the largest island in the Mediterranean after Sicily, was ravaged by a violent cyclone. The districts of Lanusei, Tortoli, Ilbono, Elini and Jerzu have been devastated and the crops, vineyards and cattle destroyed. It is believed that many shepherds have followed the fate of their flocks. The damage in Sardinia is estimated at $2,000,000.

REPORT FRUIT CROP GOOD

New England and Pacific Coast States Will Make Up Loss in Others.

Washington, June 11.—Splendid prospects for fruit in New England and on the Pacific coast almost counterbalance the poor showing of the central states, where early frost got in some telling work, according to a report made public by the department of agriculture on general crop growth.

The condition of the apple crop is reported to be more than 8 points below last year's crop, or 53 as compared with a normal condition. The ten-year average for apples is 69.8. In New England and on the Pacific coast the crop promises to be immense, but in such big apple states as Ohio and Missouri these will be only about one-third of a crop.

On the other hand, the peach crop, due to the excellent prospects in such states as Georgia and Delaware, promises to be larger than last year, the condition on June 1 being 62 as compared with 54.1 last year and a ten-year average of 65. The central states will produce a poor crop, it appears now.

GOV. CARROLL RENOMINATED

Progressives Win Over Standpatters in Iowa Primary—Returns Are Incomplete.

Des Moines, Ia., June 9.—Gov. B. F. Carroll was renominated for governor at the primaries Tuesday by an estimated majority of from 2,000 to 4,000 over Warren Garst, the progressive candidate. Complete returns from 83 counties give Carroll 74,550; Garst 73,336, a majority of 1,214. If the ratio of gain for Carroll keps up, and there is little doubt but that it will, Carroll will be nominated by the majority indicated.

Eight Progressives and three Standpatters were nominated for congress.

PROHIBITION USELESS, IS BOUTELL'S THEORY

Illinois Congressman Delivers Address to Brewers' Convention in Washington.

Washington, June 9.—In addressing the annual convention of the United Brewers' association, Representative Boutell of Illinois made an unqualified attack on prohibition. Three lessons, he said, were to be learned from the several states that had put prohibition laws into effect. These were, he contended:

That prohibition did not prohibit.

That when the open sale of mild beverages was forbidden the surreptitious sales of strong spirits of an inferior quality greatly increased.

That there was an appalling increase, in prohibition states in the demand for patent medicines, tonics and narcotic drugs.

Mr. Boutell declared that prohibitory laws, whether effective or ineffective, were regarded by the wisest statesmen and philanthropists as out of harmony with the spirit of ideal government of an enlightened, free people.

"Is the use of beer by the citizen," Representative Boutell inquired, "what Lincoln said it was, 'that which is exclusively his own business,' or in the language of the English philosopher, Mills, entirely a 'self-regarding action,' or is it an action injurious to society and therefore one that the state can forbid?"

SEEK WELFARE OF CHILDREN

Hundreds of Delegates Meet in Mothers' Congress at Denver—Many Subjects Discussed.

Denver, Col., June 10.—The welfare of the children of the United States is the principal topic of discussion at the fourteenth annual convention of the National Conogress of Mothers which opened in this city today, and will continue in session until next Wednesday night.

Extensive preparations have been made for this gathering and hundreds of delegates, representing the various state organizations, are present from every section of the country. Prominent social workers will address the convention, and the following important subjects will be discussed: "Value of Parent Organizations," "Educational Factors in the First Twelve Years of a Child's Life—Home, Church, School, Street," "Mothers' Responsibility in the Prevention of Infant Mortality," "Social Life in High Schools and Universities," "Causes of Crimes of Children, and Prevention," "A Sane Fourth of July," "College Domination of Preparatory Schools," "Home Education by National Congress of Mothers."

PROSPERITY THEIR SLOGAN

United Commercial Travelers Meet in New York—Great Dinner and Parade on Program.

New York, June 9.—The United Commercial Travelers' association, the only secret fraternity in the world composed of one craft of men, and which has a membership of about 60,000, began its annual meting today at the Manhattan Beach hotel. The sessions will last four days, and a great crowd of delegates has come to attend them. "Prosperity" is the slogan of the association, and it will emphasize this in two big events. The first was a prosperity banquet in the two acre dining rooms of the hotel, when many well known men made speeches.

The biggest event will be "The Grand Prosperity Ratification Parade" on Saturday. Early in the morning the delegates will be transported from Manhattan beach steamboats to the Battery, where they will form, joining delegates arriving by special trains from every state in the Union.

WILL RECOUNT DALZELL VOTE

Congressman's Opponent in Primary Files Petition Charging Fraud in Many Polling Districts.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 9.—Alleging that he has discovered traces of fraud in at least 65 of the 171 polling districts of the Thirtieth congressional district, Mr. Robert J. Black, opponent of John Dalzell for the congressional nomination, filed a petition requesting that ballot boxes from those districts be brought into court and reopened so that the vote may be recounted. The petition was granted and the county commissioners are already receiving the ballot boxes.

ESCAPE THE DIVIDEND TAX

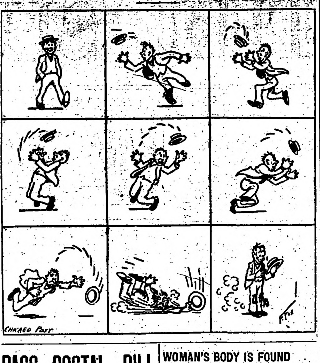
Corporations Owned Absolutely by Municipalities Not Subject to Levy on Net Income.

Washington, June 11.—Municipal corporations—that is corporations absolutely owned by municipalities and in which no shares are sold—in the opinion of Commissioner Cabell of the internal revenue bureau, are not subject to the tax of 1 per cent. on the net income of corporations, imposed by the new tariff law. The opinion made was rendered in response to an inquiry made by Collector H. A. Rucker at Atlanta, Ga.

Wrecked Steamer Floated.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 11.—The steamer John B. Ketchum II., which has seriously impeded upper lake navigation since being sunk in West Neebish channel, has been floated.

SAVING THE BRAND NEW STRAW



PASS POSTAL BILL

HOUSE ADOPTS SAVINGS MEASURE BY AN OVERWHELMING MAJORITY.

DEMOCRATIC VOTE IS SPLIT

Last of Taft's Legislative Bills Now Goes to Senate for Concurrence—Uncertain Whether It Will Be Sent to Conference.

Washington, June 10.—The postal savings bank bill passed the house by a vote of 192 to 113, receiving 24 Democratic votes, although it was a Republican caucus measure.

This is the last of the president's legislative measures to have to pass the house at this session—the last, at least, that the president will insist on. The house has now passed the railroad bill, the statehood bill and the conservation bill. The injunction bill will be permitted to slumber in committee, the president having told house leaders he will not insist on it.

Whether the postal savings bank bill as it passed the house will have to go to conference is uncertain. The president approves the house bill, which is a substitute for the senate measure. Senator Borah, who was one of the most active of the Republicans in framing the senate bill, has told the president that there is a chance of the senate accepting the house bill. If this is done there will be no occasion for a conference.

Bills Radically Differ.

The house bill differs from the senate bill in many important features, mainly in the difference of amounts of deposits to be carried in local banks and in the control of the president over the amounts so deposited. The senate bill carries a hard and fast clause holding half of the deposits in local banks, not subject to withdrawal, for investment in any securities; and providing for means for the withdrawal by individuals of their deposits for investment in government bonds.

The house bill provides:

The postmaster general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general shall be a board of trustees to take care of the postal savings funds and to adopt regulations concerning them.

Gives President Discretion.

That the president shall have authority to call in all deposits in time of war, or other great emergencies.

That five per cent. shall be kept in the national treasury as a reserve fund.

That 30 per cent. shall be invested in government bonds.

That 65 per cent. shall be deposited in local banks depositing sufficient security. Depositors may make withdrawals and deposits may be made in sums of $1 and multiples. Interest at two per cent. is to be allowed on deposits. Depositors are to have the privilege of buying government bonds of $20, $40, $70 and $100 denominations at par.

BREWERS WAR ON SALOONISTS

Four Liquor Dealers Are Indicted on Evidence Furnished by Ohio Beermakers.

Cincinnati, June 11.—Four saloon proprietors of Cincinnati were indicted by the Hamilton county grand jury after that body had heard evidence collected by the Ohio Brewers' Vigilance bureatu. The presentments charge the men with conducting nuisances in violation of law.

The cases have attracted considerable attention, as they were the first results of a campaign which, the brewery interests have announced, is to be carried on in all "wet" territory in the state.

To Be Tried in Washington.

Philadelphia, June 10.—Judge McPherson in the United States district court decided that the alleged bucket-shop men arrested here a few weeks ago must go to Washington for trial. They had resisted removal from this jurisdiction.

WOMAN'S BODY IS FOUND IN A SUNKEN TRUNK

Mrs. Porter Carlton, an American, Is Murdered in Italy—Husband Missing—Suspect Arrested.

Como, Italy, June 11.—The Mutilated body of Mrs. Porter Carlton, wife of Porter Carlton, son of a judge of Washington, was found in a trunk by fishermen in a lake near the village of Moltrasic.

Mrs. Carlton was Mrs. Mary Scott Castle, daughter of H. H. Scott of San Francisco, the divorced wife of a wealthy San Francisco lawyer, and was married to Carlton on March 12 last in Philadelphia.

She is the woman who achieved great notoriety a little over a year ago by shooting at William B. Craig, a New York lawyer, in the corridor of the Waldorf Astoria.

After the discovery of the body search was made for Carlton, but he was found to have disappeared. An ex-Russian postal official named Constantin Ispolatoff was arrested, however, on suspicion of having been an accomplice in the murder.

An examination of the body showed that the woman had evidently been beaten to death with some blunt instrument. The head was crushed in and the body wrapped in a piece of cloth that bore the initials "G. L."

The couple were spending their honeymoon here and occupied a villa on the shore of the lake.

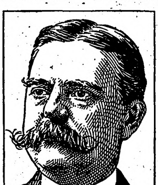
Three days ago the couple disappeared, and were not seen again.

Every effort is being made to apprehend Carlton, and the police of neighboring towns have been ordered to be on the lookout for him.

SENATOR TALIAFERRO LOSES

Returns Indicate That Former Governor Broward Carries Florida Primary.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 9.—In the second primary for United States senator the returns are far from complete and a fair estimate is impossible.



Senator Taliaferro.

However, if ex-Governor Broward's gains continue as they did in the early returns, it is evident that he will be nominated for United States senator over Senator Taliaferro by a majority of from 1,500 to 2,000 votes.

HOLD BABY FOODS ARE FATAL

Virginia Physician Makes Sensational Charge at American Medical Convention in St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 11.—Patent baby foods caused nine out of ten deaths of infants in summer, declared Dr. L. P. Royster, Norfolk, Va., before the American Medical association.

"Mothers," he said, "don't realize that fresh air is the best medicine for the little ones."

Dr. W. A. Evans of Chicago declared that hot school rooms cause immorality among children.

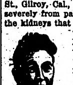
May Open 3,000,000 Acres.

Washington, June 11.—The opening to settlement of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana, comprising some 3,000,000 acres, is provided for in a bill ordered favorably reported by the house committee on Indian affairs.

AT A CRITICAL PERIOD

Of Peculiar Interest to Women.

Mrs. Mary I. Remington, Elgleberry St., Gilroy, Cal., says: "I suffered so severely from pain and soreness over the kidneys that it was a task for me to turn over in bed. My kidneys acted very frequently, but the secretions were retarded and the passages scalded. I was weak and run down. After taking other remedies without benefit, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I was going through the critical period of a woman's life at that time and after using Doan's Kidney Pills there was a miraculous change for the better in my health."



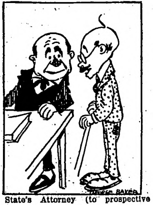
Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

For Proper Care of Tuberculosis.

According to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, New York state leads in the number of beds for consumptives provided up to May 1, with 5,476 beds; Massachusetts is second with 3,403 beds; Pennsylvania, third, with 3,347 beds; Colorado, fourth with 1,489 beds; and New Mexico fifth, with 1,104 beds. As yet, not one state in the country has made adequate provision for its consumptives. New York has set itself the task of having "No uncared-for Tuberculosis in 1915," and several cities in other parts of the country have adopted similar programs. The National association says that tuberculosis will not be stamped out until all cases of this disease are cared for either in their homes or in institutions. With this end in view, efforts will be made to increase the number of hospital beds in this country to at least 35,000 by May 1, 1911.

AUTHORITY NOT HEARD FROM.



State's Attorney (to prospective juror)—Have you formed any opinion on this case?

Mr. Henpeck—No, sir. I don't think my wife has read anything about it yet.

Docile Cheese.

Andrew Carnegie, while eating with appetite and courage last month the dishes cooked by the young girls of the Margaret Morrison school in Pittsburg, said:

"I have no fear before these experimental dishes. He who has eaten in France learns to eat boldly.

"Think of the French cheeses alone!

"Why, one afternoon in a restaurent in the Boulevard des Italiens, I heard a guest shout angrily:

"'Waiter, look here, this cheese is walking all over the table!'

"'Ah, have no fear, monsieur. It won't escape,' the waiter replied. 'If it goes too far, just call "Jules, Jules!" It always answers to its name.'"

Uncle Ezra Says:

Playin' on one string soon wears out the string ez well ez the player.—Boston Herald.

A DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE

Medicine Not Needed in This Case.

It is hard to convince some people that coffee does them an injury! They lay their bad feelings to almost every cause but the true and unsuspected one.

But the doctor knows. His wide experience has proven to him that to some systems, coffee is an insidious poison that undermines the health.

Ask the doctor if coffee is the cause of constipation, stomach and nervous trouble.

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life. I am now 42 years old and when taken sick two years ago with nervous prostration, the doctor said that my nervous system was broken down and that I would have to give up coffee.

"I got so weak and shaky I could not work, and reading your advertisement of Postum, I asked my grocer if he had any of it. He said: 'Yes,' and that he used it in his family, and it was all it claimed to be.

"So I quit coffee and commenced to use Postum steadily and found in about two weeks' time I could sleep soundly at night and get up in the morning feeling fresh. In about two months I began to gain flesh. I weighed only 146 pounds when I commenced on Postum, and now I weigh 167 and feel better than I did at 20 years of age.

"I am working every day and sleep well at night. My two children were great coffee drinkers, but they have not drank any since Postum came into the house, and are far more healthy than they were before."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hudson, Ohio.—"If mothers realized the good your remedies would do delicate girls I believe there would be fewer weak and ailing women. Irregular and painful periods and such troubles would be relieved at once in many cases. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is fine for ailing girls and run-down women. Their delicate organs need a tonic and the Compound gives new ambition and life from the first dose."—Mrs. GEORGE STRICKLER, Hudson, Ohio, R. No. 5, Box 32.

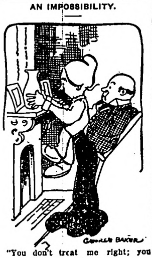
Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Young Girls, Heed This.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by its use.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

AN IMPOSSIBILITY.



"You don't treat me right; you never tell me anything."

"Of course I don't. There isn't anybody who can tell you anything."

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scaling of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

Crude, But Comforting.

"You are having a lot of fun with that kite of yours," said the neighbor.

"Yes," replied Ben Franklin, "there's a great deal of satisfaction in getting a little long distance electricity without being told that the line's busy."

Rejected by Hobo.

Weary—It's a poor rule that doesn't work both ways.

Willie—G'wan! It's a poor rule to work at all.

Trial Bottle Free By Mail

FITS

If you suffer from Epilepsy, Fits, Falling Sickness, Spasms, or have children that do so, my New Discovery will relieve them, and all you are asked to do is to send for a Free Trial $2 Bottle of Dr. May's

Epilepticide Cure

It has cured thousands where everything else failed. Guaranteed by May Medical Laboratory Under Pure Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906 Guaranty No. 18971. Please write for Special Free $2 Bottle and give AGE and complete address

DR. W. H. MAY, 548 Pearl Street, New York.

Please mention this paper. Druggists fill orders.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit Treated. Free trial. Cases where other remedies have failed, specially desired. Give particulars. Dr. R. G. CONTRELL, Suite 564, 400 W. 23d St., New York

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. High-est references. Best results.

ROOSEVELT'S HUNT FOR AFRICAN GAME

Lions and Other Animals Shot in Large Numbers.

YEAR ON DARK CONTINENT

Naturalists Collected Hundreds of Specimens for the Smithsonian Institution—Kermit Photographer of the Party.

Theodore Roosevelt's hunting trip in Africa, officially known as the Smithsonian African expedition, lasted nearly eleven months and was most successful in every way. The colonel's desire to hunt big game was not all that was back of the trip, for the Smithsonian Institution wanted specimens of the fauna and flora of the Dark Continent and commissioned the ex-president to obtain them. For this reason, a part of the expenses were borne by the institution, but Mr. Roosevelt paid all the expenses of himself and his son Kermit, presumably earning much of them by his articles in a magazine for which he received a record-breaking price.

Not wasting much time after leaving the White House, Colonel Roosevelt sailed from New York on the steamship Hamburg, headed for Naples. With him were Kermit and three naturalists, Major Mearns, Edmund Heller and J. Alden Loring, and stowed in the hold was most of their elaborate outfit for killing or photographing the animals of East Africa and for preserving the specimens destined for the Smithsonian Institution. Kermit had trained himself to be the chief photographer of the expedition, but he also turned out to be considerable of a hunter.

A great throng of friends and admirers bade the colonel farewell, and he sailed away, but could not entirely separate himself from the world, for practically all the way across the Atlantic wireless communication with the Hamburg was maintained. Moreover, at the Azores, and again at Gibraltar, he found the officials and people insisted on doing him honor, and when he reached Naples on April 5 the entire populace turned out to greet him with flowers and cheers.

Boarding the German steamship Admiral for Mombasa, Mr. Roosevelt found in his cabin a quantity of flowers and a letter from Emperor William wishing him "good hunting." At Messina a stop was made to view the earthquake ruins, and there, at King Victor Emmanuel's request, Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit visited the Italian monarch on board the battleship Rex Umberto. The party arrived at Mombasa April 21 and was received by Acting Governor Jackson, who had been instructed by the British government to do all in his power to further the plans of the expedition. Unusual privileges were granted the hunters, and Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit were licensed to kill lions.

At Mombasa the party was joined by R. J. Cuninghame, a veteran African hunter and explorer, and Leslie J. Tarleton, and these two managed the expedition in a most able manner. Taking train to Kapitil plains, the party became the guests of Sir Alfred Pease on his ranch. An immense caravan of 260 persons was organized and on April 25 Colonel Roosevelt had his first African hunt. On this occasion he bagged two wildebeests and a Thompson's gazelle. April 30 was a notable day in the camp on the Athi, for on that day the first lions fell victims to the marksmanship of the Roosevelts. Theodore shot two and Kermit one, and there was great rejoicing among the natives who made up the caravan. After that the big game came fast and cheetahs, giraffes, rhinoceroses and more lions were added to the list, in all 14 varieties of animals being secured. Meanwhile Kermit was busy with his cameras and the naturalists prepared the specimens.

George McMillan, an American, was the next host of the hunters, and several weeks were spent on his fine Ju Ja ranch and in the surrounding country. There the game was very plentiful and many fine specimens were bagged. Members of the party made several extensive trips of exploration, notably on and around Mount Kenia.

The expedition left East Africa December 19, crossed Uganda and went down the White Nile, getting back to comparative civilization at Gondokoro. There they went aboard a steamer put at their disposal by the sirdar, and journeyed to Khartum, where Mrs. Roosevelt met her husband, and accompanied him in a leisurely trip to Cairo. During his stay in Egypt Colonel Roosevelt was the recipient of many honors and made several speeches. One of them, in which he praised the administration of the British, gave considerable offense to the native Nationalists. At the end of March the Roosevelts sailed for Italy.

In a preliminary report to the Smithsonian Institution Mr. Roosevelt summarized the material results of the expedition as follows:

"On the trip Mr. Heller has prepared 1,020 specimens of mammals, the majority of large size; Mr. Loring has prepared 3,163, and Doctor Mearns 714—a total of 4,897 mammals. Of birds, Doctor Mearns has prepared nearly 3,100, Mr. Loring 899, and Mr. Heller about fifty—a total of about 4,000 birds.

"Of reptiles and batrachians, Messrs. Mearns, Loring and Heller collected about 2,000.

"Of fishes, about 500 were collected. Doctor Mearns collected marine fishes near Mombasa, and fresh water fishes elsewhere in British East Africa, and he and Cuninghame collected fishes in the White Nile.

"This makes, in al, of vertebrates:

Mammals	4,897
Birds (about	4,000
Reptiles and batrachians (about)	2,000
Fishes (about)	500
Total	11,397

"The invertebrates were collected chiefly by Doctor Mearns, with some assistance from Messrs. Cuninghame and Kermit Roosevelt.

"A few marine shells were collected near Mombasa, and land and fresh-water shells throughout the regions visited, as well as crabs, beetles, millipeds, and other invertebrates.

"Several thousand plants were collected throughout the regions visited by Doctor Mearns, who employed and trained for the work a M'nyumnezi named Makangarri, who soon learned how to make very good specimens, and turned out an excellent man in every way.

"Anthropological materials were gathered by Doctor Mearns, with some assistance from others; a collection was contributed by Major Ross, an American in the government service at Nairobi."

E. WEBSTER.

From stereograph, copyright, by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

IN THE AFRICAN JUNGLE

To Remove a Paint Stain.

To remove the unsightly stain of paint spilled on the doorstep, try the following plan: Make a strong solution of potash and wet the stain well with this, keeping it wet until the paint becomes soft. In a short time it will readily rub loose and it may then be washed off with soap and water. If any color has penetrated the fibers of the wood keep the spot well wet with the solution, and it will shortly disappear. Paint which has been left on for some time will yield to this treatment.

Well Supplied.

Benevolent Lady (to showgirl)—And, dear child, have you no home?

Showgirl—Yes, indeed. My father and mother have both married again and I am welcome at either place.—Life.

TRIBUTE TO "PREXY"

"HAIL MINNESOTA" WAS MOST IMPRESSIVELY SUNG AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

OF THE STATE UNIVERSITY

Nearly 600 Black-Garbed Seniors Receive Diplomas From Dr. Northrop's Hand—Ex-Pres. Folwell There.

Minneapolis. — Two abreast, accompanied by the University band, 592 graduates of the University of Minnesota wended their way from the chapel to the armory to receive their diplomas. As the leaders reached the armory entrance the line halted, the two ranks separated, and formed a lane of black-gowned, square-capped graduates, through which President Cyrus Northrop, followed by the members of the faculty, walked into the building.

His head bared, and attired in the black gown, with the hood lined with purple silk to denote his honorary degree of doctor of law, President Northrop stepped firmly through the long line of students who stood hats in hands and heads bowed. He seemed to have shed for the day the weight of years and labor that has commenced to bow his shoulders. Members of the faculty did not wear gowns, appearing in the conventional garb of everyday life.

Hardly had the graduates found their seats when the band started to play "Hail, Minnesota." The entire audience sang the first two verses and then the graduates, on their feet, every eye turned towards the form of President Northrop, standing by the dais on the platform, sang in slower time the second verse:

Hail to thee, our Prexy, Sire,
Thou hast made us all thine own,
And our hearts one boon aspire,
That our love may be thy throne.
Throughout our future years
Naught can e'er thy memory mar,
We will guard thy fame
And adore thy name,
Thou shalt be our Northern star.

When the singers had settled in their seats again, the band played "The Gay Musician," till the crowd had quieted, and then President Northrop led in prayer.

After a brief service of music, the degrees were conferred, each graduate receiving his diploma from the hand of President Northrop. As each diploma was given, the friends of the recipient in the audience applauded, and frequently waved their handkerchiefs. Though many of the women in the audience showed their emotion, not a single untoward event marked the ceremonies.

The candidates for the master's degree, four in science and twenty-seven in literature and arts, were the last to receive the coveted sheepskins. The masters were privileged to discard the cap and wear in its stead a hood. The masters from the science department had hoods trimmed in gold, maroon, and yellow; those from the department of literature and arts in gold, maroon and white.

After the presentation of the master's degrees, the honor students were announced, each being loudly applauded as his name was mentioned. The band then led the audience in the national hymn "America," after which benediction was pronounced and the ceremonies were over.

HOTEL AT WHITE BEAR BURNS.

Third Building On the Same Site Is Destroyed By Fire.

White Bear.—Incendiaries are supposed to have set fire to the new Oriental hotel at White Bear lake, which was totally destroyed, entailing a loss estimated at about $50,000. Henry Dierig, 971 Dayton avenue, St. Paul, proprietor, said that he carried only $14,500 insurance on the place.

When the fire was first discovered by a passerby, the flames were already belching from the windows in different parts of the building, which makes the fire marshal believe it was started in several places at once.

Jerry Flynn, the caretaker, was aroused by the crackling of flames barely in time to make his escape, half dressed. An impromptu fire brigade was organized, which fought the blaze until help arrived from St. Paul.

Cottages Take Fire.

The cottages of Michael McNamara and Dr. A. J. Aldrich caught fire from the shower of sparks and were burned to the ground. Several other cottages were threatened, but the timely arrival of the St. Paul firemen saved them from destruction.

In former years the site of the Oriental was occupied by the Chateguary and later by the Wahbehaguay hotels, both of which were destroyed by fire said to have been caused by firebugs.

HAUGE SYNOD ADJOURNS.

Fund For Home Missions Increased $2,000 At Successful Meet.

Red Wing.—The Hauge synod adjourned after an eight days' session in this city at the Red Wing seminary, and the delegates left for their homes.

There were 244 delegates, a larger number than there has been for some years. There were 147 lay delegates, 39 more than last year, and 94 pastors present, as against 82 last year. Five members of the board of trustees were here.

HIT BY HIGH LIVING.

State Normal School Board Decides To Raise Board At Dormitories.

Winona.—The increase in the cost of maintaining the pupils in the normal school dormitories, as shown in the reports of the different resident directors, was the occasion for general discussion at the annual meeting of the Minnesota state normal board held here in connection with the normal jubilee.

It is shown that the cost of the average meal is 7 cents and the charges for board at the dormitories do not equal that amount. It was decided, therefore, to increase the cost of room and board at the dormitories.

The faculties were chosen for the schools and the five state normal presidents were re-elected. The following were present:

School Presidents—G. E. Maxwell, of Winona; Charles H. Cooper, of Mankato; Waite A. Shoemaker, of St. Cloud; Frank A. Weld, of Moorhead, and Eugene A. Bohannon, of Duluth.

Board Members—E. Torrance, president, Minneapolis; C. G. Schulz, ex-officio secretary, St. Paul; S. H. Somsen, Winona; J. C. Wise, Mankato; Karl Mathie, St. Cloud; C. A. Nye, Moorhead; J. L. Washburn, Duluth; H. E. Hoard, Montevideo; W. E. Cross, Blue Earth.

CARPENTER NOW IS DIPLOMAT.

Takes Oath as U. S. Minister in Home Town, Sauk Center,

Sauk Center. — Fred Warner Carpenter, formerly secretary to President Taft, received his commission Sunday as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Morocco.

He took the oath of office before Fay W. Sprague, cashier of the First National bank of this city, who is a notary public. The papers were immediately forwarded to Washington. Carpenter will leave for Washington in about 10 days, where he will receive instructions before leaving for his new post. He is enjoying himself at Sauk Center visiting his mother and chasing the gamy black bass in the many lakes in this vicinity.

Mrs. Carpenter, while delighted with her son's promotion, was visibly affected at the thought of him going to a foreign land.

Carpenter evaded the newspaper men at St. Paul and Minneapolis, as he is not anxious to discuss politics and to get into publicity at present. He was somewhat tired and in great need of rest.

DULUTH HAS $100,000 FIRE.

Two Firemen Are Overcome by Smoke When Building Burns.

Duluth.—A $100,000 fire completely gutted the Old Bradley building, occupied by the Rathskeller cafe, the S. H. Knok 5 and 10-cent store and several stores.

The fire started in the kitchen of the cafe from a defective gas range. It was the third blaze in the past nine weeks originating there. The others were less disastrous.

Two firemen, William McLaughlin and John Cribbler, were overcome by smoke and had to be carried from the burning building.

Practically the entire fire fighting apparatus in the city was employed in combatting the blaze which defied all efforts for three hours. It was with the utmost difficulty that the flames were kept from spreading to the New Jersey building adjoining the Bradley block. It caught fire several times.

NEW BISHOP AT CROOKSTON.

Rt. Rev. Timothy Corbett Is Accorded Big Welcome on Arrival.

Crookston. — Bishop Timothy Corbett arrived here and was extended a warm welcome by the residents, as well as priests from all sections of the diocese. The greatest interest is taken in the installation services.

Archbishop Ireland, assisted by Bishop McGolrick, of Duluth, will officiate, while there will be in attendance priests from all the different parishes of the new diocese.

Bishop Corbett was greeted upon his arrival by the Knights of Columbus from Grand Forks, Duluth, Bemidji and surrounding towns. Tonight Archbishop Ireland will deliver a lecture which will be attended by persons from all sections of upper Minnesota.

BEGIN WORK ON GIRLS' HOME.

Surveyors and Workmen Busy On State Grounds At Sauk Center.

Sauk Center.—Four surveyors from St. Paul arrived here and begun work on the Northern Pacific extension to the site of the industrial school for girls. Mr. Lauritzen and Architect Johnston, St. Paul, are expected here this week. Mrs. Fannie French Morse has a crew of men doing the preliminary work on the school grounds and she expects building to commence in a few days.

SHERIFFS TO GATHER IN DULUTH

Good Time Will be Object of Minnesota Meeting June 22 and 23.

Duluth. — Sheriff William Bates, of St. Louis county, will entertain about one hundred Minnesota sheriffs and former sheriffs, accompanied by their wives, in this city, June 22 and 23. It will not be a business convention, but one simply for social entertainment. Outings and excursions have been planned, including a trip by steamboat to Two Harbors and return.

Libby's SOUPS

Tomato

Chicken

Vegetable

and ten other kinds. Delightful natural flavor and made from the very best materials, with the care of experienced chefs, in the great White Enameled Kitchens.

Libby's Soups are ready for immediate use by adding an equal portion of hot water

Ask your grocer for Libby's Soups

Libby, McNeill & Libby

Chicago

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK) C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC AT DRUGGISTS. TRIAL BOX BY MAIL. 50C. PLANTEN. 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN. N.Y.

Why Jones Was Sad.

Jones' rich grandmother died and Jones seemed unnaturally depressed and sad. His friends tried to cheer him.

"She left a last will and testament, I suppose," said Jenkins carelessly.

"Oh, yes," said Jones raising his head at last, "she left a will and testament."

"Ah," chimed in Brown, "you were always a friend of hers! Of course your name was mentioned."

"Yes," answered Jones, bursting into floods of tears, "my name was mentioned, boys. I—I am to have—"

They hung expectant, while more sobs choked back his words.

"I," he declared at last, "am to have the testament!"—Scraps.

The Rude Visitor.

There is a story about the secretary of a golf club who was a man of diminutive stature. It was summer time, and the grass had been allowed to grow rather long. The secretary was playing in front of a visitor who was a very long driver, and kept dropping his ball in the neighborhood of the secretary all the way round. At last the little man could stand it no longer and walked back and remonstrated with the visitor on his conduct, but the only reply he got was, "If you would cut the grass, one might be able to see you."

Something Lacking.

"Disappointed in Venice, with its romantic lagoons and canals?"

"Well, there wasn't any place to shoot the chutes."

A Happy Day

Follows a breakfast that is pleasing and healthful.

Post Toasties

Are pleasing and healthful, and bring smiles of satisfaction to the whole family.

"The Memory Lingers"

Popular Pkg. 10c.
Family Size 15c.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM,

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.10

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

POLITICAL ANNOUCEMENT.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator to represent the Sixty-first Senatorial district, at the primaries to be held September 20, 1910.

Al. H. Jester.

The large amount of drainage, being done in Eastern Red Lake County this year, is likely to create a boom. We expect the arrival of many new settlers.

There seems to be a silence regarding the candidacy of A. D. Stephens for state senator. This will undoubtly be explained soon after the republican state convention.

The candidates for county office are beginning to file in other parts of the state and to extend the glad hand and cabbage-leaf cigars, but in Red Lake County they all seem to have their eye on the county division star.

There has only been a suggestion made as to who will represent this district in the lower house at the next session of the legislature. Why not pick a good fellow from some neutral ground as Plummer or St. Hilaire. How would Gigstad or Martz do?

Al. H. Jester, candidate for senator from this district, made one of the best speeches at the Development Convention, at Crookston. He showed that he well understood the needs of Northern Minnesota and that he had the ability to get them in a legislative body.

John Eastman desires to have the farmers express their views on the question of county division. We think Ole Olson would like to write an article for him, if he will publish it. Of course, Ole talks and writes a little broken, but the farmers can understand him all right.

There is to be a post master's convention at Crookston, on July 26th, of third and fourth class post masters. The meeting will be addressed by Hon. Halver Steenerson, M. C. It is needless to say there will not be a very large attendance of fourth class post masters, if they are dependant on their salary for car fare.

We are waiting to take a long look at that famous platform, which Senator Hanson is going to fix up to go in on. We bet it will be a dandy. We hope he will not have anything in it that the people of Northern Minnesota want, for if he should happen to be elected, they can be sure they would not get anything that was in his platform. If you don't believe this, look up his platform of four years ago and see what he promised, then look up his record and see what he did.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette seems to be of the opinion that the building of the new court house, at Red Lake Falls, will sound the death knell of rival county seat ambitions. Well we have not heard anything about county seat removal for some time, but there is a lot of county division talk in the wind up this way, and the wind is beginning to get as hot as it does in Oklahoma, sometimes. Of course, the division of this county would make it rather small, but the people of the northern part would have the long end of the evener, if it should be divided.

Dakota Prohibition,

A well known traveling man of Crookston returned a day or two ago from a trip to North Dakota and he wants no more prohibition in his. He had business to attend to with the chairman of a town board who is also in the livery business. At the livery barn where he went to find him, there was all manner of liquid refreshments, but, being suspected, he was told that the proprietor was out and would be back in the morning. He returned to the hotel and soon noticed drays hurrying to the depot with cases and kegs of beer from the two blind pigs. Later on four men called on him at the hotel and one young man who seemed fresh remarked with an oath, "We know who you are; you're a spotter." At that the Crookston man shot a right that put the fellow to sleep for a few minutes and for a moment it looked as though there would be a bad mixup. Finally he managed to convince the people that he was there as the representative of a wholesale house and was not bothering hims lf about the enforcement of the prohibition laws.

As a result, the man he wanted showed up, the beer was hauled back to the blind pigs and everybody started in to celebrate again.

The traveling man stated that had he started to stroll about the village the chances are ten to one that he would have been hit over the head with a club or shot by some of the drunken inhabitants.

As a result, he came back very much disgusted with the manner in which prohibition failed to prohibit and the danger an outsider runs in trying to do business in the towns where blind pigs flourish and where he says he saw more drunks in one day than he ever saw in Crookston in a week.—Crookston Times.

St. Peter—And what are you?

Applicant—I was a grain farmer.

St. Peter—Did you take the local paper?

Applicant—Yes, indeed.

St. Peter—Subscription paid up when you left?

Applicant—No. Two years back.

St. Peter—Go to h——.

—Exchange.

JAPANESE HEROISM,

The Brave Record of the Loss of a Submarine Vessel.

Subjoined is the translation of a message written by Lieutenant Tsutoma Sakuma, who was in command of the Japanese submarine No. 6, which foundered while maneuvering in Hiroshima bay. The message was found in the conning tower of the submarine after she had been brought to the surface:

"It is with the deepest regret that I write this message to describe the loss of this boat with my fellow officers and men, due to my own fault. I would here specially mention that all steps have been taken to raise her, my comrades and men working earnestly and calmly till the end. I ordered the ship to dive with the engine running, but as I found she went down too fast I tried to shut the valves which admit the sea water to the ballast tank, but unexpectedly the chain working these valves broke, and I was left helpless, unable to control the boat. Meanwhile the tanks filled with water, and the boat went down at an incline of about twenty-five degrees. After striking the bottom the water began rushing in, the switchboard was immersed in water, all electric lights went out, the fuses burnt away, and the boat was filled with poisonous gases, so that we experienced the greatest difficulty in breathing.

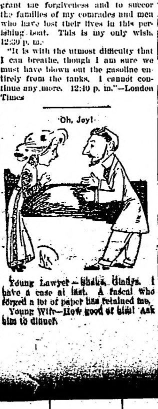
"Under these conditions we worked our very utmost with the hand pumps to empty the main ballast tank, which, I believe, we succeeded in doing, although we could not read the gauges owing to darkness. No electric current was available, as I mentioned before, and our last hope of rising to the surface lay in working the hand pumps only.

"I write this in the dim light coming from the conning tower—11:45 a. m.

"I earnestly beseech his majesty to grant me forgiveness and to succor the families of my comrades and men who have lost their lives in this perishing boat. This is my only wish. 12:30 p. m.

"It is with the utmost difficulty that I can breathe, though I am sure we must have blown out the gasoline entirely from the tanks. I cannot continue any more. 12:40 p. m."—London Times

Oh, Joy!



Young Lawyer—Shake, Gladys. I have a case at last. A rascal who forged a lot of paper has retained me.

Young Wife—How good of him! Ask him to dinner.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 20th 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 12th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Andrew O. Forsgen, of Anstad Minn., who on November 27, 1907 made Homestead Entry No. 1310 Serial No. 04504 for Lots 1, 2, E. ½ N. W. ¼ Section 18 Township 154 N. Range 39 W. Fifth principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 21st. day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses;

John Carlton, Ole Wiseth, Jacob Lee, Iver Vestby, all of Anstad Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the Sunbeam May 13th 1910.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 7th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Sarah Legvold, of Lillo Minn. who on December 17th, 1908, made Homestead entery No. 7114 Serial No. 02606, for N. W. ¼ N. W. ¼ Section 36 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final five year Proof to establish claim to the land above described before J. M. Bishop, Municipal Judge of the City of Thief River Falls Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn. on 21st. day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Anders N. Linvik, Ouor Legvold, of Lillo Minn. Gunder Hofstad, of Radney Minn. John Gunderson, of Lillo Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication May 13th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. May 10th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Sam Juveland, of Rudell Minn. who on January 17th, 1906, made Homestead Entry No. 1268, Serial No. 04519, for S. W. ¼ N. E. ¼, N. W. ¼ S. E. ¼ Section 13 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final commutation proof to to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 20th day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Knut K. Selberg; Osmund Rue, Sivert Sather, of Rudell Minn. Gunder Hofstad, of Radney Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in the sunbeam May 20th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 17th, 1910.

Notice is heeby given that Peter Peterson, of Kratka Minn., who on June 26th, 1904, made Homestead entry No 409, Serial No. 0416, N. W. ¼ Section 20 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner fo the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 5th. day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Michael H. Conely, Tosten Elleson, Jacob R. Hesby, Ole Christofferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin. Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17, 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 28, 1904, made Homested Entry No. 435 Serial No. 0489, for N. W. ¼ Section 29 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafoal, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

A Judicial Favor.

A verdant local reporter whose propensities incline to daring rather than to judgment and whose ardency in the quest of news is one of his marked characteristics approached a judge of the United States district court and solicited a little advance information on a case in progress in the judge's court.

"You see, judge," said the youngster to the astonished jurist, "we go to press in a few moments, and we all know your inclination to do a newspaper man a favor."

The venerable man eyed the youth sternly and said slowly and emphatically:

"Yes, young man, I'll do you a favor this time, and you will see that you don't ask me again."

"That's fine, your honor. Thanks, very much. Just a few lines will do."

"I will do you this favor. I shall not send you to jail this time, but if you ever approach me again with such a question your friends will not see you for some time."

The discomfited reporter retired ruminating on the mysteries of the law and the dignities pertaining to the judiciary.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Not So Absurd.

"How absurd!"

"What's absurd?"

"Five years are supposed to have elapsed since the last act, and that man is wearing the same overcoat."

"Nothin' absurd about that. He's takin' the part of a married man, isn't he?"

Notice For Publication.

First Publication June 3 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 31st. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Martin O. Algen of Torgerson, Minn., who on Dec. 5th. 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1330. Serial No. 04508, for W. ½ S. W. ¼, Sec. 16 & S. ½ S. E. ¼, Sec. 17 Twp. 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th day of July, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Levos, of Marle, Minn. Martin L. Salberg, Knute Torgerson, and Ole A. Olson of Torgerson Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 28th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Dagne Knutson, of Hilda, Minn., who on November 25th, 1905 made Homestead Entry No. 1249, Serial No. 04508, for S. E. ¼ Section 36, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above describe; before J. M. Bishop, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th. day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B. Henry Costello, Halvor Swenson, Olaf B. Hanson, and Knut Yttesaad, all of Hilda, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 13th. 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston. Minn. May 10th. 1910.

NOTICE is hereby given that Knut K. Selberg, of Rudell Minn., who on October 24th, 1905, made Homestead Entry No. 1235. Serial No. 04498 for N. E. ¼ Section 18 Township 152 N. Range 39 W. 5th Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, United States Commissioner, for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 20th, day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Sam Juveland, Osmund Rue, Sivert Sather, of Rudell Minn. Gunder Hofstad, of Radney Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 20th. 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office Crookston Minnesota. May 18th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Robert Moir of Highlanding Minn., who on March 14, 1910 made Homestead entery No. 1070 Serial 04427 for N. E. ¼ Section 22 Township 153 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S Commissioner for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 27th. day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, of Highlanding Minn. Osmond K. Homme, of Erie Minn. Chas. Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson, of Highlanding Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub in The Sunbeam May 27th. 1910

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 23rd, 1910

Notice is hereby given that Michael Conner, of Togerson Minn. who on March 21st, 1[illegible] made Homestead entry No. 1088, Serial No. 0657, for N. W. ¼ Section 25 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 27th, day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Morgan Vaughan, of Germantown Minn. John Markenson, of Torgerson Minn. J. Casey, Alfred Rice, of Brunkeberg Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam [illegible]

Department of the Interior [illegible]

Office at Crookston Minn. May [illegible]

NOTICE is hereby given that [illegible] of Erie Minnesota, who on [illegible] 1904 made Homestead entry No. [illegible] No. 04661, for [illegible] 153 N. Range 39 W. [illegible] has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minnesota, the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses

Joseph Johnson, Ole Johnstud, John [illegible]land, Carl P. Anderson, all of Erie Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin, Register.

Secret For Secret.

In the days of Louis XIV. even warriors handled epigrams with one another.

The Marechal de Grammont had taken a fortress by siege.

"I will tell you a secret," said its military governor after surrendering. "The reason of my capitulation was that I had no more powder."

"And, secret for secret," returned the marechal suavely, "the reason of my accepting it on such easy terms was that I had no more balls."

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER, IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick,

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Fork as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

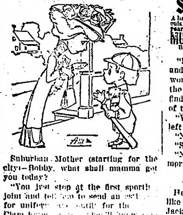
D. N. Winton, Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesday's Thursday's and Saturday's. & Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm G. Hunt, p. m.

Ready For the Game.



Suburban Mother (starting for the city)—Bobby, what shall mamma get you today?

"You just stop at the first sporting joint and tell 'em to send an [illegible] for uniforms [illegible] for the Clam [illegible] they'll know [illegible] we are."

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Parting.

"Benson was a good friend of mine, and I hated to lose him. He always wore a cheerful smile and seemed in the best of spirits. It will be hard to find another fellow so genial, so full of the joy of life."

"What's the matter? Has Benson left town for good?"

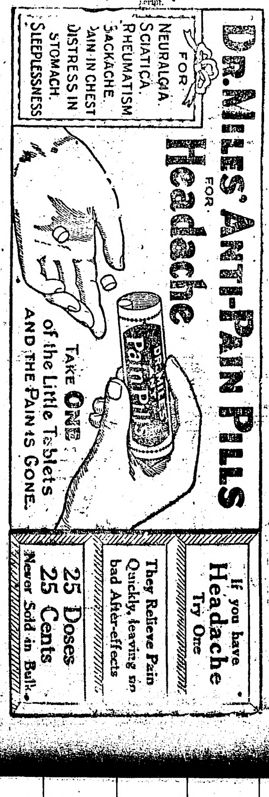
"No."

"Surely he isn't dead?"

"No. He borrowed $5 from me this morning."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Then He Made a Home Run.

He—What kind of stone would you like in the ring, darling? She—Oh, Jack, dear, I've heard so much about baseball diamonds. Do you suppose they are very expensive?—Boston Transcript.



DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
FOR NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM, BACKACHE, PAIN IN CHEST, DISTRESS IN STOMACH, SLEEPLESSNESS
DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

Remember that you can get your plows fixed so they will run right, at Kratka.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

C. L. Clark transacted business in Thief River Falls, Tuesday.

W. G. Hunt left for Thief River Falls, yesterday, on a business trip.

Stephen Singer, the Kratka merchant, and his lady attended church at Thief River Falls, last Sunday.

The editor and printer attend the base ball game at Highlanding, on Sunday afternoon, and incidentally did a little rooting.

The farmer's boat towed another of those huge floating dredges up Red Lake River to the big Erie ditch, last week.

Joe Belair, Dan Latendresse, and Gilbert Hovey came up Tuesday evening to act as viewers on ditch No. 49, near Erie.

Mrs. Ole Overum has commenced building a new stock barn, 30 by 50. It will be constructed on the latest plans for a dairy barn.

Lillo Bros. will have their ditching machine ready for work next week. This machine is a new invention in ditching machinery, and is likely to be a good one.

Mr. and Mrs. George Leimers were surprised, last Sunday, by a party of fifty-nine of their neighbors, being presented with a beautiful bureau. Everybody enjoyed themselves.

The Highlanding Creamery Association have called a meeting for the purpose of building a small boat for carrying cream down to the creamery. We think it would be a good plan.

A large bowery will be built at Highlanding for the Fourth and a fine programme will be arranged, there will be an oration given in the forenoon and athletic contests in the afternoon. Dance in the afternoon and evening.

The editor of the leven towns seems to think that he has been cut off from recognition, and he is going to let the "gang" know that they will hear during the campaign. We expect they will be very scart; if they ever hear about it.

The editor was away, when this issue of the SUNBEAM was published, so if you see any mistakes or things you don't like, excuse the printer's devil, who had to get this issue for he is a little green at printing. The poor fellow hopes everything is O.K. and that nobody's feelings are hurt.

A change is likely to be made in the ditch commencing at section 7 in Deer Park; thence running northward into Red Lake River. Since the survey was made it has been thought best to turn it westward at the S. W. corner of section 29 to the range line and thence northward, emptying into the river near the range line.

Martin Lod and Bennie Johnson, of Chester Township in Polk County stopped for an over night visit at Sunbeam, Tuesday evening on their return from Marshall County, where they had been looking for homestead land. They did not find any land, that suited them, but were well pleased with the appearance of this part of Red Lake County. They may decide to locate here.

A TRICK IN FENCING

One Highly Distressing to an Accomplished Swordsman.

TURNS A DUEL INTO A FARCE.

Used by a Weak or a Timid Opponent, It Renders His Adversary Practically Helpless—A Case of Two Playing at the Same Game.

A long and interesting chapter might be written on the humors of duels which never came off or which in some way fell short of deserving the name. A case which occurred a few years ago in Paris, the particular home and harvest field of the habitual duelist, merits mention.

A peaceable looking gentleman was walking down one of the boulevards with a lady on his arm when out of a cafe sprang a man, who dealt him a violent kick. The victim turned, only to meet the horrified apologies of the aggressor, who begged to assure him that it was wholly a mistake in identity. Instead of insisting upon an exchange of cards and the other customary forms, the kicked man answered, with much warmth, but admirable self control: "I cannot, sir, accept your expression of regret as sufficient. Your action may have been a mistake, as you say, but acquaintances of mine may have witnessed it and will go away and spread the news that I have submitted to an insult without avenging it. I must therefore and instantly slap your face with equal publicity." The other most becomingly assented, the first sufferer administering a ringing blow on his ear, and the affair ended with entire satisfaction on both sides.

Weak or timid fencers are sometimes taught by their masters to keep a more skillful antagonist busy by fixing the sword in one position, aimed straight at his sword hand, and then not moving except to retreat when pressed too hard. It is highly distressing to an accomplished swordsman to have to face a learner so instructed, for it means a great outlay of energy and wind to little purpose.

Comte de Dion once thus chased a retreating adversary across plowed fields for a mile and a half and finally under the wheel of a cab for the poor satisfaction of giving him a slight prod in the back. Dr. Clemenceau in his famous duel with M. Deschanel, after a swift and wearisome pursuit, halted, shouldered his rapier like a walking stick and strolled back to his original place, throwing the contemptuous remark over his shoulder, "And now, monsieur, I will await you here."

Catulle Mendes had a similar run after Lugne Poe through the forest of St. Germain, which he ended by flinging his own sword into the bushes, with the angry exclamation, "I am willing to die from exhaustion by the roadside, if need be, but not from running after a poltroon."

A yet funnier incident was that which occurred in Toulouse, where a lawyer of some note named Cazeneuve was called out by a landed proprietor whom he had offended by a speech in court. He repaired at once to a fencing master, as he knew nothing whatever about handling a sword. This teacher gave him the usual advice about keeping his adversary at arm's length with the poised and immovable rapier, but strongly enjoined him not to retreat. It so happened that the landed proprietor, being equally ignorant, applied to the same master for instruction. The master, who was somewhat of a wag, gave him the lawyer's lesson in duplicate.

When the two men met and their seconds had duly placed them a long and tedious stillness ensued. For more than five minutes each foeman stood with his sword arm extended at full length, waiting for the other to advance. Then the seconds intervened, claiming that both had proved themselves men of honor and courage and that nothing further was necessary but to shake hands and be reconciled.

And this recalls the occasion when Lieutenant Randolph Ridgely of our army while in the Mexican war was sought by two young officers who had quarreled and each of whom wished the lieutenant for his second. It was finally arranged that he should act as second for both. On the field, where the adversaries were armed with shotguns, Ridgely measured off a line of ten paces and placed them respectively at its two termini, cocked his own revolver and announced that he would give all the orders himself and in his own way and that he would shoot down whichever of his principals disobeyed him in the slightest particular. Then came the orders, very deliberately uttered: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Take aim!" They took careful aim and waited almost breathlessly for some minutes for the command to fire. It never came. Instead came the orders: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Right about face!" "Front!" "Forward march!"

They recognized his commands as given in deadly earnest and knew that it would be instantly fatal to rebel. He kept them marching till they reached his tent. There he halted them and bade them stand at parade rest till they had listened to a lecture on the folly of duelling which fairly made their ears ring. But he seasoned his dose of rebuke with a few words of praise for the soldierly mettle they had shown in facing each other's gun without flinching, and the two men became fast friends from that hour.—New York Post.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

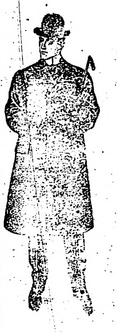
WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed; Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.



News From Clearwater.

A. Smith is visiting with A. A. Rolandson, this week.

Mr. Lenard Dahl made a business trip to Plummer, on Monday.

Mr. B. M. Lindberg, of Crookston, made a short visit to friends and relatives, last week.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at Mrs. Con Short's on Thursday, June 30th. Everybody welcome.

Misses Sarah Lindberg and Nellie Short made a business trip to Plummer on Thursday.

Dr. Clark, of Plummer, was called out to Mrs. Martin Arveson, who was suddenly taken sick, on Friday.

Miss Annebell Rolandson and brother Knute visited Charley Jenson, of Mayfield, on Thursday.

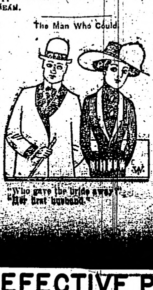
The Erie base ball team will play the Lillo nine another game of fast ball, on next Sunday, at the Clearwater Creamery. Everybody come.

The Lillo nine played Erie, last Sunday, winning by a score of 8 to 7. We all enjoyed the game. Rah! Rah! Rah! Lillo!

Grand Fourth of July Celebration

Near Clearwater Creamery, under the auspices of the Lillo Base Ball Club. Program and further particulars will appear in the next issue of the SUNBEAM.

The Man Who Could



"Who gave the bride away?" "Her first husband."

Base Ball Game.

The Erie and Lillo base ball teams played a matched game of base ball at Highlanding, last Sunday afternoon. The game was hotly contested and resulted in a score of 8 to 7 in favor of Lillo. The line-up of Lillo was: Roy Green, catcher, T. Brakke, pitcher, N. Fore, O. Sletvedt, O. Dahl, S. Brakke, A. Lillo, J. Fore, and A. Fore. The line-up of the Erie nine was: H. C. Iverson, J. Meyer, S. Prestegard, W. Meyer, J. Stangel, A. Linder, J. Trenda, F. Linder, and T. Omlind.

There was a good crowd present to see the game, which was well played and as interesting as a big league game. Among the ladies, who came up from Lillo to cheer the boys, were: Lou Green, Carrie Green, Nellie Short, Ida Lillo, Annebell Rolandson, Julia Bjerkley, Sarah Lindberg, Signa Gunderson, and Nora Bjerkley. The presence of such a sweet and charming bunch of girls and their voices undoubtly accounted for Lillo's victory. The same teams will play, next Sunday afternoon at the Clearwater Creamery.

Spiteful.

Patience—Did you enjoy my last song? Patrice—I might have if I had known it was your last.—Yonkers Statesman.

Lancashire Humor.

There was a Lancashire collier who went out on Sunday with his wheelbarrow because, as he said, "I've lost mi dog, an' a felly looks sich a foo' gooin' a-walkin' bi hisself."

Then there was the workingmen's club committee which wanted to indorse the accounts "audited and found correct and tuppence over" and the customer who, on being told that the price of candles had gone up owing to the war, asked whether they were "feightin' bi candle leet."

Also one recalls the laggard Lancashire lover who, when asked for a kiss, said he was "gooin' to do it in a bit," and the old ladies who praised a certain Darwin clergyman as "a grand burier," and of the orator who translated "Dieu et mon droit" into "Evil be to him what evil thinks!"—"Lancashire Life and Character," by Frank Ormerod.

THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.——— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS, THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or adress, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Folkedahl,

Highlanding .... Minn

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examin this fine horse.

C W Johnson, Owner.

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY:

She Tried to Fascinate Hubby and Was Rudely Shocked.

She had been reading that a titled Englishwoman advises married women to flirt with their husbands. As she finished the article her husband came home to dinner.

She ran to meet him.

"A little late tonight, dickydoozelum," she said, with a dimpling smile.

"What's that?" he growled.

She looked at him archly.

"Don't you dare to kiss me!" she tittered.

"Gee," he cried, "I don't intend to! What put that in your head?"

She half closed her eyes and coyly surveyed him through the drooping lashes.

"Don't you want to sit here by me on the sofa?" she cooed.

"No, I don't. Why, you told me only yesterday that the springs were getting weak. Aren't you feeling well?"

She laughed softly and shot him a side glance and drew in her cheeks and flashed her white teeth and perceptibly winked.

He drew back suddenly.

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded. "Who are you imitating? Can't you make your face behave?"

She picked up the paper she had been reading and flung it into the decorated wastebasket.

"There's nothing the matter with me," she coldly replied.

"Just mugging for fun, eh? Glad of that. Stimson was telling me today about a lot of trouble his wife is having with her facial nerves, and I was afraid you'd caught it. Ain't that confounded dinner ready?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Deer Park News.

Knute Seversrud and daughter transacted business in Plummer, Tuesday.

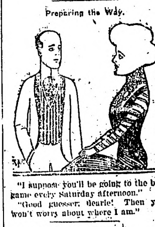
County Surveyor Martz is surveying the big ditch, two miles south of Rodney.

A brother of Mrs. Knute Seversrud, who is minister, came from Norway, Tuesday.

Last week, George Singer went out to drive one of his cows, that he thought had gotten out, into the pasture; when he came closer to it, he saw it was a large moose. A moose is seldom seen in this country.

A base ball club will be organized at Rhoda. Charley Johnson, George Singer Lofthus, and others have already enrolled. When they have practised a little, they will challenge Lillo. The club has not decided yet what ladies they will have to keep score for them, when they play the "game."

Preparing the Way.



"I suppose you'll be going to the ball game every Saturday afternoon."

"Good guesser, dearie! Then you won't worry about where I am."

The Persistency of Colds.

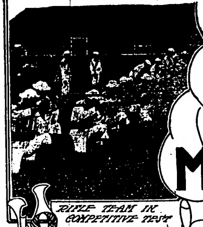
Why is it that we are so heavily subject to colds? Other epidemic diseases—measles, typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria—may get hold on us once and there is an end; it is not usual to have any of them twice. We brew in our blood immunity. The poison of the disease evokes in us its proper antidote. Our blood cells make a sort of natural antitoxin and keep it in stock, so that we are henceforth protected against the disease. A well vaccinated nurse, for example, works with safety in a smallpox hospital, where the very air is infective, but her blood is so changed by vaccination that the smallpox cannot affect her. By scarlet fever, again, we are, as it were, vaccinated against scarlet fever. The reaction of our blood against the disease immunizes us. No such result follows influenza or a common cold. We brew nothing that is permanent. We are just as susceptible to a later invasion as we were to the invasion that is just over.—London Spectator.

The Festive Codfish.

A correspondent of the New York Post says that the codfish frequents "the tablelands of the sea." The codfish no doubt does this to secure as nearly as possible a dry, bracing atmosphere. This pure air of the submarine tablelands gives to the codfish that breadth of chest and depth of lungs that we have so often noticed. The glad, free smile of the codfish is largely attributed to the exhilaration of this oceanic altitoodlenum. The correspondent further says that the "codfish subsists largely on the sea cherry." Those who have not had the pleasure of seeing the codfish climb the cherry tree in search of food or clubbing the fruit from the heavily laden branches with chunks of coral have missed a very fine sight. The codfish when at home rambling through the submarine forests does not wear his vest unbuttoned as he does while loafing around the grocery stores of the United States.—Bill Nye.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MAKING A NATION OF MARKSMEN



RIFLE TEAM IN COMPETITIVE TEST

TYPICAL SCENE AT THE TARGET RANGE

Photographs Copyrighted by WALDON FAWCETT Washington

ON THE TARGET RANGE

SECRETARY of WAR DICKINSON

FOLLOWING, to some extent, the example set by Great Britain, the United States is rapidly becoming aroused to the importance of fostering a proficiency in marksmanship among a greater proportion of our male population. An ability to handle firearms in a manner to produce accuracy and celerity in results is not only an asset, but actually a necessity in a country such as ours where, in the event of war, a large share of the responsibility for the defense of the nation must rest upon the citizen-soldiery and volunteers. It is because of a growing realization of this need that the national government is doing everything possible to stimulate interest in the development of a nation of marksmen.

The United States maintains a powerful and rapidly growing navy, that measures up well in comparison with the fighting fleet of any other power, but our army does not make a correspondingly impressive showing when set down against the military forces of the leading European nations, in a competition on paper. Obviously Uncle Sam must depend, as he has in times of trouble in the past, on throwing into the field in emergency, a great body of citizen-soldiery, recruited for the occasion. Such a volunteer body, if wholly untrained, require weeks of drilling to fit them for anything approaching practical work. Especially is the training in marksmanship an especially time-consuming preliminary. It would be of the greatest possible advantage if a large share of the volunteers came into the army thoroughly experienced in the handling of the standard classes of firearms, and with some ability in marksmanship. This is the goal now sought by government officials, working in co-operation with public-spirited citizens in private life.

Target practice and marksmanship in general, are being made the subject of specialization in all branches of the National Guard of our various states, and a similar activity is manifest on the part of many civilian clubs organized primarily for the promotion of rifle practise. Finally, even the school boys of the country have been enlisted in the cause, and their interest is being stimulated by means of shooting competitions, in which the trophies and prizes are of sufficient value to incite keen rivalry. Much of this country-wide arousal of interest in marksmanship is attributable to the "missionary work" performed by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practise, a permanent body maintained by appropriation by congress, and the membership of which embraces both government officials and civilians.

Yet another factor in the present awakening is found in the very keen interest manifested in every phase of this subject by the present head of the United States war department. Secretary of War Dickinson is, himself, something of a rifle shot, being the only member of the presidential cabinet in many years who has attained any proficiency with firearms. Recently, when the war secretary visited one of the military rifle ranges near Washington in company with some army officers, he made a score of 42 offhand, for his first time up at 200 yards, although it was the first time he had ever used the present army service rifle. A manifestation of Secretary Dickinson's interest in marksmanship that exerts considerable influence in behalf of the cause is found in his custom of indorsing by his personal presence, the great annual events designed to encourage marksmanship in general and rifle shooting in particular.

The great national rifle and revolver matches are held during the latter part of each summer at Camp Perry, in northern Ohio. The shooting is continuous for more than a month, on what are generally accounted the finest rifle ranges on this continent. At these tournaments shooting is in progress from 8 to 11 o'clock each morning, and from 1 to 5 o'clock every afternoon. There are revolver matches at 25 and 50 yards, and rifle contests at 200, 300, 600, 800 and 1,000 yards. Contesting teams are divided into different classes according to the showing they made in the last previous national shoot, and there are a great number of monetary prizes in all the different classes. For teams, first prizes range from $350 to $450, whereas, in the national individual matches the first prizes are in the neighborhood of $60 each. Many of these individual contests are open to any citizen of the United States between the ages of 18 and 45 years.

Congress annually appropriates about $12,000 as a mess fund for feeding the contestants in the great annual matches. Each competitor in the big contest is also entitled to the use of a cot and mattress, and the necessary camp furniture. It is a populous tented city which rises each year in the vicinity of the targets at Camp Perry. More than 100 officers and more than 1,000 enlisted men of the regular army enter the trials each year, and there is also upward of 1,000 team contestants and officers, and perhaps half as many National Guardsmen not attached to teams, and civilian rifle club members. Finally, there is a considerable body of individual contestants, and not less than 500 members of the National Guard of the state of Ohio, who co-operate with a regiment of the regular army, in manning the range—attending to the Aiken targets, with which the range is equipped throughout, and acting as markers and scorers. The contests this year promise to attract a greater number of participants than ever before.

GREATEST GOLD COUNTRY.

The largest gold-producing country is the Transvaal, where the output increased from $8,000,000 in 1889 to $133,000,000 in 1907. The increase in the production of the Transvaal mines made during the year 1907 almost equaled the entire production of the gold fields in Alaska. In round figures, the world's production of gold from the discovery of America in 1492 to 1880 was about $6,300,000,000. The entire world's supply of gold could not have been in excess of $6,500,000,000. The last 30 years has doubled this supply and if the present production is maintained for another generation it will double again, the National Magazine says. As gold has long been the world-wide standard of value, these statistics certainly suggest that the increase in the production of this precious metal may indeed vitally affect prices.

CUPID'S WAY IN MEXICO

"Playing the bear," in the current language of Mexico, means to court a woman. Although there are so many social classes in this country, especially in the capital city, where ten or more could be counted, all of them entirely different in customs one from the other, there are but two ways of "playing the bear."

When a young man of the middle or higher classes is attracted by a girl on the street, he begins by following her to her home, though he may spend a whole day without daring to speak to her. He remains on the street, looking at her balconies or windows. If the girl comes out or if the beau observes the slightest movement of the curtains or blinds, that is a sign that she is not entirely indifferent to him and from that day on he spends all his leisure hours and many that he should dedicate to his occupation under the balconies or in front of his prospective novia's residence.

After three or four days, when the wooer appears, the girl comes out to her balcony, just for a moment. The following day she comes out again and stays a little longer, but only after ten or twelve days (never on nor after the thirteenth day, for fear of the number 13) does she deign to look in the direction of the patient beau, who salutes her with a bow, taking off his hat and beaming with his sweetest smile.

Thereafter salutes and smiles are daily exchanged; then comes the sending of flowers or symbolical colors, slyly delivered by the "aguador" (water carrier) or the "carbonero" (charcoal vender), till at the end of a month a perfumed letter, written on rose-colored paper in the young man's best chirography, reaches the hands of his beloved, carefully concealed among the flowers of the prettiest bouquet that the novio was able to find at the flower market near the cathedral.

One ignorant of the country customs would think he had disgusted the mistress of his thoughts, because for two or three days after the sending of the letter she does not appear at her window, as she was in the habit of doing and it is necessary to send another letter, even more expressive than the first, to make her come out and smile again.

Neither is this letter answered. It is necessary to send a third one, speaking of nights of watchfulness, of despondency, of projects of suicide, etc., as they say in a well-known zarzuela:

"Ni como, ni bebo, ne vivo, ni duermo, ni fumo, ni nada." (I neither eat, nor drink, nor live, nor sleep, nor smoke, nor do many other things.)

As a rule, this letter is answered evasively, but from that moment a correspondence is established. The appointments come next and the lover is no longer obliged to spend entire days awaiting the moment when the girl will come out.

The correspondence having been established and the girl having accepted and returned the love vows of the novio, then begin the evening cooings through the balcony grating, when all movement has ceased in the city and nothing but the whistles of the policemen at the corners or the footsteps of a night watchman are heard. The moonlight nights generally are particularly preferred by the lovers for their billings and it is not rare when one is going home at midnight to find three or four couples of lovers on every street; he on the sidewalk, she at the window, or in the second-story balcony, and the moon smiling on the picturesque scene.

With regard to "playing the bear" among the lowest class little can be said. A soft push, a pulling of the woman's rebozo, a few harsh words from the lips of the latter, then a smile, and subsequently a few medidas (drinks) at the nearest pulque shop, and the contract is closed.

None would think, however, when seeing how easily these poor people concluded their engagements, that they would be so devoted to each other. The woman, particularly, will patiently bear all kinds of suffering rather than to displease "her man." She would die before she could be induced to depose against the man when he is in trouble with the authorities. If he falls sick, it is she who provides food and medicine.

Tea Time Talks

The Tea of the Traveled

The traveler who visits England or Canada with the home-grown notion that any tea is tea usually comes back deeply impressed with the idea that tea is not tea unless it's "Salada." If he has been used to drinking Japan or China Tea before his travels, he will, on his return, insist on "Salada" Green, because of its unforgetable flavor and fragrance.

The widespread enjoyment of "Salada" Ceylon Tea is due to the fact that soil, climate, culture, preparation, purity and packing all unite to create the choicest tea possible to grow.

"SALADA" TEA

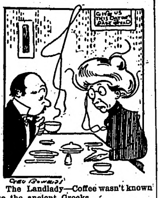
Yearly Sales Over 20,000,000 Packages

Ask your grocer for "Salada" or send for a free trial package. We mail it without charge. Say whether you use Black, Mixed, Green or Japan Tea.

The "Salada" Tea Co.

Shelby Block, Detroit, Mich.

A HARD BLOW.



GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD

The Landlady—Coffee wasn't known to the ancient Greeks.

The Boarder—Then, to judge by this brown liquid in my cup, I should say some of them used to board here.

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

An Embryo Emancipator.

A little miss riding on a Brooklyn trolley car the other day tendered the conductor half fare. "How old are you, little girl?" he queried, gingerly handling her fare.

She pursed her lips for a moment, then calmly opened her purse, dropped two more pennies into the conductor's extended palm, snapped her purse and demurely replied: "You have your fare, sir; my statistics are my own!"

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The Kid and the Goat.

"Where are you going with that goat, little boy?"

"Down to the lake. Come along if you wanter see some fun. This here goat has jest et a crate of sponges and I'm goin' down an' let him drink!"

When Rubbers Become Necessary
And your shoes pinch, shake into your shoes Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. Cures tired, aching feet and takes the sting out of Corns and Bunions. Always use it for Breaking in New shoes and for dancing parties. Sold everywhere 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

If a man who is early to bed and early to rise doesn't get rich, his wife is firmly convinced it's because he is too honest.

Would Mean a better Show.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "here is a book. Now, stand up straight and sing like a little man."

The song was "Nearer, My God." No sooner had the school commenced to sing than a little girl waved her hand frantically. Stopping the singing, the teacher inquired the cause.

"Please, teacher, I think Johnny will get nearer if he whistles."—Judge.

A pessimist believes it a waste of time to argue with the iceman, as he's bound to have his own weigh.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES
1875 "Guaranteed"

WESTERN CANADA

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, says:

"The stream of emigrants from the United States to Canada will continue."

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and says: "There is a land hunger in the hearts of English speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you in tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during year added to the wealth of the country upwards of Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts. 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest, wood, water and building material plentiful.

$170,000,000.00

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N. D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.

(Use address nearest you.) (3)

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible—they not only give relief—they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

PATENTS F. G. Bradbury, Pat. Atty., Com'l Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.; Corn Exchange Bldg., Minneapolis; McGill Bldg., Washington. Best work close at home. ADVICE FREE.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 25–1910.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system.

THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to its truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

WHY MEN DRINK AND USE DRUGS, AND HOW TO CURE THEM
OUR NEW BOOK TELLS ALL ABOUT IT, SENT FREE, ADDRESS
THE KEELEY INSTITUTE, 629 Tenth Street South, Minneapolis, Minn.

LAND IN CANADA AN INVESTMENT

WORK IT, AND SECURE 20 PER CENT. ON THE EXPENDITURE.

Farm lands in Canada increased in value this Spring from fifteen to twenty per cent, and as a result of this increase thousands of those who have gone there within the past few years have had that much more value added to their holdings. There is proof here that as a field for investment there is nowhere to be found a more profitable one than in purchasing farm lands in Canada. And, as a field for occupation and working the farms there is nowhere on the continent where more satisfactory return is given. The crops are always sure and the prices are always good. With railroads entering and traversing all the settled parts, there are very few districts in which the farmer will be more than from ten to twelve miles from a railway station. Roads are good, and big loads are easily handled. The price of getting grain to the primary market is low on this account, and then in reaching the world's markets the railways have their rates controlled by the Government, and what may be considered a fair deal is certain. Good prices for all kinds of grain is the rule, and if the investor has made good money by the increased value given to his unworked land, it is not difficult to understand that the profit to the man who works his land is just that much more, and there will be no depreciation. The man who holds a free homestead of one hundred and sixty acres of land, which he got for $10 as an entry fee, has land which at its lowest estimate is worth $10 an acre—yes, $15 an acre—the moment he has completed his three years' residence duties. It will continue to increase in value until its earning power gives a reasonable interest on a certain sum. That is, if he takes off the land fifteen to twenty dollars per acre clear profit each year, his land is worth to him, at a fair rate of interest, $200 an acre. If he only realizes $10 an acre clear profit, it is worth $100 per acre. Now, thousands of farmers are duplicating these figures. The price of land in Canada to-day is much less than its realizing value. The fact that the fifty thousand Americans who went to Canada year before last were followed by one hundred thousand last year offers some evidence, and good evidence, too, that there is getting to be a pretty fair knowledge that money is to be made in Canada lands. As an investment money is to be made, but more by living upon the land, secured either by homestead or purchase. The one hundred thousand of last year will be one hundred and fifty thousand this year. These comprise people from every state in the Union, and it is just being realized the asset that awaits the homeseeker in Canada. The large numbers that have gone, though, makes no appreciable difference in the supply of land. There is still left vast quantities of the best of it. But the longer a delay is made in arriving at a decision, the price will advance proportionately, and the more desirable homesteads near the railway lines become more difficult to secure. The Government publishes interesting literature, which may be had on application to any of the agents whose offices are located at different points through the States, and they (the agents) will be pleased to assist in any way possible in the choice of location.

Willing to Help.

"If we didn't have the children," she bitterly declared, "I'd get a divorce from you."

"I'll write and see if I can't get my folks to take them."

After the Horrible Example.

"Does a minister to China, pa, have to take a queue with him?"

"He gets a cue not to talk too much."

For Red, Itching Eyelids, Cysts, Styes Falling Eyelashes and All Eyes That Need Care Try Murine Eye Salve. Aseptic Tubes—Trial Size—25c. Ask Your Druggist or Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Honest politicians are as plentiful in some places as white blackbirds.

A CERTAIN METHOD
for curing cramps diarrhea and dysentery is by using Painkiller (Perry Davis'). This medicine has sustained the reputation for over 70 years. 25c 35c and 50c.

Does a cow become landed property when turned into a field?

SYRUP OF FIGS AND ELIXIR OF SENNA

CLEANSES THE SYSTEM EFFECTUALLY; DISPELS COLDS, AND HEADACHES DUE TO CONSTIPATION.
BEST FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN—YOUNG AND OLD.
TO GET ITS BENEFICIAL EFFECTS—ALWAYS BUY THE GENUINE.
MANUFACTURED BY THE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS
ONE SIZE ONLY, REGULAR PRICE 50¢ A BOTTLE

When Zeb Acted

By LAWRENCE ALFRED CLAY

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"Pa—Zeb—Jimmy! Mary has gone! Her bed ain't been slept in!"

Farmer John White, Zeb Hastings, his hired man, and his son Jimmy were sitting down to breakfast when Mrs. White, who had been upstairs to see why the daughter Mary didn't come down, stood at the foot of the stairs and made the above announcement.

"What do you mean, ma?" slowly asked the husband, while Zeb turned pale and rose up, and Jimmy, the 14-year-old son, had a guilty look.

"Come right upstairs and see for yourselves. I tell you her bed ain't been slept in, and I shouldn't a bit wonder if most of her clothes was gone!"

The husband, wife and Zeb filed up the stairway and gazed at the bed, while Jimmy made a sneak for the barn. The bed was there, without a crease or a crinkle in it, and Mary's best things were missing.

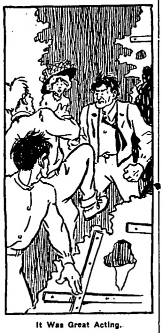
"She wouldn't hang herself in the garret, would she?" asked the father.

"She wouldn't drown herself in the well, would she?" asked the white-faced wife, as she wrung her hands.

Zeb Hastings had been a farmer's hired man since he was 18. He was steady and hard-working. He had been with the Whites for three years, and for two years he had been in love with the daughter Mary. He hadn't exactly said so, but the father knew it, the mother knew it and Mary knew it. Zeb was a little slow—that's all.

"Zeb'll make Mary a good man," was the comment between husband and wife.

Mary liked Zeb. As for loving him, she didn't know. She had let things drift along without asking herself the question. She had seen little of men. No young man had come courting, and not once a fortnight had she driven into the village. She was better educated than Zeb, but she did not criticize. Hard work had given him a bit of a stoop, and his hands were big and red and his face unshaven most of the time, but she made no comparisons to his detriment.



It Was Great Acting.

But for the arrival of a summer boarder things would have continued to drift. He was a young man of good looks, wore clothes of the latest pattern and was a new being to the isolated girl. He told her of the outside world—appealed to romance, ambition and curiosity—and, after a stay of a fortnight, gave the farmer a worthless bank check for his board and disappeared.

It was a week later that Mary failed to come down to breakfast. Zeb had been jealous of the boarder and had heaved a sigh of relief at his departure.

"For the land's sake, what is it, and what are you goin' to do?" asked Mrs. White, looking at Zeb instead of her husband.

Without a word in answer, Zeb turned and walked downstairs and made his way to the barn. The granary door was shut. He opened it and got a firm hold of the collar of the hiding Jimmy and lifted him out on the barn floor and shook him three or four times, and demanded:

"Tell me where she went! You know all about it."

"She's—she's run away!" blubbered the youth.

"And, gol darn you, you knew she was going and kept still about it! Go on and tell me everything or I'll shake the head off you!"

He was led into the house to sob out his story. The summer boarder was an actor-manager. In no other way could he have appealed so strongly to the girl. She had never seen a play, but she had read. She had but to be cast as Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and romance, fame and the world were hers. At first she had doubted her talents, but after committing a 50-word speech to memory and repeating it to the manager, he had pronounced her a marvel, and she had doubted no more.

Brother Jimmy had overheard enough, so that they were obliged to take him into their confidence. In fact, on the night Mary left the house he had carried her satchel for three miles on the way to the village.

When his story had been finished—and there were many other details—both father and mother looked at Zeb. Never before had they seen a paleness through his sunburn—his eyes look so steely, his jaw so hard set. They didn't ask what he was going to do; they could read it in his face. The "New York Uncle Tom's Cabin company" was to foregather that night at a village 25 miles away for rehearsal previous to taking the road. The boy Jimmie had it all down pat. If he had only been a year or two older, so he had been told, he would have been taken along to play the part of George Harris.

Zeb Hastings went upstairs and changed to his Sunday suit. When he came down he went to the barn and harnessed the old mare to the democrat wagon. He had the barnyard gate open to drive out when Mrs. White came out and asked between her sobs:

"Zeb, what you goin' to do?"

"Goin' to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin."

He drove to the village where Mary must have taken the train, put up the horse at the tavern barn and then went to the depot to wait for his train. Men who knew him for a good fellow shook hands or slapped him on the back, and, after looking at him in his Sunday suit asked if he was going away to be married. To their surprise he replied that he was. He wasn't mentioning names, but he expected to bring a wife back with him.

At two o'clock in the afternoon Zeb Hastings was landed at the depot in Schofield. He made a few inquiries, got a bite to eat and then made his way to Turner's hall. A citizen named Turner had the enterprise to turn the second story of his hardware store into a place where outraged taxpayers and other bodies might meet. Theatricals had been given there and there were bills on the walls and boards announcing that the Uncle Tom company would take its chances at an early date.

A rehearsal had been called for two o'clock and as Zeb made his way into the hall it was just beginning. He paused for a moment to locate two of the actors—Mary White and the summer boarder. Then he advanced and lifted himself upon the stage. Mary stared and turned pale and trembled. The summer boarder didn't recognize the farmer's hired man, and he advanced and demanded why the intrusion.

"I have come to act!" replied Zeb, and he proceeded to do so.

It was great acting. It never will be beaten. It brought down the manager and the house—the manager first. Zeb didn't have many speeches, but the action was superb. He seized that manager by the hair and shook him silly. Then he mopped the stage with him. Then he booted him about. The women of the cast crowded together and shrieked and screamed. They were real shrieks and screams—warranted three-ply. The gentlemen in the cast woke up after a bit and pitched into Zeb in a body. There was no make-believe in that pitch, but they were as straws in a 40-mile gale. Down went Uncle Tom, and down went Legree. The Lawyer Marks was tossed aside like a chip and George Harris received two black eyes in one-two measure.

It took Zeb Hastings just nine minutes to tip over Uncle Tom's cabin and Uncle Tom and everybody connected with it and bring about a financial wreck. When he had finished he beckoned to Mary White. She came over and took his arm, and they left the hall together. It was 11 o'clock that night when they drove up to the farmhouse. The family rushed forward with extended arms to cry:

"Oh, Mary, how could you—how could—!"

"Cut it out!" interrupted Zeb. "Mary and me was married before we left Schofield, and there's been acting 'nuff for one day!"

Who Named Pennsylvania?

In connection with a recent sale in England of the letters of William Blathwayt, a correspondent of the London Daily News makes the interesting assertion that Blathwayt, and not William Penn, selected the name for the commonwealth which he founded in the new world. According to this authority, when William Penn applied to Charles II. for permission to name his new colony after the king, Blathwayt, who was in attendance on his majesty, being a staunch Tory and high churchman, vigorously objected. "No, your majesty," said he, "let the Quaker call it after himself," and Pennsylvania accordingly it was named. Secretary of state though he was, Blathwayt must have been an odd character, for he contrived to obtain the good opinion of both Pepys and Evelyn at one and the same time, but he played not fair to the Stuart cause. "He crossed, I believe, with James to Dublin, and probably joined in the Irish jig with O'Flynn and Lady Bendetts at Dublin castle, and then apparently he went straight back and espoused the cause of William."

POULTRY

IN THE POULTRY HOUSE.

The male is half the pen—it pays to get the best you can buy.

Pullets are the best layers. Old hens bring the egg record down. But of course there are always exceptions.

The removal of nesting material, and refilling with clean dry nesting, is a great help in keeping down the lice.

Poultry is one of the best-paying things on the farm when properly cared for and brings in something every month of the year.

If one wants to breed from 20 to 25 hens, two males should be used on alternate days. While one is running with the hens the other should be cooped and fed extra.

One of the most difficult things for a beginner in poultry raising to learn is to cull closely, and there are others besides the beginners that need to practise this necessary thing.

A film of kerosene over the drinking water will prevent one chick's catching disease from another; also it will cure slight colds; an easy preventive and no possible harm in it.

The hens will lay better and do better every way if no males are allowed to run with them, and the eggs will not become stale anywhere near so quick as when males are kept with the flock.

A uniform flock all of one kind of fowls is more satisfactory in appearance, more easily handled and gives more uniform results, and a considerable greater profit, than a mixed lot of different kinds.

Beware of feeding new corn to turkeys or fowls you are preparing for the market. For heavy feeding for fattening purposes old grain is safest and gives much the best results. This is particularly true in regard to fattening turkeys.

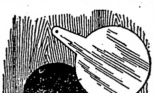
One good male and eight or ten of the best females will produce all the hatching eggs wanted on the average farm, and separate quarters should be provided for them and the run of the farm given to the main flock of laying hens and pullets.

Onions chopped fine and mixed with the hen's food occasionally will promote health. Onions are a great poultry tonic and they are relished by fowls old and young. Our fall hatched chicks tumble over one another to get to their feed when onions are mixed with it.

TRAP NESTS ARE VALUABLE

Permit Poultryman to Keep Record of Each Hen and Weed Out Poor Ones—How Used.

I presume every one knows what trap nests are by this time, and so will merely say that they are nests in which the hen that lays the egg is confined until a record is made of her achievement, when the trap is again set for another hen. I know of just two kinds of trap nests, one that closes as soon as the hen goes in and the other that is closed only after the egg has been laid. In the former kind the hen is shut in whether she lays or not, and as hens are often curious they may be caught in this way and confined unnecessarily, writes W. H. Warner in Orange Judd Farmer. In the other kind the hen may go in and out at pleasure, but cannot be confined until after the egg has been laid, since the egg itself is used for closing the trap.



Home-Made Trap Nest.

A trap nest is to the practical poultryman what the Babcock test is to the dairyman. It gives each hen's record of egg laying. Thus the poor layers may be picked out and the good ones favored. It is better for the poultryman to get rid of these hens and their progeny as early as possible, especially where poultry are kept for eggs, and it is easier to build up a laying strain of fowl than a good milking strain of dairy cattle.

A handy trap nest is shown in the accompanying picture. It is so simple that any one can make it. It is, in fact, merely an ordinary nest with a circular or square opening in front. The door, as shown, is of very light stuff, pivoted at the top. When the nest is set, a wire runs across the opening and rests against a piece of tin projecting from the opposite hole. When the hen enters, she lifts the loose end which permits the door to drop behind her. After she has laid, she is removed and the trap set for the next one.

Provide Shade for Chicks.

Provide chicks with shade and where a cool breeze can fan them in warm weather. This should be supplied, even if a temporary board roof is the only thing that can be furnished.

Natural.

"And did your wife die a natural death?"

"Oh, yes. She was talking when the end came."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take. Do not gripe.

No Alonso, a silver cup never runs when it is chased.

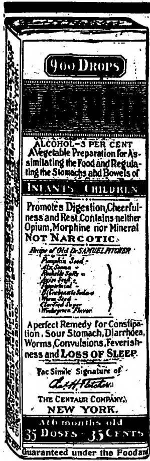
Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Our tears are round to remind us that God loves the whole world.

Big Assets

Four hundred thousand people take a CASCARET every night—and rise up in the morning and call them blessed. If you don't belong to this great crowd of CASCARET takers you are missing the greatest asset of your life. 919

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed -
Alx. Senna -
Rochelle Salts -
Anise Seed -
Peppermint -
Bi Carbonate Soda -
Worm Seed -
Clarified Sugar -
Wintergreen Flavor.
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES - 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Cook in Comfort You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Every dealer everywhere; if not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the Standard Oil Company

(Incorporated)

Colorado Lands Richer Than Gold Mines

There are bigger profits in eastern Colorado in proportion to the cost of land than almost anywhere else. Colorado's agricultural products are more than double the value of its mines.

Irrigation is unnecessary. By deep plowing and continual shallow cultivation the soil never dries out during the growing season, making big crops and surprising profits on $5.00 to $20.00 land.

What Some Men Have Done:

One man raised enough potatoes on 12 acres to buy 160 acres. Another man makes affidavit that he has not lost a crop in fifteen years.

Without irrigation one man's 800 cherry trees brought him $900. Five hundred plum trees produced $225. One hundred apple trees gave 300 bushels, $150; 1,400 currant bushes, three years old, yielded $225.

Hogs raised on alfalfa, fattened on corn (also raised on the same farm), cost $4 per head (including first cost of parent stock) and sell at top prices.

It's a great dairy and poultry country where dairy cows thrive on natural grasses.

The climate of eastern Colorado is the healthiest in the world. It makes healthy families and prolific crops. Good churches, good schools and splendid markets close at hand.

Combine business with pleasure. Enjoy an inexpensive vacation among the Colorado Rockies and all these wonderful lands along the Rock Island Lines on the way. Now is the time to go. See for yourself what a delightful section it is.

Low fare excursions to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo every day with long return limits

L. M. ALLEN, Passenger Traffic Manager
236 La Salle Station, Chicago

Rock Island

The WOOL INDUSTRY in THE AMERICAS

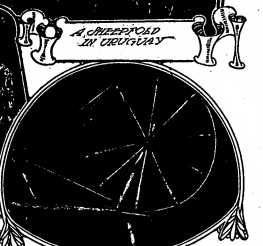
LOADED LLAMAS IN THE PERUVIAN HIGHLANDS

MAN'S first clothing was an animal pelt, and without doubt a sheep pelt. It may be suggested that the fig leaf antedates the sheepskin as an article of wear. This may be true, but the fig leaf can be considered only as a temporary expedient which was discarded with the first cool winds which swept over the Mesopotamian lowlands.

The sheep pelt or the wool plucked or sheared from it was the principal clothing of man from before the dawn of history down almost to the present day. Now cloth made from vegetable fibers, principally cotton, has a more extended use than wool. But this does not mean that cotton and linen are displacing wool as an article of human wear. Far from it; the use of wool constantly advances by enormous strides, and the even greater advance in the use of cotton is due in no small measure to the fact that the supply of wool can not meet the demand for clothing. Mankind must perforce wear the vegetable fibers or go unclothed. The same fact is true of the product of the silkworm; the supply can never equal the demand. Cotton, of course, has conquered for itself a new field, the clothing of the unclothed races of the earth. In addition it has supplied new articles of clothing to civilized man, whose ancestors wore but little else than wool. The European or American of today does not wear less wool; in truth he wears more, but he also wears more articles of clothing, and these, for the most part, are cotton. There is a close parallel all over the world between the cattle and the sheep industry, but there are some important differences as well.

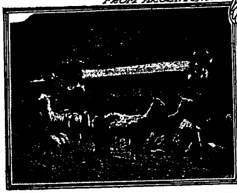
A SHEEPFOLD IN URUGUAY

PRIZE RAMBOUILLET RAMS FROM ARGENTINA



SPINNING WHEEL

It has rarely happened and can scarcely happen again that cattle will anywhere be raised primarily for their horns and hides, but the raising of sheep for their wool is one of the well-recognized steps in the industry. It is the fact that this can be done so as to pay a handsome profit that built up the great sheep industries in the western part of the United States, in Australia and New Zealand, in South Africa, and now is building up a greater industry in South America. Free or very cheap pasturage is the fundamental condition for this kind of sheep raising. Were it not for these new lands, where the cost of feeding the sheep is nominal, the price of wool would advance to a point where wool clothing would be beyond the means of any except the very rich. Sheep raising is a profitable industry in England, or Germany, or the eastern half of the United States, not because of wool, but because of mutton. The fleece is a by-product, just as the hide of the steer or of the dairy cow is a by-product; the principal value of the animal is its flesh. In the new sheep centers of South America the principal value of the animal is its wool, and fortunes were made from the flocks even when not a pound of mutton was exported or sold.



Wool, as the word is used in commerce, is not a product alone of the sheep. It may be wool, although it comes from the backs of several varieties of goats, from the camel, the alpaca, the guanaco, the vicuna, or the llama, as well as from the sheep. It is the thing itself and not the zoological classification of the animal which determines whether the fiber is wool, hair, or fur. Since the classification is commercial and not scientific the line between these three classes is necessarily vague and indistinct. For instance, the under covering of the camel may be camel's wool or camel's hair, and so we have alpaca hair or alpaca wool. From the sheep there are many varieties of wool, long and short, straight and curly, coarse and fine, and, what is generally more important than any of these, varieties in the serrations or imbrications appearing on the surface of the fibers.

It is important in considering wool as a commercial commodity to keep in mind the three different kinds of cloth made therefrom. These are commercially known in English as felts, woolens, and worsteds. The processes in making these three kinds of cloth are so different as to make them entirely different industries, employing entirely different machinery. Felt is made from the wool or fur in mass, the cloth holding because of the lock clutch of the imbricated fiber. Woolens and worsteds are spun from threads, but the threads in the two kinds of cloth are prepared in a different manner, and the weaving is entirely unlike. Formerly, entirely different kinds of wools were used for making the two kinds of cloths, or rather it is more accurate to say that only certain kinds of wools could be used in making worsteds. Almost any kind of wool could be used for making woolens, although some were much more suitable than others, and, as a rule, those least suitable for woolens were best suitable for worsteds. In effect, therefore, certain wools were used for woolens and certain other wools for worsteds. With the improved modern machinery used in worsted mills these limitations are fading away, so that worsteds can now be made from wools formerly not used for this purpose.

The wool used for making woolens is carded; that for worsteds is combed. The effect of these two processes is that in the first the wool fibers are crossed and interlocked as much as possible, and in the second they are drawn out to be parallel, as in cotton or linen. Woolen yarns, although hard-spun, look and feel light and fluffy. Worsted yarns appear finer and stronger.

The weaving of the two kinds of cloth is not unlike, at least not to the unskilled observer, except in one particular, and this is a most important one—woolens are fulled and worsteds are not. The fulling of the cloth, accomplished by heat, moisture and pressure, brings together and interlocks, by means of the imbrication of the fiber, the several threads entering into the cloth into a more or less felted whole. The cloth shrinks, sometimes as much as one-half, and in such material, as for instance the so-called doeskins and broadcloths, it appears and feels like felt.

It is this process of semifelting the cloth, made possible by the peculiar lie of the fibers in the yarn, that distinguishes woolens from worsteds. Formerly, entirely different classes of wool were used in the two cloths—for woolens, the short-staple, highly imbricated carding wool, merino for example; and for the worsteds the long-staple, slightly imbricated or smooth combing wools. By modern machinery it is possible now to use the short-staple wools in making worsteds.

In practise the raw wool, after being washed and scoured, is subjected to a series of combing processes, in each of which the particular fibers suitable for a certain purpose are extracted. The residuum after each combing is called a waste, although its value per pound may have been augmented by the extraction of the lower-priced fibers.

According to United States census reports, manufactures of wool rank tenth in the list of American industries. The total capital invested was $310,179,749 and with an output valued at $296,990,484 a year. In the classification adopted the manufacture of clothing is not included. Since 1900 there has been an enormous increase in the wool manufacturing industry, principally in the manufacture of worsteds. At the same census the number of sheep in the United States was 39,852,967. Since then there has been a 43 per cent. increase in the number of sheep, as appears by a report issued by the census office on January 1, 1910, which shows 57,216,000 sheep in the country at the present time. These are valued at an average of $4.08, giving a total value of $233,644,000. By the census of 1900 the country produces 276,567,584 pounds of sheep's wool and 961,828 pounds of mohair and goat hair. Estimating the same average clip of wool as at that time, the production of the country at the present should be about 400,000,000 pounds of wool. In reality it should be greater, on account of the improvement in sheep breeding.

There are several hundred varieties of sheep both in the domestic and in the wild breeds. The former have been under the dominion of man since before the dawn of history. Whether these are derived from any one of the existing wild species, or from the crossing of several or from some now extinct species is a matter of conjecture even to scientists. Variations in the different domestic breeds are very great and in no other particular greater than in the wool. Domestic sheep, not considering the Asiatic breeds, may be classed under two heads—the Spanish and the British breeds. The Spanish breed is the Merino, which has modified more or less the sheep of all Europe, including the British islands, North and South America, South Africa and Australia. The Merino has a very characteristic appearance, which easily distinguishes him from other breeds. He has a thick covering of wool over the forehead and cheeks, his horns are large, ponderous and convoluted laterally. The wool is long, soft, and twisted into silky looking spiral ringlets. The wool fibers are highly imbricated and possess in the highest degree fine felting qualities. The origin of the Spanish Merino is not very well known, but the breed is known to have as a foundation the original breed introduced into the Peninsula by the Romans upon which was crossed certain English sheep, most probably the Leicester or Lincoln sheep.

Up to the time of the Napoleonic wars, the position of Spain in the wool trade was at the head. Spanish wool went all over the civilized world and enjoyed a reputation for being the best. However, the peninsular wars, with the attendant evils following thereon, had a most disastrous effect on the wool trade of Spain and produced a depreciation in its quality and a consequent loss in exportation for the wool of the famous breed.

Spanish Merinos were taken to Hungary in 1775 and to France one year later—the most famous French Merino is the Rambouillet. Spanish Merinos were first brought to Rambouillet by Daubenton in 1782, and from this first importation the breed was developed. It is now known all over the world as one of the best of the Merino strains. Spanish Merinos were brought to the United States in the early colonial days, but the breed was lost in a promiscuous crossing with the earlier imported British breeds. The first Spanish Merinos whose descendants have been kept pure were brought to the United States in 1802.

Merinos were taken to the Spanish-American colonies almost with the first colonists, and are the foundation and almost the sole foundation of the so-called native breeds in all the American Latin republics, but the breed was not kept up, and consequently decayed even more rapidly than subsequently in Spain following the Napoleonic wars.

While Spain has the honor of having produced the most valuable single breed of sheep, bred for wool peculiarly suitable for clothing, the British islands have produced the greatest number of valuable breeds of sheep bred for wool suitable for all purposes, and even for the particular purpose for which Merino wool is best suited, but little inferior thereto. Of course in the mutton breeds Great Britain has always stood without a rival, but also in its long-wool breeds it is without rival in wool of this character. The British breeds are classified as long wool, short wool and mountain breeds. The long-wool breeds are the Leicester, Border Leicester, Cotswold, Lincoln, Kentish, Devon Longwool, South Devon, Wensleydale, and Roscommon.

The short-wool breeds—this class includes among others the famous mutton breeds—are the Oxford Down, Southdown, Shropshire, Hampshire Down, Suffolk, Ryeland, Somerset, and Dorset Horned.

The mountain breeds are the Cheviot, Blackfaced Mountain, Herdwick, Lonk, Dartmoor, Exmoor, Welsh Mountain, and Limestone.

All of these breeds are English except the Border Leicester, Cheviot, and Blackfaced, which are Scotch, the Welsh which belongs to Wales, and the Roscommon to Ireland.

The Leicester from an historical standpoint is the most important of the long-wool English sheep, and it was the great reputation of the wool of this breed that gave England in the past its prominent position as a wool-producing country. Most important of all, it is the Leicester blood which is the foundation of many of the other best English breeds and as such has extended itself over all the world. The wool is fine, white, and long-stapled.

The Lincoln is the largest and heaviest fleeced sheep. Many of the fleeces will weigh from 18 to 20 pounds, with a staple 20 inches in length. The Lincoln resembles the Cotswold, but has a less-pronounced tuft on the forehead and the wool is closer curled.

The wool of these sheep has a fine glistening appearance which has earned for it the name of "luster wool."

The Southdowns, Shropshire, Hampshire Downs, Oxford Downs, and Dorsets are among the better-known short-wool sheep. The Dorset staple is the shortest.

The Cheviot is the best known among the mountain breeds. The Cheviot is sometimes called a middle-wool sheep.

The French beeds best known are the Choletaise, which carry a good fleece, the Larzac, a short, thick-set animal with long-fibered but rather scanty wool, the Berrichome du Crevan, better known for its heavy milking qualities than for wool, and the Manchamp sheep, known as La Chamois, which produces a most excellent long and fine-fibered combing wool.

In addition to the domestic sheep introduced into America by the English, Spanish and Portuguese settlers, South America possesses a group of wool-bearing animals which are native to the country. This group, the auchenia, is one of the two branches into which the existing genera of the family of the camelidae is divided. The other branch is the camel (camelus) of the Old World.

Most authorities agree in dividing the auchenia into four species, the guanaco, the vicuna, the llama, and the alpaca. The two last named are not known in the wild state, but were domesticated by the native Indians long prior to the coming of the Spaniards to South America. There is no reason to doubt that the guanaco and the vicuna might also be brought under subjection.

The vicuna is a smaller animal, about the size of the fallow deer. It is found in the high mountains of Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, seldom descending below 13,000 feet. Although it may be tamed, it is to all intents and purposes a wild animal. It yields an exceedingly fine and delicate wool of a reddish-yellow color, which is worth about twice as much as alpaca.

The alpaca was the wool-producing animal of the Incas, as it is yet of most of the people of the Andes and the west coast of South America. It is found principally in Peru and Bolivia, but does not thrive below about 5,000 feet.

All of the South American countries are producers of wool from the domestic sheep, and most of them are exporters to a greater or less degree; but the recent development of the sheep industry in Argentina, Uruguay, and Chile lends a particular interest to South America as a purveyor of this one of the world's staple articles of trade.

The annual wool clip of Argentina for the season of 1849-50 was 8,000,000 kilograms, 17,600,000 pounds. This was a respectable showing for the time and gave Argentina a position of importance in the wool trade. The wool, however, was a coarse grade, most of it what is known to the trade as Cordova, used by worsted spinners for carpet yarns. In 50 years the industry had increased thirtyfold so that the clip of the year 1899-1900 was 239,000,000 kilograms—525,800,000 pounds. This represented about one-fourth of the world's production. The quality of the wool meanwhile had improved.

A recent census of the country (1908) shows 67,211,754 sheep. It is almost impossible for the mind to grasp these figures, but some idea of their significance can be gained when it is stated that "if the animals were assembled in a gigantic drove, 12 abreast, they would reach across the continent from New York to San Francisco." This places Argentina second to Australia, which leads the world with over 83,100,000, the United States third, with about 56,000,000, and England fourth, with about 35,000,000.

The export of wool from Argentina for the year 1908 amounted to 386,183,000 pounds.

HUSTLING AND STUDYING THE GAME HAS BROUGHT "HAPPY" HOGAN SUCCESS

By "HAPPY" HOGAN.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

If I tell how I win, maybe I'll lose. But seriously, I am willing to write what I know about winning ball games to help out the young fellows and perhaps give them some points. I tell it to them so loud and so often I might as well print it.

The difference between a winning ball player and a losing one is all in the disposition of the man himself. Almost any ball player who is skilful enough with his hands and feet to play minor league ball is good enough for the major leagues if he only will study the game, and has the courage and the nerve to go forward. The great weakness of ball players lies in the fact that they do not study their own business, and to win a man must devote a lot of time and thought to every point of the game. I attribute what success I have had in the profession to the fact that I always have kept hustling and studying the game. After a game is played I get out by myself and study it over, figuring how plays were made, and how they might be improved upon, and then I try to explain my theories to players. I find that when the manager can go into his own clubhouse and discuss plays with his men, he not only helps himself, but helps the team. Lots of times, in arguing over how plays were made and how they should have been made, some bright player makes a suggestion that is helpful to every one.

Thinking and fighting for every point is what wins. I believe in strict discipline on ball fields, but I also believe in fighting the umpires when they are wrong. I believe in claiming everything in sight, and claiming it quick. If there is a chance for argument on a decision make the claim for decision before the umpire makes his decision and the chances are you will get the decision by thinking quicker than the umpire did. Once the decision is made yell real loud at the umpire and then quit, for there is no good in nagging at a man, no matter how bad he may be. Let the yell be loud enough to impress him. I have yelled a lot of games out of bad umpires, but I claim I never yet have let out a yell when I did not think I was right.

As for dealing with other teams, with umpires and with my own men, I have gone on only one principle—and that was to get an even break and to give every one a square deal and insist upon one for myself. If it is necessary, I believe in fighting for that square deal all the time.

As for playing the game, I am a firm believer in doing the unexpected all the time, and upsetting the other team by making plays for which they are not looking. Playing for one run at a time is my theory, and when runners are on bases, within scoring distance, I believe in abandoning all the rules of the game in order to get the runs home. It may be bad baseball to hit with three balls and no strikes, but if a hit will score runs I want the batters to hit. It may be bad baseball to refuse to sacrifice with men on bases and none out, but if the player sees a chance to hit through the field, let him hit. I try to place the responsibility on the player himself, and to rely upon his judgment as to when to hit, or not to hit, and to get men who can think quickly enough to outguess the other side and do what they do not expect. I do not favor stereotyped baseball, or playing along set rules. The unexpected is what breaks up games and wins them, and besides it makes contests more spectacular and exciting.

"HAPPY" HOGAN.

Fred Lake's Opinion.

Fred Lake, who has been in both leagues, says that the National league isn't a bit faster than the American. In fact, Fred says that the younger association is stronger in all departments than its elder.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

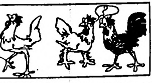
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 24, 1910. NO. 13.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Strange Inventions at Patent Office



WASHINGTON.—"Labor-saving devices are always in demand; the thousand inventors of this country are all devoting 90 per cent. of their time to producing such things, each in the hope of winning for himself fame and fortune, cash and credit," said a patent attorney the other day in Washington.

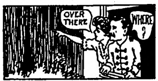
"One of the strangest of these schemes to lighten the world's work is a patent recently obtained by an ingenious person in Des Moines, Ia. It is called the self-tipping hat, and is designed to save the popular person from the fatiguing labor of removing his hat every time he meets one of the fair sex with whom he is acquainted.

"'Much valuable energy is utilized in tipping the hat repeatedly,' says the inventor, 'and my device will relieve one of it and at once cause the hat to be lifted from the head in a natural manner.' It is a novel device, in other words, 'for effecting polite salutations by the elevation and rotation of the hat on the head of the saluting party, when said person bows to the person saluted, the actuation of the hat being produced by mechanism within it, and without the use of the hands in any manner.'

"No truly rural person ever could have been responsible for the invention of eyeglasses for chickens, which was protected by United States patents recently. The glasses are modeled much after the fashion of grandpa's 'specs,' the nose rest being enlarged to go over the chicken's head, while the ear hooks are joined in the back.

"No claim is made that the chicken's eyesight is poor, or that magnifiers ever are needed that it may the better discover the reluctant worm or the elusive bug, but the inventor does say that the glasses 'are designed to prevent chickens pecking out each other's eyes.' The inventor's attempt to enforce all chickens to wear the device by legislative action in Kansas did not succeed, I may say."

How One Senator Viewed the Comet



"I HAD no particular interest in Halley or his comet," says Senator Simmons of North Carolina, "but Mrs. Simmons had. Every morning while the papers were full of the phenomenon, we would get up at two or three o'clock. Then Mrs. Simmons would lead me to a window and point out a dark line in the sky. It didn't look much of a comet to me, but she insisted that it was, and I took her word for it.

One morning we went through our regular performance. The more I looked then the less I was convinced that we had seen the comet at all. At length, after an investigation, I discovered that our 'comet' was the dim outline of a church steeple against the sky. Nice performance for a dignified senator to rise every morning to look at a steeple."

All of the members of the house are not acquainted with each other, and this often leads to funny mistakes. Though Adam Monroe Byrd has been in four congresses, he made one of these mistakes the other day. Byrd was making a tariff speech. He comes from Mississippi, and, of course, he thinks the present tariff is about the worst bill that could have been framed. He reached the woolen schedule, and he went up and down the aisle, directly addressing first one member and then another. At length he paused at a desk occupied by a small man with a Van Dyke beard. Byrd allowed to this small man that the woolen schedule was vicious. The small man nodded sympathetically. Byrd pounded the small man's desk vehemently.

"Knowing all the things I have said to be true, why did you vote for this schedule?" Byrd demanded of the small man.

'I did not vote for it."

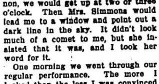
"You mean to tell this house that you did not vote for the tariff bill?"

"I do," said the small man.

"Well," said Byrd, "I admire you for your convictions."

By this time the house was splitting its sides. The small man was Representative Edward W. Saunders of Virginia, who is, of course, a Democrat, and who, equally, of course, did not vote for the Payne bill.

Millionaire Soldier Causes Big Stir



THEY are fussed up out at Fort Myer, where the cavalry has its headquarters. Recently a Washington youth, who got tired of his ways and the ways of the world in general, and who had sufficient money to go those ways swiftly, decided to enlist. He did so in the ordinary manner. Then one day when he had leave an automobile was drawn up outside of the fort and the recruit sauntered out and got into it. The officers saw him driven away, and their amazement was considerable. The lines are definitely drawn at the fort. There are several streets with square houses and neat lawns in front. In these houses the officers live. The privates mess together in the big main building in the inclosure. The officers couldn't quite see a private coming to and from headquarters in a machine. But they couldn't help themselves, because he was entitled to certain leaves, and when he got them he was at liberty to ride in a balloon if he so chose.

Then, to cap the climax, one night there was a ball at a swagger downtown hotel. It was given by members of the "set" in which the young soldier had been wont to move. He was invited and he went. The officers cast many icy stares his way, but he let them go. So far there has been a lot of talk in officers' row at Fort Myer, but there has been no action.

Oklahoma Kids See Sights of Capital

THE unusual privilege of the floor of the house of representatives was granted to Louis and Temple Abernathy, sons of United States Marshal "Jack" Abernathy of Frederick, Okla., a few days ago. The boys, who are nine and six respectively, rode their ponies from their home in Oklahoma to New York, where they were to meet their friend, Colonel Roosevent. On their way they stopped in Washington for a few days.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon was responsible for the appearance of Louis and Temple on the floor. They wore their sombreros and long cowboy pants tucked into boots, and the six-year-old had upon the front of his top piece a deputy United States marshal's badge. They were the breeziest things in the juvenile line to have struck Capitol hill recently. The congressmen gasped and flocked around them.

"How do you like Washington?" the speaker asked the youngsters.

"Bully," said the boys, who used to know President Roosevelt, and had some White House slang.

"Well, my lads," said the speaker, "this city belongs to 90,000,000 of people. You own just as much of it as Andrew Carnegie or John D. Rockefeller."

The baby deputy marshal looked very important.

"How much do you ride?" asked the speaker.

"Oh, forty or fifty miles a day," answered the wolf-catcher's son.

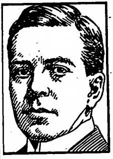
"You kids! You mean a week," said the speaker. The Abernathys looked bored.

"Naw," they said, "a day. We make 50 miles a day easy."

"But the army test," said Uncle Joe, "that's 90 miles in three days. I thought that was a pretty severe test in horseback riding, for grown men, too."

WHO'S WHO—AND WHY

PRESIDENT'S NEW SECRETARY



Charles D. Norton, the new secretary to the president, had been holding down the job of "buffer" of the Taft administration only a few days until he "buffed" Francis Burton Harrison, Democrat, and member of congress out of the White House in a huff.

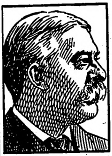
The secretary to the president is there to do just that sort of thing and Mr. Norton did it with such ease that two other members of the Empire state delegation who were present did not know that Mr. Harrison had been "buffed."

The story of the clash between the president and the New York congressman is not the subject of discussion for this short sketch, but suffice it to say that criticism by Mr. Harrison of the presidential action in connection with the Ballinger-Pinchot row made the New York congressman persona non grata at the White House and Mr. Norton was the one who told him so.

Mr. Norton only a short time ago succeeded Fred W. Carpenter to the office of secretary to the president. He had been serving as an assistant secretary of the treasury when President Taft selected him as the "buffer."

Mr. Norton is in his fortieth year. He was born in Winnebago county, Wis., at what is now Oshkosh, and is the son of the Rev. Franklin B. Norton, a Congregational frontier missionary. From his early manhood until he became assistant secretary of the treasury last year he was identified with the Nothwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, first at the home office in Milwaukee, later at Chicago in partnership with A. W. Kimball, becoming sole general agent there in 1905 upon Mr. Kimball's death. He has all the qualities of a good secretary.

RIPLEY ACTIVE RAIL CHIEF



Edward Payson Ripley, president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company, is about the busiest railroad chief in this country. Whenever anything big is going on among the railroads, especially those in the west, Mr. Ripley is pretty sure to be found right in the front rank.

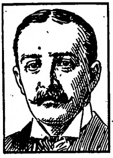
Recently the western railroads considered it necessary to increase their freight rates and had everything ready to do so when President Taft took a hand. As a result of presidential interference Judge Dyer of the United States district court issued an injunction restraining the roads from raising the prices for which they would haul freight.

Several of the railroad chiefs, among them Mr. Ripley, E. A. Delano, president of the Wabash and S. M. Felton, president of the Great Western met in Chicago. They decided to take the matter up with the president personally at the White House and were received in conference with Mr. Taft. As a result of the meeting it was agreed that the injunction suit would be withdrawn and that the roads would not attempt to increase the rates.

It was not President Ripley's first important visit to the White House. He was there more than once when the railroad rate bill was before congress and caused such a big fight. The president of the Santa Fe had the confidence of Theodore Roosevelt and he wielded his influence in the interests of the stockholders of the Santa Fe.

Mr. Ripley was born in Dorchester, Mass., 55 years ago and after being graduated from the high school there began railroad work as a clerk for the Pennsylavnia Railroad company. His work was of such splendid character that he soon gained promotion to New England agent then general eastern agent. From the Pennsylvania Mr. Ripley went to the Burlington, serving first as traffic manager and then general manager. From 1890 to 1895 he was third vice-president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road and in 1896 became president of the Santa Fe, which has steadily improved and grown under his guidance.

SUCCESSOR TO GOV. HUGHES

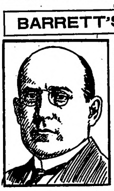


When Gov. Charles E. Hughes retires in October to become a member of the United States Supreme court, Lieutenant Governor White will become the chief executive of the Empire state. Lieutenant Governor White is only forty-four years old. His father was Horace K. White, a member of a distinguished Syracuse family. Andrew D. White, ex-president of Cornell university and former ambassador to Russia and to Germany, is his uncle. He is a lawyer by profession.

He has been active in the Republican party ever since he attained his majority. He has fought his party's battles on the stump in nearly every state and national convention for the last 20 years. In 1898 he was chairman of the Republican state convention which nominated Theodore Roosevelt for governor. White was first elected to the state senate in 1895 and remained a member of the upper house until his election as lieutenant governor two years ago.

He eats by the clock and sleeps by the clock. According to his friends, he is in deadly fear that pestiferous germs are lying in wait for him and has adopted an elaborate system of safeguards to ward them off.

BARRETT'S PRAISE OF GIRLS



John Barrett, diplomat, author, one time reporter, editor and war correspondent and a great believer in the future of South America, turned his attention from the affairs of the Latin republics long enough a few days ago to give some advice to the fair girl graduates of the land.

Mr. Barrett was speaking to the graduating class of Belcourt seminary in Washington, but his words could well be taken to heart by every young woman who is leaving school this year to enter upon her battle of life.

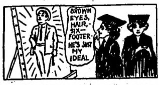
He said the women of the world have their eyes on the American girl and are watching every step of her progress; they look upon her as a model after whom they may pattern with profit. He said the young women of this country should at all times prove themselves worthy of this trust which the women in the other countries are placing in them.

The young woman, he averred, who leaves a Washington seminary should, upon her return home, do her best to exercise her influence for good upon the community in which she resides. This, it was explained, does not mean that she should enter politics, but rather that she should do all in her power in meeting men who direct affairs to impress upon them their duty to their country, state and city.

Mr. Barrett has been director of the International Bureau of American Republics since 1906 and has never lost an opportunity of talking about its work and the good that is to be attained through closer relationship between the United States and the Latin American republics.

TALES OF GOTHAM AND OTHER CITIES

Ideal Man as Barnard Girls See Him



BROWN EYES, HAIR, SIX-FOOTER HE'S JUST MY IDEAL

NEW YORK.—"Wanted, a man; brown eyes, hair and necktie. Last-mentioned article may also be lavender or torquoise-blue. A six-footer. May smoke, may not smoke, may smoke only a pipe. Sense of humor imperative. Income of $2,000 a year and prospects. A perfect gentleman and the owner of an auto. No dentists, professors or undertakers need apply."

Nay, gentle reader. That is not an ad. of Charles Dana Gibson for a summer man; nor the specifications for the latest hero or victim in a Robert W. Chambers novel, nor a manager's picture of a matinee idol. It is merely the collective husband of Barnard, 1910.

"I guess girls are just girls, whether they go to college or not," sniffed the maiden aunt from the country, when she heard this paragon of masculinity solemnly proclaimed by Miss Grace Reeder as the 1910 common ideal for a soul-mate. It was at the class-day exercises of the "coeds" in the Columbia gymnasium. But others sighed.

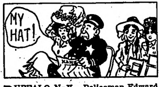
"Those Barnard girls have spent four years studying ethics and psychology and logarithms and social reform," moaned a spectacled professor. "Now, will you tell me how the harmony between a man's eyes and tie affects his understanding of the harmony between Epicurus and Walter Pater?" The professor's eyes, by the way, were small and pale blue, and his tie was black with white spots.

"And what has his devotion to nicotine to do with his devotion to Kant's 'A Critique of Pure Reason?' And wherein does his possession of a motor car imply his possession of the complete works of John Ruskin? And then the supremely silly insistence on the fact that he shall not be a high priest in the Temple of Knowledge"—indignation choked him there.

"And just to think," came acidly from a severe lady who wore a "votes for women" button, "there isn't a thing in that description about the man's being a suffragist! And no girl ought to marry any man until he promises he'll work for the cause."

Notwithstanding their adverse critics the young women in cap and gown clapped vociferously at the public announcement of the chosen charms of their hero, as previously obtained by statistical count. And two-thirds of them want him, by the way. They say they "find in marriage their highest vocation."

Why School Girls Laughed at the "Cop"



BUFFALO, N. Y.—Policeman Edward O'Grady of the third precinct delights in reading the papers. When interested in an article his entire attention is absorbed. He illustrated the idea by a story he told to Policeman Richard Tobin.

"I was coming down in a Niagara street car and was reading how Gotch threw Zbyszko. A woman with a big hat came into the car and I moved next to the window to make room. She sat down on the seat beside me. There were some snips of girls in the seats across the aisle and back of me. They were on their way to school," said O'Grady.

"I felt a tickling on my ear. But, being interested as a man is when he's reading, I just reached up my hand and gave the ear a gentle brush.

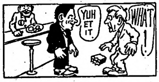
"After a little I felt the tickling again, but being interested in the paper, I just gave another little brush with my hand.

"My ear was tickled again, but being still interested, I just put up my hand again and not thinking of much gave the ear another brush.

"My mind was made up this time, flea or fly or whatever it was, I was bound to catch it. I only pretended to read. My ear was tickled. Like a shot back goes the hand. The woman's hat swings round and nearly saws the eye out of my head.

"It was a long feather, running round the hat and dangling out behind, that had been rubbing my ear. I had grabbed the feather. I thought the snips of schoolgirls would break their sides. The woman was good natured, when she found the hat wasn't broke. I got off the car at Jersey street and waited for the next car down town."

Eats $5 Bill He Changed for Friend



YUH ET IT.
WHAT!

ST. LOUIS.—Somewhere in the anatomy of John Henry of Upper Alton there is a five-dollar bill that he chewed up and swallowed while eating a cheese sandwich. While munching placidly on the sandwich W. W. Lowe asked Mr. Henry to change five dollars.

Holding the bill between his teeth, Henry began to "frisk" himself with one hand for the change while with the other he continued to carry the slowly disappearing sandwich to his mouth. By the time the change had been counted out and laid on the counter the last of the sandwich had been eaten and Henry asked where the bill was.

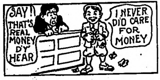
"Last I saw of it," said Mr. Lowe, "you were holding it in your teeth."

"That's so," said Henry. "I did stick the corner of that bill in my mouth to hold it and clean forgot it. I remember now that the sandwich tasted kind of peculiar and I thought you had put a leaf of lettuce into it like they do in those club sandwiches they serve in the city for two bits."

Meanwhile the five dollars in change had been given Lowe, and when Henry began to figure out where he came in on the transaction the best he got was an assurance from all present that he undoubtedly had the money and that there was no chance of his spending it.

Henry has been trying to figure how he can be "money in" and "money out" at the same time.

Magicians Have Fun at Annual Dinner



SAY!! THAT'S REAL MONEY D'Y' HEAR
I NEVER DID CARE FOR MONEY

NEW YORK.—A hatless youngster about sixteen years old approached the clerk of the Hotel Marlborough a few nights ago and asked the clerk to give him a one-dollar bill for a silver dollar. The clerk handed over the bill, but before the youthful person had relieved himself of the silver dollar in exchange he tore the bill in half.

The clerk stared. Then the youth folded the halves of the torn bill together and ripped them some more. Finally only tiny pieces of bill were in his fingers, all rolled up into a very small wad. As the clerk was about to get his breath the youngster unwound the wad of green and showed the admiring onlookers that the bill was quite as untorn and as wholly sound as it had ever been.

The boy handed his cards around then and they told in pink ink that he is "Max Heir, Magician. Merry Moments of Modern Magic, Mirth and Mystery."

"Oh," said the clerk, who had been thinking a second before about telephoning to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue for an ambulance, "you're one of the crowd having dinner here tonight."

There were about 150 men and women magicians just off the lobby, and they were celebrating the sixth annual banquet of the American Society of Magicians. The masters of black magic who dine together once a year number a few professional performers, but by far the greater part of the membership is made up of amateurs. And it seemed that about half of these dilettantes have the degree of M. D.

The magicians put pink handkerchiefs into bottles of water after their dinner and then fired revolvers at the bottles, whereupon both handkerchief and water suddenly disappeared.

THE SUNBEAM.
W G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. MINN

THE NEWER EDUCATION.

The relation of the larger universities of the United States to the practical problems of existence is being emphasized in an astonishing degree nowadays, says Chicago Tribune. If the notion of cloistered halls where pale-faced students pored over musty tomes once held sway, that idea has entirely disappeared. The dominant thought appears to be, how can the training of the schools be made most useful in bettering the conditions of human life. The University of Wisconsin, for example, has been rendering great service to the people of our neighboring commonwealth through its municipal reference bureau. Recognizing the activity in the field of city administration, it has collected information from all available sources, and is now ready to send out material on such subjects as sewage disposal, water supply and purification, street sprinkling and cleaning, the smoke nuisance, parks and playgrounds, care of trees, the commission form of government, public utilities and public service rates, civic centers and art commissions. The statement that one morning's mail brought inquiries from city officials in nine different commonwealths indicates the importance of such university work.

There is always room higher up for the young American who has the talent and the disposition to win. Few enlisted men in the navy rise to commissioned rank, for the way is long and arduous. But the prize can be secured by proper effort. One of these rare cases is reported from Annapolis, where Frederick M. Earl of Northfield, Vt., lately an apprentice in the navy, has passed the requisite examination and has been admitted to the Naval academy as a midshipman, and in due time of course, if all goes well, will receive his diploma and become an officer. The young man is said to have gone through "with flying colors," and it may be predicted that with such pluck and energy he will make his mark in the service of his country. And he has set an excellent example to other ambitious lads.

Advice by an energetic, efficient business man to a man now going back to work after a tired out spell: "Take things easier and get more fresh air. No worry. Do the most important thing first and then the next; generally the things you don't do aren't worth doing. What you think you ought to do you want to do up to the handle and do it quick and then forget it. Don't putter. The way to get along, in my judgment, is to work up to the limit for a certain number of hours and then stop. A man can get further in the long run walking three and a half miles an hour for eight hours out of each twenty-four than he can going two miles an hour for sixteen hours in twenty-four. The first way he can keep going and improve; the last way he will deteriorate and finally have to quit."

The night letter telegrams have proved a boon to many, but there are patrons that find them somewhat baffling. "Look at that man biting the end of his pen over there," the manager of a New York office said. "He is trying to think what in the world to say to use up the 50 words he is entitled to. I like to watch 'em in here at nights. Most of them have more trouble trying to think up 50 words than they ever did in keeping their messages down to ten. There is only one man who comes in here, sits right down and writes out his 50 words without hesitating. But he's in business down south, and has been in the habit of sending long messages for years."

President Schurman of Cornell points out that the scholarship records of the 1,020 men at the college who are members of the fraternities and clubs do not compare favorably with those of the 2,316 men who are not, and has warned the fraternity and club men that they are in trial, and that they would better set higher ideals in scholarship. There is no objection to liberty and equality at Cornell, but fraternity is looked on with suspicion.

In view of the fact that that Washington society girl's mother says that her daughter has been absolutely forbidden by her to go on the stage, perhaps it is not surprising that the girl is there.

Lieutenant Shackleton says steam heat is the curse of American hotels. Wait until he gets on the one-night-stand circuit in the northwest next winter.

Whether or not a Chicago man wears a collar two days in succession depends more on the man, perhaps, than it does on the condition of the collar.

Arguments for international peace are popular except when they are made excuses for military indolence.

ROYAL WELCOME FOR ROOSEVELT

Vast Throng Greets the Former President at New York.

HE IS MET AT QUARANTINE

Escorted to the Battery by a Great Flotilla—Speeches and Land Parade—Affair Is Spontaneous and Non-Partisan.

New York.—He has come back!

Theodore Roosevelt returned to his native land June 18, and was given a welcome home such as was never before accorded to a citizen of this republic. The whole country joined in it, and it was so spontaneous and so utterly non-partisan that it could not but be most flattering to the former president.

Since emerging from the African jungle the latter part of March, Mr. Roosevelt has been the guest of nearly every European ruler and almost unprecedented honors have been heaped on him. The reception by his fellow citizens was a fitting climax to his triumphal tour and must have been the most satisfactory event connected with it.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE TRIP

Flotilla Meets Him at Quarantine.

More than a month ago every available craft in New York harbor had been engaged for the day, and numerous big organizations, like the Republican club of New York and the Hamilton club of Chicago, had chartered regular coast line steamers. Early in the morning this immense flotilla sailed far down the bay, and when, about 9 o'clock, the scouting tugs and motor boats came flying in with the word that the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria was approaching, all made ready for the first greeting.

As the big liner came into sight, every whistle on every vessel was tied open and shrieked the welcome to the returning wanderer. Colonel Roosevelt, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Kermit by his side, stood on the deck, waving his hand and smiling the familiar smile, and the waiting thousands cheered him again and again.

From stereograph, copyright, by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

THE VOYAGER HOMEWARD BOUND

Reception Committee Takes Him.

At Quarantine the necessary formalities were quickly over and the official reception committee took the colonel and his party aboard its revenue cutter. That vessel at once started up the harbor and all the gaily decorated craft, filled with clubs and private parties, fell in behind and formed a most spectacular water parade. On almost every boat was a band, and all the way the musicians played at the top of their lungs. The shores were black with people who shouted their greetings to "Teddy" as he passed and the factories and mills added the noise of their whistles to the general din.

So it went all the way up to Twenty-third street, where the parade turned and made its way back to the Battery. At that historic spot at the lower end of Manhattan island Colonel Roosevelt landed to receive the formal welcome home.

Welcomed by Mayor Gaynor.

In an enclosure in the center of Battery park were 200 distinguished guests, including senators, representatives, ambassadors and close personal friends of Mr. Roosevelt. Surrounding this enclosure was another reserved space which was occupied by about 2,500 prominent men and members of the big reception committee.

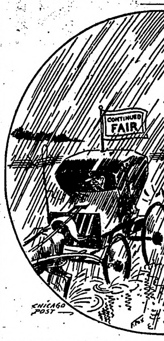
The cheering and music were almost continuous as the colonel entered the park, but finally quiet was restored and Mayor Gaynor stepped forward and delivered a cordial address of welcome on behalf of the nation and the city. Mr. Roosevelt responded briefly but feelingly, and short speeches were made by several other prominent men. Much as he would have liked to be present to greet his predecessor, President Taft was kept away on account of his official position and by a previous engagement.

Parade Through the City.

When the speech making was over, the parade through the city streets started. It was originally intended to conclude the reception with a monster parade, and invitations were issued to various organizations throughout the country. Within a few days, however, the committee was flooded with so many applications that the parade feature had to be in part abandoned. Organizations from Maine to California and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes requested places in the line of march, and if the project had been carried out, the procession would have extended from the Battery to the Harlem river and back again, a distance of 20 miles, and the people who had traveled hundreds of miles to see Roosevelt would have been deprived of the pleasure. In order to overcome this obstacle so that no one would be offended, a unique arrangement was adopted by the committee. All organizations that wished to participate in the parade were assigned certain blocks along the line of march; for instance, one or two blocks were assigned to some visiting club, and the next to the public, and so on.

The procession itself was comparatively small and was led by the mounted police of New York, who were followed by the police band on foot. Then came the escort of 500 Rough Riders under the command of Robert Hunter of Oklahoma city, president of the organization. Colonel Roosevelt came next in a carriage, and his carriage was followed by a long procession of vehicles containing the members of the committee and the speakers.

WHEN RURAL POSTMEN FLY WEATHER FLAGS



FOUR DEAD IN SHIP MUTINY

SHORE LEAVE DENIED, CHINESE MAKE DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Seven Leap Into Water and Four Drown—Remainder Rescued and Placed in Irons.

Philadelphia.—A mutiny on board the British steamship Highland Monarch, outward bound for Auckland, N. Z., followed by a dash for liberty by a dozen Chinese members of the crew, resulted in the drowning of four and the narrow escape of three others.

The men rescued are in a police station while the remainder of the mutineers are in irons aboard the ship.

The trouble started in the night. The Highland Monarch had been lying in the Schuylkill river at Point Breeze in the extreme southwestern part of the city for three weeks, loading with case oil for New Zealand.

As the United States immigration law places a fine of $500 on the captain of a steamship for every Chinese member of a crew that escapes, the 20 Chinese aboard were not permitted to leave the vessel, while the other 20 men in the crew, all Englishmen, were given liberal shore leave.

The confinement grew irksome, and as the ship was soon to sail one of the Mongolians asked First Mate Bowman to allow him a few hours on shore. Being refused, the Chinese drew a knife and chased the first mate about the ship.

The man was finally tripped by a white member of the crew, and in falling cut himself. He was placed in irons, and an hour later nearly all the Chinese made a break for liberty.

PARR GETS $100,000 REWARD

New York Custom Man Who Unearthed Sugar Frauds Handsomely Recompensed by Government.

Washington.—Richard A. Parr, deputy surveyor of the port of New York, will receive $100,000 reward from the government for his discovery of the trick in the sugar scales in New York by which the government was robbed of millions of dollars in customs duties.

This reward for Mr. Parr was decided upon by Secretary MacVeagh following a discussion of the claim at the cabinet meeting. It is understood that President Taft favored the $100,000, while Secretary MacVeagh would have cut the amount in two. In fact, the president was not averse to giving Parr the limit allowed, which would have approached a million.

JULIA WARD HOWE INJURED

America's "Grand Old Woman" Ninety-One Years Old Suffers From a Fall But Will Recover.

Boston.—Julia Ward Howe, America's "grand old woman," is suffering from bruises caused by a fall at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Elliott. Her physician says she will be fully recovered in ten days, despite her age. She is ninety-one years old. While going about the house Mrs. Howe tripped and fell against a piece of furniture.

Maine Democrats Nominated.

Augusta, Me.—At the biennial Democratic state convention here Frederick W. Plaisted, mayor of Augusta, was named for governor.

Conference Rail Report Wins.

Washington.—The senate adopted the conference report on the railroad bill.

Spain Is Shaken.

Madrid.—Earthquake shocks varying in duration from four to ten seconds were felt here Thursday and simultaneously at Cordova and Almeria, in Andalusia. No casualties are reported, but in Almeria some houses were damaged.

Lynch a Murderous Negro.

Durant, Miss.—After he had run amuck with a shotgun and attempted to kill three white men, Otho Mitchell, a drunken negro, was lynched by citizens here Thursday.

BIG DEAL IS UNDER FIRE

Officials of United Wireless Telegraph Company Arrested Charged With Misuse of Mails.

New York.—President Wilson and Vice-President Bogart of the United Wireless Telegraph company were taken into custody by United States Marshal Henkel at the company's office on Broadway Wednesday and arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields to answer a charge of misuse of the mails.

Chief Post Office Inspector Mayer charges the officials with a gigantic stock-manipulation plan, declaring that the capital of the company, whose assets were about $400,000, had been increased by an interchange of securities and that the price of these shares had been raised arbitrarily to such large amounts that the company at this time had an apparent stock-market value of $1,000,000,000.

Mr. Mayer states that one of the officers has cleaned up $5,000,000. He says there are 28,000 stockholders throughout the country who have placed their money with the company on the representation of its officers that it had a surplus of nearly $7,000,000, when as a matter of fact the company was failing to make its operating expenses.

Mr. Mayer further states that the inside officers of the company were privileged to sell their stock while outsiders were required to accept stock certificates stamped "not transferable until February 11, 1911."

Inspector O'Brien seized the books and papers of the company as evidence in the case. The complainant named in the charge on which the arrests were made is Michael C. O'Brien of Waterbury, Conn.

Wilson was released on $25,000 bond and Bogart's bond was $10,000.

ARMED MAN AT WHITE HOUSE

James Stricklin Held Pending Inquiry Into Sanity—It Is His Second Visit.

Washington.—A muscular man over six feet tall, with black hair and heavy black mustache, called at the executive offices of the White House and asked to see the president. He was recognized immediately as the man who visited the executive mansion June 17 of last year, and when arrested at that time had two big pistols in his possession. He was found again to be armed with a .44-caliber pistol.

The man gave his name as James Stricklin and said he was from Cumberland, Md. When arrested a year ago Stricklin said he hailed from Arkansas. The man is being held for observation as to his sanity. He asserts that various persons are persecuting him and wishes the president to put a stop to it.

PEARY RETURNS FROM EUROPE

Commander Declares He Will Never Again Head An Arctic or Anarctic Expedition.

New York.—Commander Robert E. Peary was a passenger on the Mauretania. He said that he had not heard any news of Doctor Cook and had not the slightest idea of his present whereabouts.

"I shall never again head either an Arctic or Anarctic expedition," said the commander. "Captain Bartlett will probably lead an expedition to the South Pole next year. It should be much easier to reach the South Pole because there is no shifting ice and the route has been plotted to within a hundred miles"

Walks in Sleep to Death.

New York.—Walking in his sleep, P. T. Brudder, a retired business man, aged seventy-nine, fell through an open window in his sixth floor apartment Friday and was instantly killed. Relatives said that he had been a somnambulist since childhood.

Hungry Hogs Kill and Mutilate Man.

Sterling, Ill.—A drove of hogs mutilated and killed Charles Anderson, a farmer, Thursday. His body was found Friday. Both arms had been eaten by the animals.

IN A SERIOUS CONDITION.

A Case of Terrible Kidney Trouble.

Henry Palmer, Cole and Walnut Sts., Barnesville, O., says: "My kidney trouble was caused by hardships and exposure in the army. The awful pains across my back gradually became more severe until I was in constant misery. My feet and hands were swollen to twice their natural size. The kidney secretions were in a terrible condition—for months I voided what seemed to be clear blood. I became so dizzy everything seemed to whirl. My condition was alarming when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Before long I improved and was soon strong and well."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

An Almost Universal Prayer.

"Among the late Bishop Foss' anecdotes about prayer," said a Philadelphia Methodist, "there was one concerning a very original Norristown preacher.

"This preacher, in the course of a long prayer one Sunday night, recounted the many misfortunes and evils that had befallen him in the course of his long life. Then, sighing heavily, he prayed:

"'Thou hast tried me with affliction, with bereavement, and with sorrow of many kinds. If thou are obliged to try me again, Lord, try me with the burden of wealth.'"

SKIN BEAUTY PROMOTED

In the treatment of affections of the skin and scalp which torture, disfigure, itch, burn, scale and destroy the hair, as well as for preserving, purifying and beautifying the complexion, hands and hair, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are well-nigh infallible. Millions of women throughout the world rely on these pure, sweet and gentle emollients for all purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery, and for the sanative, antiseptic cleansing of ulcerated, inflamed mucous surfaces. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., sole proprietors of the Cuticura Remedies, will mail free, on request, their latest 32-page Cuticura Book on the skin and hair.

Paired.

She was an amiable old lady, and volunteered much information to the fair stranger who had come down to see an important event in the country town—the laying of the foundation stone of the new church.

"Yes," prattled the old lady, "that is the duke and duchess, and the couple behind them are the mayor and mayoress; and those two to the right are the vicar and—er—vixen."—Ideas.

A Protection Against the Heat.

When you begin to think it's a personal matter between you and the sun to see which is the hotter, buy yourself a glass or a bottle of Coca-Cola. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send 2c stamp for booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" and the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910. The latter contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues, and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. Address The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

What can harm us if we are true to ourselves and do what we think is right?—Black.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress after Eating.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power:

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building to the wheat fields of Western Canada.

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 23 bushels per acre.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre), are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success. Write as to best place for settlement, settlers' low railway rates, descriptive illustrated "Last Best West" (sent free on application) and other information, to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Bldg., Grand Forks, N. D.; J. M. MacLachlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. D.; E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.

(Use address nearest you.) 10

ELDEST SON OF ROOSEVELT WEDS

Theodore, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Alexander Are Married.

CULMINATION OF LOVE MATCH

Former President Witnesses Ceremony in New York Church—San Francisco to Be Home of the Couple.

New York.—Of all the June weddings of 1910, the one that has aroused the most general interest was that of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Miss Eleanor Alexander which was celebrated in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church on June 20.

A large number of prominent people witnessed the ceremony, but naturally the most noticed person in the church, after the bride and groom, was Col. Theodore Roosevelt, father of the young man who was entering the state of matrimony. The date of the wedding had been set to permit the attendance of the former president, and this was one of his very first social engagements after his return from abroad, for he landed in New York only two days before.

Reading from left to right: Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Longworth, Lars Anderson.

Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who before her own recent marriage was Miss Elizabeth Bertron, was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Miss Jessie Millington-Drake, Miss Janetta Alexander, Miss Jean Delano and Miss Harriet Alexander.

Rev. Henry M. Sanders, a great uncle of the bride, officiated, assisted by Dr. Gordon Russell of Cranford, N. J.

After the ceremony the bridal party was entertained at the home of the bride's uncle, Charles B. Alexander. At least a part of the honeymoon will be spent at Sagamore Hill, the country home of the Roosevelt family at Oyster Bay, Long Island. Later in the summer the young couple will start for San Francisco, where Mr. Roosevelt is to be in charge of the interests of the carpet manufacturing firm with which he has been associated for some time.

The Roosevelt Home at Oyster Bay.

The love story of the young couple has been a quick-moving romance. Their engagement was announced only last winter, and the news was cabled to Colonel Roosevelt, resulting in the speedy receipt of his approval and congratulations. The bride, who is the daughter of Henry Addison Alexander of New York, is twenty-one years old, of a little more than medium height, slender, and of very attractive appearance, having an especially beautiful complexion. She is as animated as her famous sister-in-law, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, whose house guest she was for a time just before Mrs. Longworth sailed for England to join her father.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., strongly resembles his father in looks, but is decidedly reserved and is generally credited with being far less democratic than certain other members of the family. As a boy he rode horseback and engaged in all the other outdoor pursuits of the juvenile Roosevelt clan at their home at Oyster Bay and he took some part in athletics during his preparatory school course at Groton and his collegiate course at Harvard, but in the main he has been less enthusiastic on the subject of life in the open than his father and brother Kermit. He has always been of a studious nature and his romance with Miss Alexander is said to have had its beginnings in the mutual love of these young people for music. For all that "Teddy, Jr.," has eschewed the sensational in outdoor athletics, he did participate two years ago in a balloon flight from Washington, in which he and the two army officers who were his fellow passengers had some rather exciting experiences.

There was no little surprise on the part of the public when Theodore, Jr., upon the completion of his college course two years ago, chose a business career as his life work, and still more wonder was aroused when he took employment in a Connecticut carpet factory in order to gather knowledge at first hand of the practical side of carpet manufacture. He started at the lowest round of the ladder, as an unskilled workman at a small salary. Of course he was promoted as he mastered the intricacies of the business, but he continued to live quietly in a modest boarding house. Many persons were skeptical as to whether young Roosevelt would stick to so prosaic an existence, but he is evidently determined to win his fortune in this sphere.

The 'ff in ffarington.

Mrs. ffarington, who is engaged to Mr. Tom Curtis, is the widow of the late Mr. W. E. ffarington of Worden, Lancashire. The spelling of this ancient name with the small "ff" found in old manuscripts is merely the retention of the old form of capital "F." Deeds of conveyance in the time of George II. and III. recite: "George of Great Britain ffrance and Ireland King," etc.; the form could not therefore be due to ignorance, as has been said, for in days when gentlemen of estate were gentlemen of quality such a spelling in deeds could hardly arise from lack of knowledge of spelling. The ffaringtons of Worden hall, Lancashire, prefer, like several other well known families, including the ffolkes and ffrenches, to retain the archaic capital "ff." The family trace their descent from Hugo de Meolis, who came to England with the Conqueror, and they have been associated for generations with the court, army and church, and with public life.—From the Court Journal.

Raven's Sharp Trick.

The best talking-bird new to the big collection in the London "Zoo" is a raven who came to the aviary last year. "Hullo! Jack!" is his favorite remark, and it is the voice of one who meets an unworthy friend. Soon after he arrived he used his conversational powers with great effect upon a lammergeier who shares his cage (relates the London Spectator). The lammergeier had a piece of meat which the raven desired, but he was unwilling to surrender it. The raven hopped up. "Hullo! Jack!" he began, and the lammergeier, aghast at the voice of man, dropped his dinner and fled. But the lammergeier was never a bird of much spirit.

G. A. R. STATE CAMP

WORLD MOVEMENT FOR DISARMAMENT HOLDS ATTENTION OF MEN WHO TASTED WAR.

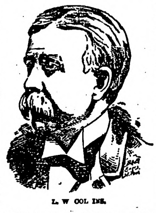
L. W. COLLINS OPENS MEETING

Ovation Is Accorded Prof. Maria Sanford When She Sounds the Call.—Hundreds of Defenders of the Union Meet.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Resolutions introducing the Minnesota delegates to the National encampment of the G. A. R., to urge legislation prohibiting the placing statues or paintings of Robert E. Lee or any member of the Confederacy in any buildings or grounds owned or controlled by the federal government were introduced at the forty-fourth annual encampment, department of Minnesota G. A. R. Garfield post No. 8 brought these resolutions before the encampment.

Hardly had they been read before a dozen deleates were on their feet demanding to be heard. State Commander Collins abruptly cut off all argument for the time by referring them to the committee on resolutions.

The resolution characterized the attempt to place Lee's statue in a government building as a means of teaching false lessons of patriotism to the youth of the land; that the cause for which the Confederates fought was wrong, and traitorous and that an attempt to recognize the flag and uniform of the Confederacy in this manner was an insult to the flag and patriotic Americans.



L. W COL INS.

The delegates to the national convention were instructed by resolution to favor changing of the name, "United States avenue," at Gettysburg to "Hunt avenue," in recogniton of the commander of the artillery at that battle.

Stand to Salute Flag.

Three raps from the gavel of State Commander Loren W. Collins brought the delegates scurrying into their seats. Prayer was said, and then Color Bearer W. H. Deline marched from the entrance to the platform, flag staff in holster, and flag drooping. As he reached the steps leading to the platform, every one present stood, brought his hand to salute, and remained in that position until the colors were placed on the platform.

Commander Collins then made a brief opening address, and was followed by other officers, who read reports. Comrade Levi Longfellow made an address to the flag; Miss Zadie McDonald gave a short recitation, and Miss Helen McDonald sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Immediately after the convention was called to order at 2 p. m., Prof. Maria Sanford, who delivered an address advocating universal peace on Memorial day, took the platform.

"The proposition I make is that the Grand Army of the Republic ask the Confederate veterans to unite with them and commission Theodore Roosevelt to act as their agent in devising a plan for disarmament and obtaining for it the approval and acceptance of the nations," she said.

"General Sherman said 'War is hell,' and I know he was right," said Benjamin Franklin Curtis, commander of Chase Post No. 22.

Talking not of the victories of war, but of a still greater victory of peace; not of the splendid battalions that marched under Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan, but of plans for universal disarmament, more than 500 veterans of the Department of Minnesota G. A. R. met in their forty-fourth annual encampment at the Princess theater, Fourth street, near Central avenue at 10 a. m. today. The morning was devoted to the registration of delegates, the salute of the flag, and routine reports from the state officers. At the afternoon session Prof. Maria Sanford made the principal address, urging the veterans to carry the universal peace propaganda to a successful conclusion.

BISHOP AT ROCHESTER.

Head of Catholic Diocese of Winona Pays First Visit and Preaches Sermon.

Rochester.—Bishop Patrick Heffron, the new bishop of the Winona diocese of the Catholic church, paid his first visit to Rochester.

Father William Coleman celebrated his first mass, assisted by Father Ryan of St. Paul and Father Tibesar of the Winona diocese, both college companions of the new priest. Bishop Heffron preached the sermon.

NO FREE SHOWS FOR OFFICERS.

Mayor Brown, of Fergus Falls, Leads Off in Another Reform.

Fergus Falls.—Fergus Falls has always been considered a highly progressive city, and when it comes to reform measures, can always be counted upon to head the procession. The state anti-pass law does not prevent city officials from accepting circus tickets and passes of this character, the matter being called to public attention here through a letter written by Mayor D. M. Brown to the members of the council.

At the next regular meeting of the city council an ordinance will be passed making it unlawful for the agent of any circus, menagerie, side show, wild west show, Indian congress, theater, baseball game, picture show, nickelodeon, merry-go-round, hurdy-gurdy, slot machine, ring-the-can, hit-the-nigger's-head, or any other exhibition or game whatsoever, to give, directly or indirectly, to any mayor, acting mayor, alderman or city official of any kind, whether elective or appointive, any free pass or ticket of admission.

ASKS LONGER CONVENTION.

St. Paul Secretary of Firemen Organized 40 Relief Societies.

Alexandria.—A second eulogy on the late D. L. Kane by First Vice-President E. M. Twiford, of Owatonna, and an address by Frank M. Eddy, were the principal speeches at the afternoon session of the firemen. Secretary Myler of St. Paul made several recommendations in his annual report. One was that the two-day convention be lengthened one day, and that the secretary and treasurer submit quarterly instead of annual reports. He reported that in the year he had organized forty relief associations.

The present membership of the association is 445, representing 306 fire departments. Topics of interest to the association filled the remainder of the afternoon. The day closed with the annual parade, with 700 men in line.

There were six bands in line, those being Fergus Falls, Evansville, Glenwood, Sauk Center, Brandon and Evansville.

DRUGGISTS TO MEET.

Minnesota Pharmacists Coming to St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn. — The 26th annual meeting of the Minnesota State Pharmaceutical Association will be held at Tonka Bay, June 21, 22, 23 and 24. The indications, so the arrangements committee says, point to a meeting of unusual strength and interest. The association will deal with a number of propositions of national importance. Gov. Eberhart will welcome the visitors and former Gov. John Lind will address the Scientific section, over which Dean Wulling, of the Minnesota State University, will preside. Prof. Joseph P. Remington, of Philadelphia, possibly the best known pharmacist in the United States, will attend all the sessions.

BIG CEREMONIAL SESSION.

Twin City Shriners Will Unite in Observing Anniversary.

Minneapolis. — The Zuhrah Temple of Minneapolis and Osman Temple of St. Paul Shriners will have a joint ceremonial session June 21 in the hippodrome at the state fair grounds in honor of their twenty-fifth anniversary. Prominent men from outside to attend are Imperial Potentate Fred A. Hines, Los Angeles, Cal., and Imperial Deputy Potentate J. Frank Treat, Fargo, N. D. Imperial Marshal Charles E. Ovenshire of Minneapolis promises that the work will be done on a grander scale than ever before attempted in the northwest.

WALKS TO DEATH IN RIVER.

Austin, Minn., Tailor Commits Suicide at Spring Valley.

Spring Valley.—A most uncommon suicide has just occurred here. Sibert Hermann, a tailor, who came here from Austin, Minn., a short time ago, evidently tired of life, got up early, went to the river at the foot of Broad street, removed his coat and hat as if he was going to do something very commonplace, waded into the stream to the depth of about a foot, folded his hands, and then lay face downward in the water. Before he could be reached he was dead.

Tim Murphy Enters Prison.

St. Paul, June 17.—Timothy Murphy, former captain of the Volunteers of America, of St. Paul, convicted of embezzlement, was taken to Stillwater, to begin his seven-year sentence which was recently imposed by Judge Hallam. He was found guilty of embezzling funds which had been collected by the Volunteers of America. His attorney will make an appeal to the supreme court for a new trial.

Forest Fires Again Threaten.

Duluth. — Another forest fire caused by a spark from an engine is raging in township 51, range 16, on both sides of the Cloquet river. It has been burning several days, making it necessary to call out a large number of men to try to control the fire and save the settlers' homes. C. J. Carlson, a settler, lost his barns and machinery and tools to the amount of several hundred dollars; Oscar Anderson; another settler in that township, who was absent, lost everything he owned.

INDICT COTTON MEN

JAMES A. PATTEN AND SEVEN OTHERS FACE CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY.

ANTI-TRUST LAW VIOLATED

Accusation Hits Men Alleged to Have Engineered Recent Bull Pool—Each Gives $5,000 Bond and Released—Deny Forming Agreement.

New York.—The special federal grand jury Friday returned indictments against James A. Patten, the Chicago speculator, and seven others alleged to have been associated with him in the cotton pool. They are charged with having violated the criminal clause of the anti-trust law.

Their bail was fixed at $5,000 each by Judges Hough. All of them gave bond through the National Surety company and were immediately released.

The men indicted are: James A. Patten of Chicago, W. P. Brown of New Orleans, Frank B Hayne of New Orleans, Eugene C. Scales of Texas, Sidney J. Herman, Robert M. Thompson and Charles A. Kittle of New York, Morris R. Rothschild of Mississippi.

The indictments were handed up to Judge Hough in the United States circuit court. The defendants were represented by former United States Senator John C. Spooner, Henry Wellman and Joseph P. Cotton.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, one of the indicted men, was strongly urged for secretary of the navy when President Taft was forming his cabinet. He is a South Carolinan and for years was prominent in the politics of that state before he was brought to New York to occupy an important position with the New York Life Insurance company.

The investigation, which resulted in the indictments was begun April 18, at the direct order of Attorney General Wickersham. It will be recalled that all through the sensational rise in the cotton market last winter, Mr. Patten and the men associated with him in the bull movement, took advantage of every occasion to deny that they had formed an agreement of any sort. This will be their defense when their cases are called for trial next fall.

The blanket indictment contains more than 20,000 words and embraces five counts. The first count charges that the defendants on the first day of January 1910, conspired with certain corporations that are spinners and manufacturers of cotton, to control the price of raw material. The corporations were not indicted.

The indictment then goes on to give a description of the trade and commerce which it is alleged was sought to be monopolized and states that "cotton has been and is an article of prime necessity to the people of the United States and the growing of the same has necessitated the cultivation of many millions of acres of land, and that the spinners and manufacturers were co-conspirators with the men indicted.

CIRCUS TRAIN IS WRECKED

Wild Beasts Escape From Cages—Country People Are Terrorized—Many Employes Hurt.

Ebensburg, Pa.—The Frank A. Robbins circus train, composed of 15 cars, was wrecked Thursday a mile from here on the Cambria & Cresson branch of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Two lions, an elephant, one leopard, one hyena, one jaguar, and an ibex are reported to be at large as a result.

Many circus employes were injured. The more seriously hurt were taken to hospitals in Altoona.

At the scene of the wreck a low bridge spans a deep gully. As the train passed over the bridge three of the wagons which contained the animals struck low-hanging girders and were overturned. The cars carrying the wagon cages were derailed and thrown over the embankment leading to the bridge.

The entire country for miles around is in a state of terror. Many of the farmers and their families refuse to leave their homes and take up the search for the liberated menagerie beasts.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE IS ILL

Wisconsin Statesman Suffers From Gall Stones, but His Condition Is Not Serious.

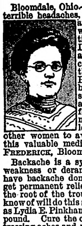
Washington.—Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, who has been absent from the senate for ten days, is at his home, where he is suffering from gall stones. Friends of the senator report that he is resting easily and that his condition is not serious. The senator's physician, however, will not permit him to resume his duties until he has improved. Mr. LaFollette suffered a similar attack two years ago.

Auto Casualty List Is Growing.

Chicago.—Five persons were killed and 43 injured by automobiles in the first half of June, according to a report which Sergt. Elliot of the bureau of records has made to Chief of Police Steward Friday. The start of the month promises that June will excel even May in accidents.

Aldrich's Son Ill.

New York.—Richard S. Aldrich, son of Senator N. W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, is ill of typhoid fever at the Presbyterian hospital in this city.



YOUR BACKACHE WILL YIELD

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Bloomdale, Ohio.—"I suffered from terrible headaches, pains in my back and right side, and was tired all the time and nervous. I could not sleep, and every month I could hardly stand the pain. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health again and made me feel like a new woman. I hope this letter will induce other women to avail themselves of this valuable medicine."—Mrs. E. M. FREDERICK, Bloomdale, Ohio.

Backache is a symptom of female weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so safely and surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Cure the cause of these distressing aches and pains and you will become well and strong.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has restored health to thousands of women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

PATENT your ideas. 64-page book and advice FREE. Established 1880. Fitzgerald&Co. Box k, Washington, D.C.

The young who take advice are almost beyond the need of it.—George MacDonald.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Not Prepared to See.

Marjorie—Didn't you see the mouse?

Madge—Why, dear, I just couldn't see it. I had my old stockings on.

Grief is the agony of an instant. The indulgence of grief is the blunder of a life.—Dunegan.

Why He Whitewashed.

A country doctor tells a story of a man who moved into a dilapidated old cottage, and was found by the doctor busily whitewashing it inside and out. "I'm glad to see you making this old place so nice and neat," said the physician, "it's been an eyesore in the neighborhood for years." "'Tain't nothing to me about eyesores," was the reply. "The last couple what lived here had twins three times, and I hope whitewash is a good disinfectant. Ye see we've got ten children."

Didn't Know the Purpose.

Mark Twain, as an example of unconscious humor, used to quote a Hartford woman who said one day in the late spring:

"My husband is the dearest fellow. 'Jim,' I said to him this morning, 'are you very hard up just now?'

"'I certainly am hard up,' he replied soberly. 'This high cost of living is terrible. I don't know what I'm going to do.'

"'Then, Jim,' said I, 'I'll give up all thought of going to the country for July and August this year.'

"But the dear fellow's face changed, and he said:

"'Indeed, then, you won't, darling. I thought you wanted to buy a hat with an aigrette or some such foolishness. No, no, my darling—Jim can always find the money to let his dear little wife go to the country.'"

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food That Cured Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," says a woman in Salisbury, Mo. "At that time there was none kept in this town, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago traveler.

"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea, and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use the new food the cramps disappeared and have never returned.

"My old attacks of sick stomach were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble has disappeared entirely. I am today perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.

"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He sells them by the case to many of the leading physicians of the county, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905 at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 8, 1879

POLITICAL ANNOUCEMENT.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator to represent the Sixty-first Senatorial district, at the primaries to be held Septemer 20, 1910.

Al. H. Jester.

John King has the Red Lake Falls Gaz tte advertised for sale. Here is a chance for some one.

The Spectator is much improved in appearance under the management of I. D. Converse.

It is doubtful if Senator Hanson's ability (?) will land him the Senatorship this year, as the farmers seem to be getting onto their job.

This June weather is enough to make a native Northern Minnesotian get the Canada fever. This month has certainly been a record breaker for hot dry weather.

Judging from the differant press notices, H. O. Bjorge, of Lake Park, did not receive a very warm welcome, when he was up in the northern part of the Ninth sizing up the congressional political situation.

A F Lattimore has been telephoning to Thief River Falls about his troubles in publishing final proof notices, but he struck the wrong man, as he should have told his troubles to a police man or telephoned to President Taft Better ca'l up Taft, Alex, and explain the matter to him. You have an interest in the telephone line, so can get reduced rates.

John Lind will undoubtly be the next Democratic candidate for Governor, Eberhart seems to be the choice of the Republican party. The Prohibitionists will also have a ticket in the field. In your mad rush to see your man elected Governor do not forget the legislature. There's the place we need men. A good legislator does not need to wait for a cue from the Governor to do things. —Norman County Index.

In view of these facts it looks strange to us to see the Index supporting Senator Hanson.

There is no longer any question of doubt that the proposition to divide Red Lake County and establish Pennington will be voted on at the election next November, and that an aggressive campaign will be conducted to get the necessary number of votes to carry it. This is a question that we have not taken any interest in looking up, therefore we prefer to keep out of the heat of the campaign as long as possible.

At the Republican Convention held in Thief River Falls, last Friday, hogishness, instead of justice and fairness, seemed to predominate. Red Lake Falls or any other place opposed to Thief River Falls were not allowed any delegates to the State Convention, as that city had the power and they used it to the extent that would make any uninterested observer conclude that he would hesitate to place all the power of Red Lake or we might say Pennington County in their hands. It may sometimes be good politics to be fair when you are on top, instead of carrying good luck too far and meeting disaster on the road.

Deer Park News.

Ed Hyland bought a new mower at Plummer, last week.

C. W. Johnson returned from Fosston with stallion, last week.

Reistad, the cattle-buyer of Plummer was here buying cattle, last week.

Mr. Ole Overwold went to Gonvick on business, last week.

Mrs. Ed Rustad and Mrs. Beckstrand went to Hill River to visit relatives.

Ed Rustan, Ole Nesland, and Ole attended a big meeting, last Sunday.

The surveyors have finished surveying the big county ditch.

Mrs. Seversrud's brother, the newly arrived minister, delivered a fine sermon at Swanson's school-house, Sunday.

Ole Stromme and William Rodman, are now living on their farms in Deer Park.

Dr. Teal, of Thief River Falls, was up here making an examination of C. W. Johnson's horse. Charles now has state license for his horse.

John Boreak, who was arrested and sentenced to ninety days in jail for abusing his wife, created a sensation by eloping with his former wife, who had secured a divorce from him soon after his imprisonment. They deserted their four children. Thus water always comes back to its level.

A BRAVE GIRL.

Her Terrible Experience While on a Smuggling Expedition.

This tale of heroism displayed by a young woman engaged in smuggling contraband goods over the Swiss-Italian border comes from Geneva: "Mlle. Poretti, aged eighteen, and her brother, aged twenty-three, left Swiss territory to cross the Baldisco pass carrying contraband goods into Italy. On the summit they were overtaken by a violent snowstorm and were soon in deep snow. The Porettis roped themselves, the young man leading. They lost their way, and while attempting to find the path Poretti fell through the snow into a crevasse into which he nearly dragged his sister. The girl, however, planted her ice ax in the snow and withstood the shock.

"Early the next morning several smugglers crossing the pass from Swiss territory into Italian found the young girl near the ordinary route taken by smugglers and recognized her at once, as she belonged to a smuggler's family and lived at Chiavenna. The smugglers at once drew up the brother, but found that he had died during the thirteen hours his sister had held him by the rope. He had received severe injuries in the head, and his body was frozen.

"The smugglers carried down the brave girl, who was almost unconscious, as well as the dead body of her brother, and notified the Poretti family at Chiavenna. On reaching the valley the girl had recovered sufficiently from her terrible experience to explain that she and her brother had spoken for several hours after the accident and at last he had said that he felt nothing and wanted to sleep.

"A warm night followed the snowstorm, or two dead bodies would have been found. Under the great strain the rope had cut through the girl's clothes and her waist was bleeding when she was rescued."—Chicago News.

MISERY AIDING MISERY.

The Helping Hand Among the Beach Combers of Marseilles.

Harry A. Franck in "A Vagabond Journey Around the World" writes of the trying times when he was a beach comber in Marseilles: "Long, hungry days passed, days in which I could scarcely withstand the temptation to carry my kodak to the mont de piete (pawnshop) just off the sailors' square. Among the beach combers there were daily some who gained a few francs by an odd job, by the sale of an extra garment or by 'grafting,' pure and simple. When his hand closed on a bit of money the stranded fellow may have been weak with fasting, yet his first thought was not to gorge himself, but to share his fortune with his companions under hatches. In those bleak November days many a man ranked a 'worthless outcast' by his more fortunate fellow beings toiled all day at the coal wharfs of Marseilles and tramped back, cold and hungry, to the Place Victor Gelu to divide his earnings with other famished miserables whom he had not known a week before.

"More than one man sold the only shirt he owned to feed a new arrival who was an absolute stranger to all. These men won no praise for their benefactions. They expected none and would have opened their eys in wonder if they had been told that their actions were worthy of praise. The stranded band grew to be a corporate body. By a job here and there I contributed my share to the common fund, and between us we fought off gaunt starvation.

"In a dirty alley just off the place was an inn kept by a Greek in which one could sleep on the floor at 3 sous or in a cot at 6, and every evening a band of ragged mortals might have been seen dividing the earnings of some of them into three sou lots as they made their way toward 'L'Auberge chez le Grec.'"

A fool's heart is in his tongue, but a wise man's tongue is in his heart.—Quarles.

Grand Celebration, at Highlanding, Minn.

Program:

Oration at 11 O'clock. Reading of Declaration of Independence. Foot Races, Wheelbarrow Races, Tug of War, Base Ball at 2 30, Erie vs Lillo.

Dance in the Bowery, afternoon and evening.

Grand Display of Fire-works in the Evening.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 20th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 17th, 1910.

Notice is heeby given tnat Peter Peterson, of Kratka Minn., who on June 26th, 1904, made Homestead entry No 400, Serial No. 0416. N.W. ¼ Section 20 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner fo the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 5th. day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Michael H. Conely: Tosten Elleson, Jacob R. Hesby, Ole Christofferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17. 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

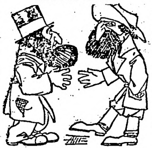
Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 29, 1904, made Homested Entry No. 435, Serial No. 0489, for N. W. ¼ Section 29 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafoal, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

More Than Exalted.



Simeon Shucks—Ikarius is a pretty high up man.

Colonel Cobb—Thirty-third degree?

"Higher'n that—ary-plane."

The Ham Fair at Paris.

A feature of Parisian life is the ham fair which is held on the Boulevard Richard Le Noir. The name of this fair is wholly misleading, for as far as I have ever seen hams are the very last thing any one ever buys there. Old brass and copper curios, quaint jewelry, rare china, lace, tapestries and books are what most people go out to seek, and a sight not to be easily forgotten is the long, wide boulevard lined with ramshackle stalls laden with every possible kind of lumber and presided over by the most rapacious of brocanteurs. Out of piles of valueless lumber Americans and English diligently seek for their pet kind of curios, and there is not an artist in Paris who cannot point to some bit of furniture in his or her studio and say with pride, "I got that for 5 francs at the ham fair." No one ever pays more than 5 francs, I notice, but, alas, every year these five franc bargains are becoming more rare, and even as housekeeping in Paris grows more and more costly so does the furnishing of one's house to keep.—London Queen.

Only a Question of Possibility.

Among the customers of a tea store opened in the northwest part of the city the other night was a man who, after buying a pound of coffee, handed a counterfeit half dollar to the shopkeeper.

"This money is counterfeit; I'm sorry, sir," said the shopkeeper.

"Yes; I know it," replied the customer, grinning. "Got it here one day last week, and I've been saving it for you." Then, noting the smile upon the shopkeeper's face, the customer said, evidently offended, "Perhaps you doubt my word?"

"Oh, not at all, sir; not at all. I couldn't doubt the word of so truthful a man. I was simply smiling because I wondered how it was possible for you to have got the money here. This place was opened only night before last."

Thereupon the customer departed hastily after producing a good coin and slipping the counterfeit into his own pocket.—Philadelphia Times.

Notice For Publication,

First Publication June 3 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 31st. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Martin O. Moen of Torgerson, Minn., who on Dec. 5th. 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1380. Serial No. 04598, for W. ½ S. W. ¼, Sec. 16 & S. ½ S. E. ¼, Ses. 17 Twp. 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 13th day of July, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Levos, of Mavie, Minn., Martin L. Salberg, Knute Torgerson, and Ole A. Olson of Torgerson Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. May 28th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Daghe Knutson, of Hilda, Minn., who on November 25th, 1905 made Homestead Entry No. 1249, Serial No. 04508, for S. E. ¼ Section 36, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above describe; before J. M. Bishop, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B Henry Costello, Halvor Swenson, Ola B. Hanson, and Knut Yrtesund, all of Hilda, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 20th. 1910

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office Crookston Minnesota. May 18th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Robert Moltzer of Highlanding Minn., who on March 14, 1909 made Homestead entery No. 1076 Serial No. 04127 for N. E. ¼ Section 23 Township 158 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minnesota on the 27th. day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Perley P. Palmer, of Highlanding Minn. Osmond K. Homme, of Erie Minn. Charles Palmer, Peder H. Thoreson, of Highlanding Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub in The Sunbeam May 27th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 23rd, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Michael Connaker, of Togerson Minn. who on March 21st, 1905, made Homestead entry No. 1088, Serial No. 0657, for N W. ¼ Section 25 Township 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above desclbed, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 27th, day of June 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Morgan Vaughan, of Germantown Minn. John Markenson, of Torgerson Minn. John Casey, Alfred Rice, of Brunkeberg Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3rd. 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. May 26th, 1910.

NOTICE is hereby given that Inga Boen of Erie Minnesota, who on November 28th 1904 made homestead entry No. 948, Serial No. 04361, for S. E. ¼ Section 19 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Joseph Johnson, Ole Johnsrud, John Toftland, Carl P. Anderson, all of Erie Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin
Register.

Why He Applauded.

"Are you fond of music?" asked a stranger of the young man at the concert who was applauding vigorously after a pretty girl had sung a song in a very painful way.

"Not particularly," replied the young man frankly, "but I am extremely fond of the musician."

Yes we have plenty Of LUMBER, IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors. Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. Winton,
Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesday's Thursday's and Saturday's. & Arrives on the same days, at 1.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

His Athletic Neighbor.

A young man inmate of a boarding house had been disturbed night after night by the boarder in the next room doing things with a punching bag he'd rigged up in the room some way. At breakfast each morning the young man would look over the crowd and wonder who the bag puncher might be, but there was no one in sight but a bunch of women and eight or ten men with narrow chests and retreating chins. One night he made up his mind to knock on the bag punching roomer's door and ask him to put over his exercise until daylight when all the world's awake. The man might be small enough to bulldoze even with all his athletics. The door opened and there, clad in a tight fitting red jersey, was a robust, buxom woman of perhaps thirty summers.

"And what did you say to her?" the young man was asked.

"I was so startled," replied he, "that I asked what afterward seemed to me the most natural request I could have made. I asked her if she'd lend me a couple of matches."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Halley's Achievements.

Edmund Halley was a very great man. He was not only the first to predict correctly the return of a comet, that which is now known by his name, but also—before Newton had announced his results to any one—arrived at the conclusion that the attraction of gravitation probably varied inversely as the square of the distance. While these and other important achievements of his are well known it seems to have been forgotten that Halley devised a method of determining the age of the ocean from chemical denudation.—Dr. G. F. Becker in Science.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS FOR Headache

FOR NEURALGIA
SCIATICA
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

If you have Headache Try One

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

Remember that you can get your plows fixed so they will run right, at Kratka.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

Peter Hunstad, assistant assessor was a pleasant caller here, yesterday.

The Dan Patch had a cow as a passenger to Thief River Falls, this morning.

B Henry Costello, of DeerPark was an overnight visitor here, Saturday, on his return from a business trip to Thief River Falls.

Clearwater Crossing is to have a Fourth of July Celebration. There is plenty of room for celebrating in this locality.

Thore Stromme received the lumber for the big Fourth of July bowery at Highlanding, yesterday. He will start work on it next week.

John Poloni has his ferry, at Highlanding, in first class running order now. He can ferry teams across the river, any time of the day.

The board of directors of the R. L. R. T. Co. will meet at P. C. Wold's, next Sunday, to make a settlement with the owners of the barge, if possible.

Tore Lunde returned from Montana, last week. He does not speak in very glowing terms of that country, although he has bought land there.

Andy Erickson is doing some good work with his launch helping to tow dredging supplies up the river for the Sherwood Dredging Co.

Carl Eig has purchased a manure spreader and is hauling the fifty years' accumulation of manure on the old Highlanding stopping place onto his farm, where it will do some good.

P. C. Wold was taken sick on Monday, a doctor was called on Wednesday. The attack was brought on by overwork. Peter Hunstad is finishing his assessing for him.

At this time of the year, it is a very difficult matter to keep cream in a good condition for the creamery. Patrons should not blame the butter-maker, if he is compelled to refuse some cream, that if taken would spoil a whole churning.

At the creamery meeting, last night, there was some talk of the association building a cream boat, but it was promptly voted down; as there were too many present, who had been in the boat building business before.

The continued dry weather is beginning to tell on the crops. If it continues much longer, we fear it will do serious injury. This country has not been as much injured by the drouth as it has by excessive rains, but it would have given better satisfaction, if the old weather clerk had saved a few barrels of water last fall or this spring and turned it loose now.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry, who was drowned in Red Lake River on May 2nd, was found floating, last Monday, near Crier's landing, about six miles below the place where she fell into the river. This is one of those sad incidents, which the editors are occasionally called on to chronicle. We extend our heart-felt sympathy to the grief-stricken family.

The farmer's steam boat and the Lily went down the river, yesterday.

Wanted at once: A good shower of rain. Best of inducements. Inquire at this office.

Mr. and Mrs. George Cunningham and family returned from Red Lake, last week, and are visiting friends in this locality, for a couple of weeks.

The share holders of the Highlanding Creamery Association held a special meeting at the creamery, last evening, to arrange the sinking fund, being not satisfactory to the shareholders. After discussion an agreement was reached, satisfactory to all.

The Swell Head.

The editor of the leven towns reminds us of a story in the position he has taken:

A wealthy American was traveling through Europe and among the sights he wished to see, were the dikes of Holland. As he was walking along a dike one day, he met a fleshy Dutchman, who was smoking a big, long-stemmed pipe, and the following conversation ensued:

Dutchman, who had a farm of about one acre; "Where are you from?" "America, sir," was the answer. "What do you want here?" asked the inquisitive farmer. "Oh, I just came to look at your method of farming." "Is that so. Come here, Katrina, just think, this gentleman came from far away America to see this great big farm!" said the farmer, proudly, motioning to his little farm.

That Dutchman is like Lattimore. That's the trouble with him. He has worked as a journeyman printer, so many years that he is dried up and after starting that venture, he is surprised when the whole population of the United States, from President Taft and Department of the Interior down to the common people doesn't stop the general progress of this great country, to do homage to the leven towns.

A couple of farmers, of Rudell made application to prove up before him but the U. S. Land Office sent the notices for publication to THE SUNBEAM. Then Lattimore was going to be smart and show the Department of Interior where they got off at. He undertook to tell the U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, that they did not know enough to issue an order for the publication of a final proof notice, where it would be published correctly, in the right place, and in the right paper. So he set up the notices and published them in the leven towns. If the Land Office had sent those proofs to him to publish under official designation, those homesteaders would have to pay the expense of making another trip to make their final proof. If you do not believe this, compare the description of the land in Sam Juveland's notice as published in THE SUNBEAM, CORRECT and the fatal error in it, as published by Lattimore.

News From Clearwater.

Mr. Carlson and Mr. Hanson made a a short visit at Hill River, last week.

Don't forget the grand Fourth of July celebration at the Clearwater Creamery.

Miss Sarah Lindberg left for Plummer, where she will do some sewing for the ladies of that town.

Misses Tilda Rindal and Josie Gunderson did the chores for Mr. Carlson and Hanson, when they were at Hill River.

Mr. and Mrs. Zeb Normandoe, of Red Lake Falls, arrived Saturday to make a short visit with Mrs. Normandoe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green.

There was a grand birth-day party given at the home of Ralph Green in honor of his daughter, Lou, on last Saturday evening. Everybody enjoyed a good time.

The Billo boys were much disappointed when they received a letter from the manager of the "Mudhens," saying that they could not come, and that after they had promised to play. We guess they are afraid of being beaten.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

Celebration at Clearwater.

1776— —1910.

There will be a Celebration at the Clearwater Crossing in Deer Park, commencing at 9 o'clock A. M., July 4th, at 10 o'clock. Dinner at 11, served by the Ladies Aid Society. Base ball game and other sports in the afternoon. Dance in the bowery, afternoon and evening. Good music. Ice cream and other refeshments, enough for all. Fire-works in the evening. All come and have a good time.

ORATION

Jens Fore
Nels Fore Committee.
T. Brekke

Republican Nominees.

At the Republican State Convention held at St. Paul, Tuesday, the following ticket was nominated:

Governor—A. O. Eberhart.
Lieutenant Governor—S. Y. Gordon.
Secretary of State—J. A. Schmahl.
State Auditor—S. G. Iverson.
Attorney General—G. T. Simpson.
State Treasurer—W. J. Smith.
Clerk of Supreme Court—Caswell.
Associate Justices Supreme Court: E. A. Jaggard, P. E. Brown, C. L. Brown, and D. F. Simpson.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—C. F. Staples.

Senator Moses E. Clapp unanimously renominated as U. S. Senator.

Reapportionment endorsed. County Option overwhelmingly defeated.

Out of Her Reach.

"Does your heart ever reach out for the unattainable?"

"No, but my hands do when my husband is not at home. There are three buttons at the back of my gown that I can't reach."

More Appropriate.

"I teach my parrot only short words."

"Do you? Now, I should think that parrots were better adapted to learning polysyllables."

Whistler Let Them Wait.

Whistler's laxity in the matter of engagements was notorious. No one ever knew if he were coming or not to affairs. But his point of view is explained in his answer to a friend of his who knew that he had an engagement to dine with some swells in a distant part of London and who felt that it was most impolitic for Whistler to offend them. It was growing late, and yet Whistler was painting away madly, intently.

"My dear fellow," he said to him at last, "it is frightfully late, and you have to dine with Lady Such-a-one. Don't you think you'd better stop?"

"Stop?" fairly shrieked Whistler. "Stop, when everything is going beautifully? Go and stuff myself with disgusting food when I can paint like this? Never! Never! Besides, they can't do anything until I get there! They never do!"

If Jupiter Were Inhabited.

Calculations as to the size required for human beings on the other planets vary widely, according to the basis of reckoning. According to these based upon the attraction of gravity, Jupiter should be peopled by pygmies of twenty-eight inches. Wolfius, on the other hand, argues that Goliath himself would be accounted decidedly undersized upon that planet. He worked from the feebleness of the sun's light there, which would demand that the pupil of the eye should be much more dilatable. Since the pupil stands in a constant proportion to the ball of the eye and that to the entire body, said Wolfius, a little calculation shows that an average Jovian must be nearly thirteen feet seven inches tall—not quite four inches shorter than Og, king of Bashan, according to the measure of his bedstead given in Deuteronomy.

A Bright Blacksmith.

The greatest improvement in vehicle construction was when some bright blacksmith thought of heating the tires and shrinking them on the wheel. While many claim the honor, it is not known to whom it rightly belongs. Previous to this event tires were made in short sections and held on the felloes with nails. When starting on a long haul the driver always laid in a good supply of nails to use on the trip.—Shop Notes Quarterly.

THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payment's. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds, Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS, THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County.

We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or adress, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

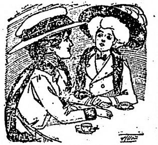
Hover O. Follkedahl,
Highlanding .....Minn.

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examin this fine horse.

C W Johnson, Owner.

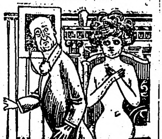
Green Eyed Unto Death.



"Her husband asked her when he was dying not to put on mourning."

"The brute! He knew she looked so well in black."

Flushed the Game.



Designing Woman (to Old Cooney, referring to her sister prodigy)—It's charming to see an old head on young shoulders. Don't you think so?

Old Cooney moves dubiously and reaches for his hat.

A CUNNING WEASEL.

The Trick by Which He Trapped His Big Rat Antagonist.

Once a sawmill in a western town was infested with rats, which, being unmolested, became very numerous and bold and played round the mill among the men while they worked during the day. But one day there appeared on the scene a weasel, which immediately declared war on the rodents.

One by one the rats fell victims to the weasel's superior strength, until only one very large, pugnacious rat was left of the once numerous colony. The weasel had a go at the big rat several times, but on each occasion the rodent proved more than a match for his slender antagonist and chased the weasel to a hiding place.

Shortly thereafter the weasel was seen busily digging under a lumber pile near the mill. He was engaged for some time, but later appeared again in the mill, seeking his old enemy. He soon found him and at once renewed hostilities. As usual, after a lively tussle the rat got the better of the argument, and the weasel ran, pursued closely by the rat, straight to the hole under the lumber pile.

He ran in, still followed by the rat, but immediately reappeared round the end of the pile and again dodged into the hole behind the rat. Neither was seen again for some time, but the weasel finally reappeared, looking no worse for the fight.

The curiosity of the men in the mill being aroused, they proceeded to investigate the hole under the lumber pile. They found that the weasel had dug the hole sufficiently large at the opening to admit the rat, but had gradually tapered it as he proceeded until at the other end it barely allowed his own slender body to pass.

When the rat chased him into the large end of this underground tunnel he quickly slipped through, and while the rat was trying to squeeze his large body into the smaller part of the hole the weasel dodged in behind him, caught him in the rear and in a place where he could not turn round and finished him at his leisure.—Harper's Weekly.

POISON IN FLOWERS.

Dainty and Beautiful Blossoms In Which Lurks Death.

When the good friar in "Romeo and Juliet" reflected upon the properties of the simple flower, "within whose infant rind poison hath residence and medicine power," his observation embraced a goodly category of well known flowers whose secretions furnish the world with so many poisons.

For instance, the laburnum, which has been compared to a fountain of gold leaping into the sun—a most charming sight—is one of the most poisonous things imaginable, inasmuch as it is poison in leaf and flower and seed. Even the grass growing beneath it is poisonous by reason of its proximity to the innocent looking blossoms overhead, and it has been found necessary to guard against cattle eating this grass for fear of fatal results.

The bulbs of such dainty and beautiful flowers as the narcissus, hyacinth, jonquil and snowdrop secrete the most deadly poisons, not to speak of the oxalis, the monkshood and the foxglove, all of which furnish noxious liquors sufficient to destroy life.

To these may be added certain of the crocuses, the lovely lady's slipper, the quaint old jack-in-the-pulpit and the laughing little buttercup. The latter, despite its most innocent appearance, is one of the worst of the poisonous flowers. Even the cow is aware of that and carefully avoids it. The cousins of the buttercups, the peonies, the larkspurs and the rest, all contain toxic fluids.

Another source of deadly poison is the oleander tree, while the bark of the superb catalpa tree contains many deadly doses.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

His Domestic Lady

By ANNIE HINRICHSEN

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Because she had heard her brother and his friends laughing over Morton Kenneth's complaint that there were no simple, domestic women and that for this reason he intended to spend his life as a lonely bachelor, she wrote to him.

She was thirteen.

"Dear Sir: I understand that you are a primeval man. That is, that in spite of the glaring footlights before which you have danced along the busy way that leads to wealth and fame; in spite of luxurious, magnificently gowned society queens who would pervert your tastes and set up in your soul a false standard of womanhood, you still feel within you the longing for the simple life when expenses are small and a wife is subservient—and a good cook.

"I will be such a wife to you. I am an old-fashioned woman. That is, I have a domestic soul. I believe that a woman's true vocation is to be her husband's handmaiden; to serve him, cook for him and help him pay in installments for a nice cottage with a little garden in which he can hoe when weary with life's bustle and the close, hot air of a down town office.

"Will you not let me hear from you in regard to this matter at your earliest convenience, and oblige,

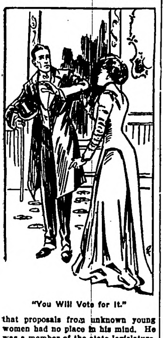
"Yours very respectfully,
"DOROTHEA HILLWOOD."

To this he replied:

"Dear Madam: Your favor received. I wish to express to you my appreciation of your kindness and my sincerest thanks for the honor you would confer upon me. But I feel that I have no right to unite my worldly life with one as pure and innocent and unselfish as yours.

"Again thanking you, I remain,
"Yours very truly,
"MORTON KENNETH."

Ten years later she met him. But he did not remember. He had been so busy becoming a great statesman that proposals from unknown young women had no place in his mind. He was a member of the state legislature, leader of his faction in the house and member of half a dozen important committees.



"You Will Vote for It."

For a month he was very devoted to her. He went to see her every day in her apartments in a frivolous and popular hotel, and told her how intensely he disliked women who lived in hotels, instead of in homes of their own. He sent her violets because, he said, they were symbolical of the type of woman he most admired—sweet and modest.

The legislature convened and he was compelled to go to the state capital for the winter session.

A week later, Mrs. Bonde Boyde, grandest of all the grand dames whose social and club activities fill the society pages, went to the capital and with her she took her niece, Dorothea. The Woman's Progressive league had prepared a bill granting women certain municipal privileges, and this bill was to be introduced in the house. Mrs. Bonde Boyde was president of the league.

She and her niece reached the capital late in the afternoon and went to an historic, old hotel.

After dinner Morton Kenneth came to her in the hotel drawing room. He sat down on a slim, squeaky, little chair so close to her that his shoes touched her new, rose-colored broadcloth.

"What are you doing here?" he asked gloomily.

"I am here because I am interested in certain measures pending before the house."

"What? Lobbying? You? Dorothea—" His tone was exactly what it would have been if he had caught her in the act of hanging her grandmother.

"House bill 153," she went on tranquilly.

"Woman's suffrage? You? Dorothea—"

"I desire you to support that bill," she said, as if she were asking him to call the waiter. "It will be read in the house tomorrow and referred to a committee of which you are a member. You will see that it is reported favorably out of the committee and its next reading in the house you will make a speech—a good, strong speech—in favor of it. You will vote for it every vote you control."

Then the smolder of the young man's wrath became a conflagration intended to destroy all her assertive and progressive tendencies. For two hours she listened to remonstrance, expostulations and downright refusals.

The next day she heard from the gallery of the house the bill read and referred to the committee on resolutions. Mr. Kenneth bowed to her, from a distance, in the house and in the hotel dining room.

For several days he treated her with a high and mighty disdain which should have reduced her to the clinging vine state. But it did not.

The chairman of the committee on resolutions gave a theater party one evening and after it a supper at the hotel. He was a young man and very charming. Morton Kenneth was not invited to the party.

When the chairman put Mrs. Bonde Boyde and her niece into the elevator about midnight, Mr. Kenneth was sitting in the corridor on a seat opposite the elevator staring into space and busily engaged in not looking at them. A few minutes later a maid brought Miss Hillwood a letter.

"Dear Dorothea: I am tired of foolishness. Drop this ridiculous woman's rights business and marry me. You are frittering away a sweet, womanly soul in an unprofitable, insincere life. Every woman should be in a home of her own with a husband to take care of her. Won't you take the home and the husband I offer you? Give up this chase after fads, this artificial way of living. I love you. I want you for my own. Won't you marry me, dear?

"MORTON."

To this she replied:

"Dear Sir: Your favor received. I wish to express to you my appreciation of your kindness and my sincerest thanks for the honor you would confer upon me. But I feel that I have no right to unite my worldly life with one as pure and innocent and unselfish as yours.

"Again thanking you, I remain,
"Yours very truly,
"DOROTHEA HILLWOOD."

Next morning the telephone wakened her.

"Were you that kid?"

"What kid?"

"The kid that proposed to me years ago."

Silence.

"Say, Dorothea, are you still there?"

"Yes."

"Will you come down to the parlor? I want to see you."

"No. I'm busy."

"But I have something to tell you. The resolutions committee met this morning and your bill was reported out favorably."

"Mr. Gray promised me it should be."

"Gray didn't have a thing to do with it. I did it myself. And this afternoon, by special order, it is to be read again in the house and I shall make a speech in favor of it."

"Do you believe in the bill, Morton?"

"I believe in you."

"I want you to believe in the bill. Do you?"

"Wouldn't support it if I didn't, even for you."

"Do you believe in women's rights?"

Silence.

"Morton, do you believe in women's equal rights with men?"

"Yes."

"Do you believe in the broader life for women, the same privileges that men have, political, business and social—especially social?"

"Oh, Dorothea."

"Do you?"

"Yes."

"I'll be down. And, Morton—are you still there—I'll walk over to the state house with you, if you want me to. Hush—don't tell me over the phone that you love me. Yes, I do want to hear you say it—of course I want to know how much you love me. Tell me when I come down."

Work of Ingenious Ants.

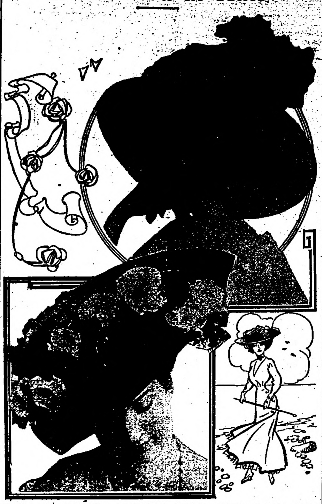
The spinning ant is found in India, in Ceylon, in the islands of Malacca and in Australia. This ant weaves its nest between two leaves of a tree, preferably the mango. It begins to build, or to weave, by drawing two leaves together. To do this it runs a line of its working material—material similar to the spider's thread—the length of the leaf and around it. While at work it clings to the leaf with its nails and, at the same time, draws on the leaf nearest to it with its mandibles. Sometimes the two leaves suitable for nest building are too far apart. Then the builder calls in its fellow-ants and they help it to form a chain. Each ant clings to the waist of its neighbor by its mandibles. Thus enchained, they work to build the nest of their comrade.—Harper's Weekly.

The Duke Scores.

Miss Passe—That's the duke of Oldhouse. He married a million.

Mr. Blase—You don't say! Well he's got Solomon beat a mile!—Lippincott's.

Last Word in Hats



NET and lace hats, milans faced with velvet, hair braids, leghorns and lingerie hats, and especially net and lace, these are the words most often on the lips of the milliner just now. Hair braids—for those who can afford them—undisputed queens among hats for the hot weather, are not pictured here, but everyone knows their beautiful texture and their durability.

It is peculiar that the milan, which is heavier than any other of the midsummer braids, should be so often chosen. It is really a matter of habit with the milliner to put before her people the milan, large, comfortable and simply trimmed, for an all-round midsummer hat. Vivid shades of green, with the golden yellow of the milan gives a color combination that is never tiresome. The decoration is usually a feather of some sort in the same color and a flange or facing of velvet.

Just now a pretty idea is a cluster of lilac blossoms at the side of a broad brimmed shape with one or two sprays standing; these blossoms are tinted to the color of the hat and shade off to lighter tones. A milan, for instance, is trimmed with lilacs in light yellow shading off to white. A single Easter lily in black velvet makes a telling touch, arranged in the heavier portion of the spray.

Roses have not queened it as usual this summer, for all other blossoms have claimed attention. But rose wreaths and sprays of large roses are featured on midsummer hats, at the moment. Small June roses have been in demand and promise to continue in demand until we say goodby to the summer months.

To return to the useful milan, a lovely example, faced with black velvet, and trimmed with a garland of pale pink tulle roses is about as happy a combination as has sprung from the fancy of millinery designers so far. The rose garland on hats and on gowns gives the most genuine pleasure, and in the delicate tulle, with pink at the center, shading out to white in the outer petals, a rose of fairyland, a sort of rosy ghost of the blossom, charms everyone who sees it. It is very lovely and very fragile.

Big hats of net shirred to frames of fine silk wire and having crowns that are clouds of puffed net, form backgrounds for the large tulle roses which stand at the side. Nothing but the flower and the foliage is needed, except the stems which are made carefully lifelike, even to the thorns. These are of rubber and have no sting. They do not need it. In a hand-made lace or net hat there is sting enough this season in the price ticket. But the day of cheap millinery is almost gone; people want fine things nowadays and must pay for skill and work. Perhaps they do so more cheerfully when the subject to be considered is a hat than at any other time.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

SCENTS FOR USE IN BATH

Simple Mixtures That Will Give Comfort When One Comes in Tired and Warm.

Nothing is so invigorating when tired and warm as a scented bath of hot water. In summer days it proves particularly refreshing when taken before dressing for the evening.

The simplest of these baths is made by adding cologne, toilet water or violet ammonia to the bath water.

A good aromatic mixture to keep on hand is made from two ounces of tincture of camphor, four ounces of cologne and an ounce of tincture of benzoin. Add enough of this to the bath water to make it milky.

If you are presented with colognes or toilet waters that are not especially fragrant, use them in the bath. The scent is so faint as not to be disagreeable, and the refreshing qualities are as great as from more expensive colognes.

Another refreshing bath is made by squeezing the filtered juice of four lemons into a quarter of a tubful of water.

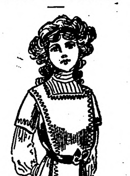
Where the aromatic bath seems extravagant, or there is no time for it, put a solution of the mixture given above into a spray and spray it over face, neck and arms.

Putting cologne back of the ears, on the temples and on upper lip is extremely restful and cooling.

The Lilac Popular.

In the search for aigrette effects the lilac, with its bristling panicles, has become one of the millinery favorites. Instead of the normal purple or white, one finds it green, crimson, yellow, blue—any color at all that the milliner needs for her scheme. Some of the big straw shapes with such flowers and a wisp of tulle, are among the most fetching models. The Indian turban looped with pearls and finished with an aigrette at one side continues to flourish as a picturesque item of smart hat displays, and there is the little turban made of a handkerchief wound around and around its frame in Arab fashion. But the turban is bound to decrease in vogue as the summer advances.

YOUNG GIRL'S DRESS



Linen cashmere or serge might be made up in this style; the skirt has a wide panel down center front with russia braid put on in a wavy pattern at the edge; the sides and back are then slightly gathered, on the bodice one tuck is made on each shoulder; the top of tucks, edge of oversleeves, and neck are trimmed to match. Any soft material might be used for the under slip.

Material required: 5 yards 46 inches wide, 1 dozen yards braid, 1 yard material 42 inches wide for slip.

The new barn dance is called the Chanteclairette. It is very strenuous.

The DAIRY

DAIRY NOTES.

When a farmer knows which cows are paying, as a rule he will feed them better.

Money invested in better stock is money put in the best bank in the world.

The man that kicks a cow must not complain if he gets kicked back again. He began it.

Give good weight in packing or printing. It is better to give a pound than to have a pound short.

Practise cleanliness in every detail. Good butter cannot be made unless cleanliness is the watchword.

Milk your cows in the same order every day. Cows know the difference and it affects their flow of milk.

You should not only know how much each cow produces, but how much it costs to do the producing.

Mangels and ensilage replace one another as succulent foods for milk production, but the ensilage is cheaper.

Keep the cows comfortable at night and when the weather is cold and wet. In daytime if they have pasture and good water they can care for themselves.

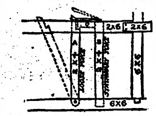
Always pack butter with a view to tidiness in the very highest degree. No matter what form of package is used, specially study the requirements of the markets for packages.

Cool milk quickly before delivering it to the creamery. To cool the milk, place the cans in cold water and stir thoroughly, so as to drive out animal heat and odors.

IMPROVED TYPE OF STANCHION

Trouble Usually Experienced in Getting Cow Free Is Done Away by Stall Herewith Shown.

When a cow gets down in the stall it is quite a job to get her head out of the ordinary stanchion. The loose side of my stanchion works in a socket at the bottom. If a cow gets down the loose yoke is pulled out, and she is free, says a writer in Missouri Valley Farmer. For the bottom sill I use 6x6-inch timber, for upper sill 2x6-inch planks and for the yoke pieces of 2x4. The stanchions are made 3½ feet apart from center to center. A block is set against the stationary yoke, with a corresponding corner cut from the loose yoke. This keeps the yoke from slipping up and out of place. A quarter-inch rod 15 inches long bent to form a latch is hinged at side of stationary yoke. When loose yoke is in place the latch slips over automatically, holding it in place.



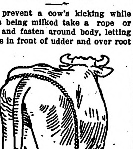
Improved Stanchion.

A, loose yoke; B, stationary yoke; C, block; D, latch.

TO CURE CONFIRMED KICKER

Idaho Dairyman Has Devised an Excellent Method of Preventing Cow From Kicking.

To prevent a cow's kicking while she is being milked take a rope or strap and fasten around body, letting it pass in front of udder and over root of tail, drawing tight, writes Louie A. Hall of Stiles, Idaho, in Missouri Valley Farmer. This leaves her all four feet to stand on, yet will not allow her to kick.



To Prevent Kicking.

A Cheap Silage.

Twenty-three acres of corn after rye, planted June 1, with cow peas drilled between rows at the first cultivation, produced at the New Jersey experiment station 214.8 tons of silage. The total cost was $3.51 per ton in the silo.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Vienna Sausage

is distinctly different from any other sausage you ever tasted. Just try one can and it is sure to become a frequent necessity.

Libby's Vienna Sausage just suits for breakfast, is fine for luncheon and satisfies at dinner or supper. Like all of Libby's Food Products, it is carefully cooked and prepared, ready to serve, in Libby's Great White Kitchen — the cleanest, most scientific kitchen in the world.

Other popular, ready-to-serve Libby Pure Foods are:

Cooked Corned Beef
Peerless Dried Beef Veal Loaf
Evaporated Milk
Baked Beans Chow Chow
Mixed Pickles

Insist on Libby's at your grocer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

Candor is ever the brightest gem of true criticism.—Disraeli.

Constipation causes and seriously aggravates many diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pellets. Tiny sugar-coated granules.

Our dearest thoughts are out of reach.—Van Dyke.

Similarity.

Eva—Then you are not fond of pressed flowers?

Jack—No, they always remind me of a kiss through a telephone.

Eva—Gracious! In what way?

Jack—They have lost their sweetness.

High Dives.

Ostend—And, pa, is there always water in the stock market?

Pa—Yes, my son.

Ostend—But how do you know, pa?

Pa—Oh, because there is always some one taking a plunge there.

The Ruling Spirit.

Husband (rushing into the room)—Come out, quick.

Wife—What's the matter?

"The house is on fire, and we will be burned to death if we hesitate a moment. Run, run for your life!"

"Yes, I'll be out in a minute; I've got to tidy up the rooms a little so that it will look decent when the firemen get here."—Modern Society.

A Tart Tongue.

Col. Robert C. Carter, at a Nashville banquet, was talking about campaign comrades.

"Then there was Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest-tongued man in the regiment.

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress.

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away.

"'No,' she said, 'I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this! I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up.'

"'Made up, is it?' said Dash. 'Like the rest of you, eh?'"

Post Toasties

with strawberries and cream.

A delightful combination that strongly appeals to the appetite.

The crisp, fluffy bits have a distinctive flavour and are ready to serve from the package without cooking.

Convenient,
Appetizing,
Healthful food.

"The Memory Lingers"

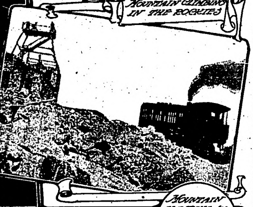
Popular pkg. 10c.
Family size, 15c.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING
AN AMERICAN PASTIME
by WALDON FAWCETT

Photographs by WALDON FAWCETT

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING IN THE ROCKIES



MOUNTAIN CLIMBING BY STEAM—SUMMIT OF PIKE'S PEAK

GRAND CANYON of ARIZONA

TYPICAL ADIRONDACK'S GUIDE

CLIMBING MOUNT HOOD IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

MANY PERSONS are wont to think of mountain climbing—or at least mountain climbing that is really worthy of the name—as a form of pastime for which one must journey to Europe. Some of the people, even, who have appreciated all along that this continent afforded opportunities for mountain climbing equal in every respect to anything offered by the snow-clad peaks of Switzerland are not aware that a goodly number of strenuous Americans are now taking advantage of these opportunities. Some people, to be sure, started their careers as mountain climbers in the United States and have confined their indulgence in the sport to the mountain regions of Yankeedom, but they are surpassed numerically by the subjects of Uncle Sam who first became converts to mountain climbing in Switzerland or other foreign parts and then came home perhaps to discover that we have just as difficult peaks under the Stars and Stripes as can be found in any part of the old world.

Sometimes fate steps in and makes what might be termed an involuntary convert to American mountain climbing. A case in point is that of Charles E. Hughes, governor of New York, who has recently been appointed to the United States Supreme court. Mountain climbing is the pet hobby of Governor Hughes, and for years he spent every summer in Switzerland scaling the peaks. Then came his election to the gubernatorial position and with it new responsibilities which in effect made it impossible for him to engage in a prolonged vacation far from home. Thereupon Governor Hughes and his son—who is likewise a mountain climber—turned their attention to the Adirondacks and here he found peaks that aroused his enthusiasm, for they are clad in a dense forest growth that is quite as baffling in many respects as glaciers and crevasses and the governor discovered that a mountain 5,000 feet high may test the mettle of a pedestrian quite as fully as some more lofty peaks.

Mountain climbing in the Adirondacks, in the White mountains of New Hampshire and in the Blue Ridge of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia has been an accepted summer sport for some years past, but it has grown tremendously in popularity of late. Some of the experienced climbers who enjoy the sport only when it involves hazards that test the steadiness of eye, clearness of head and sureness of foot in the maximum degree are wont to regard none too seriously the assaults of the amateurs on the mountains east of the Mississippi, but it must be admitted in defense of mountain climbing in the east that it has brought color to the cheeks and sparkle to the eyes of many a weary city dweller and in not a few instances it has served as a preparatory school for climbers who have later become experts in a more exacting environment. In the west, on the other hand, we have mountain climbing that, from every consideration of danger and daring ranks with any similar activity abroad, although, to be sure, newspaper readers hear much less about it. Perhaps this latter circumstance is due in part to the rarity in America of those harrowing accidents which cost the lives of so many mountain climbers in Switzerland. In the southwest the trip up Mount Wilson in California has become a popular diversion for both men and women and the Grand Canyon of Arizona—that great gash in the earth 13 miles wide and a mile deep—is affording an equivalent of mountain climbing that is without a rival or a counterpart, scenically or otherwise, on the other side of the Atlantic or indeed anywhere in the world.

The Yosemite valley, with its sheer walls of rock and other freaks of nature, offers problems that have commanded the respect and incidentally fired the ambition of mountain climbers of every nationality, while Alaska has in Mount McKinley a peak that is generally accounted one of the most difficult in the entire world. Generally speaking, mountain climbing in America has reached its most pretentious development in the Pacific northwest and in the Canadian Rockies. In the latter region—the Switzerland of America—there are glaciers as formidable and as interesting as any expanses of snow and ice in foreign lands and the snow-capped peaks of Mount Hood and Mount Rainier have afforded to the people of Oregon and Washington constant object lessons that have proven an incentive to mountain climbing. Swiss guides have been brought to the Canadian Rockies for the benefit of new world mountain climbers, but to the credit of our patriotism be it said that most of the guides in our own western mountain regions are Americans. Several mountain-climbing clubs have been organized on the Pacific slope and climbing expeditions are carried out yearly, women as well as men participating in most of these excursions to great altitudes.

No mention of mountain climbing in America, however brief, would be complete without reference to the development of mountain climbing by mechanical means in this country. A cog railroad that carries sightseers to the top of Mount Washington, N. H., has for years been an adjunct of New England's highest peak and a comfortable hotel on the summit enables tourists to be content in this realm of perpetual frost and to enjoy the sunrise and sunset effects. A similar railroad, yet more remarkable from an engineering standpoint, carries non-athletic mountain climbers up Pike's Peak in Colorado and in the same state the Moffat road conveys tourists to the crest of the Great Divide in standard coaches drawn by locomotives of the regulation type. There are "mountain climbing" railroads in California and similar highways have been proposed for the peaks of the Pacific northwest, whereas congress has been appealed to to permit a venturesome capitalist to install an inclined railway from the rim to the depths of the Grand Canyon.

World's Oldest Bellmakers

Amidst the tawdriness, the racket and the alien squalor of our modern Whitechapel road stands a quiet, tidy, old Georgian house, and to one side of it an old-fashioned, oak-shuttered office, the London Chronicle says. Behind this unassuming exterior there still, in fact, prospers "the oldest established business of any kind in England," and that "business" is bound up with all that is highest and holiest and most endeared to the national heart. For over the door, in plain English—a refreshing change from the Yiddish posters that flare in the shop windows all around—we may still read the simple legend, "Mears & Stainbank's Bell Foundry, Established 1570."

Here, then—or, at any rate, not far away—while Shakespeare was still a schoolboy and two centuries before Schiller had arrived to immortalize the bell in splendid song on the eternal emblem of man's ascent from earth to heaven—there was being molded the world's mightiest music by just such honest, simple-hearted fellows as may be seen even now busying themselves by pit and furnace in the actual foundry beyond a little courtyard.

To tell the exact truth, the original foundry of Queen Elizabeth's time was just across the way. It was moved to its present site in 1738, the existing house being at that time a country inn called the Artichoke, standing then among pleasant fields. Without a break from that day to this, though proprietors have changed once or twice, the work of bell founding has gone on behind those quiet walls. The list of famous bells that have been, as one might say, "born" out of dull earth in these lowly precincts is almost bewildering. For, indeed, at the present moment, there is only one other important foundry in England—that, namely, of Loughborough—devoted exclusively to bellmaking.

Thus the famous "Bow bells" themselves, in reality among the sweetest and truest in the world, were made at Whitechapel. The present "tenor," as the deepest bell of a peal is always called, was cast here in 1738. It weighed 2½ tons and it itself replaced a bell from the same source that had been founded in 1669. The legendary bells of Whittington's time can, of course, hardly be laid claim to.

Among other noted Whitechapel bells are the great bell of Westminster, weighing over 13 tons—the largest ever cast in London; the "clock bells" of St. Paul's, hung in 1790, and still in use; "Great Tom" of Lincoln cathedral, a famous bell that could be heard 13 miles off; "Great Peter" of York minster, which was for a time the largest bell in England, and, not least, the great bell in Montreal cathedral, weighing 11 tons and the largest ever shipped—a significant ambassador of an old faith to a new world.

Quite apart from the eternal poetry that has woven itself around the being and becoming of bells, there is hardly an industry that has about it a more individual charm. These men of the Whitechapel foundry are no mere journeymen mechanics. They have been bred to the work, most of them, from their earliest years. The art of bell founding is handed down from father to son. In the same Whitechapel foundry there are no fewer than three generations of one family working side by side today and five generations of the same family have worked there—the grandfather for 45 years, the great-grandfather for more than half a century.

People who talk of "jangling" bells as being unmusical have certainly no honest bell founder to blame, for no bell can be unmusical unless it is badly made or badly rung. Indeed, every great bell has to be so perfectly proportioned in shape, size, weight and thickness that each part of it shall sound a rightly differing note and that the result shall be a perfect chord. In this way, while the "lip" which the clapper strikes gives out the "fundamental note," the "waist" must sound a third higher, the "shoulder" a fifth higher and the top of it the exact octave. So the whole bell gives out a chord of which each note fades into the other. It is this harmony that lingers in the ear and gives the bell its peculiar magic.

After the bell is founded, if it sounds sharp anywhere, it can, with great care, be filed down by an upright lathe till the right tone is produced. If it sounds flat nothing can be done and it is the ambition of bell molders to turn out a bell that shall be exactly right as it comes from the mold.

It is pleasant to hear that in spite of all new-fangled cynical objections this sacred old industry is still flourishing. From the Whitechapel foundry bells have gone forth in their hundreds in these last years to every quarter of the world—from Buenos Ayres to Quebec, from Calcutta to Colombo, from Hongkong to Tasmania. Even America—with a 45 per cent. import duty—has come to England for its bells. One of the largest recently made at Whitechapel will doubtless sound as sweet in the ears of Chicago as did the bells of Fulham to Queen Elizabeth when she came gliding in her royal barge down London's silver river.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

Barber-ous Humor.

Barber—How would you like your hair cut, sir?

Stude—Fine. Do you think I came in here to discuss the tariff?

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN,
Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

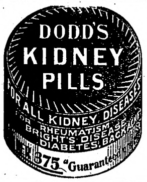
Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

That for a blowout we have to blow a lot in.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Search others for their virtues, and thyself for thy vices.—Fuller.



DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

A Welcome Gift for Any Man
NO STROPPING NO HONING
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair.
Promotes a luxuriant growth.
Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color.
Cures scalp diseases & hair falling.
50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use } Thompson's Eye Water

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
$5, $4, $3.50, $3, $2.50 & $2

THE STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS.

Millions of men wear W. L. Douglas shoes because they are the lowest prices, quality considered, in the world. Made upon honor, of the best leathers, by the most skilled workmen, in all the latest fashions.

W. L. Douglas $5.00 and $4.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00.

Boys' Shoes, $3, $2.50 & $2

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it. Take No Substitute. Fast Color Eyelets.

Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes. If not for sale in your town write for Mail Order Catalog, showing how to order by mail. Shoes ordered direct from factory delivered free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

PAXTINE
TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

30 ft. Bowels—

Biggest organ of the body—the bowels—and the most important—It's got to be looked after—neglect means suffering and years of misery. CASCARETS help nature keep every part of your bowels clean and strong—then they act right—means health to your whole body. 911

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world—Million boxes a month.

JUST THE PLACE you are looking for—an irrigated farm in the Sacramento Valley, Cal. Write today for free information. Fruit, poultry, hogs, alfalfa. Ideal climate. Easy terms. H. L. HOLLISTER & CO., 205 LaSalle St., Chicago

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 26-1910.

Big Profits from Cheap Lands in Eastern Colorado

Eastern Colorado—the wonderful cattle country, great because of great crops of nutritious grasses and fine water. Better results are obtained in the feed-lots of Eastern Colorado than from any other district.

The best and strongest horses are raised solely on native grasses without prepared food, and bring fancy prices for cavalry purposes and general use.

Conditions are ideal for dairying or sheep raising. Mild winters—plenty of sunshine—abundant pure water, rich grasses, alfalfa, cow peas, kaffir corn, broom corn, milo maize and cane through all the year.

Hogs thrive—no cholera or other diseases that attack swine in lower altitudes. Hogs raised on alfalfa, fattened on corn raised on the same farm, cost $4 per head (including first cost of parent stock) and sell readily at top prices.

The climate of Eastern Colorado is the healthiest in the world for man and beast. Good churches, good schools and splendid markets.

Now Is the Time to Go and see for yourself. Take the longed-for trip and see the beauties of the Colorado Rockies and investigate these fertile cheap lands on the way.

Let me tell you more about Eastern Colorado along the Rock Island Lines. I want to point you to success. Send me your address, tell me the kind of farming you prefer, and I will tell you about others who have quit paying rent and now are living in healthy, happy homes of their own. Write today.

Low fares for the round trip every day to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

L. M. ALLEN, Passenger Traffic Manager
236 La Salle Station, Chicago

Rock Island

MSB
TRIED AND TRUE
Minnesota School of Business
Other schools have come and gone. This school has had an increasing success for over thirty years. It develops minds, manners and morals. It trains young people for the highest office positions. Its catalog is free.
54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

MICA AXLE GREASE
is the turning-point to economy in wear and tear of wagons. Try a box. Every dealer, everywhere
STANDARD OIL CO.
(Incorporated)

PEARL FISHERIES OF THE AMERICAS

by CHARLES MELVILLE BROWN

DIVER IN DRESS, READY TO DESCEND

THE WHITE DOTS SHOW THE LOCATION OF THE PRINCIPAL PEARL FISHERIES OF THE AMERICAS

BOAT FOLLOWING THE DIVER, WHO IS NOW WALKING ALONG THE BOTTOM.

CANALS IN WHICH THE YOUNG OYSTERS ARE RAISED

DIVER IN DRESS DESCENDING TO THE PEARL BEDS

THE HISTORY of the pearl and pearl fisheries in America begins with the discovery of the western world by Columbus, who wrote glowing accounts to Queen Isabella of the beautiful necklaces and bracelets of pearls which he found the Indians of the Gulf of Paria and Cariaco in Venezuela wearing and which they so eagerly exchanged for broken bits of gaudily decorated Valencian plate. In the account of his third voyage in 1498 he wrote that on entering the Gulf of Paria "the natives came to the ship in countless numbers, many of them wearing pieces of gold on their breasts and some with bracelets of pearls on their arms—which they informed me were to be procured in their own neighborhood." As evidence of the truthfulness of his statements he sent the queen an immense pearl of exquisite orient, weighing over 300 grains, taken from these waters.

When Vasco Nunez de Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama in 1513, he found the Indians along the shores of the Gulf of St. Michael (now the Bay of Panama) collecting pearls from oysters washed ashore during violent storms, as well as diving for them a short distance from the shore.

When Hernando Cortez in 1520 discovered Lower California he found the natives wearing many beautiful pearls taken from the waters of the Gulf of California. History tells us that when Montezuma alighted from his regal palanquin, "blazing with burnished gold and overshadowed by a canopy of gaudy featherwork powdered with jewels and fringed with silver," to grant audience to Cortez, his cloak and golden-soled sandals were sprinkled with pearls and other precious jewels.

The pampered favorites of the rulers of Egypt and Rome valued their precious pearls from the Indies no more highly than did the Indian women of the Aztecs of Mexico or the Incas of Peru. When the king of Spain made Hernando de Soto governor of Cuba with commission to conquer Florida the latter penetrated into the country of the Yuckees along the Savannah river in Florida to their chief village, Cufitatchiqui, where he found their queen wearing great strings of pearls. The queen in welcoming the Spanish explorer to the hospitalities of her nation even removed one of the most beautiful of her pearl necklaces and threw it around his neck.

Thus the Spaniards were not disappointed in their expectations of finding pearls among other treasure they sought to obtain from the natives of the new world, and such adventurers as Ponce de Leon, Panfilo de Navarez, Cabeca de Vaca, Hernando de Soto, Coronado, and numerous others were lured on by this hope.

A member of Sir Walter Raleigh's expedition collected from the natives of Virginia over 5,000 pearls, of which he chose "as many as made a fayre chaine," and the Indians of the Mississippi wore bracelets and earrings of fine pearls, which, as Father Louis Hennepin wrote, "they gave us to understand they received in exchange for their calumets from natives inhabiting the coast of the great lake to the southward, which I take to be the Gulph of Florida."

For the sake of comparison of the principal pearl fisheries of the Americas with those of the old world, both as to wealth of production and methods employed, a short description of the oldest and richest fisheries in the world, those of Ceylon, is given. These are located in the Gulf of Manar, off the western shore of Ceylon and to the south of the island of Manar and on the Madras side near Tinnevelly. The Macedonians of Greece obtained pearls from the Persian Gulf and the Ptolemies' slaves worked the fisheries of the Red sea from where, undoubtedly, the famous pearl came that Cleopatra is supposed to have ground up and drunk in wine to her lover.

The old methods employed on the Ceylon fisheries and which continued up until a few years ago are the most interesting. The pearl oyster beds are under the supervision of government inspectors, who regulate the fishing. When a bed is to be fished over, announcement of the fact is published beforehand, the season usually beginning the first part of March and continuing from four to six weeks, according to the condition of the bed. Fishing boats and divers from the neighboring coasts of Malabar, native Indians, Malays, Arabs, Polynesians and pearl merchants by the thousands from all parts of India assemble shortly before the appointed day until as many as 25,000 people are gathered on the fishing grounds. At midnight, when the wind freshens, the boats start for the banks in groups of 50 to 70, so as to arrive there before sunrise. Each boat carries from ten to twelve divers, who work in pairs, one diving while the other tends the signal line, and who relieve each other from time to time. At sunrise a signal gun is fired and the fishing begins. The diver usually carries a stone or other weight of about 50 pounds attached to the haul line to facilitate his rapid descent, and in addition carries a basket made fast to the girdle about his waist in which he places the oysters as found. Some divers working in shallower water use no weight in descending, but while at work at the bottom make good use of both hands and feet to seize upon and wrench loose any oyster seen within the limited area over which they can work. The diver who works without diving apparatus and who is called a "head diver," working in from 35 to 45 feet of water, which is the average, can make from 40 to 50 descents in a morning and can bring up from 15 to 30 oysters each trip. The native Indian, Malay and Polynesian divers remain under from 50 to 80 seconds, according to the depth at which they are working, but some can stand a much longer submergence.

At the firing of another signal gun about noon the diving is suspended and the boats race ashore and beach, ready for unloading. On their arrival there the oysters are carried into the government corral and there piled into three heaps, each boat's load being kept separate, the government taking two heaps or two-thirds of the catch and the remainder being divided among the divers and the crew, the divers usually receiving the largest portion. There are about 4,500 divers at work, the daily catch averaging 1,000,000 oysters, which are often found clustered closely together.

The government's share is then auctioned off by the inspector in lots of 1,000 and usually bought up by small merchants, divided into smaller lots, and resold.

The true Indian diver never descends without first providing for attack against sharks or other dangerous fish by invoking immunity through the shark charmer's incantations, a hereditary endowment among the East Indians, one of these charmers usually accompanying each boat. Aside from this danger, which in these waters, however, is comparatively small, the diver working under a tropical sun and exposed to rheumatism and often paralysis is usually a short-lived man.

Up until a few years ago this was the method employed in gathering pearls, and the British government of India derived a revenue of from $300,000 to $750,000 annually from the product of these fisheries, but for the last few years they have been operated by an English corporation under a 20-year lease for a stipulated sum per year, in addition to the proper care and cultivation of the beds under government supervision.

The world has never known richer pearl fisheries than those of Ceylon. The pearls of finest orient and color come from these waters and the mother-of-pearl shell is the largest and most iridescent. It was from here that La Pellegrina came, said to be the finest and most perfect pearl in existence and which weighs 112 grains, as well as most of the crown pearls of European royalty. For centuries the Indian princes have amassed great wealth in pearls and those of the Rana of Dholpur were valued at $7,500,000.

The most extensive pearl oyster grounds of the world are situated on the northern and western coasts of Australia.

The richest pearl fisheries in the Americas at the present time are those of the Gulf of California, centering around La Paz and along the outer coast of Lower California in Mexico. These fisheries were discovered by Hernando Cortez when he marched across Mexico in 1526. The principal beds are near La Paz, in the Gulf, Espiritu Santo, Lorenzo Point, off the island of Cerrabro, Los Coyotes and Mulege bay, and, in fact, along the entire west coast of the Gulf of La Paz to above the island of Loreto and Tiburon, on the east side. In addition to those found along the outside coast of Lower California, pearl oyster beds are found at points along the southern coast of Mexico and Nicaragua.

Cortez and the Spaniards after him obliged the Indians to work the La Paz beds and to give one-tenth of their catch to the church and one-tenth to the crown. The beds were soon depleted and later abandoned. Over fifty years later, after having recuperated, fishing was renewed, and it is said that a Spaniard who later worked them took yearly from them 300 to 500 pounds of pearls, which he packed on mules and sold by the bushel.

Up to 30 years ago "buzos de cabeza," or head divers, only were employed, but on the revival of the fisheries about this time modern diving apparatus was introduced and today they are being worked under concession by San Francisco firms, who employ from 800 to 1,200 men and a number of run schooners, which collect the oysters from smaller boats working on the beds and carry them to the companies' sheds on shore, where they are opened and the pearls found sorted by passing them through small brass sieves of graded sizes.

In the gulf the season commences in July and continues to October, but while along the unprotected outer coast it commences earlier, in March, it is terminated by the hurricanes that sweep this coast in June.

Most of the diving is done by divers using the most improved diving apparatus, helmet and air pumps, and is carried on in from 40 to 120 feet of water, an average depth being 60 to 80 feet. The work can only be continued from 3 to 3½ hours at a time, due to the tide, which along this coast has a maximum variation of over 20 feet, creating currents that make it impossible to work for more than 1½ hours before and one-half to two hours after the turn of the tide. One of the great dangers of working at the bottom when a strong current is running is the risk of being carried far from the boat on rising in an exhausted condition, in the case of the head diver, or of injury by being driven against some sharp jutting rock or coral formation on which the life line might catch fast. The divers take little or no food into their stomachs before commencing work, as this would hinder deep breathing and make them more liable to cramps. A diver wearing 25 pounds of lead on each shoe, rubber garments and brass helmet to which are attached air tubes, signal cord and life line can remain at the bottom from one-half to three hours, according to the depth at which he is working. The pressure is so great at 120 feet that he usually remains under but 10 to 15 minutes, while in 50 feet of water he might be seen moving about on the bottom for several hours.

The pearl shells from these waters are not as large as those of Ceylon, but run from 6,000 to 7,000 to the ton. The true pearl oyster, the Meleagrina of the Indian and south Pacific oceans, varies in diameter from two to eight inches, according to age, six inches being the average. One diver working with helmet and air pump can secure as many as 15,000 oysters in a season. The greater part of the shell from the La Paz fisheries is shipped to San Francisco, while most of the pearls go to Mexico City and Paris. In 1908 the production of these fisheries was valued at $5,000,000, the pearls representing $3,000,000 and the mother-of-pearl shell the balance.

According to Dr. George F. Kunz, one of the world's greatest authorities on pearls, a pearl of the first water should possess a perfect skin, fine orient or delicate texture, be free from specks or flaws, and be of a translucent white color, with a subdued iridescent sheen. It should also be perfectly spherical, or, if not, of symmetrical pear shape. White or pink pearls are the finest, owing to their delicate sheen. Sometimes the outer layer can be removed, the subjacent surface revealing a finer skin than the outer one, and in this way a pearl may be improved.

The Lower California pearls are of a great variety of shapes and color, round, pear shaped, button pearl or flat on one side, baroque, or pearl of irregular shape, and in color ranging from white and pink to blue, green, brown and black. Some very famous pearls of history have been taken from these waters.

With hardly an exception there are American pearls among the crown jewels of every ruler of Europe. In 1889, at the world's fair in Paris, there was exhibited a set of seven black pearls from these Mexican fisheries, valued at $22,000 at that time, and today worth much more. One of the largest pearls ever found here was sold in Paris to the emperor of Austria for $10,000, and the Spanish government presented Napoleon III. with a black Mexican pearl valued at $25,000.

In Venezuela the principal oyster beds are located around the island of Margarita, which word in Spanish means pearl, and at Cubagua, El Tirano, Gulf of Paria and Coro, Porlamar, Maracapana and Macanao, so that this part of Venezuela became known to the early Spaniards as the Pearl coast.

Of the Pearl islands of Panama bay, Rey island is the largest of the group. The only village of any size among these islands is San Miguel, as old as the fisheries themselves, the tower of its little masonry church being thickly inlaid with beautiful nacreous shells from the fishing grounds on all sides.

From the United States and Canada come the fresh-water pearls, which are produced principally by the Unio, a species of mussel common to all the mountain streams throughout the country, although a pearl may be found in any mollusk having a nacreous interior lining.

Pearls have been brought to the New York market from almost every state in the Union and Canada, principally from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Tennessee and Mississippi.

FANS GLAD RUBE'S ARM WASN'T BROKE

WADDELL HASN'T SEEN LAST DAY ON THE DIAMOND.

SYMPATHIZES WITH RAYMOND

Jackson, Mich., Has Manager Who Is Blind—Bonesetter Reese Retires From Practise—"Mickey" Doolan of Phillies a Jekyll-Hyde.

Everybody was glad when it was found that Rube Waddell's arm was not broken as at first reported, and that the St. Louis star has not seen his last day on the diamond. There is no pitcher the fans would rather see in action than the Rube when he is right. And when he is going at his best there is no twirler the other teams fear more.

Waddell has undergone a wonderful change since the season opened this year, and can no longer be regarded as the most flighty and widely advertised freak in the game.

Rube is still full of fun. One of the Browns was reading a story the other day about how Bugs Raymond, the New York Giants' eccentric pitcher, had kicked over the traces because McGraw had appointed a keeper for him. Rube listened attentively.

"It's a shame that fellow doesn't take care of himself," said Rube feelingly, just as thousands used to make the remark about the only Rube. "He would be a wonder if he would just keep in condition and pay strict attention to business."

Probably the only baseball manager in the world who is literally blind—not as those who having eyes see not, but absolutely sightless—is Bert Taylor, manager of the Jackson Stars of Jackson, Mich. This blind manager handles his team from the bench. His men swear by him and do better work before his sightless eyes than when working under the supervision of a man who can watch the plays. But Taylor does watch the plays. He sits on the bench with his men and knows just what plays are made. He knows at all times the record of balls and strikes on the batter and never fails to recognize a foul. With almost uncanny intuition he can tell, possibly from the sound of the ball against the bat, the field to which the ball has been batted. He argues a point with the umpire just as earnestly as though he had seen the entire play, and his howl of protest aaginst a decision is just as vigorous as any fan could desire. His team won the City league pennant in 1908 and this year has won 22 games out of a total of 25.

Fred Tenney has been taking matters easily at Boston and says that he is in no hurry to work again, although if the right thing came along he would not hesitate a second. "I do not feel as if my major league days are over," he says. "I feel as good as I ever did in my life, and I was never more surprised in my life than when I was handed my conge by Mr. McGraw. I have received several offers to get back in the game and some of them appeal to me decidedly, but I prefer to stay in major league company a while yet and am confident I could help more than one club for a few seasons. Had McGraw let me go at the outset, there is no question at all that I could have made a most desirable connection. However, I am not worrying. I feel sure that had President Brush been in first-class health and on the scene, I would not have been dropped."

Bonesetter John D. Reese of Youngstown, O., famed the world over as "fixer" of ball players, has rendered his last service to diamond athletes, according to his own announcement. He does not give any reason, but it is believed that his poor health of the past several months compelled him to make this decision. Tommy Leach of the Pirates, who was recently injured, was notified that the bonesetter could not render him the service required, as was also Tim Jordan, the former Brooklyn first baseman, now with Toronto.

"Mickey" Doolan of the Phillies, tough of name, walk and actions, is a Jekyll and Hyde—a leader of double lives. Mickey Doolan is only a baseball alias, assumed to make him popular with the Irish rooters, and the fierce swagger, unshaven chops and uncouth behavior, strongly reminiscent of the sand lots, are all a well-studied fake. In private life the fierce fellow is Mr. M. J. Doolittle, college graduate, polished gentleman and, alas! not even an Irishman.

In a fanning bee the other night in Boston the subject of third basemen and first-sackers came up. Jack O'Connor of the St. Louis club, with Lou Criger, Bobby Wallace and Hemphill were grouped. It was the consensus of opinion that Jimmy Collins, now manager of the Providence club, and the old Boston third-sacker, was the best in the business.

Larry McLean keeps poking out safe hits for the Reds. He is again leading Bescher in the race for the team batting championship. Larry has a better eye this year than ever before. His hits have the right ring and generally come at the right time.

Pitcher Duggan was shipped by Indianapolis to Ed Ashenback's team in the New York league. It is said that Carr still has a string on him.

THE SUNBEAM.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

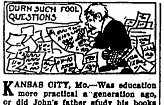
VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1910. NO. 14.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

"Practical" Queries That Puzzled Dad



KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Was education more practical a generation ago, or did John's father study his books more thoroughly than John does? John is a seventh grade student in the public schools. He asked his father one day to help him solve the following problem:

A, asked how much money he has in the bank, replied: "If I had $10 more I would have $1,000 more than half what I now have." How much money had A?

"Such a fool problem," said the father. "Tell that teacher to ask the cashier. You have been pestering me with problems like that for a week. Suppose your teacher asked you how old you are. Would you tell her:

"'If I were ten times as old as I am, diminished by 42, I would be 30 years older than dad, and if dad were one-fourth as old as he now is he would be my age?'"

"What would your teacher do if you answered in such a manner? In my days we had practical problems in our arithmetic."

In order to investigate his father's statement John went to the public library and asked for an old arithmetic.

The librarian gave him "Richard's Natural Arithmetic." He turned to the page marked "Practical Exercises" and read:

A puts his whole flock of sheep into three pastures; half go into one pasture, one-third into another and 32 into a third. How many in the flock?

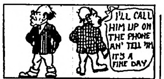
"That's queer," said John. "Practical exercises, too. Here is a man who wants to find how many sheep he has. He counts them so he will know when he has half of them. This half he puts into a pasture. Then he counts out a third and puts it in another pen. Next he counts what's left and finds he has 32. After a little figuring he finds how many in the whole flock. Very practical. I guess dad didn't study that book."

The next book he examined was "Milne's Inductive Arithmetic," edition of 1879. In miscellaneous examples he found the following:

Two ladders will together just reach the top of a building seventy-five feet high. If the shorter ladder is two-thirds the length of the other, what is the length of each?

"Why didn't he measure each ladder separately?" John asked himself.

Partners for Years But Never Speak

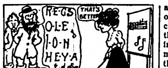


I'LL CALL HIM UP ON THE PHONE AN' TELL 'IM IT'S A FINE DAY

NEW YORK.—In one of the large wholesale houses in this city there are five partners. Two of them have not spoken to each other except over the telephone for twenty years. Their private offices are not more than twenty feet apart and they see each other a score of times a day, but they meet and pass without the slightest sign of recognition. If it becomes necessary in the course of business for them to communicate with each other they do so either by calling a stenographer and dictating a memorandum or else by being connected on the telephone over their private line. They never speak face to face.

A quarter of a century ago these five partners were young men with small capital. All of them had been employes of the same concern, but they had their own ideas and believed in them. So they put their money together and formed a partnership. The new business was successful from the very start. Each man had his own particular branch to look after and each was a specialist who did his part to perfection. Their separate interests in the firm so interlocked and they worked together so harmoniously that within five years they were on the high road to fortune. It was just at this time that these two partners fell out. It arose from a trifling difference their wives had. Naturally each partner, through loyalty to his spouse, took her side, and the quarrel grew so bitter that it culminated in blows being exchanged. Then they vowed they never would speak to each other again. The other three partners saw that if this course were pursued it would spell ruin. After a lengthy conference, in which the two disputants were called in separately, the proposition was put to them that they should agree to remain with the firm, of which they were essentially important parts, and should hold communication with each other only on business matters and then either in writing or by telephone.

"Old Rags, Old Iron" Set to Music



BOSTON.—An outdoor school for making musical rag men, hawkers and street venders is the latest educational novelty established in this city.

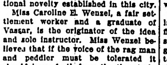
Miss Caroline E. Wenzel, a fair settlement worker and a graduate of Vassar, is the originator of the idea and sole instructor. Miss Wenzel believes that if the voice of the rag man and peddler must be tolerated it should issue forth from the throats in flute-like tones. She confidently believes that once her method becomes a fixture a person, instead of feeling obliged to slam down the window on a hot summer day or fret and fume over the gutteral cries of the merchants of the thoroughfares, will throw open the window and be lulled into peaceful slumber through the melodious strains of "Rags and Bottles," "Ole Iron," "Soap Grease" and "Juicy Lemons."

Miss Wenzel has established her outdoor school at Washington street and Massachusetts avenue and has nearly a score of pupils. The young woman is popular with the vendors.

She got her idea from a trip abroad last year. Her method is simple. She finds out a man's business and instructs him accordingly. She suggests expression to fit his wares and teaches the correct pronunciation of these expressions.

Her musical instruction is similar to what the musical teachers advocate for the production of a good ringing "head tone."

Expected Twin Babies But He Found—



CHICAGO.—"Come home—twins!" A mandatory order to a policeman of the Hyde Park station flashed from his home to the station at midnight. The policeman obeyed, just as he has done each year at the summons to "come home" upon the arrival of new members of the family—ten of them—during the last ten years.

Sergt. Bartholomew Cronin, the father, left his desk duties at the police station and rushed to his house at 7019 Indiana avenue. Within were signs of activity; lights flashed and above the din of excitement could be heard the wail of several of the small Cronins. Even Polly, the red Durham cow, which furnishes milk for the group, seemed affected and mooed in unison with the crying children.

The police sergeant hesitated at the threshold—then doffed his helmet and entered. He sought first the physicians, two of them, who talked disinterestedly with some of the children. One of them said:

"Sergeant, this case is one most unusual. It should be brought to the attention of dairymen throughout the country. A full-sized male and female. Mother and offspring doing nicely. You might drop a word to the farm journals."

Then a veterinary surgeon appeared and joined in the congratulations.

Polly, the red Durham cow, had given birth to twin calves.

A Knowing Husband.

Bleeker (at the reception)—By the way, old man, do you know that strenuous-looking woman standing near the piano?

Meeker—Not to talk to.

Bleeker—But you know who she is!

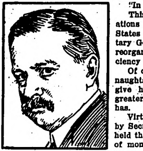
Meeker—Yes; she's my wife.

Bleeker—Why, you said you didn't know her to talk to.

Meeker—I don't—only to listen to.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

MEYER BOOSTS THE NAVY



"In time of peace prepare for war."

This old axiom seems to be the basis of operations in the navy department of the United States these days under the direction of Secretary George von Lengerke Meyer, who has been reorganizing the navy to bring about better efficiency and at the same time save money.

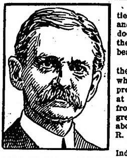
Of course Mr. Meyer would take all the dreadnaughts and other fighting craft congress would give him, but in recent days he has shown greater interest in making the best of what he has.

Virtual reorganization has been accomplished by Secretary Meyer in the year in which he has held the portfolio. He has brought about a saving of money in different directions, it is said, and many of the changes are the result, direct or indirect, of suggestions offered at his request by officers in all parts of the naval service.

Economy in the use of coal has been brought about by systematic firing, economy of steam, replacing defective joints and journals and stopping leaky valves. On the Montana a saving of fifteen tons of coal daily is due to systematic firing. With reference to oil the saving has been as great. On the battleship Georgia improved evaporators have reduced the cost of making fresh water 40 per cent.

Secretary Meyer's reoganization plans include systematic overhauling of the vessels at the shipyards after each cruise. This permits the continuous employment of expert machinists, many of whom formerly would be dismissed after a piece of work was done and not be ready to return when needed again. A saving of thousands of dollars in repair work has been effected by having repair shops on shipboard.

BOOM HOOSIER GOVERNOR



Two years will pass before the political parties will be holding their national conventions and nominating presidential candidates, but this does not keep the politicians from expressing their views concerning the prospective standard bearers.

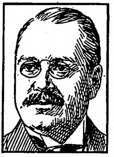
As in former years, various states will have the interests of their own statesmen at heart when convention time comes in 1912. From present appearances Indiana will be among these at the Democratic convention and the delegates from the Hoosier state probably will go to the great meeting with the intention of bringing about the nomination of their governor, Thomas R. Marshall.

Thomas Taggart, national committeeman from Indiana, was in Washington several days ago and in an interview said: "Indiana is for Marshall for president. Mr. Bryan has lots of friends in Indiana, but the Democrats of our state are for our governor for the nomination.

Governor Marshall was elected in 1908 and took office in January, 1909. His term does not expire until January, 1913. Indiana has always been the center of hot political battles in both parties and frequently has been placed in the doubtful list in presidential campaigns. Just at present the Republicans are having a hard fight for supremacy in the contest between insurgents and stand-patters. The Democrats seem to be working in harmony for the election of John W. Kern as senator to succeed Beveridge.

handling important matters that have come before him that he has ability. Presidential candidates, however, have not always been chosen because of their ability and pleasing manners, but geographical conditions have frequently played a more important part. The leaders may think when the time comes for choosing that New York or Ohio would be better for selecting a presidential candidate and it must be said in all fairness that both of those states have men in the Democratic ranks who may be considered good presidential timber.

GREAT BANK'S PRESIDENT



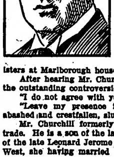
From plow boy in Iowa cornfields to president of the second largest bank in the United States is a record of which George M. Reynolds, head of the recently consolidated Continental and Commercial National banks of Chicago, is justly proud.

Mr. Reynolds is a man who never stepped out of the beaten track, never went outside of his business, never stopped working and never suffered a reverse. He has never lost a day from sickness, he has never taken a vacation that did not have business on the side, he does not drink, he does not smoke, he does not play bridge, he does not play golf, he has no favorite author, he has no hobby but banking, he has no country residence, he does not even take exercise.

He works nine hours a day. This is the only inroad that insidious luxury has made upon the habits of a busy life. He used to work eleven when he first came to Chicago in 1897 to be cashier of the Continental National bank.

"Make your business your pleasure and marry early. These are my rules," said Mr. Reynolds.

ROUSES NEW KING'S IRE



King George V. has started an "In Bad" club. Of course in an empire there are lots of people who are in bad on general principles and there have been many persons who have been persona non grata to the king or queen.

It is the Right Honorable Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, home secretary in the British cabinet, who is the original member of his majesty's "In Bad" club. Mr. Churchill knows how Francis Burton Harrison, member of congress from New York, must feel. Just a few days before Mr. Churchill roused the ire of the new king Mr. Harrison was told that he wasn't wanted at the White House. Whether they have exchanged cablegrams of condolence has not been made public.

George V. held a reception of the cabinet ministers at Marlborough house and discussed the political situation.

After hearing Mr. Churchill's views the king told him his opinion about the outstanding controversies.

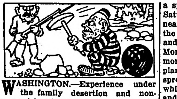
"I do not agree with your majesty," said Churchill.

"Leave my presence immediately," said King George, and Churchill, abashed and crestfallen, slunk dejectedly away.

Mr. Churchill formerly held the position of president of the board of trade. He is a son of the late Lord Randolph Churchill, his mother (daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York) being now Mrs. George Cornwallis West, she having married the latter upon the death of Lord Randolph Churchill.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Punishing Wife Deserters in Nation's Capital



WASHINGTON.—Experience under the family desertion and non-support law in Washington has proved that it is possible to bring deserting husbands to time and make them support their families, however much they may want to skip out and leave wives and children to shift for themselves.

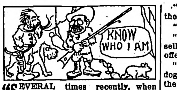
Punishment in itself profits nobody. The law aims not to punish but to secure support. The man decides whether he will work in confinement or out of it, and Judge William H. De Lacy of the juvenile court sees that he does work in one way if he will not in the other.

When a man brought up for non-support promises to furnish it he is put on probation, and ordered to pay a specified amount of his wages each Saturday night at the police station nearest his home. The sergeant turns the money over to the juvenile court, and then the wife gets it in full on Monday morning, her pay day. The money is pretty safe here, and the plan heads off many a Saturday night spree. The man is kept at work, which is a mighty good thing of itself, and the family is kept together.

Men who are not willing to furnish support under this arrangement and those who default in payment or desert a second time are promptly sent to the workhouse. There they are made up into gangs and put to work in Rock Creek park, where Mr. Roosevelt when president used to take his afternoon gallop.

Judge DeLacy's execution of the law is effective because it is certain. Family desertion is a misdemeanor or a felony in almost every state and is punishable with hard labor in many. But to punish the man in jail the judge must also punish his wife and children by cutting off his wages.

Col. Roosevelt in a New Dog Story



"SEVERAL times recently, when the name of the American ex-president-sportsman has been mentioned, I have been asked: 'You've heard the dog story, of course?'" says Joe Mitchell Chapple in the National magazine.

"I like to hear all the variations on dog stories, so I asked, 'Which dog story?'

"'That one, you know, that "Buffalo Bill" tells about Roosevelt hunting bears in Colorado. It seems that he hired a man and a dog, but neither seemed to be very successful in getting him the desired bear. At last he lost patience and inquired: "Isn't there a good dog to be had in this country?"

"'Oh, yes—Smith down below here has the best bear dog in the mountains.' The president went to see Smith and said:

"'This is Mr. Smith. I understand you have a fine bear dog, Mr. Smith?'

"'None better in the Rockies,' was the assurance.

"'Can't I hire him or buy him?'

"'He ain't for hire and I wouldn't sell that dog for no price you could offer.'

"'Well, won't you come with the dog—allow me to hire both you and the dog?'

"'No, I ain't hirin' out now. I got to go after bacon and flour and some more things my folks wants for the house.'

"Report has it that President Roosevelt felt a trifle nettled at the man's obstinacy.

"'Look here,' he said, 'do you know who I am?'

"'No, I don't know—what's the odds?'

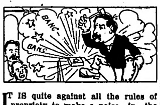
"'I am Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States.' A pause to await the desired effect and yielding.

"Smith dexterously deposited some tobacco juice on the ground just beyond the president's nearest hunting boot.

"'Well,' he said, slowly, 'I don't care if you are Booker T. Washington, you can't hire my dog.'

"And all the little innocent bears went to bed happy that night, glad they had escaped Smith's dog."

Senate "Chair" Calls Himself to Order



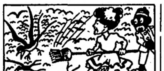
IT IS quite against all the rules of propriety to make a noise in the United States senate, even with the little bit of an ivory cube which the president of the senate once in awhile touches gently upon the marble desk to call the attention of the senators to some little thing.

Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, the only aboriginal American who ever sat in a senatorial chair, was presiding in the senate the other day, having graduated over there from the house. As is well known, the gavels on the speaker's desk in the house do not last very long. One session usually splinters them. Even if they were made of cast iron they would wear out, and on Senator Curtis' presiding hangs a tale.

Senator Bacon of Georgia, grave, dignified and somewhat dictatorial, was trying to address the senate. Senator Dillingham of Vermont, who had the bill in charge upon which Senator Bacon was going to speak, was engaged in conversation with his colleagues. Senator Kean of New Jersey was also talking to Senator Warren of Wyoming. Senator Bacon wanted to get the attention of the senator from Vermont before speaking on his bill, and hesitated a moment, which Senator Curtis took as a sign for him to get busy. So he began pounding that little marble cube until the senate chamber fairly rang.

Senator Curtis, who is nothing if not polite, with a merry twinkle in his black eyes, apologized for his undue exertions with the ivory cube, and said: "The chair will now come to order. The senator from Georgia is recognized."

Washington Hotel Is Stormed By Birds



PEDESTRIANS who are out braving the disagreable weather, and who happened to be in the vicinity of the New Willard hotel in Washington recently, were struck with wonder when they saw the upper portion of the hotel obscured by a rapidly moving cloud.

And the moving mass which created all this excitement—excitement within as well as without the hotel—proved to be a flock of swallows gone astray in their aerial flight. Within the hotel no end of trouble and inconvenience were experienced, for many of the birds flew in through the open windows and were ousted with a great deal of difficulty.

The feathered cloud went astray, probably through the miscalculation of the leaders, and when a few of them, flying too low, went in the direction of the hotel windows, the rest followed, like a flock of misguided sheep. Pell-mell they struck against the roof and upper windows, and, where the windows were open, in they flew and round and round the rooms. But the aeroplane landing on the Willard is not in commission yet and the hotel management objected strenuously to any attempt of guests to enter by means of the roof.

Accordingly, a corps of hotel employes, including all the volunteers who could be pressed into service, made for the upper chambers of the hostelry and swished and switched the winged visitors out of doors, some dead and some alive.

Tabloid Novel.

A LA ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

He—I beg your pardon for taking this liberty, miss, but.

She—Oh, no harm, sir. My name is Louise, and yours?

He—Malcolm. Louise, I love you!

She—Malcolm!!!—Puck.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

REGULATING THE USE OF ARMS.

That is an interesting and a suggestive proposal which has been made at Albany—to legislate against the common use and even ownership of the ingenious device which has been invented for silencing the noise of firearms, says New York Tribune. That device is said to be so effective as to make the discharge of a rifle or a pistol nearly noiseless, without decreasing the lethal effectiveness of the weapon. It is easily conceivable that such an attachment to military firearms would be of inestimable advantage in warfare, a noiseless rifle using smokeless powder giving practically no information as to the location of its user. But it is obvious that precisely the same thing would make a gun or a pistol a far more dangerous tool for the use of assassins. It may, indeed, be said that there is no legitimate use for the silencing device, save in military doings and in actual war. If we grant that citizens now and then need to use firearms against burglars, highwaymen and others it should be obvious that the most desirable and most effective arm for such purposes his handicap and hurry. People are getting happier, if they are not getting holier, and the former is a good omen of the latter. They have plenty of time to work at that that is worth while, or even to play, and it is one of the wholesome indications of a healthy life that people in this country play as hard as they work. But business and pleasure have turned their backs upon the knocker, setting their faces to brighter skies. So if you are at outs with somebody settle the matter with him; do not bother me with it. That is the answer of the world today, a good one, too. Even in sports this wholesome spirit prevails; indeed it dominates there perhaps more than anywhere else. It takes the form of intolerance, it is so pronounced. It is the spirit of a manly age, a big age and fast, too big and fast to slow up for the little fellow.

Practical jokes often are in very bad taste and not at all as funny as their perpetrators seem to think. Sometimes such jokes invite legal punishment. Down in Panama a party of would-be humorists circulated the story that seismologists had predicted that the country would be visited in the night by a great shock and that Colon would be wiped out of existence by a tidal wave. Coming on the heels of the Costa Rican cataclysm, this prophecy threw the ignorant and superstitious into terror, and there was something of a panic. Of course the convulsions did not occur. But the Panama authorities took the matter in hand and the jokers are now in jail awaiting the result of proceedings that will be brought against them. And if these humorists get a round sentence the general verdict will be that it served them right.

The war against the white plague will never be effective while contagion is allowed to be freely and wantonly spread by expectoration in public places, especially on the streets, where all lungs are exposed to infection. Not until measures are taken severe enough to check, if not to abolish, the habit, objectionable both to health and to public decency, will the fight against tuberculosis be taken seriously.

If the grandsons of the late Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, live to be fifty, they will come into possession of their grandfather's residuary estate, which it is estimated by that time will be worth $200,000,000. At the age of fifty the happy heirs will probably have outlived their boyish follies, so that they won't waste the money.

There is in the physiological laboratory of the University of Pennsylvania a machine that measures the mental capabilities of any person to whom it is applied. It would probably register zero if applied to persons who pay money to go to shows that it is necessary for the police to try to suppress.

We are not ready to accept the statement that the kaiser has made elaborate preparations to cut the submarine cables in case Germany is involved in a great war. If the kaiser should cut the cables, how could he let the world know what he has to say?

In order that a physician may treat his patient without visiting him, a London invention permits an examination of heart beats by telephone. Lovers who are not certain of each other's affections should borrow the appliance from some friendly doctor.

Delaware reports the largest strawberry crop in its history. This is encouraging. Perhaps when the berries arrive at market they may be so numerous and large that a quart box of them will [illegible]

EBERHART IS NAMED

COVETED HONOR BESTOWED UPON STATE'S EXECUTIVE WITH UNANIMOUS VOTE.

SENATOR CLAPP RENOMINATED

Tariff Issue Eclipsed by Conservation and Good Roads Notes.—Indorsement for All State's Representatives in Congress.

THE TICKET.

Governor—Adolph O. Eberhart, Mankato.

Lieutenant Governor—S. Y. Gordon, Browns Valley.

Secretary of State—Julius A. Schmahl, Redwood Falls.

State Auditor—S. G. Iverson, Rushford.

Attorney General—George T. Simpson, Winona.

State Treasurer—Walter J. Smith, Eveleth.

Associate Justices Supreme Court—E. A. Jaggard, St. Paul; C. L. Brown, Morris; D. F. Simpson, Minneapolis, and P. E. Brown, Luverne.

Clerk Supreme Court—I. A. Caswell, Anoka.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—C. F. Staples, St. Paul.

Senator Moses E. Clapp was unanimously nominated to succeed himself as United States senator.

St. Paul, Minn.—Governor Adolph O. Eberhart is named the official leader of the party. The Republicans of the state carried out a decision made long ago to place the stamp of approval upon the governor.

Harmony Program Prevails.

The convention was an Eberhart convention. While there was evidences of the usual difference of opinion that exist in a convention, harmony prevailed throughout and the friends of Governor Eberhart were in absolute control.

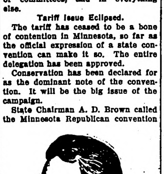
Harmony was woven in the platform expressions, in the appointment of committees, and in everything else.

Tariff Issue Eclipsed.

The tariff has ceased to be a bone of contention in Minnesota, so far as the official expression of a state convention can make it so. The entire delegation has been approved.

Conservation has been declared for as the dominant note of the convention. It will be the big issue of the campaign.

State Chairman A. D. Brown called the Minnesota Republican convention to order in the St. Paul Auditorium at 11:35 a. m. Tuesday.



MOSES E. CLAPP.

Chairman Brown introduced Mayor H. P. Keller of St. Paul as temporary chairman. He was greeted with loud cheers.

His address follows:

"This is a convention of delegates chosen by the Republican voters of Minnesota to place in nomination candidates for the various state offices to administer and manage the affairs of this state for the ensuing two years. National issues are not of paramount importance in the consideration of this body. We might refer to the accomplishments of the Republican party. We might refer to the more recent achievements; notably the passage and approval of the postal savings bank bill, creating as it does safe and desirable depositories for the small savings of the humble citizen, and calling into cirlation vast sums of money hitherto unavailable for commercial purposes. We might refer to the passage of the railroad rate bill, providing as it does for fair arbitration between the railroads and the shippers, and by prompt adjustment, furnishing a speedy and effective remedy for abuses which formerly obtained in the transportation business of the country be settling conflicting contentions between the shippers and the carriers. We might refer to the conservation bill, now being considered and about to pass, which provides for the withdrawal by the president of public lands for sale and entry. These last two measures were vigorously advocated by that great representative of progressive Republicanism, Theodore Roosevelt, and have been brought to a successful issue by his worthy successor, President William H. Taft and the Republican majority in congress.

"The Repulican party has ever been a constructive party, a party of progress and advancement. It has done more for the promotion of the welfare and prosperity of the common people than any other political party in the history of the world. While at times we are impatient at the delay in the accomplishment of what seems to us most desirable and necessary; while at times, even recent, there may have been disappointments in the expectations of the members of that party with respect to the accomplishment of certain policies in their fullest measure, yet it must be remembered that no man ever realized fully his own ideals; no great reform can be ideally accomplished. Great ideas permeate the minds of the people of great nation slowly and these great reforms will all come in time.

Party Redeems Pledges.

"The Republican party has always redeemed its pledges in the past and can be depended upon to maintain that policy in the future. The people of the country are ready, willing and eager to follow in the pathway of progress and advancement. When they have a leader in whose judgment they have confidence and faith and who points out this pathway, nothing can stop their march toward the desired goal.

"Among the great practical issues which confront the Republican party within the state of Minnesota today and with which the officials nominated by this convention will have primarily to deal is the development and conservation of the natural resources of the state. Conservation is by no means a new and novel proposition, as popularly supposed. It is an effort to return to those original principles with respect to the disposition of the public domain which contemplated the use, occupancy and acquirement of that domain by the individual citizen as opposed to its exploitation by vast aggregations of corporate wealth.

"The original homestead law was a Republican measure. It was intended, as its name implies, for the purpose of enabling the pioneers and immigrants to occupy with homes the public domain. It was not designed that this domain should be, either directly or by subterfuge, gather together in vast tracts and large holdings in the hands of the few. The law was designed to preserve it for the use of the many; but laxity in enforcing and conforming to the plain provisions of the law has allowed the law to be so perverted that the public domain has been accumulated and controlled by a handful of wealthy corporations to the detriment of the public at large.

"Conservation means, in part, the abolishment of these evils and the return to the first and original principles, and a further extension of these prinsiples to other natural resources, such as our mineral deposits, our forests, our water power sites and waterways and the reclamation of land by the application of modern drainage systems.

"The party should be committed to a just and fair reapportionment of the legislative representation.

Good Roads Important.

"The party should be committed to the adoption of measures designed to promote the easy intercourse of the citizens of this state and to facilitate agricultural development by means of an adequate system of good and permanent highways.

"Every year thousands of people pass through our state, migrating into northwestern Canada and the western United States, ignorant of the great possibilities and superior advantages offered by the unoccupied broad acres of Minnesota. We have not properly encouraged and sustained our immigration bureau in their efforts to make known to the public our great natural been lagging behind our Western and Northwestern states and the Canadian provinces.

"Other states have established and are establishing agencies and disseminating literature in advertising their contentions while we, conscious of our advantages. In this respect we have vast resources and great natural advantages, have been idling away our opportunities for receiving our fair proportion of new settlers. We have remained inactive too long and watched the tide of immigration flow past our own desirable lands into other states and territories which have far less advantages.

"This is the day of advertisement. Practically nothing can be sold unless it is advertised and our state should adopt this method of making known to the world at large our proper proportion of the immigration and be able to develop the country as it deserves to be developed.

"Minnesota has been a pioneer in advanced legislation. It is the pioneer among the states as a conservationist. Our school law was and is the greatest conservation measure that was ever passed by any state. It is now estimated that this enactment will return to the state a yearly income of approximately $4,000,000, making possible higher education for the masses by bringing within the reach of the poorest in the state these higher educational advantages.

Poneer in Rail Regulation.

"Minnesota has been the pioneer in legislation regulating commerce and railroad rates, and its examples in this kind of legislation has been followed by a great many of the other states, and even by the national congress which has adopted verbatim portions of our railroad statutes.

"Minnesota has also taken advanced ground in the matter of solving the vitally important problems of taxation. By the adoption of a constitutional amendment a few years since a tax commission has been created and machinery set in motion which will improve methods in taxation, remove existing inequalities and work out a satisfactory solution of all the questions involved.

"The state of Minnesota is also up-to-date in the matter of labor legislation, as shown by the laws on the statute books and by the practical results of their application. Our laws against child labor, providing for compulsory school attendance and a more recent enactment of a law creating a liability commission, all go to place the state in the front rank of practical and humanitarian legislation.

Gentlemen, we have assembled here today, then, for the purpose of nominating a set of men consecrated to these great labors, to the performance of these great duties, to the continuation and perpetuation of these great policies. This convention will name such a ticket. And I have no doubt that at its head will appear the name of that vigorous and capable young leader, who has won the confidence of the people of this state by his successful administration of our public affairs and business for nearly a year, the Honorable Adolph O. Eberhart."

When Chairman Keller concluded, O. A. Allen of Hector, nominated M. J. Dowling of Renville as temporary secretary and A. H. Vernen of Little Falls, Harry West of Sauk Rapids, and Parley Dare of Walker, as assistant secretaries. After the appointment of a committee of credentials had been dispensed with, because there were no contests and Chairman Brown had been seated as a delegate in the convention, Frank M. Eddy of Stearns, moved that a committee on resolutions be appointed by the chair. The motion carried.

The Resolutions.

Frank M. Eddy of Sauk Center, Stearns county, former congressman and newspaper man, presented the resolutions of the convention.

The county optionists had presented a list of names from which to choose their representative on the committee on resolutions. The committee consisted of 23 members, two from each congressional district and fice at large.

The representation of the optionists included C. S. Jelly, W. R. Jamieson and Prof. W. F. Webster of Minneapolis, Senator Ole Canestorp of Grant county and Senator B. E. Soudberg of Kennedy.

President Taft Indorsed.

This was in accordance with the arrangement of the night before when Governor Eberhart assured the optionists they would have fair representation on the committee. The resolutions as presented by Mr. Eddy unqualifiedly endorse the administration of President W. H. Taft.

They endorse the tariff and exemplify what has come to be known as the "Minnesota idea."

The party expressed its approval of the platform declaration on the tariff as adopted at the national convention of Chicago.

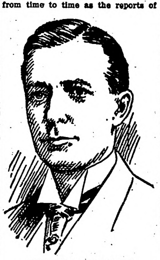
It reiterates the belief of the Republican party in the principle of protection to the extent which measures the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, plus a reasonable profit.

Approves New Tariff.

It expresses approval of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill so far as the pledges of the party platform have been redeemed.

This particularly expressed approval of the maximum and minimum features of the bill, which enable the president to protect this country against unjust tariff discriminations on the part of foreign countries.

It expressly approves the tariff commission and calls for further revision from time to time as the reports of the commission will justify. The entire Minnesota delegation at Washington is indorsed without distinction. This latter feature is the final chapter in the attempt made last summer to distinguish between the men who voted against the tariff bill and Congressman Tawney who voted for it.



ADOLPH O. EBERHART.

The state administration is commended, and a good roads plank is a feature of the platform. Conservation is made the dominant note in the platform. There are practically no state issues other than this.

The success of the state conservation congress is noted and an appeal made for a continued effort along the line of a conservation program.

The insurgent resolutions offered by Hugh T. Halbert, who was recently connected with the reported third party movement, were as follows:

"We the Republicans of the state of Minnesota in convention assembled do hereby reaffirm our unalterable support of the policy promulgated by Theodore Roosevelt.

"We are unqualifiedly in favor of the conservation of our natural and state resources along the lines suggested by him during his administration.

"We are in favor of tariff revision downward and we unhesitatingly commend the action of those of our senators and congressmen who voted against the Payne-Aldrich bill, which we denounce as a repudiation of the pledges of the Republican party to the American people."

County option lost out in the convention, as was expected, yet made a stronger showing than was anticipated, and succeeded in landing the nomination of lieutenant governor in the person of S. Y. Gordon of Browns Valley.

The real spirit of the convention was exercised in connection with the candidacies of Justice C. L. Lewis and Judge Homer B. Dibell, both of Duluth, for the supreme court.

From the very first time that the Duluth lawyers put forward the name of Judge Dibell, he has had no chance of nomination. The Duluth men may have been sincere enough, but the rest of the state interpreted their action as an attempt to punish Justice Lewis for his decision in the wide open tax amendment.

They went after the Duluth men without mercy, and Judge Dibell was sacrificed.

CONGRESS CLOSES

LEAVES RECORD FOR LEGISLATION SELDOM, IF EVER, EQUALLED.

MANY A HARD FOUGHT BATTLE

Insurgency and Democratic Minority Was Active Force.—Taft's "Reform" Measures Successful in Many Instances.

Washington, D. C. — Notwithstanding the fact that action in many important measures was delayed by conflicts between insurgent and regular Republican factions in both branches, and that the Democratic minority was an active force, congress concluded its long session with a record for enacting legislation that seldon, if ever, has been equalled.

In the matter of "reform" movements for which President Tafts stood sponsor there were many instances of success. Chief in the list of legislation were the following:

Striking revision of the railroad laws, including the creation of a commerce court.

Admitting Arizona and New Mexico as separate states.

Authorizing the establishment of postal savings banks.

Giving to the president unlimited authority to withdraw public lands for conservation purposes.

Providing for publicity of campaign contributions.

Authorizing the issue of $20,000,000 in certicates of indebtedness to complete reclamation projects.

Creating a bureau of mines.

Extending the activities of the tariff board and appropriating $250,000 for its use.

Looking to the supression of traffic in "white slaves."

Authorizing the entry of the surface of coal lands.

Creating a commission to consider economies in the administration of the federal government.

Providing a new tariff system for the Philippine islands.

Legislation which ultimately is expected to give practically prohibition to the Hawaiian islands.

Opposed to the foregoing formidable list of legislation obtained were a comparatively small number of measures which had administration sympathy, but failed of passage.

They were measures on the subjects of ship subsidy, anti-injunction, for new forms of government in Alaska and on the Panama canal zone; to create a bureau of health, to provide increased rates of postage for second-class mail matter, to create the Appalachian forest reserve, and increase the engineer corps of the army.

Not the least conspicuous acts of congress were the strenuous measures taken by the house of representatives to reform its system of conducting business so that less power might be reposed in the speaker and the organization of which he is the natural leader.

The speaker was removed from the committee on rules, which he had previously been credited with dominating, and a new rule was adopted for the purpose of preventing pigeon-holing of bills by committees when they were approved by a majority of the house, regardless of party affiliation.

The enormous proportions of the demands for legislation which are pressed upon congress is shown by the fact that since the beginning of the present congress more than 27,000 bills have been introduced in the house and more than 9,000 in the senate, in addition to hundreds of resolutions on various subjects. This record, so far as the number of bills is concerned, is without a parallel.

More time was consumed in considering the railroad bill than was taken by all other subjects of legislation. This measure not only creates a commerce court, but it embodies authority for a commission to inquire into stock and bond issues of railroads, extends the provision for the interstate commerce act to telegraph and telephone companies and gives to the interstate commerce commission power to postpone increases in rates until the commission shall have found the proposed increases to be reasonable.

An act, also, was passed to compel railroads to furnish to the interstate commerce commission reports on accidents, so that congress may be better informed as to the need of further legislation.

Under the withdrawal act the president was given almost unlimited power to withhold lands from settlement and to conserve the water power. On the other hand, the act providing for the agricultural entry of the surface of coal lands will open to settlement at least 60,000,000 acres, and at the same time reserve to the government the right to the coal.

By providing for the opening of a portion of the Pine Ridge and the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota and the Fort Berthold reservation in North Dakota, more than 3,000,000 acres of agricultural lands will be available for homestead settlement.

The sum of $150,000 was appropriated for the gauging of streams with a view of the preservation of the water supply.

The increase provided for the navy was notable. Two battleships of 27,000 tons each, armed with 14-inch guns, making them the most formidable dreadnoughts afloat, were authorized. The naval strength of the United States will be further supplemented by six torpedo boat destroyers, two colliers and four submarines, while an increase of the personnel of the navy of 3,000 men was authorized.

Greater safety of railroad employes and travelers will be obtained by the laws enacted to extend the use of safety appliances.

A measure important to agricultural branding and adulteration of paris green and other insecticides was passed.

An appropriation of $200,000 was made to be used by the attorney general in enforcing the Sherman anti-trust law. The house adopted an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation should be used in prosecuting labor organizations, but the senate struck out this provision, and later the house voted to recede from its position upon it. The discussion and demands of labor leaders brought out a letter from President Taft who took a strong position against class legislation of that character.

The sum of $300,000, with the suggestion that as much more as might be needed might be forthcoming, was appropriated for the raising and removal of the wreck of the battleship Maine, sunk in the harbor of Havana, Cuba.

Further regulations of the immigrant service was provided so as to improve the character of immigrants obtaining admission into this country.

Other legislation makes provision for the better protection of the Alaskan seal fisheries, for the promotion of the efficiency of the militia of the several states, for the parole of United States prisoners whose conduct indicates that they would not abuse their liberty, for the franking of publications by the blind and for the preservation of natural scenery through the establishment of Glacier national park in Montana.

Friday was a busy day in the Senate.

After the general deficiency had been adopted Senator Gore attacked the provision relating to the approval of contracts with the Choctaw and Chicasaw Indians. He said that the approval of these contracts ment the payment of $3,000,000 to J. F. McMurray, an Oklahoma attorney and a loss of that sum to the Indians. He charged that a big lobby was maintained in Washington in the interest of the contracts and said that he had been offered from $25,000 to $50,000 to support the claim.

Auto Tire Price to Jump.

New York, N. Y. — Automobile tires will take an upward jump of 20 per cent in price after July 1. The increase in the prices comes as a direct result of the constant drain upon the small reserve of rubber now held in the European markets. Two months ago there was a market supply of three thousand tons of rubber of which two thousand five hundred tons were held abroad. Today the total supply is two thousand tons and practically all of it abroad.

U. S. Battleships in England.

Plymouth, England.—The American battleships Indiana, Massachusetts and Iowa, with 500 midshipmen from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, arrived here. The young sailors are having their summer practice cruise. The squadron is commanded by Rear Admiral Clark. The local authorities are planning a round of entertainments for the visitors. The midshipmen will be given a dinner by the lord mayor of London.

White Sox Have New Plant.

Chicago, Ill. — The new $750,000 plant of the Chicago American league club practically completed all but a few finishing touches. It will be dedicated on July 1. The grandstand, and "bleachers" have a seating capacity of thirty-five thousand. The grounds occupy a block on Shields avenue between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-sixth streets. The players' clubhouse contains hot and cold baths, showers, rubbing tables and many other conveniences.

Double Tragedy in High Life.

Birmingham, England. — Coroner Brasher after an investigation into the shootings by which Mrs. W. P. G. Hardin, wife of the president of the First National bank, and Guy R. Johnson, former vice president Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron company, killed themselves, decided that it was sucide in each instance.

BANK WRECKER FOUND GUILTY.

Accused of Aiding Coleman in Cambridge, Mass., Theft.

Boston, Mass. — A further stage in the government's prosecution of those responsible for the wrecking of the National City bank of Cambridge came when William J. Keliher, called by his friends "Big Bill," was declared guilty by a jury in the United States circuit court of aiding and abetting George W. Coleman, the $12 a week bookkeeper, who was sentenced a month ago for the theft of $309,000 from the bank. Sentence was postponed.

Sultan of Sulu Coming.

Manila, P. I. — The sulton of Sulu, who once offered his hand in marriage to Miss Alice Roosevelt, is to visit America. He has announced that the chief object of his trip abroad is to dispose of a collection of pearls valued at something like $250,000, the proceeds from which will be devoted to improving the condition of his people. He will be accompanied by fourteen prominent Moors. He already has sailed for India and will make stops at several European cities.

COAL LANDS ARE WITHDRAWN.

Washington, D. C. — The United States geological survey has reported during the month of May on 1,697,261 acres of coal land withdrawals, of which 329,334 acres were classified as non-coal lands. The coal lands, valued by forty acres units, according to the estimated tonnage, were reported as worth $58,503,120. Under the minimum price fixed by law for coal lands which obtained until a few years ago, these lands would have been valued at only $12,220,290.

M. & ST. L. PASSES DIVIDEND.

Storms and Strike Caused Unusually Heavy Expenses.

New York, N. Y. — Directors of the Minneapolis & St. Louis R. R. Co. passed the semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent on the preferred stock ordinarily payable July 15th.

For the five months ending Nov. 30, 1909, results of operations showed all charges earned and a surplus equivilent to 8 per cent on the entire outstanding capital stock, both common and preferred.

Woman Badly Burned.

Sioux City, Iowa.—Mrs. John Lowrey, wife of a prominent farmer near here, poured denatured alcohol in a cook stove to start a fire. The live coals ignited the liquid, causing an explosion, covering the woman with flames and shaking the house to its foundation. The woman is badly burned, but has a chance to recover.

New Prince of Wales.

London, Eng. — The king has created the Duke of Cornwall Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester.

REWARDED AT LAST

LANDLESS REAP HARVEST OF RICH ACRES TO COMPENSATE THEM FOR LONG AND TEDIOUS VIGILS.

FAST WORK DONE AT CASS LAKE

One Hundred and Eighty File in Four and One-half Hours, Breaking All Records for Land Filings.

Duluth.—Thirteen thousand acres of land in the Fond du Lac and the Pigeon River reservations were thrown open for settlement Monday, and the weary line of prospective homeseekers breathed a sigh of relief when the heavy doors of the land office swung open and admitted them. Many of the landseekers had been waiting in line since May 13, on the second floor of the Federal building.

Sixty-seven were in the line at 9 o'clock in the morning, and among them were a number of women. The men have shown less restiveness during the long vigil than the women. Position was respected by the landseekers, and if one wanted to go downtown for a few minutes his place awaited him on his return. But the fear of losing position kept the landseekers pretty close to their places, and it was rarely that one of them was absent for more than half an hour. The police had no trouble in maintaining order when the rush came and the women in line were treated with perfect courtesy and consideration. It was one of the most orderly "land rushes" ever witnessed in the Duluth land office. Most of the land filed on today is situated in the Fond du Lac reservation. It is near railroads and markets, while the Pigeon River land is not so favorably located. No contests have been reported.

Cass Lake Filings Reach 180.

Cass Lake.—One hundred and eighty filed in four hours and a half. This breaks the record of all land offices in the United States. There was no trouble whatever.

A large number of squatters who waited until the first lineup had dispersed went out to file, and found in many cases their land already filed on. This means almost certain contest, as the squatters are all determined to go after their selections, inasmuch as the law favors them.

Promptly at 9 o'clock the doors opened, and Mrs. Ellen Johnson entered the door, which was opened by an officer. Mrs. Johnson remained just one minute and twenty seconds, and her filing was finished. This is the fastest filing yet accomplished on the opening date here.

Mrs. Johnson returned, smiling and very much relieved. When asked what she would take for land, she replied $8,000. Mrs. Johnson has one of the finest pieces in Cass Lake district. Michael McGuire was next, and he finished in just one minute and twenty-four seconds. Other filers ran accordingly.

MINNESOTA BANKERS MEET.

Several Addresses and an Oratorical Contest at First Session.

St. Paul.—A party of financiers assembled in the Grand Opera house in St. Paul when President W. I. Prince of Duluth called to order the Minnesota Bankers' association for its twenty-first annual convention. After prayer by Rev. Fred G. Budlong, Mr. Prince and the other officers made their reports, and then Prof. A. F. Woods, director of the agricultural department of the University of Minnesota, read a paper on what that department has done, is doing and plans to do in developing the agricultural interests of the state. This was followed by addresses by J. B. Gallarneault, superintendent of banking, on "The New Banking Department," and by Howard S. Abbot of Minneapolis on "The Present Tendency of Public Expenditures."

The morning session wound up with an oratorical contest between representatives of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Head of the Lakes chapters of the American Institute of Banking. The subject was "The Minnesota Bankers' Association, Past, Present and Future."

In the afternoon the visitors and their ladies were the guests of the St. Paul Clearing House Association at the ball game, and at night they were entertained at a theatre party followed by a dinner. The convention closed Thursday afternoon, the features of the second day being addresses by Governor Eberhart, President W. C. Brown of the New York Central, Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin of the University of Chicago and J. Adam Bede.

PERISH IN MISSISSIPPI.

Inmate of Training School, Red Wing, Drowns While Bathing.

Red Wing.—Robert Stapleton, 19 years old, an inmate at the Minnesota state training school was drowned while swimming in the Mississippi near the school. Stapleton was committed to the Red Wing institution in 1906 from St. Paul. He had no parents. Prior to 1906 he was under the guardianship of Robert J. Clarke, 107 Litchfield street, St. Paul. The body was recovered

EASTMAN STARTS UNIQUE QUEST

He Seeks Red Man Who Never Was Influenced by Europeanized Arts

Boston, Mass. — "I am setting out to find a truly primitive Indian—one who has never been influenced by the European arts and crafts of the white man. When I find such an Indian, which I expect to do, I shall submit him to tests that will show the native genius of the American Indian and will prove in the case of a single individual the progress of arts and crafts as they are known to us now only by the development of an entire race," said Dr. Charles A. Eastman.

The most interesting quest ever made by a college professor, a quest more appealing in its associations than any hunt for strange animals or relics of long buried civilizations, has just been begun by Dr. Charles A. Eastman of Amherst, who has set out for the Far Northwest to find an Indian who still retains the simplicity and primitive viewpoint of the tribesmen who roamed the woods and fields before the white man came to this continent and to add further interest to this search Dr. Eastman is himself nearly a full blooded Sioux.

As an authority on Indian religion, art, social custom and folk lore, Dr. Eastman has already distinguished himself as a lecturer and author, but his dream for many years has been to experiment with a primitive Indian and thereby prove that the individual may be inspired by a simple system of suggestions to work the entire circle of racial art development.

Although Dr. Eastman has been identified with educational institutions for many years, he was born in Minnesota and from the time he was 5 years of age until he was 10 years old he lived in Manitoba, leaving there to begin his education at Knox college. Afterward he studied at Dartmouth and took his medical course in Boston. Meanwhile, however, he was devoting much time to the art of the Indian and the possibility of developing it.

MINNEAPOLIS COMBINE CALLED

Hottest Day of the Year Is Chosen To Begin Inquiry Into Ice Trust.

Minneapolis.—Hope for some relief during hot weather, if not in holding the mercury below the century mark, at least supplying antidotes against sweltering temperature, were heralded when the grand jury took up the consideration of the ice price problem in Minneapolis.

Twenty-three men, doomed by the stern edicts of the constitution to transact their business behind closed doors, sought relief from the excessive heat by peeling off their coats and opening wide the windows of the grand jury room. In the office of the county attorney, 20 representatives of ice companies in Minneapolis awaited the call to tell what they knew about the alleged combine among certain ice concerns of the city to float the price of their wares.

"We are going to tell all we know about this business," said one ice dealer, "and when we get through the 'Big Three' may laugh differently than they have during the last couple of months."

Among the representatives of the smaller firms sentiment was very strong against the big companies for what is considered their studied attempt to put the smaller establishments out of business and to create a monopoly in the ice business in Minneapolis.

Price Difference Probed.

"The question the grand jury will have to consider," said one of the ice men, who had been subpoenaed by the county attorney, "is to find out why ice is sold for $2 north of Plymouth avenue, where double weight is given, while $3 is charged south of Plymouth avenue."

Among the witnesses summoned to give evidence were C. O. Lampe, former president of the City Ice Company; John C. Miller, of the Twin Lakes Ice Company; Henry J. Minor, of the Kenwood Ice Company; Gus Haft, of the American Ice Company; F. W. Palmer, of the Shoreham Ice Company; Robert Jaeger, of the First Ward Ice Company; E. S. Dowling, of the Southeast Ice Company; J. L. Kilchli, of the Independent Ice Company, and Fred Fagan, of the Mutual Ice Company.

Lester B. Elwood, real estate man, and J. S. Nolan, at present in the horse business, but formerly with the Crystal Ice Company, also were present to give testimony.

BRAVES IN PEACE JUBILEE.

Chippewas in Paint and Feathers Celebrate Town's Founding.

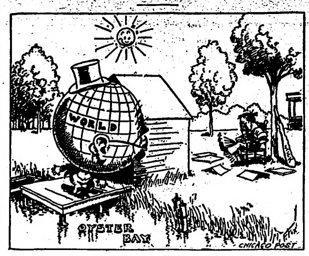
White Earth, Minn., June 16.—White Earth celebrated the forty-third anniversary of its settlement by the Minnesota Chippewas.

The town is arrayed in picturesque splendor with a large number of visiting Sioux and native Chippewas gorgeously painted, befeathered and arrayed in all the glory of barbarous splendor as in former days of the warpath and life in the wigwam.

Fire Impoverishes Farmer.

Duluth.—A forest fire swept the buildings, crops and hay meadows of Samuel Croff, one of the pioneer farmers on the north shore of Lake Superior, and the work of years is lost to him in his declining years. He had but recently completed a first-class farmhouse. Even the wild berry crop, usually an important item, is destroyed. One of the most serious features of the fires which are running over this part of the state is that thousands of acres of wild hay have been burned.

"I WONDER WHAT HE IS GOING TO DO NEXT?"



LANDIS QUASHES INDICTMENT

FREES NATIONAL PACKING COMPANY AND SUBSIDIARY FIRMS.

Sustains Demurrer on Technical Grounds—Orders Special Grand Jury for New Hearing.

Chicago.—The indictment against the National Packing company and its ten sudsidiary concerns charging them with conspiracy to restrain trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, was knocked out Thursday when Judge Keneshaw M. Landis in the United States district court sustained the demurrer filed against the indictment by the so-called beef trust.

A special venire of seventy-five men was ordered called for July 14. From this venire a grand jury will be drawn and a second investigation of the packing companies begun.

In his decision sustaining the demurrer to the government indictment Judge Landis said:

"The most painstaking search of this indictment fails to disclose the presence of a charge that during the statutory period the defendants have engaged in, or had anything to do with interstate commerce, or that they done anything having any effect upon such commerce, and the court is not clothed with authority to supply, entirely by inference, the complete omission of such a fundamental element of the offense.

"This fatal weakness might have been obviated by including the charge, had the evidence warranted it, that the defendants, or their respective officers or agents, did something, as, for instance, fixed prices, controlled output, divided territory, or the like, which effected a restraint of interstate commerce being carried on within the three years' period.

"The general averment that the defendants engaged in a combination in restraint of interstate trade is, of course, a mere conclusion, and therefore insufficient. The demurrer must be sustained."

The indictment, which was knocked out by the packers' demurrer, was drawn by Oliver E. Pagin, assistant attorney general, who was sent to Chicago from Washington.

A. O. EBERHART FOR GOVERNOR

Minnesota Republican Convention at St. Paul Nominates State Ticket Without Opposition.

St. Paul Minn.—The following nominations were made by the Republican state convention, there being no opposition to the candidates:

For governor, Adolph O. Eberhart.

Attorney general, George T. Simpson.

Secretary of state, Julius Schmahl.

Member of the board of railroad and warehouse commission, Charles F. Staples.

THREE RAILROADS INDICTED

Federal Grand Jury Return Bills Charging Violation of Elkins Act and Destroying Waybills.

Chicago.—The Illinois Central Railroad company, the Pennsylvania company and the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad company were indicted by the federal grand jury.

The Illinois Central is charged with violating the Elkins act in failing to observe its tariffs.

The other companies are charged with destroying waybills in violation of the interstate commerce law.

Standard Reduces Oil Prices.

New York.—The wholesale prices for refined oil have been reduced from one and one-half cents to one cent a gallon by the Standard Oil company, making the prevailing price throughout the country now seven and one-half cents a gallon. The standard controls more than seventy per cent of the refined output of the country and it can readily be seen what such a reduction in price means to the great corporation.

Steal $5,000 From a Bank.

Boston.—Police are searching for thieves who stole $5,000 worth of Austrian and Italian paper currency from the private bank of Julius Rottenburg while the bank was crowded Friday. The money had been placed in a show window.

Public Building Bill Passed.

Washington.—The house adopted the conference report on the public buildings bill, which disposes of that measure. The bill now goes to the president.

TRIUMPH FOR AMERICANS

German Campaign of Slander Against the Deutsche Vacuum Oil Company Fails.

Berlin.—The long and venomous campaign waged by German newspapers and rival industrial interests against one of the German branches of the Standard Oil company—the Deutsche Vacuum Oil company—has just been brought to a vicorious end for the Americans involved.

A well-known Hamburg newspaper for months printed such a series of attacks on the "American graft methods" alleged to have been practised by the vacuum company in the conduct of its German business that the public prosecutor of Hamburg felt constrained to make an official investigation with a view to eventual indictments. The prosecutor has now concluded his investigation, especially of the work of E. L. Quarles, American manager of the German company's sales department, and announces that no necessity exists for pursuing the inquiry further.

No evidence of anything warranting prosecution was found against Mr. Quarles, and the costs of the entire inquiry will be borne by the state.

The result of the investigation constitutes a notable triumph for American interests in Germany.

It is not the first time that Germans, finding themselves unable to compete with Americans on ordinary terms, have resorted to slander.

AIRSHIP LINE IS OPENED

Zeppelin's Dirigible Deutschland Carries Twenty Passengers 300 Miles in Nine Hours.

Duesseldorf, Germany.—Regular airship passenger service was established Wednesday for the first time when Count Zeppelin's great craft, the Deutschland, carrying 20 passengers, made the first scheduled trip from Friedrichshafen to this city, a distance of 300 miles, in nine hours.

The weather was perfect and the motors worked faultlessly. The average speed maintained was approximately 33 miles an hour, but between Friedrichshafen and Stuttgart 124 miles were covered at an average of 41 miles an hour. The best speed for one hour was 43½ miles.

Count Zeppelin was at the helm when the Deutschland left at Friedrichshafen at 3 a. m. and sailed away on the trip that was to mark an epoch in aviation. The passengers were several directors of the Hamburg-American Steamship company and the German Airship Stock company, joint owners of the dirigible balloon, and guests. They occupied the mahogany-walled cabin between the gondolas, from the windows of which they viewed scenery as the aerial car swept along.

45,000,000 EGGS IN POOL

Speculators Form Corner in Product and Hope to Realize Big Profits Next Winter.

Newark, N. J.—Forty-five million eggs have been shipped into this city since April 1 and placed in cold storage by the warehousemen, to remain there until the high prices of last winter are duplicated. They were purchased at an average price of 23½ cents a dozen, and the total cost is about twenty-six cents a dozen. If the eggs can be retailed in New York next winter at 45 cents a dozen—which they fetched last winter—there will be a profit of 19 cents a dozen, or a total of something over $700,000.

Actress Is Drowned.

New York.—An actress, known to the stage as Miss Marion Dell Taylor, was drowned in the Hudson river when a small skiff in which she and three other theatrical people were riding was smashed by a barge. Miss Taylor's true name is Marion Dell Sneider, and her parents live in Kankakee, Ill.

20,000 Cloakmakers Out.

New York.—Between 18,000 and 20,000 men and women cloakmakers struck Thursday and Friday and union leaders declare that the number will be increased next week to 30,000. The regular strike order is expected before July 1.

Gambling, Mayor Indicted.

Granite City, Ill.—Charles A. Uzzell, the mayor, was indicted Friday on the charge of malfeasance in office. It is alleged he permitted gambling houses to operate.

THE KING'S SALARY

George V. Gets $2,350,000 for Annual Expenses.

In Addition His Queen, the Princes and Princesses of Royal Family Are Liberally Supplied With Pin Money.

London.—The king of England and the president of the United States are alike in one respect—they are both dependent on their respective peoples for their salary and allowances, the purse strings being held by parliament in one case and by congress in the other. The methods of doing things differ in the two countries, but they amount to the same in the end, and the people foot the bills. But kings cost much more than presidents. Some people thought it a "big raise" when the president's salary was increased from $50,000 to $75,000 a year, with $25,000 a year for traveling expenses, but the British king and royal family cost a good many times as much.

At the beginning of every reign an annual sum is settled on the king by parliament and in addition allowances are made for each member of his family and for all the expenses pertaining to the royal household and to maintaining the honor and dignity of the crown. Under the British system these expenditures constitute "the civil list" and the account is kept separate from the ordinary expenses of the government. Formerly certain sources of revenue, called "hereditary revenues" were settled on the crown, out of which not only the royal expenditures proper, but the expenses of the civil service, everything except the army and navy, were to be paid. Under this system the king could use the revenues as he liked and if he saved anything it went to swell his private purse, while if he ran in debt or created a deficit parliament paid it. The accumulated debt at the end of a reign sometimes amounted to many millions of dollars.

The present system of making what might be called specific appropriations for the crown dates from the reign of George III., when the national debt was so enormously increased by the American war that the people demanded reform, especially in the abuses of the civil list, and in the practise of conferring life pensions on royal favorites. In 1782 parliament passed a civil list act abolishing many useless offices, reducing the pension list and providing for closer supervision of the royal expenditure.

King George V.

At the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign the annual grants for the crown were fixed and sums voted as follows: Privy purse, $300,000; salaries of household, $656,300; expenses of household, $862,500; royal bounty, $66,000; contingent, $40,000; total, $1,925,000. In addition the queen might grant life pensions not to exceed $6,000 a year in any case, to persons whom she might consider worthy, provided that all pensions granted should be reported to parliament by the twenty-ninth of July each year.

On the accession of King Edward VII. (1901) it became necessary to readjust the civil list and a committee was appointed to investigate and report on the subject. The committee reported a bill which was passed increasing the annual appropriation for the civil list from $1,925,000 to $2,350,000, distributed as follows: Their majesties' privy purse, $550,000; second-class salaries of royal household, $629,000; third class expenses of royal household, $965,000; repair and decoration of royal palaces, $100,000; royal bounty and alms, $66,000; contingent, $40,000. In addition parliament granted an annual allowance of $100,000 to the prince of Wales, $50,000 to his wife and $40,000 each to the king's three daughters and other special grants. By the death of King Edward Queen Alexandra comes into a life pension of $350,000 a year and all of the surviving children of Queen Victoria continue to draw life pensions.

It is not likely there will be any material reduction in the civil list granted George V. from that of King Edward, which totaled $2,350,000 a year. Compared with this the president's salary of $75,000 a year with $25,000 for traveling expenses does not seem excessive.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING, 1468 Clybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

The average man can't understand why he has enemies.

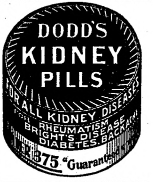
TAKE A FOOT-BATH TO-NIGHT

After dissolving one or two Allen's Foot-Tabs (Antiseptic tablets for the foot-bath) in the water. It will take out all soreness, smarting and tenderness, remove foot odors and freshen the feet. Allen's Foot-Tabs instantly relieve weariness and sweating or inflamed feet and hot nervousness of the feet at night. Then for comfort throughout the day shake Allen's Foot-Ease the antiseptic powder into your shoes. Sold everywhere 25c. Avoid substitutes. Samples of Allen's Foot-Tabs mailed FREE or our regular size sent by mail for 25c. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.
"Foot=Tabs for Foot-Tubs."

The prune and the strawberry are nearing the neck-and-neck stage.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

A girl isn't necessarily an angel because she's fly.



WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

160 ACRE
FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA
FREE

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

125 Million Bushels of Wheat in 1909

Western Canada field crops for 1909 will easily yield to the farmer $170,000,000.00 in cash. Free Homesteads of 160 acres, and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Railway and Land Companies have land for sale at reasonable prices. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Splendid climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates, wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

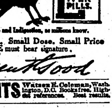
For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk., Grand Forks, N.D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 116, Watertown, S.D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
(Use address nearest you.) [1]

Don't Persecute your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal—harsh—unnecessary. Try CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.



Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price

GENUINE must bear signature.

Brent Good

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

PATENTS F. G. Bradbury, Pat. Atty., Com'l Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.; Corn Exchange Bldg., Minneapolis; McGill Bldg., Washington. Best work close at home. ADVICE FREE.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam' Minn. under th Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

POLITICAL ANNOUCEMENT.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator to represent the Sixty-first Senatorial district, at the primaries to be held Septemer 20, 1910.

Al. H. Jester.

This weather ought to be dry enough to suit the county optionists.

Congress would like to adjourn but they can't even agree to do that.

Senator Stephens demonstrated that he is a factor in Polk County politics, at the recent county convention scrap.

Judging from their last week's issues, the Thief River Falls papers must be greatly in favor of county division. Don't hurry so, gentlemen, as you are liable to gorge the farmers on the start. Take it easy during the hot weather and warm up when the weather gets cooler.

True To His Colors.

The St. Paul Dispatch has the following regarding Senator Stephens, which will be of interest not only in Crookston and Polk county, but throuout the northwestern portion of the state:

"The inability of the steam roller to get into operation at the state convention Tuesday is said to be due to two things: The young blood in the meeting and the devotion of Senator Andy Stephens to his friend, A. Kaiser, of Bagley.

"There were a lot of candidates in the field and Stepens had given it out that he was backing Kaiser. As a result he would entertain no proposition that did not carry with it Kaiser for treasurer. All Monday, Monday night and Tuesday forenoon, he wrestled with the problem. It is understood that time after time deals were proposed which would have made the steam roller move ahead as majestically as the swell of the sea, but in each Kaiser was eliminated, and Stephens refused to push.

"Probably never in the history of Minnesota politics has such absolute devotion in the time of political stress been witnessed. It is being said that Kaiser tried to release Stephens, who was willing to be sacrificed for his friend, but was not permitted to approach the altar.

"It is freely said that Stephen's conduct in this matter should raise him in the estimation of his people, but so peculiar a thing is politics that many contend the Red River Valley senator sacrificed himself politically when he refused to part from Kaiser."

Anyone knowing Senator Stephens is not surprised at what he did. He is always loyal to the interests of his locality. He could have hopped on the band wagon, stood pat with certain elements, and the steam roller would have done the business. But he would be a party to no combination which did not provide for this section of the state. The people of Polk County and most of the counties in the ninth district wanted representation on the state ticket, and Al. Kaiser was the candidate centered on. Senator Stepens fought for him to the last ditch and would have won easily had it not been for the fact that peculiar conditions [illegible] in Duluth and the range country, owing to the judge fight and the further fact that the Marshall county delegation, as manipulated by W. J. Brown, made a move which will not improve their chances to get anything for the Ninth district in the future.

Senator Stephens will be stronger because of his loyalty in the fight he made. He is not a quitter and the people of Polk county will have more confidence in him than ever before, because he has again shown that he will fight to get what is due this section. He has always got it, and the peope do not forget it.—The Crookston Times.

News From Clearwater.

Don't forget the grand Fourth of July celebration at the Clearwater Creamery.

We are having very warm weather and we need rain badly.

Mrs. Lewis Sall has been on the sick list, this week.

Mrs. R N. Fore left for Fosston, on Monday, to visit her mother.

Mrs. A. Rolandson and son, Knute made a business trip to Plummer, on Thursday.

Miss Ellen Swanson returned home, on Saturday, after working out this summer.

Miss Signa Gunderson is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Rome in town of Deer Park.

Mr. James Alrick and Miss Maggie Short came from Plummer, on Sunday to spent the day with the family of Con Short.

Ole Skottvedt made a trip to Plummer, on Monday, after a big load of lumber for the bowery.

The base ball nine of Lillo have started to build the big bowery for the grand Fourth of July celebration near the Clearwater creamery.

QUEEN SAAV'S READY WIT.

A Story Appropriated From the Annals of Irish Royalty.

The anger of King Colm was terrible. "Twas a fortnight before he could address himself to his queen or look her in the face and speak to her—and what he come to say to her then was that she was a shame and a disgrace to him, but sure what could he expect anyhow when he was such a notorious fool as ever to marry a beggar of a race of beggars. "Get up," says he, "and dress yourself, and leave my sight and my castle for evermore."

"Very well and good, me lord," says Saav, says she. "I'm ready. I was prepared for this, as you'll remember, before ever I married you; but," says she, "you remember your agreement—three back burdens of the greatest valuables I choose, to carry out of your castle at my lavin'?"

"Thirty-three," says he, "if you like. 'Twill be a cheap price to get rid of you."

"Thanky, me lord," says she. "I'll only ask three. And before I've got them out maybe you'll think it's enough."

"What is the first back burden you choose?" says he.

"A back burden," says she, "of gold, silver, diamonds and jewelry."

In a short time the king had a burden of them piled on her that near almost broke her back, and with it she went out over the drawbridge.

When she laid it down and come back in again says the king, says he, "What will your second back burden be?"

"For my second back burden," says she, "hoist up on me our baby boy."

The king gave a groan that'd rent rocks. But he wasn't the man to be daunted before any woman. He lifted with his own hands the boy in whom his heart was wrapped up and, settin' his teeth hard, put him on Saav's shoulders. She carried him out over the drawbridge.

When she come back again says Colm, says he, "Now then, name your third and last burden, and we're done with you forever, thank God!"

Says Saav, says she, "Get on me back yourself."

King Colm and his good Queen Saav lived ever after the happiest and most contented couple that Ireland ever knew, a parable for all kings and queens and married couples in the nation. Saav lived and died the wittiest, as her husband lived ever after and died the justest and most generous, most reasonable, sensible, affable and amiable king that Ireland ever knew.—Everybody's Magazine.

Bread In Sweden.

In Sweden the bread of the people is for the most part hard, thin as a dinner plate and about the size of one. It is baked without yeast, and the water is practically all extracted in the process of baking; hence, relatively per pound of bread, its cost is much higher than in the common forms of bread as we know them, containing one-half their weight in water that has cost nothing. Loaf bread and rolls in Swe- [illegible] a luxury.

Grand Celebration, at Highlanding, Minn.

Program:

Oration at 11 O'clock. Reading of Declaration of Independence. Foot Races, Wheelbarrow Races, Tug of War, Base Ball at 2 30, Erie vs Brunkeburg.

Dance in the Bowery, afternoon and evening.

Grand Display of Fire-works in the Evening.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam May 20th, 1910.

Department of the Interiorir. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 17th, 1910.

Notice is heeby given that Peter Peterson, of Kratka Minn., who on June 26th, 1904, made Homestead entry No 400, Serial No. 0410. N.W. ¼ Section 20 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. 5th, Principal meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissionor fo the District of Minnesota at Thief River Falls Minn., on the 5th. day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Michael H. Conely, Tosten Elleson, Jacob R. Hesby, Ole Christofferson, all of Kratka Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17. 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 29, 1904. made Homested Entry No. 435, Serial No. 0489. for N. W. ¼ Section 20 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafdal, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Publication June 3 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 31st. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Martin O. Moen of Torgerson, Minn., who on Dec. 5th. 1907. made Homestead Entry No. 1330, Serial No. 04598, for W. ½ S.W. ¼. Sec. 16 & S. ½ S.E. ¼. Sec. 17 Twp. 154 N. Range 39 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described; before Wilhelm Michelet. U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 18th day of July, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Leros, of Mavie, Minn: Martin L. Salberg, Knute Torgerson, and Ole A. Olson of Torgerson Minn:

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. May 28th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Dagne Knutson, of Hilda, Minn., who on November 25th, 1905 made Homestead Entry No. 1210, Serial No. 04508, for S. E. ¼ Section 36, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before J. M. Bishop, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B. Henry Costello, Halvor Swenson, Ole B. Hanson, and Knut Ytelund, all of Hilda, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3rd. 1910

Department of the Interior. U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. May 20th, 1910

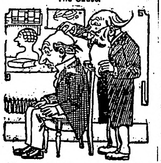
NOTICE is hereby given that Inga Bo[illegible] of Erie Minnesota., who on November 25th 1904 made homestead entry No. 948, Serial No. 04561, for S. E. ¼ Section 19 Township 153 N. Range 39 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses

Joseph Johnson, Ole Johnsrud, John Totland, Carl P. Anderson, all of Erie Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin
Register.

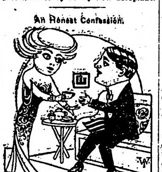
The Cause.



Phrenologist—This bump means ambition.

Woodby Flier—That's right. I was ambitious to fly in my new aeroplane.

An Honest Confession.



"I went to two receptions last night and lost my umbrella at the last."

"It's a wonder you didn't lose it at the first one"

"That's where I got it."

Tommy Knew.

Teacher (addressing class)—A philanthropist is a person who exerts himself to do good to his fellow men. Now, if I were wealthy, children, and gave money freely to all needy and unfortunates who asked my aid I'd be a—

She broke off abruptly to point at a boy in the class.

"What would I be, Tommy?" she asked.

"A cinch!" shouted Tommy.—Exchange.

The Cure.

He—There is a certain young lady deeply interested in me, and while I like her, you know, still I never could love her. I want to put an end to it without breaking the poor girl's heart. Can you suggest any plan?

She—Do you call there often?

He—No, indeed; not any oftener than I can possibly help.

She—Call oftener.

What Did He Mean?

Mrs. Benham—Death is the debt we owe to nature. Benham—Nature does not send out her bills often enough.—New York Press.

Hair Monstrosities.

French theater managers in the eighteenth century had worse evils than picture hats to contend against. Marie Antoinette, who was short even according to French standards, set the fashion of high coiffures, and ultrafashionable women prided themselves on measuring four feet from their chins to the tops of their heads. These structures took about six hours to erect, the hairdresser mounting a ladder in the process. Some coiffures were almost as broad as they were long, with wings sticking out about eight inches on each side of the head. For the "frigate" coiffure the hair was rippled in a huge pile to represent the waves of an angry sea and surmounted by a fully rigged ship. As a consequence of these monstrosities disturbances in theaters occurred almost daily until an ordinance was issued against the admission of women with high coiffures to the floor of the house.—Chicago News.

Yet He Meant Well.

Just as the train was leaving the Fifty-eighth street elevated station a man who had got off there hurried along the platform and spoke to a passenger sitting by an open window in the smoking car.

"Quick!" he cried. "Please hand me that package. I left it on the seat when I got out just now."

"Sure," said the passenger, picking up the bundle and tossing it out of the window.

"Thanks!"

"Hey, there! What are you doing that for?" demanded the wrathful, red faced man sitting next to him.

"Why, he"—

"You double dyed idiot, that package belonged to me! It was $15 worth of laces and ribbons I was taking home to my wife!"

Over the scene that followed let us draw a veil.—Chicago Tribune.

Never Good.

Fogg—That's a bad cold you have, old man. Fenderson—Did you ever hear of a good cold, you idiot?—Boston Transcript.

Yes we have plenty Of LUMBER, IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

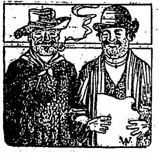
D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesday's Thursday's and Saturday's. & Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

A Change of Route.



"Where d'ye t'ink we'd better go dis season?" asked Fringy Fake of his partner.

"I was jist readin' in dis scrap 'bout a place in Mexico where a feller wid no pantaloons wuzn't allowed to prom on de plaza."

"Cut dat place off de map."

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

He Saved the Patent Office.

When in the war of 1812 the British, who had taken Washington, trained their guns upon the patent office, Dr. Thornton, throwing himself directly before the guns, cried:

"Are you Englishmen or Goths and Vandals? This is the patent office—a depository of the ingenuity and inventions of the American nation, in which the whole civilized world is interested. Would you destroy it? Then let the charge pass through my body."

And the building was spared. Twenty-four years afterward, however, it was destroyed by fire, together with everything in it.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS FOR Headache

FOR NEURALGIA.
SCIATICA.
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST.
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS

DR. MILES' Pain Pills

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

If you have Headache Try One

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

25 Doses 25 Cents
Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

Remember that you can get your plows fixed so they will run right, at Kratka.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

P. C. Wold is slowly recovering from a serious illness.

Alfred Hammersten made a business trip to Thief River Falls on Monday.

The water is getting very low in Red Lake River, making the passage of boats difficult.

Ray Arndt is having his farm which is located near the Kuehnol post-office, fenced.

Walter McAndress was transacting business in Thief River Falls, Wednesday.

Andrew Ellingson informs us that he cashed about $1800 in Highlanding creamery checks, this week.

The farmer's boat is reported to be stranded by the low water, near Newton's place in town of Kratka.

We made an error in regard to the base ball game to be played at Highlanding, July 4th. It is the Brunkeburg Club, not the Lillo nine, that plays with the Erie team.

Ole Stromme is building the bowery, at Highlanding, and will look after the management. The music will be furnished by the celebrated Even Sjulestad String Band.

There is no use denying the fact that our crops are being ruined by the continued dry weather. Another week of the present dry hot weather will entirely ruin all the crops.

The farmers, who are living at a distance from Red Lake River, will soon be compelled to drive their stock to the river for water; as the shallow wells and small lakes will soon be entirely dry.

George Cunningham received word from Adams, N. D., yesterday, that the crops were all ruined by the drouth. Mr. Cunningham had hired out to work there during the fall but was notified not to come, as there was nothing to harvest.

Numerous people, who are traveling through the country, remark that the grain and grass along Red Lake River is the finest they have seen and appears to be the least affected by the drouth. If this is true, we certainly feel sorry for the other fellows as it is dry enough on the river.

A meeting was held at P. C. Wold's, last Sunday, by a few farmers, interested in the R L R. T. Co., to make a settlement with Joseph DuChamp for a $35. interest, he had in the barge, that is used on the farmer's boat. Joe got his cash promptly and went on his way, rejoicing. It will not be necessary for him to employ any more legal talent to protect his legal (?) rights.

Glenn Martz, Martin McAndress, James Walker were running the lines and taking levels on the changed route of the Deer Park—Highlanding ditch (No. 47), yesterday. The ditch will now go west from the south-east corner of section 29 for two miles then northward into Red Lake River, on or near the natural water course. This will be a big improvement over the former route, between sections 20 and 30.

The Dan Patch had a good load of passengers down the river this morning.

Tore Lunde has been assisting the Sunbeam farming force to repair the barn, this week.

The haying season starts next week; then we will get plenty of rain.

Ole Nesland, of Deer Park, was a pleasant caller at this office, Tuesday.

George Singer, the Rhoda dairyman, transacted business at Kratka, Monday evening.

A man with an irrigation scheme would receive more attention than a ditcher, now a days.

How would it do to dam the Red Lake River with logs and flood the lands along the banks?

The big bowery at Highlanding is about completed and there will be a fine time on the floor, on next Monday.

The school children of the Swanson district, in Deer Park, had a picnic at the school house. to-day.

The Hotel Evelyn, at Thief River Falls, is well conducted at the present time and is a good place to stop at.

The Palace Hotel, at Crookston, is to be remodeled and refitted. It will again take its place among the first class hotels of Northern Minnesota.

Sam Swanson, of Deer Park, was a passenger down to Thief River Falls on this morning's Dan Patch, commanded by Captain Swanson.

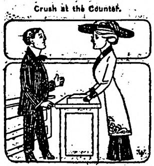
Mrs. Ole Overum has the floor laid in her new barn, which is 30 by 50. It is a fine one for dancing, so there will be a bill ball at Highlanding on July 4th, rain or shine.

C. L. Clark is rushing the haying season by going into the big swamps and cutting hay. Others would do well to follow his example, for their will be little or no hay on the uplands, this year.

Ole Overvold returned home from Clearwater County, where he has been looking after his farming interests. He says that they have suffered worse from the drouth than we have here.

We have not heard whether Lattimore has telephoned his troubles to President Taft. He should attend to this, as Taft has nothing else to do but to look after the interests of the 1 ven towns.

Crush at the Counter.



"I want a pair of swell white gloves."

"Yes, ma'am. How long do you want 'em?"

"Look here, young man, I want to buy them. I'm not thinking of hiring them."

The Coop Trust.

The rooster is a gay old bird.
The hen bird loves a lay;
They form a trust, and hence the boost
Of breakfast eggs today.

The Harm of Damp Houses.

It is dangerous to health and even to life in a damp, moldy house or one built over a moldy cellar. Many years ago the London Lancet in an article on diphtheria traced the disease in certain cases to the presence of certain molds and fungoid growths which seemed to be breathed into the throat. Remember, one of the best disinfectants is lime. Moldy cloths, such as shoes and other articles that are unfit for use, should be destroyed at once.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to

Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2. 50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

[illegible]

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.— SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

Celebration at Clearwater.

1776— —1910.

There will be a Celebration at the Clearwater Crossing in Deer Park, commencing at 9 o'clock A.M., July 4th, at 10 o'clock. Dinner at 11, served by the Ladies Aid Society. Base ball game and other sports in the afternoon. Dance in the bowery, afternoon and evening. Good music. Ice cream and other refreshments, enough for all. Fire-works in the evening. All come and have a good time.

ORATION

Jens Fore
Nels Fore Committee.
T. Brekke

The Origin of Oxygen.

That eminent scientist Lord Kelvin maintained that all the oxygen in the atmosphere probably originated from the action of sunlight upon plants. When our earth was a globe of hot liquid it contained no vegetable fuel and probably no free oxygen. But as it cooled off plants appeared on its surface, and these began to evolve oxygen through the medium of the sunbeams. Upon the oxygen thus derived we depend for the maintenance of life by breathing. When we burn coal or other vegetable fuel we use up oxygen, and it is to plants again that we owe the restoration of the oxygen thus lost to the air. If they failed to keep up a sufficient supply the atmosphere would gradually part with its oxygen, and the inhabitants of the earth would disappear in consequence of asphyxiation.

An Odd Epitaph.

The following epitaph is to be found in a cemetery within seven miles of New York's city hall:

Reader, pass on; don't waste your time
O'er bad biography and bitter rhyme.
For what I am this crumbling clay insures,
And what I was is no affair of yours.

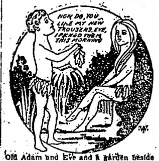
In the Game.

"I am in the hands of my friends," said the political sidestepper.

"Yes," replied the harsh critic, "and every time your friends look over their hands they seem impatient for a new deal."—Washington Star.

Tears are often the telescope through which men see far into heaven.—Beecher.

Adam Had No Suit to Press.



HOW DO YOU LIKE MY NEW TROUSERS, EVE, I PICKED THEM THIS MORNING

Old Adam and Eve and a garden beside
Had apples and fig leaves and ease.
But his greatest delight was—I'll bet I am right—
That his pants didn't bag at the knees.

A High Priced Fricassee.

Lord Alvanley, a noted wit and high liver in England a hundred years or so ago, insisted on having an apple tart on his dinner table every day throughout the year. On one occasion he paid a caterer $1,000 for a luncheon put up in a basket that sufficed a small boating party going up the Thames. Being one of a dozen men dining together at a London club where each was required to produce his own dish, Alvanley's, as the most expensive, won him the advantage of being entertained free of cost. This benefit was gained at an expense of $540, that being the price of a simple fricassee composed entirely of the "noix," or small pieces at each side of the back, taken from thirteen kinds of birds, among them being 100 snipe, 40 woodcocks and 20 pheasants—in all about 300 birds.

Our Eccentric Phrases.

Why do we always talk of putting on a coat and vest? Who puts on a coat before a vest? We also say putting on shoes and stockings. Who puts on shoes before the stockings? We also put up signs telling people to wipe their feet when we mean their boots or shoes. And a father tells a boy he will warm his jacket when he means to warm his pantaloons. We are a little eccentric in our phrases at times.

THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payment's. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.——— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,

THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school, We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or adress, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Folkedahl,
Highlanding .....Minn.

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examin this fine horse.

C W Johnson, Owner.

QUESTIONS IN COURT

A Series That Moved an Observer to Turn Critic.

SOME GEMS HE PRESERVED.

The Lawyers Didn't Seem to See the Ridiculous Phase of the Inquiry, but It Loomed Large to the Man With an Idea That the Law Is Solemn.

A man who spent several days in a courtroom listening to the examination of veniremen was struck with the reflection that some shining legal minds would not be unduly dimmed by the infusion of a few of the principles of logic. The time taken up by attorneys in drawing the conclusion that a juror who lives at a given address makes his home there and then referring the conclusion to the juror for confirmation has not been computed, but any one mathematically inclined may figure it out by multiplying the following examples by any handy large round number:

"What is your occupation?"

"I am a switchman."

"On a railroad?"

The obvious answer which the juror's awe of his surroundings prevents him from making would be, of course, "No, in an ice cream parlor."

"Judge," said a juror, "I would like to be excused from service. When summoned I was making arrangements for my brother-in-law's funeral."

"Is your brother-in-law dead?" inquired the court.

It developed that he was.

"Now, Mr. Juror," came another question, "what is your age?"

"Forty-four."

"Forty-four years old?"

That is exactly what the juror meant. The lawyer guessed right the very first time.

Here is another flash that came to one of the attorneys. "Where do you live?" he asked.

"At 4416 Blank street."

"You reside there, do you?"

Once in awhile there is a funny answer which isn't to be wondered at considering the power of suggestion.

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"Any family?"

"Two."

But the balance is well on the lawyers' side. Witness this: The questioner had asked if a juror was related in any way to any of the principals or witnesses in the case.

"I am a brother-in-law of Mr. Blank, one of the witnesses," was the reply.

"You married his sister, then?"

He had.

"Let me ask you now, Mr. Juror, have you formed any opinion about the guilt or innocence of this defendant?"

"I have."

"Is it a fixed opinion or is it one that could be changed by evidence?"

"It could be changed if the evidence were strong enough."

"Then you would not call it a definite opinion?"

"No."

"It is a vague opinion, then?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mr. Juror, follow me closely, if you please. You say your opinion is a vague one and not definitely fixed. Now, then, if that is the case and you went into that jury box and listened to the evidence adduced from that witness stand and heard the law expounded by the judge from that bench, would it not be possible for you to lay aside that opinion and concur in a verdict warranted by the evidence and the instructions of the court?"

"Yes."

The attorney, having received the same answer to his long question as to his short one, is perfectly satisfied and throws a triumphant look at his colleague, which says, "I knew I could get it out of him if I kept at him long enough."

Here is another astonishing deduction: A juror took the stand dressed in a blue uniform with brass buttons. Around his belt was strapped a money changer. The examining attorney looked at him long and searchingly and then said in a tone which admitted of no trifling:

"You are a street car conductor?"

It was the same attorney who forced this confession from another juror:

"What is your occupation?"

"I'm a bookkeeper for Blank & Co."

"You keep books in the office?"

Unmasked, the bookkeeper broke down and made a clean breast of it.

"Now, Mr. Juror, be good enough to state how old you are."

"Fifty-six years."

"How long have you resided in this state?"

"Fifteen years."

"Then you were not born here?"

The trapped man admitted the truth.

Here is another:

"Were you born in Missouri?"

"No, sir."

"Oh, I see. Then you moved here from some other state." And then in a come-one-don't-delay-the-court tone of voice, "Where did you come from?"

"Chicago."

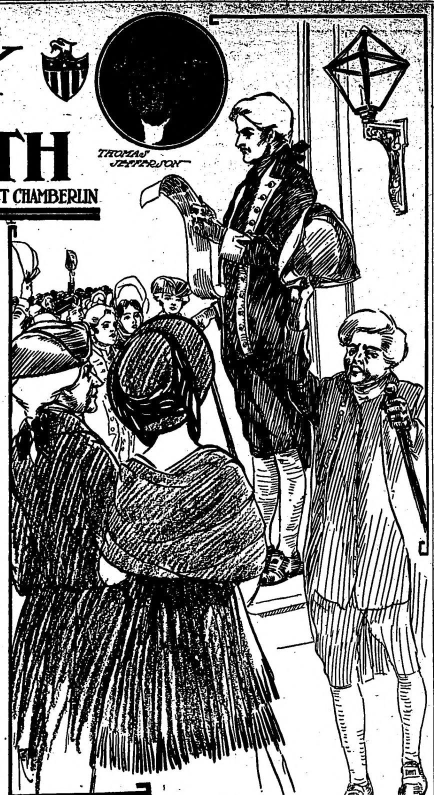
"Chicago, Ill."—Kansas City Times.

Unhappy Man!

"Yes, my old friend, I have been the victim of misfortune in all my love affairs. My first sweetheart died, the second jilted me, and the third became my wife!"

JULY FOURTH

by HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN



THOMAS JEFFERSON

When the clock struck four, I was on the floor,
The bells began to ring and the cannon to roar,
The guns to fire and the crackers to snap—
This is the Fourth of July.

ONCE upon a time—if you are exacting as to dates, the time fell between 1836 and 1860—there was a country parson who kept a record of his Fourths. In the year 1855 he broke into poetry and the quoted quatrain was the result. This record of his Fourths, taken from his journal, was published in the Atlantic Monthly.

Now if various and sundry reasons, all excellent in their way, did not keep this esteemed magazine closed to the eyes of boyhood, it is to be feared that this parson, despite his poetry, would be voted a cross old man. For when the Fourth fell on Sunday he saw no reason why it should be celebrated on any other day or in any fashion not in keeping with a seemly observance of the Sabbath. Instead of gladly accepting the bounty of the calendar and having a trilogy, a series of three dramatic and exciting days fraught with danger and delight, this gloomy personage would have limited the day's events to a sermon and a prayer.

In his records can be found testimony against him, for they read:

"July 4, 1847. Sunday.

"July 5. Monday morning. This is celebrated as the Fourth of July very improperly. Yesterday was the day and ministers might have preached upon the subject of religious freedom; this would have been sufficient and ought to have been satisfactory. But no; there must be noise, the drum must beat and the cannon roar, the children be dressed in their best and paraded, and 'Don't these children look nice?'

"Oh, yes, very nice, but if their parents would teach them to respect their superiors and behave with propriety it would be far better. Well, there has been a general turnout, rich and poor, young and old, all mixed up together. This is a free country—but not so, it is a country of slave holders. We hold 3,000,000 of our fellow mortals as slaves—and how inconsistent."

"July 4, 1852. Sunday.

"July 5. Monday.

"The community were not satisfied to have yesterday as being the Fourth of July because they could not serve Satan so openly and boldly as today. My opinion is that when the Fourth of July comes on the Sabbath it ought to be remembered in a suitable and proper manner by assembling in the sanctuary and hearing the proclamation of peace announced from the pulpit, 'good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.' Suitable prayers and suitable readings would be a suitable acknowledgment that our blessings are of God, but because this won't do we must have a great noise and bustle and much that is derogatory to the Christian character must be put in operation."

He didn't like the methods of celebration any better when the glorious day fell in the middle of the week, for July 4, 1849, he wrote:

"Wednesday. At the rising of the sun the bells of the city are ringing and the cannon roaring, calling upon those within hearing to awake, arise and call upon their God, and give him thanks for this great blessing, our national independence, which we this day commemorate by making all the noise we can and by acting as well as we can and as bad as we can."

All of which would justify any boy in the belief that though the parson may have been a God-fearing personage who walked the narrow path all his godly days and was never even tempted by a lingering desire for pleasant primrose byways, he must certainly have been rather an unpleasant person to live with and that the milk of human kindness which was his portion, though it may not have soured, was as certainly lacking in cream.

How different was the letter which John Adams in the first flush of joy over the adoption by congress of the Declaration of Independence, wrote to his wife. Its date, July 3, may give some ardent young Americans excuse for firing their crackers before the dawn of the day which even lawmakers say may have its claim shattered into fiery noise.

This first historic Adams, first vice-president, second president of the republic which he helped to bring into being, was a good husband. Busy as he must have been, for he was a foremost figure in the stirring events, "the Atlas of Independence," the "Colossus of that debate" which preceded the vote on the nation-making resolution, he wrote on July 3 two letters to his wife, Abigail. In one he said: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that these united colonies are and of right ought to be, free and independent states." In the other: "The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore. You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this declaration and support and defend these states. Yet through all the gloom I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means; and that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even though we should rue it, which I trust in God we shall not."

Though posterity selected, instead of July 2, July 4, the day on which the formal Declaration of Independence prepared by a committee of five, headed by Thomas Jefferson, was discussed and accepted, the resolution for independence was, as these letters show, really adopted July 2.

It took a long time for the petitioners of the colonies to conceive of independence. Leaders like Samuel Adams waxed impatient with those who believed a peaceful settlement of the trouble was possible without separation from the mother country. Yet Washington in the first congress denied that the colonies desired or that it was to their interest to set up for independence. Franklin looked upon it as an event which, if it must come, was lamentable.

Lexington and Concord and Bunker hill favored the radicals. June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of the Virginia delegation, following the instructions which he had received from the council of Virginia, presented a resolution, "That these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; that all political connection between them and Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved." John Adams seconded the motion and a debate followed. There are no authentic reports of these debates. The war had not yet been won. Public report of what was said would have been of extreme danger to these men, who, indeed, would have been hanged had good King George been able to get them, but hanging men is like making rabbit pie—you must first catch the rabbit.

It is likely that those who led the debate in support of the measure were John and Samuel Adams, Roger Sherman, Oliver Wolcott, Richard Henry Lee and George Wythe. Those opposing were probably John Dickenson, John Jay, James Wilson and Robert R. Wilson. It appeared that four New England colonies, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, and three southern colonies, Virginia, Georgia and North Carolina, were prepared to vote at once in the affirmative, but as unanimity was desired a final vote was postponed until July 1, and a committee compored of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston, was appointed to prepare a formal statement for the world.

Lee, the mover of the resolution, would perhaps have been named chairman of the committee had not his wife fallen ill. As it was, Jefferson received the honor and save for a few alterations by Franklin and Adams the Declaration of Independence was written by him. The original draft in the state department in Washington, save for these interlineations by Franklin and Adams, is in his handwriting.

July 1 debate was resumed on the Lee resolution. July 2 all the delegates but those from New York voted in favor of it and it was of this action that John Adams wrote to his wife. The original resolution having been carried, the formal declaration prepared by the committee to show a due respect for the opinions of mankind was reported and discussed until late July 4, when it was finally accepted and signed by the president of the congress, John Hancock, and the secretary. Within a week the provincial congress of New York expressed its approval. August 2 an engrossed copy of the declaration was laid before congress and received the signatures of delegates from 13 colonies, 56 in all, though Matthew Thornton of New Jersey did not sign until November.

Grim jests were passed. Hancock, writing his name large, said that John Bull could read it without spectacles and impressed upon his comrades that since the fatal die was cast they must "all hang together in this matter," which gave Franklin a chance for his bon mot, "Yes, indeed, we must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

A fat delegate—some say it was Harrison, others that it was Carter Bruxton of Virginia—said to one of light weight, either Carroll of Carrollton or Gerry of Massachusetts: "When it comes to hanging I shall have greatly the advantage, for my neck would be broken at once, while I fear you will dangle in the air and hang for some time."

The first public celebration of the Declaration of Independence was probably that of July 8, 1776, when John Nixon read the statement in the yard of the statehouse in Philadelphia and the king's arms were taken down in the courtroom. In New

In 1777, in honor of the first anniversary of the glorious day, every soldier was ordered an extra gill of rum. In 1778 the general orders read: "To-morrow, the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, will be celebrated by firing 13 pieces of cannon and a feu de joie of the whole line." Even as early as that parades were in order. A description of one shows that elaborate hair dressing is not of the twentieth century only and that the Tories were not so insignificant as to escape notice.

"We had a magnificent celebration of the anniversary of independence when handsome fireworks were displayed. The Whigs of the city dressed up a woman with the monstrous headdress of the Tory ladies and escorted her through the streets with a great concourse of people. Her head was elegantly and expensively dressed. I suppose about three feet high and proportionate width, with a profusion of curls. The figure was droll and occasioned much mirth. It has lessened some heads already and will probably bring the rest within the bounds of reason, for they are monstrous indeed. The Tory wife of Dr. Smith has christened the figure Contenella, or the Duchess of Independence, and prayed for a pin from her head by way of relic. The Tory women are very much mortified notwithstanding this."

Barbecues, fireworks, parades, picnics, white dresses—these seem early to have become a part of the day's celebration. Noise and accidents, also, early developed. Julia Ward Howe, in her reminiscences, tells that she remembers her own distress as a child because the Democratic mayor of New York, Gideon Lee, prohibited home fireworks. Fortunately for her and her sisters and brothers, they lived next door to the mayor and he made an exception in their favor.

In 1857 she listened to the ode written by Emerson and read in the town hall at Concord July 4, 1857. Perhaps he caught the spirit of even the day's noise better than the other parson. At least he wrote more kindly of it:

The cannons boom from town to town,
Our pulses beat not less,
The joy bells chime their tidings down,
Which children's voices bless

CORN PLANTING IS OVER

THAT CANADIAN TRIP SHOULD NOW BE TAKEN.

If you had intended going to Canada for the purpose of purchasing land on which to establish a home and accompanying some land company, whose holdings you proposed to look over or to go up on your own account to select one hundred and sixty acres of land free, you should delay no longer. Corn-planting is over, your wheat crop is well ahead, and you have a few weeks' time before you are required in the fields again. Now make your intended trip. Reports at hand show that the crop prospects in Canada were never better than they are today. The cool weather has not affected the crop, but if anything, it has been a benefit. There has been plenty of moisture and those who have had their land properly prepared look upon this year as likely to be one of the best they have had. A great many are going up this season who expect to pay two or three dollars an acre more than they were asked to pay last year. Others who wish to homestead are prepared to go farther from the line of railway than would have been necessary last year. Still it is worth it. So it will be with you. Next year lands will be higher-priced and homesteads less accessible. There is a wonderful tide of immigration to Central Canada now. It is expected that one hundred and fifty thousand new settlers from the United States will be numbered by the end of the present year, an increase of fifty per cent over last year. In addition to this there will be upwards of one hundred thousand from the old country, which does not include those who may come from the northern countries of the Continent. These all intend to settle upon the land. The reader does not require an answer to the questions, "Why do they do it?" "Why are they going there in such large numbers?" Western Canada is no longer an experiment. The fact that one hundred and fifty million bushels of wheat were raised there last year as against ninety-five millions the year previous, shows that the tiller of the soil in Central Canada is making money and it is safe to say that he is making more money than can be made anywhere else on the Continent in the growing of grains. He gets good prices, he has a sure and a heavy crop, he enjoys splendid railway privileges, and he has also the advantages of schools and churches and such other social life as may be found anywhere. It is difficult to say what district is the best. Some are preferred to others because there are friends already established. The Grand Trunk Pacific, on its way across the Continent, is opening up a splendid tract of land, which is being taken up rapidly. The other railways —the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern are extending branch lines into parts inaccessible a couple of years ago. With a perfect network of railways covering a large area of the agricultural lands it is not difficult to secure a location. Any agent of the Canadian Government will be pleased to render you assistance by advice and suggestion, and a good plan is to write or call upon him. The Government has located these agents at convenient points throughout the States, and their offices are well equipped with a full supply of maps and literature.

The Gentle Game.

Knicker—Did he set foot where man never trod before?

Bocker—Yes, he kicked another player on the skull.

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca-Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

Applause is only the clacking of tongues. Self-respect is better than fame.—Antoninus.

Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes. Relieved By Murine Eye Remedy. Try Murine For Your Eye Troubles. You Will Like Murine. It Soothes. 50c at Your Druggists. Write For Eye Books. Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

A genius is a man who tries to borrow money—and gets it.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Sick kidneys give unmistakable signals of distress. Too frequent or scanty urinary passages, backache, headache and dizzy spells tell of disordered kidneys. Neglect of these warnings may prove fatal. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure sick kidneys.

"Every Picture Tells A Story"

Mrs. M. A. Gamblin, Russellville, Ark., says: "I was in such bad shape from kidney disease that I gave up hope of my recovery. I could rest neither night or day, the pains in my back nearly driving me frantic. There were decided dropsical symptoms such as swelling of my feet and ankles and my heart palpitated violently. After doctoring without benefit, I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and when I had used two boxes I was as well as ever."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

No one need speak of monotony if only they just look around for another's wants.—Royston.

SKIN HUMOR 25 YEARS

"Cuticura did wonders for me. For twenty-five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, so even to my wife, I became an object of dread. At large expense I consulted the most able doctors far and near. Their treatment was of no avail, nor was that of the —— Hospital, during six months' efforts. I suffered on and concluded there was no help for me this side of the grave. Then I heard of some one who had been cured by Cuticura Remedies and thought that a trial could do no harm. In a surprisingly short time I was completely cured. S. P. Keyes, 147 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Oct. 12, '09."

Face Covered with Pimples

"I congratulate Cuticura upon my speedy recovery from pimples which covered my face. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent for ten days and my face cleared and I am perfectly well. I had tried doctors for several months but got no results. Wm. J. Sadlier, 1614 Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, May 1, 1909."

Some animals multiply rapidly and some snakes are adders.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

How we dislike the dentist who spares no pains.

Libby's Food Products

Are Best For Your Table

Because they are made of the choicest materials and guaranteed to be absolutely pure.

Libby's Veal Loaf makes a delightful dish for luncheon, and you will find Libby's

Vienna Sausage
Corned Beef
Pork and Beans
Evaporated Milk

equally tempting for any meal.

Have a supply of Libby's in the house and you will always be prepared for an extra guest.

You can buy Libby's at all grocer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

Marjorie and the Moon

By Edith S. Speed

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"It is no use asking mother. She will not give her consent," whispered Marjorie as they stood together in the summer house. "She insists that I wait at least eight years before I marry."

Philip Drayton smiled down at her earnest little face.

"But your mother was only twenty when she was married," he said.

"Yes, I know, Phil; but she says I am too young."

"Then we shall have to elope."

"Elope! Mother would never forgive me."

"Oh, yes she would; she would be angry for a little while; but would soon make up. I can't wait eight years for a home and you, Marjorie," he pleaded. "Leave it to me and everything will be all right."

"But, Phil, is there no other way?"

"I am afraid not," he answered. "I will have my boat at the landing tomorrow night and we will cross the bay to Willow Point, where the minister will marry us."

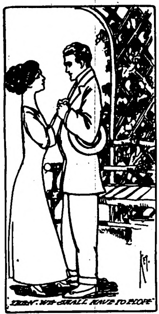
"Oh, won't it be romantic!" said Marjorie. "It will be moonlight and I will wear my white dress and my white hat with the pink roses that you like so well."

The moonlight shining through the vines brought out the gold lights in the girl's pretty hair. On the hand that lay in Phil's sparkled a little ring. He reverently kissed her.

"I wish your mother could attend your wedding," he continued after a silence, "but she will not consent, and eight years is too long to wait."

All the next day Marjorie Brant sang as she worked. Upstairs, on her bed, lay the white dress and white hat. In the closet was the suit case with her dainty belongings, packed for the first time without her mother's supervision. Now and then she ran up and tried on the hat, laughing at herself in the mirror and picturing Phil's face when he should see her.

"If you are going upstairs again," her mother called from the kitchen, "will you close the windows? There is a cloud in the west, which means wind."



"THEN WE SHALL HAVE TO ELOPE"

But Marjorie, excitedly combing out her curls in preparation for the wedding coiffure, forgot the injunction until the flapping of the curtains brought her out of her dreams.

"Did you shut the windows?" her mother called to her.

"No, but I will," answered the girl.

Marjorie could hear the roar of the wind and the lashing of the waves, and knew that they could not cross the bay that night. She slowly continued her dressing, wondering how they would get to Willow Point.

She helped her mother with dinner, but ate little.

"Don't you feel well?" asked her father.

"I am all right, but I am not hungry," she replied.

Marjorie was to meet Phil at eight o'clock. At 7:30 she went upstairs. In the darkness she pressed her face against the window. She could see nothing; the moon was hidden behind the clouds.

Wrappings a shawl about her, she stealthily descended the stairs and went out by the side door. Her light figure bent to the wind as she sped down the path.

"Phil," she called softly.

Then she felt his arms about her. "Where is your hat?" he asked. "We can't go in a boat; so we will drive. I have brought blankets; you won't be cold."

Marjorie slipped out of his arms.

"I haven't any bag. I am not going, Phil."

"Not going!" he exclaimed. "Why not?"

"Oh, I couldn't go on such a night. Who ever heard of running away and getting married on a dark night?"

"What has the weather to do with our happiness?" he asked gently. "Don't you love me, Marjorie?"

"Yes," she whispered, then falteringly continued. "It was all going to be so beautiful, the moonlight and the water—and now there isn't any moon. When it grew so dark and windy, I felt that even the elements were against us and I was not doing the ents who have been so kind; so I came out to tell you. Oh, Phil," she sobbed. "I don't know what to do."

"My poor little girl," he said. "I don't believe I should run away with you. I am going into the house to ask your father and mother to let me marry you."

"Phil."

"I can't go home without knowing something certain. Come."

As the two young people entered the sitting room Marjorie's father and mother stared at them in astonishment. The girl, cold and wind blown, slipped into a chair. Phil walked up to the table.

"Sit down, won't you?" asked Mr. Brant, hesitating, as he looked at the young man's stern face.

"No," said Phil, "I'll stand. Marjorie and I were going to run away."

"Run away!" exclaimed Mrs. Brant and her husband's fist came down on the table heavily. But as Phil told of his love, the older man gazed at him intently, visions of his own youth and courtship stirring him deeply. When Phil had finished he said:

"I understand that if it had not been windy tonight and Marjorie had not thought it was wrong you would have run away?"

"I think so."

"And what then?"

The young man's gaze met that of the older man's squarely.

"I should have taken care of her and kept her safe. I love her."

He was very earnest. The father seemed stirred by his uprightness and he turned to his wife. "Well, mother?"

"It is out of the question," she flared. "Marjorie is only twenty. I shall not let her get married for eight years."

"Oh, mother!"

"Yes, and by then, Marjorie, you will know your own mind."

"I do know it," pleaded the girl. "You were married when you were twenty."

"Yes; but I was older. You are only a child. Now you run up to your room."

With a despairing glance at Phil, who stood looking stern and determined, she left the room. Her mother turned to the young man.

"I thought when I consented to the engagement that you would be satisfied. Now you are trying to coax the child to run away."

"I might have taken her," was Phil's answer.

The father, noting the set mouth of the young man, perceived the necessity of a compromise.

"Perhaps we had better talk it over, mother," he said.

"No," was the firm response. "I shall not let Marjorie marry until she is twenty-eight. That is young enough."

"But we were married when we were young and have been happy."

"What we did has nothing to do with Marjorie. It is no good your taking their part; I shall not give my consent."

Her husband saw that it was useless to argue, and held out his hand to Phil.

"I guess we shall have to do what mother thinks best. After all, she is right."

He accompanied Phil to the door. The wind had abated and through the scurry of clouds the moon shone brightly. The young man stood looking at it for a moment then stiffly said: "Good-by," and went down the path. The horse's hoofs had died away in the distance when the father returned to the sitting room.

As Phil drove slowly homeward, he moodily gazed out upon the night. The vagrant wind caressed his cheek and the salt air filled his nostrils. The little white spire of the church in Willow Point silently beckoned to him in the moonlight.

Suddenly his horse reared and came to a sudden stop.

"Marjorie!" he exclaimed as the girl stepped to the side of the carriage.

She laughed nervously, as she climbed in beside him.

"Quick!" she urged. "Here is my bag. They are arguing in the sitting room. I took the short cut across the lots. They will not discover that I am gone for awhile, and, oh, Phil, I climbed down the grape arbor!"

He urged the horse to a run with one hand while with the other he tucked the blanket around her.

"I can't believe it!" he said as she nestled close to him. "I can't believe that you are really here."

"Well," said the girl, "father was almost ready to give in and mother will soon make up, she always does, and I wasn't going to wait until I was twenty-eight to get married, Phil—especially after I looked out of my window and saw that glorious moon—our moon."

Following Illustrious Example.

If your best girl will not see you
  When you wish to make a call,
Issue then an exhortation
  To the human family all.
Say you trust there won't be slaughter
  And you deprecate with care
Any war between the sexes
  On account of the affair.

If your debtor will not see you
  When you call to get your cash,
Hope that creditors and debtors
  Will do nothing that is rash.
Trumpet to the earth's four corners
  That you pray no ill may bode
And there may not be a class war
  From the private episode.

—McLandburghe Wilson, in New York Sun.

Both Spiny.

"So you are a vegetarian now?"

"Yep."

"Don't you miss the flesh pots?"

"Not at all. Every flesh food has its vegetable counterpart. Cactus, for instance, is an excellent substitute for

---

POULTRY NOTES.

The profitable hen is both industrious and happy.

A variety of grain is always better than a steady diet of one kind.

Many a guinea fowl has passed for prairie chicken upon stylish hotel tables.

Chickens should not be kept inside the house during bright, sunshiny weather.

The incubator catalogues are almost certain to bring on acute attacks of chicken fever.

The only way to tell which of your hens are paying their way is by the use of trap nests.

Many a poultry disease traces its origin to improper ventilation or lack of protection from the weather.

Leg bands are not expensive and at the same time they are a great convenience in marking poultry.

When the brooder chicks seem very thirsty, wild for water, let them drink and feed very lightly while so feverish.

The average egg record for all the pullets and hens in the United States would probably not be 75 eggs in a year.

Have everything convenient. Steps saved in the care of poultry will mean that much less labor. Labor costs money.

Cook some beans or peas, mix them with wheat bran and feed twice a week and see if you don't get a lot more eggs.

It is perfectly natural for chickens to run at large, and, if the weather be suitable they are much stronger for doing so.

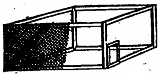
Many a setting of eggs has been spoiled by making the nest on the floor where the wind can come up through the cracks under the old mother hen.

A hen should not be set on more than fifteen eggs. The writer has always made much better success by using 13 eggs to a hen unless she is unusually large. If given too many eggs hens are sure to break some trying to cover all.

WIRE NETTING CHICKEN COOP

Excellent Pen Can Be Made by Tacking Material to Wooden Frame—Easily Moved About.

A splendid movable coop for small chickens is made by tacking wire netting onto a wooden frame. My coop is eight by twelve feet and four feet high. It is covered with close woven poultry netting. The wooden strips are two inches square, says a writer in an exchange. The frame as shown requires bracing unless the poultry netting is made diamond mesh and drawn very tight. The door is made by tacking a piece of netting over a light frame. It is easily moved about and the chickens can have fresh ground every day. It will hold fifty chickens and give them plenty of room for several weeks. I put a small box that is roofed over in one corner, which makes a good roost and a shelter from the rain.



Wire Chicken Coop.

RAISE MORE MARKET POULTRY

Beginner Is Advised to Join Utility Ranks and Breed Chickens for Eggs and Meat.

(By MICHAEL K. BOYER.)

It has been asked, will the fancier eventually be driven to the wall by the progress made in growing market poultry? Certainly not. We need fanciers—real fanciers. We want men to create breeds and to perfect the old ones. But the speculator and huckster is fast seeing his finish.

The man with a string of breeds is not a fancier. He is a speculator. It would be next to impossible for him to give each of these breeds his best attention. To thoroughly know a breed, and to get out of it all that is good in it would require an ordinary life time.

Amateur fanciers will often buy culls from a breed well advertised and then advertise eggs for hatching from so and so's strain. The man is a worse enemy of the fancier than the man who breeds dunghill fowls.

A wonderful interest has sprung up in poultry matters. Large sums of money are being invested, and poultry farms by the score are started.

These new farms are on the lookout for utility stock. The man who can advertise big egg records generally gets the trade. They want carcasses and egg records—business poultry. So the best advice to the beginner is to join the utility ranks and raise poultry and eggs for market. Then, in after years, he can, if he feels so inclined, gradually creep up into the fancier's fold. It is a step that cannot be hastily taken.

Protection for Chicks.

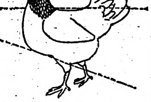
The net work of old fly screens of fine mesh wire fastened on lath frames are quickly made and more than handy to have for young chicks to be used for front of coops on warm nights and

SELECTING HEN FOR LAYING

First Essential Is to Note Whether Fowl Is Rangy or Blocky—Former Produces Eggs.

There are several things which should be considered in selecting hens for layers, shape and size, color of head furnishings, actions of the individual, pelvic bone test.

The first thing to notice concerning the shape is as to whether or not the hen is rangy or blocky. A blocky hen indicates a meat producer, while the more rangy one indicates the production of eggs. Since the development of the eggs to a large extent takes place in the region of the body below the broad part of the back that part of the body should be broader than the fore part. This gives to the body a V-shaped appearance as viewed from the top, the small part of the V lying to the front. When a hen is in heavy laying condition her abdomen is lower than the breast line. This gives the body the appearance of being V-shaped as viewed from the side along the top and bottom lines, with the small part of the V to the front. This enlargement of the body in the abdominal regions makes the back appear somewhat narrower, giving body a V-shaped appearance from the back downward on the sides as viewed from the rear. Thus a body V-shaped in three different directions indicates large productive powers.



Showing "V-Shape" From Front.

A large hen usually lays the larger eggs. This rule may not hold true if she happens to be a heavy producer for then the tendency is to produce smaller eggs. With such fowls as the leghorns, whose tendency is to lay smaller eggs, the selection should be for large size of body rather than small.

A good layer is longer in body, neck and legs than a meat-producing hen. She stands up well and has a well-spread tail.

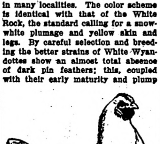
Immediately below the tail at the end of side pieces of the back are two somewhat bony protuberances. These are called the pelvic or "lay" bones, and are just above the vent. When an egg is laid these bones must be forced apart to allow its free passage. When these bones are soft and pliable and spread sufficiently to allow three fingers to be placed between them it is an indication that the hen is laying. If they are hard and bony, and close together, the hen would not be considered as laying at that time.

To sum up, an ideal laying hen should conform as nearly as possible to the following: She must be healthy, comb, wattles and face red in color, eye bright and lustrous, neck not short but rather medium to long, breast broad, long and sloping upward, back long and broad, abdomen wide and deeper than breast, shanks well spread and rather long, V-shaped in three ways as indicated above.

GOOD WHITE WYANDOTTE HEN

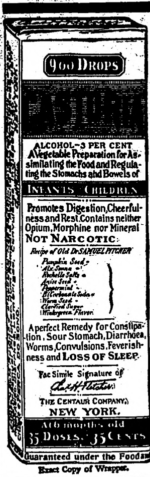
Undoubtedly Strongest Competitor of Plymouth Rock—Excellent Layers and Good Broilers.

The Wyandotte is undoubtedly the strongest competitor of the Plymouth Rock, which it has not as yet eclipsed, but is running it a neck-and-neck race in many localities. The color scheme is identical with that of the White Rock, the standard calling for a snow-white plumage and yellow skin and legs. By careful selection and breeding the better strains of White Wyandottes show an almost total absence of dark pin feathers; this, coupled with their early maturity and plump carcass, has made a demand for the breed for broiler purposes. Unless one is breeding for high-grade exhibition specimens, the Whites come sufficiently true to answer all practical purposes. In habit they are almost identical with the Rocks, doing well in small quarters. Being also good layers, as the American class goes, the breed can be commended to the city lot fancier and to people wanting table fowl and eggs for family supplies.



White Wyandotte Hen.

Selling day-old chicks is becoming more popular each season. The little fellows can be shipped a considerable



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES – 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

FREE IRRIGATOR'S HAND-BOOK Very valuable work just published. 100 pages, 50,000 words. Actual experience in Twin Falls Country, Idaho. Book worth $1.00. Send names of five or more friends interested in irrigation and receive book FREE. H. L. Hollister & Co., 204 La Salle St., Chicago

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 27–1910.

Work While You Sleep

Millions of people have CASCARETS do Health work for them. If you have never tried this great health maker—Get a 10c box—and you will never use any other bowel medicine.

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

25,000,000 Acres of Colorado Farm Land at $6.50 up to $20.00

The eastern half of Colorado is vast country of good soil, on which Durum and Turkey wheat grows 30 to 40 bushels per acre. Do you want some of this land at an average price between $6.50 and $20.00?

It yields 75 to 150 bushels of potatoes, can your farm do that well?

You can harvest 20 to 35 bushels of barley and cut seven to fifteen tons of flax. Why, you can own a little empire out in this splendid highland of high health by selling your present place and getting one ten times as big with the money.

Go to Colorado and Strike It Rich

Almost every foot of ground is a good mine—an agricultural mine. The Rock Island Lines have no land to sell you—just facts to tell you about prospects better than you now enjoy—where you can be more prosperous and out of your prosperity help increase its freight earnings. It will pay the Rock Island only to get you on a good farm because you can't be a shipper if you don't succeed.

See the Colorado Rockies

this summer. Take a real vacation and see the wonderful cheap lands along the Rock Island Lines on the way. It's your chance. Don't miss it.

Low excursion fares every day to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, with long return limits.

Write for the right information, and also find how little it will cost to make the trip.

L. M. ALLEN, Passenger Traffic Manager
236 La Salle Station, Chicago

Rock Island

Think of Last Summer—

You can remember days when the heat inside your kitchen was so great you could hardly bear it. With the right stove you would have made a better hostess. Save your health. Don't put up with the drudgery of a coal range. You can have a clean, cool, pleasant kitchen. The does away with all drudgery of cooking. Why should you be a slave to a coal range when you can have an Oil Cook-Stove that is cheaper than coal, cleaner than coal, doesn't "smell," doesn't smoke, lights instantly, can be put out instantly, leaves no ashes, and doesn't heat the kitchen. With one of these stoves you can boil, bake or roast the most elaborate dinner. You can change from a slow to a quick fire, or the other way about, by simply turning a wick. Apply a match, and instantly the heat from an intense blue flame shoots upward through the turquoise-blue enamel chimneys to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven—but nowhere else. The stove has every convenience that can be thought of: Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping food and dishes hot, drop shelves to hold coffee or teapots, towel rack; in fact every convenience possible.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive.

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Every dealer everywhere. If not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the Standard Oil Company

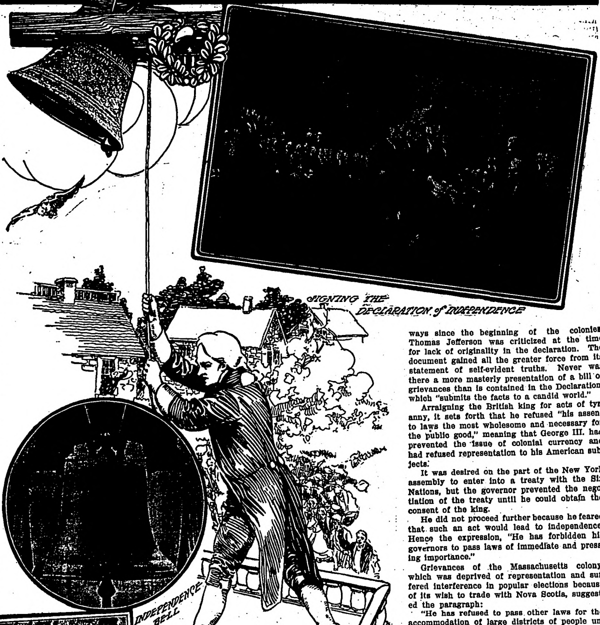
OUR DECLARATION of INDEPENDENCE

THE IMMORTAL instrument which was signed by John Hancock on July 4, 1776, has meant more than the growth and development of an independent nation on this side of the Atlantic. It was in itself the re-enactment of the greatest bill of human rights ever penned, which received the signet of an unwilling king at Runnymede, and the birth of constitutional liberty. In these days of peace and plenty the Fourth of July is given to "salutes of cannon and the ringing of bells and to the feu de joie," with variations, as John Adams predicted that it would be, yet the observance of the Fourth as an occasion for recalling memories past and giving thanks for the deeds of the patriot forefathers is sporadic rather than general in the United States. The Declaration of Independence is not read from the rostrum, as it once was in every community and the orators to the links have gone.

So much has been taken here as a matter of course that it seems hard to realize that this anniversary is celebrated in the very England from which liberty was wrested and that observances of it are officially ordered in many lands beyond the seas. The Fourth of July has become international in scope, for it has changed the governments of nations whose capitals are far from Independence hall. So widespread have its effects become as studied in the light of the present day that in order to get the true value of all that the declaration signifies to the world in 1910 it is necessary to go back to the very beginning of American liberty.

Had not the ideas of government held by the colonists been essentially British there would probably never have been any Declaration of Independence. It is as natural for the Briton to demand his rights as it is for him to live. The War of the Revolution was largely due to the fact that the two thousand miles of water between London and the colonies caused parliament to lose sight of the ties of consanguinity and of race.

Although the original thirteen colonies were so essentially English in thought and feeling they had never actually been established by England as a national enterprise. The only one which had ever received any official aid whatever was Georgia, and that was not sufficient to carry any such feeling of dependence as is essential for the preservation of intimate colonial relations. The right to colonize the North American continent had been granted by charters from a British king. According to the feudal system, which was then rapidly becoming effaced, the king owned all the land and distributed it among various favored vassals.



SIGNING THE DECLARATION of INDEPENDENCE

INDEPENDENCE BELL

INDEPENDENCE HALL
PHILADELPHIA

The sovereign in the same way regarded the new world as if it had been won by the sword. The most extravagant ideas prevailed with regard to the wealth of the American lands. It was at one time soberly believed in England that gold and silver and precious stones could be had for the taking and that the natives were the possessors of fabulous wealth. The king gave the charters in most cases with the idea that he would profit greatly from mines which would yield enormous returns to the royal exchequer.

When the colonists came here they found it necessary to make good their titles either by peaceful bargains with the Indians or by force of arms. From the very first the spirit of independence was fostered, for fiefs which had to be maintained by constant vigilance and negotiations and by show of force did not carry with them a deep sense of obligation. Indeed, even at that early day, although for the throne the colonists entertained feelings of loyalty and devotion, a shrewd idea was abroad that the king did not really own the land which he had bestowed by his charter. The conquest of nature and of the savages begot a rugged independence which as the years went by became more and more distasteful to the authorities in England.

Yet the idea of separation from the crown was of slow growth. The forefathers maintained that they were British subjects, although not living within the realm, as indeed was specified in some of the royal charters. The Massachusetts charter, for instance, sets forth that the colonists shall be considered "as if they and every one of them were born within the realm of England." As British subjects, then, they maintained that they should be entitled to representation, and therefore each colony had its assembly, which determined upon all matters of the common weal and established rates of taxation. It was one of the principles expressed in the Magna Charta that the common council of the kingdom "was to assess an aid or to assess a scutage," and again, in 1688, it was declared by the British people, then well on their way to constitutional liberty, that "no money was to be levied for the crown without grant of parliament."

The Declaration of Rights was a forerunner of the Declaration of Independence. There is nothing more essentially British than the dictum that there shall be no taxation without representation. Of the early American statesmen only Franklin and Otis wished to have representation in the British parliament. The others considered that their own assemblies should be the legislative bodies entirely and that if any taxes were to be imposed they should be collected only with the consent of the colonial assemblies.

The question of taxation, however, did not enter into any controversies, for it was not until the middle of the eighteenth century that Great Britain, exhausted by many wars and seeking to replenish the national treasury, sought extraordinary means for raising revenue and her ministers proposed that the colonies, which had been growing in wealth and importance, should be made to contribute to the impoverished exchequer. The French and Indian war had shown the power of the colonies and their force and had given a very definite idea of their growing wealth and importance.

Having reached the decision to tax the colonies, the ministry did not spend any time in preliminaries. It was decided that parliament had the right to levy the taxes and the fact that the colonies had no representation in that body was not taken into account. Such a matter would ordinarily have been considered a subject for delicate negotiation, but, the decision to tax having once been made, no time was lost in levying it.

England had in effect been a constitutional monarchy since the signing of the Magna Charta in 1215 and in taxing the colonies not represented in the common council of the kingdom she had violated one of the oldest of the rights which every Briton claims.

Such was the situation in 1764, when the struggle began which 12 years later brought forth the Declaration of Independence, and the next year brought into being the first congress of the American colonies, which decided that the assembly had the power to fix taxes. The stamp act was the first heavy impost levied by the mother country, which provided for the stamping of various legal instruments and papers and contracts of all kinds, as well as dice and playing cards.

The news of the passage of this act roused the colonists to fury. A gallows was erected in what is now City Hall park, New York, and the British governor was hanged in effigy, and the house of Major Jones, in command of the British regiment, was sacked. Then came the rising of the "Sons of Liberty" and the raising of the liberty poles. Boston and Philadelphia were vortices of the storm. So emphatic was the protest that much of the act was repealed and duties were established on tea, which accounted for the sudden rain of tea in Boston harbor. Then came the burning words of Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death!" before the Virginia in 1773. The year later brought the promulgation of the "Declaration of Rights and Privileges," in which it was declared that every man had "the right to" life, liberty and property and that most ancient right granted at Runnymede, trial by his "peers of the vicinage."

Throughout all this time of storm and strain the protests were made as British subjects, and that congress which met in Carpenter's hall in 1774 was still loyal to the crown. It petitioned the king, remonstrated with parliament and appealed to their brethren in England. Then came Lexington and Concord. The congress of 1775 made provisions for an army, with Washington as commander, and still petitioned. Its petition was refused and mercenaries were hired from petty German princes to—quoting the words of Lossing—"butcher British subjects for asserting the rights of British subjects."

Richard Henry Lee of Virginia offered the independence resolution in June, 1776, and a committee was appointed to draft the declaration, consisting of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston. Jefferson wrote the document and alterations were made principally at the suggestion of Franklin and Adams. The paper was submitted to congress on June 28. It was laid on the table until July 1, when nine colonies voted in favor of it.

The independence resolution was actually adopted on July 2 and promulgated to the world on July 4, when John Hancock of Massachusetts affixed to it his bold signature.

The other members of the congress did not sign it until August 2, and the impressive scene connected with the signing was not witnessed until nearly a month later, although it is popularly associated with the Fourth of July.

Centuries of the progress of the rights of man bear witness in the Declaration. That "all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," was not new, for it was recognized at Sinai. That governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed had been stated and restated in many ways since the beginning of the colonies. Thomas Jefferson was criticized at the time for lack of originality in the declaration. The document gained all the greater force from its statement of self-evident truths. Never was there a more masterly presentation of a bill of grievances than is contained in the Declaration, which "submits the facts to a candid world."

Arraigning the British king for acts of tyranny, it sets forth that he refused "his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good," meaning that George III. had prevented the issue of colonial currency and had refused representation to his American subjects.

It was desired on the part of the New York assembly to enter into a treaty with the Six Nations, but the governor prevented the negotiation of the treaty until he could obtain the consent of the king.

He did not proceed further because he feared that such an act would lead to independence. Hence the expression, "He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance."

Grievances of the Massachusetts colony, which was deprived of representation and suffered interference in popular elections because of its wish to trade with Nova Scotia, suggested the paragraph:

"He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people unless those people should relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only."

To further humble the Massachusetts colony and to punish the participants in the tea party of 1773 the assembly was called in Salem, and not in Boston. Hence the words of the document, "He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the depository of their public records."

Massachusetts colony and others had adopted resolutions in their assemblies that there should be no taxation without the consent of the governed. The Massachusetts assembly was asked to rescind its resolution in 1768 and on its refusal to do so was dissolved. The assemblies of Virginia and North Carolina met the same fate. This state of affairs is summed up in the Declaration in the words, "He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing with much firmness his invasion on the rights of the people."

The Declaration protests against the judges being dependent on the will of the king for their salaries, and, indeed, in some of the colonies many of the judges had been impeached for declaring that they would receive their salaries from the royal treasury.

Graphically the authors of the document tell how the erection of a multitude of new offices had impoverished the country, referring to the collectors appointed to carry out the provisions of the stamp act. The quartering of troops in times of peace was a substantial grievance complained of, for the king insisted on retaining British regiments here after the French and Indian war at the expense of the colonists, ostensibly for defense but in reality to suppress a growing democracy.

The words, "He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power," refer to the position taken by General Gage, who, with several regiments of British troops, was in Boston. By order of the king he had been made superior to the civil government.

Here and there through the colonies Americans had been killed in altercations with British soldiers, who were subsequently put on trial and acquitted. The Declaration accuses the king of quartering large bodies of armed troops and of "protecting them by mock trial from punishment for any murders which they may commit."

Such were the principles enunciated in the Declaration, and how well they were sustained by the arbitrament of war the world knows. The nation began celebrating the glorious Fourth from the very beginning. Salutes of 13 cannon were fired by the army in 1777, and the new republic was pledged in wine.

West Point saw a significant celebration in 1779, when General Washington issued a pardon for all prisoners in the army under sentence of death. The last celebration of the army of the Revolution as such took place on both shores of the Hudson river and a grand salute was fired.

More of the nature of a festival dominated the Fourth after 1783, for then came parades, free dinners, toasts, the reading of the Declaration in public by citizens and more and more the participation of the younger generation. Dignity and solemnity marked these early celebrations and eloquent speeches were made.

The Fourth is a statutory holiday in every state and its fame has gone beyond the seas.

AROUND THE BASES

"Hurry! It's the lucky seventh!" What city, either major or minor league, does not claim the seventh inning as its luckiest period at bat? Few if any.

Many fans actually believe that their team will turn around and win a tight game in that period. It has become a real "baseball phrase." It takes its rank from such trite expressions as "You can hit it, old boy," and "Well, it's our day to win."

In Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Columbus, Milwaukee, Memphis, New Orleans, Des Moines, Indianapolis, South Bend, and all the seventh is regarded by the fans and even the majority of the players, as the time to do the killing. It is in the seventh that the fans become tense, and the players grit their teeth; it is the seventh that the boys perched on trees and telegraph poles yell out: "Gee, it's de seventh now."

John Clarkson, in a fanning bee at Bay City, Mich., fully fifteen years ago spoke casually of the "lucky seventh." Ted Sullivan, known as a baseball leader since the seventies, can't remember when it first sprung up. It antedated Tim Murnane's memory, and "Tim" can go back scores of years in the national pastime. It is an expression dear to fans.

Out on the village lots lads playing with an impromptu ball believe as firmly in the "lucky seventh" as their city brothers. If by any chance they bat 20 runs against their deadly enemy, the "Seventh Streets Giants," and win the game in the seventh they light the fire before the Penates and from that day become faithful and ardent believers in the "lucky seventh."

Many of the antics of Hughey Jennigs on the coaching lines have been construed as a system of signals for his ball players, but such is not the case. Jennings, like McAleer, does not believe in a complicated system by which to guide his team. He, too, believes that ball players should be allowed to think for themselves, and it is really on rare occasions that Jennings gives any signs. In this way he has made his team one which plays intelligent baseball. The Tiger system does not differ from that in vogue on the old Baltimore team, as a member of which Jennings got his education and made his reputation.

The only object Jennings has in the many things he does on the coaching lines is to keep his players keyed up to the highest pitch, and there is no doubt that he accomplishes this. In fact, there is something about Jennings' coaching which thrills even the hostile crowds.

He seems to instill confidence into his batters, makes his fielders hustle with his yells from the bench, and has not a man on his team who is not at all times inspired with his confidence and dash. The every movement of Jennings is that of a hustler, and his players have adopted his style. There is never any lagging coming or going to their positions. It's hustle with Jennings at all times, and to this does he owe much of his success and the game much of its popularity. Take a hustling team, even when it loses it gives the spectators a run for their money, and this to a certain extent explains the fact that the Tigers are a great drawing card.

Baseball is a national institution. It's about the only sporting game we have left in which the people have absolute confidence. It's almost the only game which the betting has not spoiled. It is the only professional game in the world where the players—hired men, every one of 'em—play with the spirit and the snap and the dash of amateurs who really want to win. When baseball takes on the taint of the gamblers' money its days will be numbered, but the game has come out clean so far and long may it continue in the same way.

Baseball is a national benefaction. It takes a lot of men out of their offices stuffy afternoons and makes them breathe fresh air and get a little healthy exercise for their vocal chords. A man was meant to yell once in a while. He was meant to jump up and down and bang his neighbor's straw hat down over his ears and let out a few healthy sentiments when the umpire—poor, blind old man—misses that third strike by a mile and calls it a ball when every man with eyes in his head knows the batter is out.

Thirty years ago we counted baseball spectators by the hundred. Only a little while before they could be counted by the score. About ten years ago we began to count spectators by the thousand. It has gone to the million mark now. All records are completely upset, and are likely not only to remain so, but to be worse upset.

Millions can be accommodated now where there was only room for hundreds 30 years ago.

Baseball players' bats differ in size and shape as much as the players do in physique. And the strangest part of it is that many of the big fellows use a small, well-shaped war club, while a couple of "rabbits" wield something resembling a wagon tongue. An instance of this is the woodpile that "Rebel" Oakes, a former Cincinnati star, but now with the Cardinals, uses. A man can scarcely imagine such a little fellow swinging so large and heavy a bat as Oakes does. The opposite side of the case is presented by Bresnahan, who, while large in stature, hits with a reasonably small club.

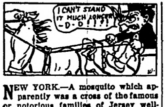
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1910. NO. 15.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Mosquito Gets Credit for a Runaway



I CAN'T STAND IT MUCH LONGER -D-D!!?!

NEW YORK.—A mosquito which apparently was a cross of the famous or notorious families of Jersey well-borers and Staten Island rock-drillers, saw George Gordon's nose, buzzed a little song about "Oh, for a pasture new!" and swept down upon the nose. The nose and George were at that moment behind a horse that George was driving.

Now, Gordon had had all he could do to manage that skittish steed before the advent of the insect. When he felt the first jab of the skeeter's surgical scissors George started to knock the squatter off his nasal territory. But he restrained his hand, for in that instant he remembered that he needed both hands to handle the fractious horse.

And there was George in a dilemma equal to that ancient one that concerned a devil and a deep sea. If he didn't knock that mosquito off his nose he'd lose his life blood, but if he took a hand from the reins to deliver that knockout swing away would go his bad-tempered horse!

Gordon shook his head violently and blew his breath toward the mosquito to dislodge it, but all to no purpose. The insect held on and just bored and bored. Gordon gritted his teeth and remembered the story he had read in school about the Spartan. But what was a mere fox gnawing at a boy's vitals to a real, war-size Jersey mosquito sinking an artesian well in a man's nose!

George could stand it no longer. Up went one hand in a savage sweep. It missed the mosquito. Forgetting all except his desire for vengeance, George swung with the other hand.

And as the skeeter buzzed 'Ha, ha!" the horse, freed from control, bolted. Perhaps the wind created by the speed blew the mosquito off Gordon's nose. At any rate the pest vanished. Just as Gordon grabbed the reins and started to saw on the bit a wheel struck a stone and out he shot. He landed bruised and stunned at the side of the road.

Dr. Frederick T. Witte, who was passing in his auto, got out, revived Gordon and took him home in his machine. When they arrived at the Gordon domicile, lo! there was the runaway horse standing quietly at the stable door.

How a Bride's Roses Led Her to Tears

IT STAYS RIGHT THERE !
WHY WILLIE !

KANSAS CITY, MO.—When Willie Boy got married he bought his wife flowers, of course. And after the wedding Mr. Willie Boy naturally decided to preserve the flowers to look at for all time by pickling them in alcohol. That was all right—it didn't cost much, just $2 or $3—but there was a 700-mile trip before Mr. and Mrs. Willie Boy got home.

At first they decided they'd pack the treasure in the brass jardiniere "Art" sent and bring it home in the bottom of one of the trunks. Then Emaline—that's her first name—remembered that among other things it might explode and ruin her perfectly good rose-colored dress that "Doc" went crazy over before she was married, and that there was a 26-inch willow plume in the same trunk, not to speak of a pretty coat, a lavender gown, a few more hats, a couple of hundred doodads or some more clothes. So the natural consequence came. Willie Boy carried the remains.

Kansas City came, and then home; Emaline walked into the house and Willie Boy followed with the pickled once-were roses.

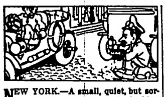
"What'll we do with 'em?" he asked.

"Why, put them in the attic, of course," Emaline answered.

Willie Boy hadn't been married very long and he wasn't independent. Still there surged into his face the blood of battle and his voice spluttered as he spoke.

"A-at-tic?" he asked. "Will we? We won't. I carried those things 700 miles, and if they're worth carrying that far they're worth looking at, even if I don't think they amount to much. Attic nothing. Mantel, that's where they're going, understand—mantel. Hear me?"

Sorrowful Face Due to Other Troubles



NEW YORK.—A small, quiet, but sorrowful if not disgusted looking man sat by the side of a medium-sized automobile that was drawn out of the road as a large touring car came along, driven by a man with an interrogatory aspect. The man in the touring car had seen that auto every time he passed that day, so he slowed up and leaned over:

"How long have you been here?"

"Several hours."

"Can't you find out what the matter is?"

"No."

"Inlet valve all right?"

"Yes."

"Trouble with spark plug?"

"Think not."

"How are your batteries?"

"O. K."

"Haven't got a short circuit, have you?"

"Oh, no."

"How about the cam shaft?"

"Grand."

"Have you tightened your connecting rods, examined your clutches and gone over the differentials?"

"Yes, yes."

The man in the touring car paused a moment and then, looking at the stranger by the roadside, said at last: "What's the matter with that machine of yours?"

"There isn't anything the matter with this machine; but since noon my wife has been in that house over there kissing her sister's first baby good-by. When she gets through, if you are not more than a thousand miles away and will leave our address, I will telegraph or cable the glad news."

Eat Muskrat, Maybe; Farm in Chicago

OUR STEWED MUSKRAT IS VERY FINE

CHICAGO.—"Loin of Chicago Grown Muskrat with Bullrush Sauce."

Bills of fare in Chicago restaurants will carry the foregoing item as a "special, fresh today" entree if the plans of three pioneer "muskrat farmers" culminate in success.

The first muskrat farm has been started. Its products are to be food and fur. Its market will be Chicago, as a beginning at least, but success may broaden its scope. Mark Gelder, loan merchant, 1732 South State street; Jack Eck, painter, 348 Twenty-sixth street, and John Horan, Willow Springs, are the proprietors of the farm. Its location is in the "Sag" in the towns of Worth and Palos, 20 miles southwest of Chicago. It comprises 190 acres, is more than a mile long and consists of the fairest stretch of swamps and shallow, little lakes to be found in this section of the country. It already has a large muskrat population.

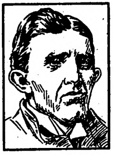
The birth of the farm came when Gelder signed a lease for the land with Mrs. Catherine Rawlings, its owner, for a term of 15 years, starting on April 16, at a rental of $200 a year in advance.

The farm may figure as a worthy champion in the fight against the high cost of living. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson recently recommended the meat of muskrats as a food. He emphasized its cheapness and its good qualities, including flavor and nutritious value. The farm may enable many people to follow his advice.

"Our first idea was just to trap for the furs," said Gelder, "but knowing muskrats were good to eat, we decided to investigate conditions and try to promote muskrats as a popular article of diet. We have strong hopes of success, for a trial will convince people that the meat of the muskrat is good."

PROMINENT PEOPLE

HAMILTON NEW "AIR KING"



In these days of startling feats in the air the people are prepared for almost anything. A few days ago Glenn Curtiss boarded his biplane in Albany and in a remarkably short time landed his craft in New York city. He broke some records and amazed thousands with the ease with which he sailed through the air and kept up with a fast train.

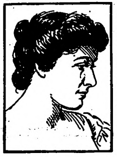
Then came Charles Hamilton. This daring aviator got up early one morning stepped into his aerial buggy and enjoyed a little drive over to Philadelphia. Thousands were out to see him start from Governor's island, but more thousands in Quakerdom saw him step nimbly from the aircraft after circling around the aviation field and cutting up several didoes.

After he had delivered a letter from Mayor Gaynor to the mayor of Philadelphia and a letter from Governor Hughes to the governor of Pennsylvania Hamilton enjoyed luncheon in Philadelphia, tightened up a few bolts on his buggy shafts, gave the air horse a drink of gasoline, bowed to the Philadelphians and started on his return to New York city.

The return trip wasn't as easily accomplished as the one going, but after surmounting some unexpected difficulties Mr. Hamilton reached the starting point and accomplished one of the things that has been predicted for airships in the last few years—an inter-city flight.

Hamilton made one of the fast engines on the Pennsylvania railroad that was pulling a pilot train hump to keep up with him and smashed a few more records. This aviator has just recently come into prominence among those who are now engaged in flying the skies, but those who know him say he promises to be a leader in the sport.

HEEDS CALL OF THE STAGE



Which would you rather do, darn socks, mend your husband's shirts, sew on buttons and attend to the duties of a nice home, or appear on the stage in a great play and hear the applause of hundreds as you scored a big hit?

It is safe to say that nine out of ten women would prefer the stage. Margaret Illington was confident seven months ago that she would like to darn socks. She already was a great actress. She said she didn't like it. She was an Illinois girl, and when she went on the stage used Bloomington, her birthplace, and Illinois in making up the name "Illington." She was married to Daniel Frohman, one of the great men in the theatrical world. They just agreed to disagree and Mrs. Frohman went to Reno, Nev., now more famous because of the Jeffries and Johnson fight, procured a divorce and two minutes and thirty-eight seconds after obtaining the decree was married to Edward J. Bowes, a wealthy real estate dealer.

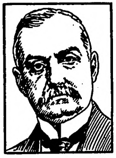
Mr. Frohman didn't want a wife to darn socks; he wanted a great actress.

With Mr. Bowes the actress thought she would be able to enjoy the home life she craved, and if reports are true Miss Illington would not be returning to the stage but would keep on darning socks. It is the husband who shoulders the blame. He says it was too great a waste of talent for Miss Illington to wield the darning needle.

"Socks, eh!" exclaimed Mr. Bowes. "That's right; she can darn 'em. Nary a hole in these o' mine. And when she goes out on the road I'll go along when I can. She'll have her own private car and can take the socks along. Haw, haw, haw."

Mr. Bowes will spend about $50,000 in launching his wife's new venture. That much cash would pay for darning the holes of a whole lot of socks.

PREDICTS MONEY HEPTARCHY



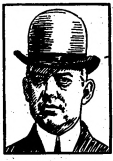
Thomas Fortune Ryan of Virginia and New York, who has a few dollars stored away for a rainy day himself, has divided what he regards as the present financial monarchy of America, if not of the world, into a heptarchy, which means that the world of money is to be governed by seven kings.

He declared J. Pierpont Morgan to be supreme monarch of the existing money empire, and said that the monarch will have no successor, but that his kingdom will be divided among seven young financiers now in training in New York city.

The men he named to form the heptarchy are J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and Henry P. Davidson, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Otto H. Kahn and Mortimer L. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; John B. Dennis of Blair & Co. ;George F. Baker, Jr., of the First National bank, and James Stillman, Jr., of the National City bank, all of New York.

Mr. Ryan made this prediction as he was about to sail for Europe, a voyage which he says was not to be taken because he is on the verge of collapse, but for pleasure mixed with business. Some time ago Mr. Ryan withdrew from many of the corporations in which he was interested and since then he says he has slept like a baby and hasn't seen his physician for four months.

PARR GETS A BIG REWARD



How would you like to earn a reward of $100,000? Don't you think it would be a pleasure to you if Uncle Sam would place in your hand ten crisp $10,000 bills and say: "Here, my good and faithful servant, is a reward for a duty well done?" Pretty nice, eh?

This is what will befall Richard Parr, a customs deputy at New York, who assisted the government in recovering $2,000,000 in the sugar underweight frauds. Parr hasn't received the money yet because the fund out of which Uncle Sam pays such rewards wasn't large enough. But he'll get it. President Taft and Secretary Mac Veagh have promised it and that's enough for Parr.

Parr discovered the secret spring on the docks of the American Sugar Refining company, by which the underweighing practise was carried on. The final discoveries of fraud were made in 1907, since which time the government has been engaged in collecting the duties out of which it had been defrauded.

"A hundred thousand dollars is not much money in New York, but I am grateful just the same," said Parr when informed of his good fortune. "I shall invest the bulk of the money in real estate. I have a wife, two sisters, two nieces and two brothers and we shall be glad to own our own home. There will be no extravagance; I have planned that.

"My plans include a vacation in the mountains and then perhaps a trip to Europe. I have been working every day for two years and am on the verge of a nervous breakdown. The vacation is more to me than the money.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Camels Are the Freight Cars of Bagdad

WASHINGTON—Some of the weekly consular and trade reports received in Washington from representatives of the United tates in foreign lands tell of interesting things in other countries. Among those recently received was a report on the use of camels as freighters. According to this report nearly 90,000 camels are used in the villayet of Bagdad as beasts of burden and with donkeys they form the only means of carrying goods to the inland points.

Camel caravans go in "strings," seven camels to the string, with two men in charge. For a camel 450 pounds is a good load, the nack being divided into halves. A burdened camel travels two miles an hour; on long trips across the desert 12 miles a day is an average march, though swift messengers, like the mounted dromedary posts from Bagdad to Mossoul and Damascus, make forty, fifty and even more miles at a stretch.

Freight between Bagdad and inland points in Mesopotamia is commonly packed in pairs of bales, each bale weighing about 225 pounds, for the convenience of camel drivers in loading. The rates charged for carrying freight across the desert vary with conditions, being lowest when camels are cheap, labor and pasture plentiful and freight offerings none too numerous. For a common burden camel $30 is a fair price.

"Don't Smoke," Moral in Monkeys' Death

FINE TOBACCO, EH CHICO ?
NONE BETTER
TOBACCO

"CHICO," the cigarette-smoking orangoutang, which died on the United States cruiser Wilmington from the tobacco heart, is held by Yeoman Harvey L. Miller of the navy department to be the nearest "almost human" creature he has seen in his wide travels in the navy.

"Chico" was four months old, and stood two feet nine in his bare feet, as all true soldiers are measured, when he came into the navy. He was purchased by Yeoman Miller at Tamatave, Madagascar, for two francs.

"Chico's" end was due to tobacco. One of the greatest pleasures of the sailors is to smoke, and, it is said, the ones that do not are either saving up to buy a library or else it is a case of "my wife won't let me." Chico" soon formed the habit of snuggling up against Yeoman Miller when he was reading or smoking. The monkey would move right into the clouds of smoke and would sniff with evident relish.

One day Yeoman Miller was writing a letter and had just lighted his pipe. The bugle called "collision quarters," and he dropped his pipe and started to the station on the run. Miller, returning to his "ditty box," which had been doing duty as a writing desk, was surprised to find the pipe almost empty. It was full when he went to quarters. He took a look about and saw all the men had their pipes. When he looked at the monkey it did not look at him in the eye as it usually did, but turned its head in a guilty manner. Yeoman Miller examined the pipe and found the marks of little sharp teeth on the reed stem.

Next day, after catching the monkey smoking his pipe again, Yeoman Miller decided that "Chico" had to have a pipe, and so he made him one from an ivory nut, with a reed stem.

Some of the young apprentices thought it was cute to see "Chico" smoke cigarettes, and they taught him the use of the "coffin nail." From then until his death he was rarely seen without one.

"Be careful, young man," said the recruiting officer, as he espied a new recruit concealing a "home-made" behind his chair, after hearing the tale of "Chico," "or you will meet the same fate as he."

Youth Suffers From Too Much Credit

FOR TAXICAB HIRE
$189.90
FOR HEVINGS SAKE

A YOUTH in Washington is carrying around in his inside pocket a piece of paper upon which this is inscribed:

"For taxicab hire, $189.90."

The youth is the son of—well, of course the conventions prohibit the use of names—but he is the son of a man useful to the nation in these parts. The useful father has just about enough funds decently to keep up his end. The son perforce insists upon extending his allowance. He has to come to dad every so often, occasioning much heartache and worry to his parent.

The other night the son was caught in the rain. He had taken a young woman and her mother to the theater and they were hastening to a street car. The rain became a downpour.

"I'll call a cab," said the young man.

The cab took them home.

"Just charge it to me," said the careless youth.

"Identification card, sir," said the chauffeur.

"What's that?"

"Our company always issues identification cards to its patrons."

"Well, I haven't one. Come to the office tomorrow and I'll pay you."

The youth scraped together the necessary 70 cents before the chauffeur appeared next day.

"By the way," he said, after he had paid, "tell your people to send me one of those identification cards, will you?"

In due time the card came. Bills were to be rendered at the end of each month, according to the polite note which accompanied the card. Forthwith the street cars lost one who had been a regular patron. Hence, the piece of paper, with the "For taxicab hire, $189.90."

It is more than likely that walking will be good for him for some time to come; and it is more than likely, too, that one of those who idly fish in the Potomac may drag up on his hook a certain card of identification.

Laundry Day for Uncle Sam's Money

WE'LL DO OUR OWN WASHIN' DEAR
U.S.
$

UNCLE SAM now has a wash day. It isn't a laundry for soiled clothing, but for good United States paper money. When some of the bills find their way back to the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington whence they came bright, crisp and new, a credit to the engraving art, they are really and truly in the "filthy lucre" class.

Now your wise old Uncle Samuel proposes to wash the bills and use them over again instead of destroying them as has been the custom.

Director J. D. Ralph is on the job watching with interest the renovator of dirty bills do its duty. The machine on trial is one invented by Frank B. Churchill and was submitted by him, along with others of different makes, for trial. It is now being demonstrated in the bureau.

The machine now in use takes bills and spreads them on a screen. This screen is revolved rapidly through a solution of soap and water, which takes off the grime. The next disc takes them through a strong solution of a disinfectant, which removes the germs. A third disc removes the traces of the other two waters and sends the bill out onto a plat ready for the "plater." The "plater" is the same roller used to press new money. It is this machine that gives new money its crispness. After the washed-out bills are run through the "plater" they are comparatively new—the ink colors having been brought out again and the dirt removed.

It is Mr. Ralph's idea that the life of a banknote will be extended about sixty per cent. by the new method. The machine which he wants will cost between $800 and $1,000. It will save from $500,000 to $1,000,000 annually.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. MINN.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

The expected has happened. A bill for old-age pensions has been introduced in the house of representatives. The introducer is William Bauchop Wilson of Blossburg, Pa., former coal miner, former international secretary of the United Mine Workers of America, who now makes a living for his ten children on a farm, when he is not lucky enough to be drawing a representative's salary, says Brooklyn Eagle. The provisions of the bill give $120 a year to each man or woman over the age of sixty-five who has neither property worth $1,500 nor an income of over $240 a year. Modesty is to be expected of an entering wedge. But Wilson's measure is too modest by half. This is a rich country. How can it expect a person over sixty-five years old to live comfortably on $120 a year? If the old-age pension in each case were fixed at, say $5,000 a year, more money would be put in circulation and anyone would have a motive for seeking longevity. Nobody would be silly enough to nurse thrift or to pursue industry any farther than would be needed to keep life going till the age of sixty-five should be reached. For that matter, why not make the age forty? This is an era of humanitarian experimentation.

The mosquito season is at hand, and New Jersey, where the objectionable insect most abounds, is moving in the matter of destroying the pest. Bayonne is one of the towns in which energetic and organized action has been taken. Infested sections are to be oiled and ditched, and it is believed that by the methods employed millions of larvae will be killed and thus grave consequences will be averted. It has been shown that combined and systematic effort, including the most scientific means of fighting the evil, can be very effective, and New Jersey, which has been a great sufferer from the ravages of the mosquito, may add vastly to health and comfort by general war aimed at exterminating the mosquito.

Is Cuba to furnish the means of safeguarding the forests and producing paper at a moderate cost? It is announced from that island that experiments in manufacturing paper from sugar-cane fiber have proved entirely successful, and that the product can be turned out at much less cost than from wood pulp. Of course the cane is what is left after the sugar has been extracted, and thus another by-product comes into play. It has also been asserted that American cornstalks may be converted into paper. As there is practically an unlimited supply of such material, making good the assertion should be a very important step in conservation.

Crossing the English channel in an airship semes to have become almost a habit. Louis Bleriot led the way nearly a year ago and was followed by Jacques de Lesseps May 21 last. Both those aviators were Frenchmen, and they flew from France to England. Now Charles Stewart Rolls, an Englishman, has made the trip from England to France and back again without a stop, and therefore holds the record in this particular line of achievement. And he did the trick in a Wright aeroplane, so America gets at least part of the credit.

Dispatches from Seattle report an almost unprecedented rush to the gold fields of Alaska. This does not look as though there were general acceptance of that story that a Scranton alchemist has discovered a method of transmuting baser materials into gold and silver, which, if actually done, would inevitably minimize the value of the yellow and white metals. In short, the modern prospector or speculator has no use for the philosopher's stone, so eagerly sought by the ancients

The movement for the devising of sanitary rules for all passenger trains and railroad stations is not aimed at the carrying operations, because it originated among them, and was suggested by Dr. W. A. Applegate, chief surgeon of the Southern railway. The railroads have always been leaders in promoting the safety and comfort of the traveling public, and they will coöperate earnestly with the United States public health and marine hospital service in combating germ diseases.

How will coming generations get their physical exercise in outdoor recreations? The motorcycle has played hob with the bicycle, and the power boat has the sailing boat and the oarsmen on the run. A tiny motor now pushes the light Indian canoe over the shallow lakes and streams, and for some the paddle is too strenuous or too slow. Shall we next see the pedestrian tuck a motor in his pocket and get over the ground without the labor of moving his feet?

M'CUMBER WINS OUT

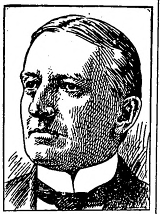
MARSHALL AND ENGERUD ARE DEFEATED FOR SENATE IN G. O. P. PRIMARIES.

INSURGENTS GET AN EVEN SPLIT

Hanna, Stalwart, and Helgeson, Insurgent, for Congress.—Johnson, Stalwart Candidate, Defeats Buchanan for Governor.

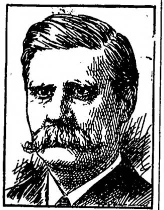
Bismarck, N. D. — Returns of the primary election are slow coming in, but enough has been heard to assure the nomination of McCumber, stalwart, for the long term senator, by a majority of at least 7,000 and Gronna, insurgent, for the short term by an even larger vote.

Hanna will lead all candidates in the number of votes received and will be returned to congress, while the fight for the other congressional seat is between Blaisdell and Haelgeson, with indications that the choice of the people will not be known until the last precinct is in.



PORTER J. McCUMBER.
U. S. Senator from North Dakota.

For governor there is no longer any question as to the nomination of C. A. Johnson, stalwart candidate for governor. Burdick, insurgent candidate, will be nominated for lieutenant governor by a large majority, while the stalwart's candidate for treasurer, Gunder Olson, will win over the present incumbent, Bickford, insurgent.

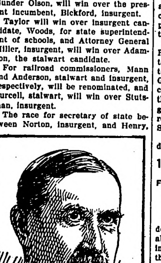


ASLE J. GRONNA.
Congressman at Large from North Dakota.

Taylor will win over insurgent candidate, Woods, for state superintendent of schools, and Attorney General Miller, insurgent, will win over Adamson, the stalwart candidate.

For railroad commissioners, Mann and Anderson, stalwart and insurgent, respectively, will be renominated, and Purcell, stalwart, will win over Stutsman, insurgent.

The race for secretary of state between Norton, insurgent, and Henry, stalwart, has been close, but at the present time it looks as though Henry will win out.



L. B. HANNA.
Congressman at Large from North Dakota.

DAILY MARKET REPORT.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, July 1.—Cattle—Steady; shade higher; beeves, $5.30@8.55; western steers, $5.40@7.25; stockers and feeders, $3.50@5.70; cows and heifers, $2.75@6.85; calves, $5.00@8.25.

Hogs—10c higher; light, $9.25@9.55; mixed, $9.10@9.50; heavy, $8.60@9.35; rough, $8.08@9; good to choice, heavy, $9@9.35; pigs, $9.20@9.75.

Sheep—Market strong; native, $2.75@4.85; western, $3.25@4.85; yearlings, $5@6; lambs, native, $4.75@8.30.

LA FOLLETTE SEES ROOSEVELT

SENATOR LEAVES COLONEL IN JUBILANT MOOD.

Declares Former President Is Greatest American Living and Is In Fighting Trim.

Oyster Bay.—Robert M. La Follette, United States senator from Wisconsin, spent two hours talking politics with Theodore Roosevelt. He left Oyster Bay wearing a broad smile.

Senator LaFollette arrived with G. E. Roe, a New York lawyer, who was formerly his law partner. Colonel Roosevelt's chauffeur was waiting for them, and whisked them away to Sagamore Hill. The senator had pulled his hat down over his eyes and tried to escape unseen. But he was caught fairly at it by a group of newspaper men. They tackled him on suspicion, although nobody recognized him, for his hat hid his famous pompadour.

"Not a word," he said. "I'm going to Sagamore Hill, but I don't want a word said about it."

When he returned, just in time to catch a train for New York, he was smiling his most expansive, persuasive smile. "It's all right, boys, he cried jovially. "The colonel says I may talk with you."

"Did we talk politics?" he replied to the first question. "We did.

"We talked of the legislation of the present session of congress, from the attitude of those members of the Republican party whom the newspapers are pleased to call insurgents."

"Can you go into details?"

"No; I prefer that they come from Sagamore Hill. I am very much pleased with the result of my visit with Colonel Roosevelt, very much pleased, indeed."

The senator paused for a moment. Suddenly the smile left his face for the first time and he said impressively:

"I want to tell you that Colonel Roosevelt is the great living American, and," he added slowly and significantly, "he is in fighting trim."

CHARLTON CASE IS HALTED

Arraignment Postponed to Await Exchanges Between Washington and Italian Government.

New York.—Porter Charlton's case now waits upon the result of exchanges between the state department at Washington and the Italian government.

His counsel, in asking that his formal arraignment be postponed, Tuesday promised that no effort would be made under habeas corpus, insanity or other proceedings to take the prisoner out of the hands of the New Jersey authorities, pending the adjourned arraignment, which after some argument, was finally set for July 8.

Meanwhile it is expected that the international aspects of the case will have adjusted themselves and decision be reached as to whether Charlton shall be delivered to the Italian authorities on extradition proceedings.

DEMANDS MILLION DAMAGES

Ida Von Claussen Files Suit Against Roosevelt and Others Charging Slander and Conspiracy.

New York.—Ida Von Claussen, once the wife of Dr. William Francis Honan, whose coming to America to sue Theodore Roosevelt and other notables was announced from Paris a few weeks ago, appeared in the county house Tuesday with a complaint which she insisted on filing in the county clerk's office.

Her complaint charges Theodore Roosevelt, Robert Bacon, ambassador to France; Charles Graves, minister to Sweden, and Mrs. Alice Wright G. Graves, his wife, with slander and conspiracy. She declares that through the machinations of these distinguished persons she was deprived of a royal marriage with Prince Eugene of Sweden as the bridegroom.

Wherefore she demands $1,000,000 damages.

1,500 IN SHIP FIRE PERIL

Four Dead, Number Seriously Injured and 400 Slightly Hurt—Result of Burning of Excursion Steamer.

La Crosse, Wis.—Four persons are dead, a number seriously injured and about 400 slightly burned in attempting to escape from the burning hulk of the excursion steamer J. S., with 1,500 passengers aboard, which caught fire Saturday night in the Mississippi river 15 miles south of here.

The story of the rescue as told is that the steamer, when it finally reached Bad Ax island, where the passengers were able to escape ashore, was burning so fiercely that only 200 of the 1,500 aboard were able to go ashore on the gangplank. The other 1,200 or 1,300 passengers were forced to leap over the rail into water four or five feet deep and wade ashore, suffering terribly until they were able to reach the main land.

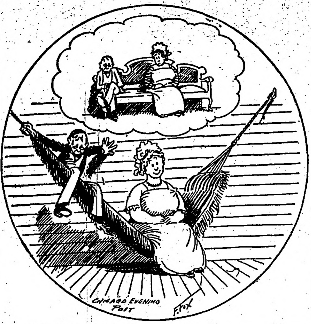
Arizona Election September 12.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Governor Sloan issued a proclamation Wednesday fixing September 12 as the date for the election of delegates to the convention which will frame a constitution for the new state of Arizona.

Rolls to Fly in America.

New York.—Charles S. Rolls, the English aviator, who flew twice across the channel a few weeks ago, has entered both the international balloon contest and the international aviation contest.

SISTER'S BASHFUL BEAU DOESN'T CALL AS OFTEN SINCE THE HAMMOCK SEASON OPENED



SENATOR J. W. DANIEL DEAD

OLDEST DEMOCRAT IN SENATE DIES AT LYNCHBURG.

Has Third Paralytic Stroke, but Cause of Death Was Cerebral Hemorrhage.

Lynchburg, Va. — John W. Daniel, senior senator from Virginia, died at the Lynchburg sanitarium Wednesday night, his death being due to a recurrence of paralysis. The immediate cause of his death was cerebral hemorrhage.

This was Senator Daniel's third paralytic stroke. He suffered the first last fall while in Philadelphia and the second in Daytona, Fla., during the winter, having gone to Florida to recuperate. He had not been in Washington for several months. Senator Daniel was sixty-seven years old.

With Senator Daniel were his wife and his son, Edward M. Daniel, and his daughter, Mrs. Fred Harper, whose husband, also here, is Senator Daniel's law partner.

The death of Senator John Warwick Daniel removes the oldest of the Democratic senators in point of service. Of the entire list he was the only one who could be said to belong to the old regime. And, as he was the oldest in service, he was one of the most conspicuous in popular favor.

New Orleans.—Samuel Douglas McEnery, United States senator from Louisiana, suddenly expired at his home here Tuesday from an attack of acute indigestion.

The senator arrived here Monday from Washington. He was seventy-three years old, and death was superinduced by old age.

The senator is survived by his wife, who was before marriage Miss Elizabeth Phillips of Monroe, Pa.; his daughter, Mrs. Warren B. Parker, and his two sons, Charles P. McEnery and Dr. Douglas W. McEnery of Washington.

In all probability Gov. Jared Y. Sanders will be chosen by the Louisiana legislature, now in session, as Senator McEnery's successor. It is thought that the leading figures in state politics have figured upon the aged senator's passing for some time, but it was not anticipated exactly at this juncture.

CONGRESS COMES TO CLOSE

Adjournment Sees Most of the Taft Program of Legislation Carried Out.

Washington.—With President Taft's legislative program practically carried out in its entirety the first regular session of the Sixty-first congress adjourned sine die Saturday night. signed the rivers and harbors bill, but sent a message to congress indicating that he had made up his mind to do so practically at the last minute of time at his disposal, so far as that measure was concerned.

Congress was warned that it must change its method of framing river and harbor improvement measures, and announcement is made that unless reforms which he suggests are carried out in future bills the withholding of executive approval will be justified, even though a rivers and harbors bill fail.

The president also signed without comment the postal savings bank bill, the omnibus public building bill, the latter carrying authorization for improvements aggregating $23,000,000, but leaving the items of appropriation to be attended to later, in connection with the regular estimates of the treasury department with respect to work authorized by congress.

Warship Hit by Lightning.

Norfolk, Va.—During a severe electric storm Tuesday night lightning struck the wireless mast on the battleship Delaware, the only American dreadnaught, completely wrecking it and causing injuries to at least one member of her crew who was knocked down a hatchway.

Grandson of Deposed King Dead.

London.—The Duke d'Alencon, grandson of King Louis Philippe, who was deposed in the revolution of 1848, died here Wednesday.

TRIUMPH FOR AMERICANS

German Campaign of Slander Against the Deutsche Vacuum Oil Company Fails.

Berlin.—The long and venomous campaign waged by German newspapers and rival industrial interests against one of the German branches of the Standard Oil company—the Deutsche Vacuum Oil company—has just been brought to a vicorious end for the Americans involved.

A well-known Hamburg newspaper for months printed such a series of attacks on the "American graft methods" alleged to have been practised by the vacuum company in the conduct of its German business that the public prosecutor of Hamburg felt constrained to make an official investigation with a view to eventual indictments. The prosecutor has now concluded his investigation, especially of the work of E. L. Quarles, American manager of the German company's sales department, and announces that no necessity exists for pursuing the inquiry further.

No evidence of anything warranting prosecution was found against Mr. Quarles, and the costs of the entire inquiry will be borne by the state.

The result of the investigation constitutes a notable triumph for American interests in Germany.

It is not the first time that Germans, finding themselves unable to compete with Americans on ordinary terms, have resorted to slander.

ROB PASSENGERS ON TRAIN

Three Bandits Escape After Raid on Oregon Short Line in Ogden, Utah.

Ogden, Utah.—Three masked bandits held up the second section of Oregon Short Line train No. 1, northbound, which left Ogden at 1:30 a. m., in the northern part of this city. All of the passengers were robbed of their valuables and the express messenger was compelled to deliver the contents of the safe. The exact amount the robbers obtained has not been ascertained. Two passengers and two trainmen were injured.

After the train had been robbed the bandits fired into the air to frighten the passengers, got into their buggy and drove away. Sheriff Wilson gathered a small posse and started in pursuit.

PICTURE SHOW RUINS EYE

Omaha Attorney's Frequent Attendance at Nickel Theater Said to Have Affected Optic.

Omaha, Neb.—Over-indulgence in moving picture shows may cost Attorney C. W. Britt of Omaha his eyesight. He went to Clarkson hospital, where an operation was performed on his right eye by Dr. Harold Gifford Sunday.

Flickering of the moving pictures attended almost nightly for two months by Mr. Britt and members of his family is said to have aggravated former eye trouble. A growth under the lid of the right eye resulted. Mr. Britt was totally blind in the right eye before going to the hospital, but hoped that the operation would restore the sight.

Curtiss May Fly Across Lake.

Chicago.—Glenn H. Curtiss, famous aviator and inventor of aeroplanes, while in Chicago said he might be one of the contestants for the Walter Darlington prize of $5,000 for the first successful flight across Lake Michigan from Chicago during the aviation meet July 2, 3 and 4.

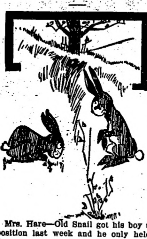
Hyde Denied New Trial.

Kansas City, Mo.—Dr. B. C. Hyde, convicted May 16 of poisoning Col. Thomas H. Swope, the millionaire philanthropist, was Wednesday denied a new trial by Judge Ralph S. Latshaw in the criminal court here.

Congressman Booker Is Robbed.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Congressman Charles F. Booker of the Fourth Missouri district was robbed here Tuesday on board a train, and he couldn't even negotiate a ham sandwich at the Union depot lunch counter.

INCOMPETENT.



Mrs. Hare—Old Snail got his boy a position last week and he only held it one day.

Mr. Hare—What was it?

Mrs. Hare—A messenger boy.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

A Teacher in the Making.

She was a popular young normal student, who had been to a party the night before, and as a consequence, was "not prepared" in the geography class.

The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "stabs" from her fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The victim brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down.

"Yes, and what else?" encouraged the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet hopelessness.

"Now you can mention others, I am sure. Just think about it."

"Tea," drawled the flute-like voice of the pretty girl, "and," puckering her forehead with an intellectual tour de force, "and laundry work."—Youth's Companion.

Wrong Angle.

"There's a bright side to everything."

"A bright side! Bah!"

"Well, there is."

"Do you mean to tell me, doctor, that there is a bright side to my having had my leg amputated?"

"Indeed, there is; and if you could put yourself in my place you could really see it."

He who commits injustice is ever made more wretched than he who suffers it.—Plato.

A "Corner"
In Comfort

For those who know the pleasure and satisfaction there is in a glass of

ICED
POSTUM

Make it as usual, dark and rich—boil it thoroughly to bring out the distinctive flavour and food value.

Cool with cracked ice, and add sugar and lemon; also a little cream if desired.

Postum is really a food-drink with the nutritive elements of the field grains. Ice it, and you have a pleasant, safe, cooling drink for summer days—an agreeable surprise for those who have never tried it.

"There's a Reason" for

POSTUM

Postum Cereal Co., Limited,
Battle Creek, Mich.

Farm School Letter

Interesting Information on Minnesota Agriculture by Our Special Correspondent.

SHORTAGE OF HAY IN MINNESOTA.

Fodder Corn Suggested by the Experiment Station as a Valuable Substitute.

Owing to the unprecedented drouth the hay crop in Minnesota is probably less than fifty per cent of a normal crop. In places it is a total failure, and the farmers are not attempting to cut their meadows. Resort must be had to other roughage to feed stock during the coming winter. The alarming reports which have reached the Minnesota Experiment Station have called out the following timely article on corn fodder as a substitute for hay:

FODDER CORN, next to clover and alfalfa hay, is the most valuable forage to be grown on the farm. It permits of early or late planting, and is harvested before the general corn crop is mature. Large yields of dry forage (3 to 7 tons per acre), or of silage (10 to 20 tons per acre), are obtained which for cattle, sheep young stock or even horses, is an excellent feed. For milch cows, it is second only to alfalfa and clover. Much could be stated about this valuable crop, but the purpose of this article is merely to advise the farmers to sow corn thickly for fodder, thus tiding over the hay shortage period and save the live stock.

A ten-acre field of corn sown for silage at the Minnesota Experiment Station.

Preparing the Ground.

Any piece of fertile land will grow the fodder. If no other land is available for the purpose, the meadow or pasture can well be spared.

Plow the land about five inches deep, and harrow as fast as plowed. Work the furrow slice back into a firm condition again with a disk, a subsubsurface roller (not a surface roller) and finally a harrow. This is necessary to prevent the rapid drying out of the furrow slice.

If sod land is used a more thorough preparation will be necessary for the stubble will act as a barrier between the subsoil and furrow slice, against the free capillary movement of the moisture upward to the seed bed. You must keep the moisture in the soil. This can only be done by proper tillage methods. In this connection the disk is imperative on sod land.

In the event, that plowing up pasture or meadow lands will make a shortage of either of these crops, no fear need be exercised, for fall rye or even spring grains, can be sown on the land to be used for spring pasturage or for hay, until another seeding is established. In short, the effort should be made to keep the live stock.

Planting.

The seed is planted in drill rows, about 3 feet six inches apart. From one bushel (56 pounds) to sixty pounds are sown per acre. When a two horse corn planter is not to be had a grain drill (not a broad-cast seeder) will do the work satisfactorily. Cover the seed cups of the drill with a piece of wood or tin so as to leave the open tubes the proper distance apart for the rows. Open the seed cups wide and test the planting. The seeds should be about two inches apart. If the seed cups do not open wide enough to permit of sowing at least one bushel per acre, re-adjust the closed ones so as to leave two adjacent cups open, thus planting double rows, or drills, 6 to 8 inches apart and about 42 inches, on center, apart. The seeds in the double rows should be from three to four inches apart, to sow the desired amount per acre. A little figuring and testing will be found necessary to determine just which cups to cover or to leave open, in order to best arrange for the marking and driving.

More fodder will be produced from the double rows, but more care is necessary in harvesting with the corn binder, especially if the corn is lodged. The experiment station, in 1900, planted fodder corn on July 12th, and harvested in the fall a good tonnage of excellent fodder. The stalks grew slender and about five feet high. When fed the animals left no stubs of stalks in the mangers.

Cultivation.

Harrow the land with a slant-tooth drag the next day after planting. Harrow again just as the corn is coming up. If the corn does not come up immediately harrow over five or six days until the corn is an inch or so high.

Cultivate shallow, after the harrowing, at least once a week, until the corn is eighteen or twenty inches high. The cultivator used should have several, but small, teeth or shovels (the "duck-bill" or "eagle-claw" type). No sulky should be used, which has the common shovels (three on a side or in each gang). They are sure to run too deep. Two and a half inches is plenty deep enough. No not neglect this harrowing or cultivation for the moisture must be kept in the soil. The culture prevents surface evaporation.

C. P. BULL,
Assistant Agriculturist, Minnesota Experiment Station.

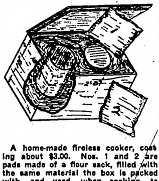
The subject of harvesting fodder corn will be treated in a subsequent article by Prof. Bull.

Fireless Cookers.

Of the many household helps and labor saving devices for women now on the market there are few which may be used to better advantage in the home than the fireless cooker. Like any other piece of machinery, to use it successfully requires thought and common sense properly combined, as well as an understanding of the principles underlying its construction.

In preparing foods requiring long, slow cooking, the use of the fireless cooker greatly diminishes the amount of fuel used and the heat in the kitchen.

A very simple heat-retention cooker may be constructed out of a candy pail, lard can or a box, material for packing, and a pail or other receptacle if desired size for the pocket or cylinder. The space between the pocket and the inside of the pail or box to be filled with packing should be not less than two inches at top, bottom and sides. Cork, excelsior, paper, or any non-conductor of heat may be used as packing. Great care should be exercised in placing the cork, excelsior or paper so that the heat will be retained in the food to be cooked. The pocket or cylinder in which the kettle containing the boiling food is placed must be clean and sweet. It is best that this cylinder be of granite with cover to match, as such a one retains heat well, will last a long time and is easily cleaned. The kettle in which the food is boiled must be of such a nature as to impart no flavor to the food and should be of material that will not rust.



A home-made fireless cooker, costing about $3.00. Nos. 1 and 2 are pads made of a flour sack, filled with the same material the box is packed with, and used, when cooking, to cover the top of the closed pocket or cylinder.

Food to be cooked in the fireless cooker must be brought to the boiling point and cooked until boiled thoroughly all through. For example: Oat meal, boil five minutes; cracked wheat, boil fifteen minutes; a nine-pound ham, boil one-half hour after reaching the boiling point. Rolled oats should remain in the cooker ten or twelve hours; cracked wheat, sixteen hours or more; the ham fifteen to twenty hours. All food, when taken from the cooker, should be made boiling hot before serving to insure perfect wholesomeness.

Remember, when using the heat-retention cooker, that all foods must be actually boiling when placed in it; and if the food requires more than ten or twelve hours' cooking, it should be removed from the cooker, brought to the boiling point and replaced in the cooker.—Mary L. Bull, Division of Domestic Science, Minnesota Experiment Station.

FIVE MEN ARE KILLED

LIGHTING PLANT IN MINNEAPOLIS SALOON BLOWS BUILDING TO BITS.

BUILDING WAS BLOWN TO ATOMS

Four Unknown Women Picnickers Escape With Cuts and—Brave Rescues Made.

The Dead:

Charles Giebenhain, 48 years old, bartender.

Louis O. Hamish, 27 years old, a painter.

Eugene Hamlin, 25 years old, a teamster.

Albert Hirth, Dickton, Minn., about 22 years old.

Middleaged man thought to be Joseph Silbaugh, 42 years old, carpenter.

The Injured:

Edward Boucher, 35 years old, proprietor of the Point saloon, burned and bruised about the head and shoulders; hearing and sight probably destroyed;

George Miller, 27 years old, plasterer. Severely burned about the chest and face.

Ernest Osterhold, 39 years old, porter. One arm and his face badly burned.

Four unidentified, elderly women, members of a picnic party who were in the large room back of the bar when the tank exploded, cut and burned.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Five men were killed and three injured when, with a detonation that could be heard for several miles, the acetylene gas generating tank in the basement of the Point saloon, at the intersection of the Crysal lake and Robbinsdale roads near Minneapolis was blown up, hurling the walls of the building outward and killing and maiming some 14 persons who were in the place. The explosion was followed by a fire which reduced the shattered structure to ashes and horribly charred and disfigured the bodies of those who failed to escape with their lives.

Watch Stops at 4:22 p. m.

According to a gold watch found on the body of Charles Giebenhain, the bartender, the explosion occurred at 4:22 p. m., at which time the watch stoped. An alleged defect in the acetylene generator, which was used for illuminating purposes only, is hinted at as the cause of the accident, although from the twisted and jumbled mass of boiler plate and metal in the basement of the ruins, the real cause may never be ascertained.

The acetylene plant was located in the basement near the north wall and midway between the front and rear of the cellar. It was directly under one end of the bar.

The blast literally tore out the front and one side of the building, hurling beams, timbers and glass across the Crysal Lake and the Robbinsdale roads. The corner support between the two shattered walls was also blown away and the roof of the structure hung above, supported only by the rafters running to the rear and other side wall of the building.

Floors Shoot Skyward.

Both the first and second floors in the front part of the building shot skyward, carrying with them bar, fixtures, contents of the cellar and occupants of the bar room. The roof withstood the terrible upheaval and the splintered wreckage fell back into the pit of the basement. The floors in the rear room, separated from the bar room by a strong partition, bent upward before the blast like so much canvas, but did not fall into the basement.

George Miller Is Freed.

Amid the heart-rending cries and groans of the men buried and pinned down in the forward part of the basement when the flames were rapidly turning the wrecked shell into a seething furnace, the rescue party hacked away at the woodwork and freed Miller. He was carried to the road, where he fainted. Repeated efforts were made to aid the other men whose agonized shrieks as the fire reached them drove the workers on to desperate endeavor, but the shattered and partially supported roof hung an unstable canopy over the buring human pit and warned the rescuers away by the dropping of huge timbers and flaming beams.

At the risk of burns and falling into the cellar to say nothing of the possibility of more explosions, firemen and citizens crowded close to the burning wreckage and dragged large burning parts out into the road. The first body to be recovered was that of Giebenhain. The charred mass was placed on a board and covered with gunny sacking.

MAN BURNS IN SHACK.

Blackduck Homesteader Shoots Self After Setting Fire to Cabin.

Bemidji.—That he set fire to the shack in which he was living and afterwards shot himself with a rifle to insure that his body would be burned, is the conclusion reached by returned from Blackduck, where the skeleton of a man was found in the burned ruins of Charles Miller's cabin, the remains being identified as those of Miller.

MEET IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Ballinger Committee to Make Report September 5.

Washington, D. C. — The congressional committee which has been investigating the charges against Secretary of the Interior Ballinger, adjourned until September 5, when a meeting is to be held at Minneapolis, and a report formulated upon.

This decision was reached after a full discussion among the members of the committee, both republicans and democrats. It was agreed it would not be convenient for the members to assemble again before September, and Minneapolis was decided upon as a meeting place most accessible to all the members.

Senator Root will return from Europe before the date set for the meeting, and all twelve members are expected to be present.

As the committee's finding probably will be made known before the fall elections, the report may have some bearing on the political contest to be waged between the two leading parties for control of the next house.

DRUIDS ABOLISH INSURANCE.

Convention Delegates Decide to Do Away With Risks.

Minneapolis. — Before their 1910 annual convention adjourned the United Ancient Order of Druids of Minnesota amended its constitution so as to abolish insurance. Hereafter the lodge will be only social and fraternal, although it is possible that upon the death of a member a "benefit" will be voted his survivors. The reasons given for the discontinuance of insurance are that the individual assessment of $1 at the death of every member has become burdensome, and that the lodge does not care to place itself under the supervision of the insurance commissioner.

The Grand Grove elected the following officers: G. B. Helm, of St. Paul, noble grand arch; B. A. Wagner, deputy grand arch; Fred Downes, grand treasurer; C. A. Johnson, grand secretary; Peter Thielen, grand marshall; C. Oehman, grand sentinel; A. Peters, grand herald.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER KILLED.

Child Killed by Live Wire; Parent Goes To Rescue.

Duluth.—E. M. Nelson and his six-year-old daughter were electrocuted here in the front yard of their home at Lakeside, a suburb, in the presence of the wife and mother.

The cause was a live wire which had been allowed to dangle from an adjacent telephone pole to the Nelson lawn.

"Oh, see the grass is burning up," shouted the child to her mother and the grabbed the wire. In an instant she fell over dead, her body being terribly burned. The father who was just returning from work saw the child fall and in an effort to extricate her met a similar fate. Mrs. Nelson, while trying to drag the bodies away, was severely shocked and is in a critical condition.

GOPHERS ASSIGNED TO SHIP.

Minnesotans on Leave of Absence Since June 4 Are Summoned

Baltimore, Maryland. — One hundred and one midshipmen, the majority of whom recently graduated from the naval academy, were assigned to duty on the various battleships and armored cruisers of the navy.

Assignments were made to all the ships of these two classes, except the armored cruisers Tennessee, Montana, North Carolina and South Dakota, which are now in South American waters.

Those assigned from Minnesota are: W. L. Ainsworth of Minneapolis to the Idaho, E. D. Langworthy of Spring Valley to the Connecticut, G. R. Meyer of Hastings to the New Hampshire.

GAS EXPLOSION IS FATAL.

Lighted Match Fires Duluth Room Filled From Leaky Main.

Duluth. — John Koivisto, a Duluth shoemaker, struck a match to ascertain what caused a peculiar odor in the house, and now four members of his family are in the hospital and one of them is dying.

The home and a saloon next door, were wrecked by a heavy explosion. The peculiar odor which the man detected was caused by a leak in a gas main.

Mrs. Koivisto and two children are in the hospital and one of them, a girl five years old has but a few hours to live.

Bank Clearings Still Gain.

Minneapolis, Minn, — The Minneapolis bank clearings for the week ending June 23 were $18,851,873.03, as compared with $17,851,338.43 for the corresponding period last year, showing an increase of $1,010,534.61.

Creameries Pay Big Amount.

Long Prairie.—From figures just compiled from the May creamery reports, Todd county creameries paid Todd county farmers in cash during the month of May, the sum of $72,000. August Wendorf of Hewitt received the largest check of any farmer in the county for the month. He received $190. Last year the Todd county creameries paid out in cash $360,000. Figuring the increase on the basis of increase each month during 1910, the cash paid out this year will exceed $500,000.

RATES ARE LOWERED

COMMERCE COMMISSION TAKES ACTION IN CASES AFFECTING ENTIRE COUNTRY.

SOME REDUCTIONS A HALF

Shippers of Spokane and Reno Win in Contest Against Paying Tariffs to Coast and Back to Destination.

Washington.—Reductions in class and commodities on all shipments west from Chicago to the Pacific coast were ordered Wednesday by the interstate commerce commission. The commission decided that the capital invested in railroad property and betterments did not justify the advance in rates to the point marked in the new schedules filed by the railroads.

The decisions are in what are known popularly as the Pacific coast cases. These cases were heard last autumn by the commission on its six weeks' trip to the Pacific coast and intermountain territory and had been under consideration ever since then. In every instance reductions in the existing rates were made.

The commission found a remarkable rate situation on the Pacific coast, and even a more remarkable one in intermountain territory. This is true especially of the rates to and from Spokane, Wash., and Reno, Nev. The Spokane rate issue had been before the commission in one form or another for several years. The shippers of that city complained insistently of the tariffs on freight classes and commodities from eastern points of origin, because they were required to pay the Pacific coast terminal plus the local rates back to Spokane from those terminals, although the freight was discharged at Spokane on the western trip.

Substantially the same state of facts existed at Reno and other Nevada points, which had to pay the rates to San Francisco and the back haul local rates from San Francisco or Sacramento to destination. These local rates in the majority of instances amounted to two-fifths or more of the entire rate from eastern points of origin to Pacific coast terminals.

The decisions of the commission affect all class and commodity rates between eastern points and the far west. No complaint was made of the rates of the eastern lines between Atlantic points and Mississippi river transfers and all of the reductions ordered by the commission affect rates from Mississippi and Missouri river transfers to Pacific coast terminals and intermountain territorial points.

In a case involving class freight rates from eastern territory to Phoenix, Ariz., the commission held the rates to be unjust and unreasonable and ordered reductions of approximately 30 per cent.

MANY DIE IN CLOUDBURST

Three Kentucky Counties Are Swept by Storm and Flood—Deaths May Reach Forty.

Saylersville, Ky.—Fifteen people are known to be dead, fifteen additional are reported as having died and fully forty are missing as the result of a cloudburst in Magoffin, Floyd and Knott counties, Ky., late Tuesday.

Twelve bodies of the known dead have been secured by the workmen in Saylersville and the towns affected by the terrible cloudburst. When late reports came in from sections lying near Saylersville, it was estimated by the people here that fully forty have been killed in the floods and that forty are missing from their homes.

Saylersville is the county seat of Magoffin county which is in eastern Kentucky. There are no railroads running to the town and little else than farming is done in this vicinity. Floyd and Knott counties lie adjacent to this county and have several small towns lying directly on the Licking river and large creeks which were affected greatly by the downpour. It has been raining in this section for three days and the rivers and streams were all full of water when the downpour from the cloudburst broke over this section. Instantly many houses in this section were carried from their foundations and were swept into the streams.

Many of the people in these three counties are homeless. The property damage is estimated to be fully $100,000 and the losses in stocks and grains will go to even higher figures.

DESPERADO SHOT BY MILITIA

Man Barricaded in His Georgia Home With Six Children Laid Low With Bullets.

Atlanta, Ga.—After being barricaded in his house for many hours and killing two of his besiegers, W. T. Bostwick was killed by soldiers in a rush on his house near Irwinville, Ga. His six children were taken unhurt.

Wife of Vice-President Better.

Baltimore, Md.—Mrs. James S. Sherman, wife of the vice-president, who is a patient at Johns Hopkins hospital, was reported Tuesday somewhat improved, since her arrival, and that her case was not considered critical.

Two Hurt in $500,000 Fire.

Paterson, N. J.—Five hundred thousand dollars' worth of property in the business section of Paterson was destroyed by fire Tuesday. Two firemen were seriously injured.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Holly Springs, Miss. — "Words are inadequate for me to express what your wonderful medicines have done for me. The doctors said I had a tumor, and I had an operation, but was soon as bad againas ever. I wrote to you for advice, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you told me to do. I am glad to say that now I look and feel so well that my friends keep asking me what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend your Vegetable Compound."—MRS. WILLIE EDWARDS, Holly Springs, Miss.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy — tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

PROOF in the Morning!

We tell you about how good you'll feel after taking a CASCARET—that millions of people—buy, use and recommend them—But that's talk—you buy a box now—take as directed to-night and get the proof in the morning—After you know CASCARETS you'll never be without them. 918

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

When Father Helped.

The fond father held the manuscript while his son practised the oration.

"Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant," cried the youth, "to—to—to—well, what is it?"

The father was wrestling with the manuscript.

"Oh, yes," he muttered, "here it is: 'to dessicate.' Go on."

"It's desecrate," cried the boy, indignantly. "'Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant to desecrate the—the—the—' why don't you prompt me?"

The father was staring hard at the manuscript.

"The—the poodle—paddle—poodleum of our liver ties," he stammered.

"It's the 'palladium of our liberties,'" roared the boy. "Gimme that paper—I'll say it meself."

And he stalked away angrily.

Up to Date Milking Scene.

"What's going on around here?" asked the surprised visitor. "Is this a hospital?"

"Oh, no," answered the tall man in the silk hat; "this is the stage setting for a New England farm drama. The next act will be the milking scene."

"But I thought the young lady in the antiseptic apron was a trained nurse?"

"Oh, no; she is the milkmaid. The young man in the rubber gloves that you thought was a doctor is the farm boy. As soon as they bring in the sterilized stool and the pasteurized pails and find the cow's tooth brush the milking scene will begin."

Penalized for Holding.

Maud—Do you believe in palmistry?

Ethel—In a way. I've known it to work splendid as a starter when the young man was shy.

A Pleasing Combination

Post Toasties

with Cream and Sugar.

Adding strawberries or any kind of fresh or stewed fruit makes a delicious summer dish.

The crisp, golden-brown bits have a most delightful flavour—a fascination that appeals to the appetite.

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers,
Pkgs. 10c and 15c

POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

We are not the only county that has a county division scrap on hand, as there is also to be one over in Polk County.

Alex Lattimore has turned the publication of the leven towns to his brother, John, on account of poor health.

We were surprised to hear that Al. Jester, of Bemidji, had pulled out of the Senatorial fight, in this district. We understand that Bemidji is to have another candidate.

We notice that the press of the northern part of the state are not booming the Minnesota State Fair, this year. Good for you, boys. For when a lot of fresh, young "guys" undertake to dictate terms and conditions to the editors, it is time to sit down on them good and hard.

D. P. O'Neil, of Thief River Falls, has filed for the republican nomination for representative from this district. There is no doubt but he will be a strong man. If nominated and elected, he will make a good representative. This is the first man from our home county of Red Lake to get into the fight. It is to be hoped that he will not have much opposition in this county.

The Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls papers are into a red hot county division campaign. There is one feature about it that is rather amusing, namely: There are very few farmers, who take all the county papers. Up this way you scarsely ever meet a farmer, who is a reader of The Gasette, the same could be said of the Thief Rives Falls papers in the southern part of the county.

Polk County is to have the warmest legislative fight in its history at the primaries in September. Representative John Saugstad has filed as a candidate for state senator and Representative John Holten and Atterbey W. A. Maria have filed for the house. These three are county option men and will work together They will be opposed by a ticket headed by Senator Andy Stephens, who desires to return again to the senate. —The Thief River Falls News.

The Eleven Towns says that THE SUNBEAM is afraid to deliver the goods on the question of county division. No danger, gentlemen, that we will not deliver all the goods we agreed to before the close of the [illegible] and we shall represent the interests of the farmers, who pay taxes; regardless of the sniffs and snarls of the little whiffets, who sniff at the posts that the politicians, of Thief River Falls or Red Lake Falls, are wont to visit.

Why Not Pass the Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than ever, and, though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash. Instead of the list of gifts, which the newspapers sometimes print we should read, "The collection yielded $4,000,000." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars. —Life.

Deer Park News.

Ole Rustan, of Lessor, was visiting his son, Ed Rustan.

A crowd of his neighbors surprised O. W. Johnson, last week.

Ed Rustan made a business trip to Red Lake Falls, last week.

Gunder Anderson and Louis Lande made a business trip to Thief River Falls.

Henry Peterson, who has been working on the new Soo Line from Duluth, returned home; last week.

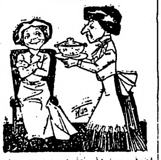
A number of Deer Parkers attended the celebration at Highlanding.

Olein Rust, of Thief River Falls came up to visit her sister, our teacher, last week. They leave for home, this week.

Mr. Knute Seversrud and daughter went to Plummer the Fourth. Miss Seversrud will go to Thief River Falls, to attend the summer school.

Ole Nesland, Will Rodman, A. Brovold, Pete Gustafson, Frank Lundeen, John Peterson, Willie Swanson, John Radnecki, and Oscar Nesland transacted business in Plummer, Friday.

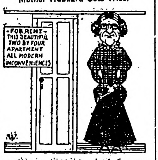
The Way Out.



Mrs. Toolyjural—My chinaware is so old fashioned. I tire of seeing the same dishes year after year.

Mrs. Metropolis—Hire a girl.

Mother Hubbard Gets Wise.



Old Mother Hubbard rented her cupboard—
'Twas about as long as a slat—
But it brought the price, for 'twas just the size
Of an up to date New York flat.

Japan's Giant Wrestlers.

Japanese wrestlers are not to be confused with Japanese exponents of jiu jitsu. The wrestlers belong to the older school, in which weight is a paramount quality. It is a remarkable thing that a race which is on the average four or five inches under the European standard in point of height should have produced a special cult of wrestlers who are giants in stature and strength. The leading wrestlers of Tokyo or Osaka or Hiogo are all men of least six feet in height and weighing perhaps 300 pounds. They are a race apart. Wrestling is an occupation which has been handed down from father to son for many generations. And the explanation of their prowess is that they have always been meat eaters, while the rest of Japan, either from choice or necessity, have been in the main vegetarians.

Clyde Fitch's Joke.

"Clyde Fitch was an indefatigable worker," said an actor who has played in many of the Fitch comedies. "When he had a play on the stocks he would labor over it day and night, often scarcely pausing for his meals and getting very little sleep; consequently his health suffered. He would work until on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and then his physician would step in and force him to knock off.

"During one of these periods of enforced idleness he was lounging in the Players club one day when Harry B. Smith, the prolific comic opera librettist, strolled in.

"'What are you doing now?' asked Smith.

"'I am in my doctor's hands,' replied Fitch. 'He tells me I'm in a bad way and has absolutely forbidden me to do any brain work.'

"'That's tough,' said Smith. 'How do you manage to put in the time?'

"Oh, I'm writing the libretto of a musical comedy!' replied Fitch, with one of his cynical smiles."—New York Times.

The Proper Tree.

Curious Charley—Do nuts grow on trees, father? Father—They do, my son. Curious Charley—Then what tree does the doughnut grow on? Father—The "pantree," my son.—Purple Cow.

Got Another Copy.

A well dressed man was standing outside a bookseller's shop in Charing Cross road closely examining one of Balzac's works illustrated by Gustave Dore. "How much is this Balzac?" he asked an assistant outside.

"Twenty-five shillings," was the reply.

"Oh, that's far too much. I must see the manager about a reduction," continued the prospective customer, and, suiting the action to the word, he took up the book and went into the shop.

Approaching the bookseller, he took the book from under his arm and asked what he would give for it. "Seven shillings highest offer," he was told.

The offer was accepted, the man took his money and left.

"Well," queried the assistant later, after the man had gone, "were you able to hit it off with the gentleman, sir?"

"Oh, yes. I managed to get another copy of that edition of Balzac for 7 shillings."

Then the bookseller went out to lodge a complaint with the police.—London Telegraph.

A Victim of Leprosy.

"On my travels in Venezuela," said a New York man, "I stayed in a hotel with a young man in whose family there was the taint of leprosy, though he apparently did not have it. One night sitting at dinner he became angry at a waiter and brought his hand down on the table with full force. He instantly realized that he did not feel the blow and sat looking at his hand, his face whitening with horror. 'Give me your knife, Bob,' he said to his chum. He grabbed the pocketknife in a frenzy and stabbed the side of his hand with vicious cuts from finger tip to wrist. You may not know that leprosy appears in the side of the hand, numbness being a sign. The man did not feel the cuts. He arose from the table, knocking over his chair, rushed out into the courtyard of the hotel, and we heard the quick tang of a revolver shot, telling us how he had conquered the leper's curse by ending his life."—New York Times.

He Could Wield an Ax.

The skill of the old Maine shipbuilders in the use of the adz and broadax was wonderful. One old time yarn is of a carpenter who applied very drunk at a shipyard for employment. In order to have a little fun with him the foreman set him to give a proof of his skill by hewing out a wooden bolt with no chopping block but a stone. The carpenter accomplished his difficult task without marring the keen edge of the broadax and showed the foreman a neatly made bolt. Then he brought the ax down with a terrific blow that shattered its edge upon the stone. "I can hew fust rate on your chopping block," he hiccoughed, "but I'll be blamed if I can make the ax stick in it when I git through." The story runs that the foreman lost no time in employing such a workman.

Judges' Wigs.

The wig is only worn by English barristers to give them a stern, judicial appearance, and no one can say that it fails in this respect. The custom was originated by a French judge in the seventeenth century when, happening to don a marquis' wig one day, he found it gave him such a stern and dignified appearance that he decided to get one for himself and wear it at all times in court. This he did, and the result was so satisfactory from a legal point of view that not only judges, but barristers also, took up the custom throughout Europe.—London Graphic.

Acquitted.

"Sir!" said the young woman, with what seemed to be indignation.

The young man looked embarrassed.

"Yes, I did kiss you," he admitted, "but I was impulsively insane."

"That means that a man would be a lunatic to kiss me?"

"Well, any man of discretion would be just crazy to kiss you."

This seemed to end the strain, and, no jury being present to muddle affairs, a satisfactory verdict was reached.

Suspicious Routine.

Good Man—Ah, my poor fellow, I feel sorry for you! Why don't you work? When I was young, for ten years I was never in bed after 6—an hour's work before breakfast, then five hours' work, then dinner, then four hours' more work, then supper, then bed, then up again at 6 the next morning—

Loafer—I say, guv'nor, where did ye serve yer time, San Quentin or Folsom?—San Francisco Star.

Not Mere Talk.

"I cannot live but a week longer without you."

"Foolish talk, duke. How can you fix on a specific length of time?"

"Ze landlord fix on it, miss, not I."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Easily Convinced.

Would Be Contributor (at editor's desk)—Here's a joke, Mr. Editor, that I'll guarantee was never in print before. Editor (after reading it)—Don't doubt your word in the least, sir.—London Tit-Bits.

The Outlet.

Physiology Teacher—Clarence, you may explain how we hear things. Clarence—Pa tells 'em to ma as a secret, and ma gives 'em away at the bridge club.—Cleveland Leader.

His Question.

Edgar, aged six, was recently sent to school for the first time, and upon his return home he asked, "Papa, who taught Adam the alphabet?"

Notice For Publication.

First Publication June 3 1910.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. May 31st, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Martin O. Moen of Torgerson, Minn., who on Dec. 5th, 1907, made Homestead Entry No. 1380, Serial No. 04506, for W.½ S.W. ¼, Sec.16 & S.½ S.E. ¼, Sec.17 Twp. 154 N. Range 39 W.5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 13th day of July, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Halvor Levos, of Mavie, Minn. Martin L. Salberg, Knute Torgerson, and Ole A. Olson of Torgerson Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. May 28th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Dagne Knutson, of Hilda, Minn., who on November 25th, 1905 made Homestead Entry No. 1249, Serial No. 04508, for S. E. ¼ Section 36, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before J.M. Bishop, Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn., at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B Henry Costello, Halvor Swenson, Olaf B. Hanson, and Knut Ystesund, all of Hilda, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 3rd. 1910.

Department of the Interior, U. S. LAND Office at Crookston Minn. May 26th, 1910.

NOTICE is hereby given that Inga Bo[illegible] of Erie Minnesota, who on November 23rd, 1904 made homestead entry No. 518, Serial No. 04551, for S. E. ¼ Section 10 Township 153 N. Range 53 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michels, U. S. Commissioner for the District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 11th, day of July 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses

Joseph Johnson, Ole Johnsrud, John Tolland, Carl P. Anderson all of Erie Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin
Register.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17. 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Vitalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 29, 1904, made Homested Entry No. 435, Serial No. 0480, for N. W. ¼ Section 29 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafual, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

To maintain oneself on this [illegible] not a hardship, but a pastime, if [illegible] will live simply and wisely.—Thoreau.

McCALL PATTERNS 10 AND 15 NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE [illegible]

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, [illegible] reliability nearly 40 years. [illegible] every city and town in the U[illegible] Canada, or by mail direct. [illegible] any other make. Send for [illegible]

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than [illegible] magazine—million [illegible] fet styles, patterns, [illegible] plain sewing, fancy need[illegible] etiquette, good stories, [illegible] year (worth double), inc[illegible] Subscribe today, or send [illegible]

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium [illegible] and new cash prize offers. Address
THE McCALL CO., 238 to 248 W. 37th St., [illegible]

The "[illegible]"
SEWING MACHINE
ROLLER [illegible]

[illegible] this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

[illegible] GUARANTEE.

[illegible] Sewing Machine Co.
BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

Persons who really wish to become angels should make a start in that direction while they are yet mortals.—National Magazine.

When Women Run Us.

Friend—So your detective force is a failure? Chief Emma—Yes; we can't find any one who is willing to be a plain clothes woman.—Puck.

Had Had His.

Sioux Chief—Why didn't you torture the baldhead? Piute Chief—What was the use? He had been married for twenty years.—Buffalo Express.

One day is worth two tomorrows. Have you something to do tomorrow? Do it today.—B. Franklin.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents, "Hints to inventors," "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS FOR Headache

FOR NEURALGIA.
SCIATICA.
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

If you have Headache Try One

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk.

DR. MILES' PAIN PILLS

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

Remember that you can get your plows fixed so they will run right, at Kratka.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

The Dan Batch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

Mr. Ray and Miss May Arndt returned home for a Fourth of July visit with the home folks.

Miss Irene Dannacker has returned home from St. Cloud, where she has been attending high school.

LOST on July 4th a raincoat, between Highlanding and Rhoda. Finder please leave the same at Rhoda Post Office.

Olaf Hanson passed here, last evening, with the Thief River Falls wanigan, which he was towing up to the outlet.

The farmer's steam boat has been compelled to lay up on account of low water in the Red Lake River.

Edward Singer and Henry Peterson, of Deer Park, were business callers at Sunbeam, Wednesday.

Two refreshing showers of rain fell on Tuesday and Wednesday, which were very welcome reviving the drooping grain and grass. There was no hail that did any damage.

The low water in the river has caused the stranding of many logs on the banks and sand bars, so the "river rats" went down to push them into currents this week.

Alex Lattimore left for Pennsylvania, for the benefit of his health, last Tuesday. He has been on sick list for some time, but all his friends hope for his speedy recovery.

Owing to a little too much celebrating on the part of a few men, there was a slight disturbance at the store of Mr. Selter on the Fourth. We regret this, as our celebration passed by pleasantly otherwise,

Hay will be a valuable article, this fall and winter, as there is a very light crop. The best place to cut hay at the present time is in the swamps, where it has always been too wet for cutting other years.

There was a large attendance from adjoining towns at the celebration at Highlanding, on the Fourth. The town of Deer Park was the best represented of any of them. All went home with memories of a pleasant and very enjoyable Fourth.

Anton Ellingson came up from Erskine, on Monday, to spend the Fourth with his brother, Andrew. He has a crew of men, putting up hay on his farm across the river from Sunbeam, this week, as he considers hay will be good property, this winter.

The Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station recommends the sowing of corn now for fodder, so the farmers will not have to sell any of their stock, because of the lack of hay. Write to the Experiment Station, St. Anthony Park, Minn., for bulletin on fodder corn.

The farmers of the Eleven Towns are more fortunate than a lot of their Dakota neighbors, as they will all be able to cut hay enough for their stock. Cut and put up every ton of hay you possibly can, for there is nothing that will pay you better, this year.

Congressional Situation.

The St. Paul Dispatch has it figured out about this way:

"Halvor Steenerson's exoperation in the ship subsidy matter will not help the chances of Bjorge in the Ninth district. It seems to be taken for granted that Steenerson will win out. The old scrap between Steenerson and Andy Stephens has been patched up, and the two were jointly eulogized in the highly impolitic speech made by Gil Hartly before the Development Association at Crookston. It is still said, though hardly on the authority of Sageng, who has denied it, that Ole O Sageng will make the congressional race, if Bjorge is defeated. Sageng said "no" to this; but, of course, he may change his mind. With every move Steenerson has made lately, the chances for Sageng getting into race diminished. Sageng will not go in unless he sees a rainbow tinted prospect of winning. That he can hardly see at present. From a distance it looks like Steenerson in the Ninth."—Crookston Times.

Celebration Huge Success.

The Fourth of July Celebration at Highlanding was a great success. Although a speaker could not be secured, the program rendered was fine. The boys' and girls' races were well run and exciting, but the potato race was the most laughable. The base ball game, at the ball ground resulted in a score of 7 to 5 in favor of Erie. Brunkeburg's defeat was largely caused by the desertion of a few of the players at the end of the third inning, when the score was 8 to 3.

The bowery was large, well constructed and decorated. All the young people enjoyed the dancing. The music was furnished by Even Sjulstad, Mike Kolski, and Pady Kolski, assisted by some of the local players, the music being first class. The dancing was kept up until daylight, the next morning.

Johnson Champion.

In the great prize fight at Reno, Nevada, on the Fourth, Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, knocked out James J. Jeffries in the fifteenth round. Jeffries failed to show his former speed and endurance; but Johnson proved to outclass him in everything. Jeffries retires to his alfalfa farm in California and Johnson is to play in the vaudeville for a few weeks, then retire to his home in Chicago.

The fight caused many race riots in the large cities and the south, scores of negroes being killed and wounded.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. In The Sunbeam July 8, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that John Wzientek, of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 567, Serial No. 04911, for N. E. ¼, Section 12, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Olaf B. Hanson, of Hilda Minn., and John Radnecki, of Radney, Minn.

ARTHUR F. TOPPIN.
Register.

Bowery dance at Highlanding, on Saturday evening

NOTICE. The annual school meeting of District No. 87 will be held at the school house, next Saturday evening, July 16, 1910. All turn out.

W. G. Hunt.
Clerk.

An Odd Epitaph.

The following epitaph is to be found in a cemetery within seven miles of New York's city hall:

Reader, pass on; don't waste your time
O'er bad biography and bitter rhyme,
For what I am this crumbling clay insures,
And what I was is no affair of yours.

In the Game.

"I am in the hands of my friends," said the political sidestepper.

"Yes," replied the harsh critic, "and every time your friends look over their hands they seem impatient for a new deal."—Washington Star.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat,

SINGER BROS,

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business,-- SINGER BROS,

Kratka Minn.

Pottery and Secrecy.

In the royal manufactory of pottery at Meissen, Saxony, the work was formerly carried on with the utmost secrecy to prevent the processes from becoming known elsewhere. The establishment was a complete fortress, the portcullis of which was not raised day or night, no stranger being permitted to enter for any purpose whatever. Every workman, even the chief inspector, was sworn to silence. This injunction was formally repeated every month to the superior officers employed, while the workmen had constantly before their eyes in large letters the warning motto, "Be Secret Unto Death." It was well known that any person divulging the process would be imprisoned for life in the castle of Koenigstein. Even the king himself when he took strangers of distinction to visit the works was enjoined to secrecy. One of the foremen, however, escaped and assisted in establishing a manufactory in Vienna, from which the secrets spread all over Germany.

Her Diamond Necklace.

Brown is a very careful man. He is superlatively careful. So careful is he that he has insured his insurance money.

Now, Brown has a wife. Wives have to be given birthday presents, and on his wife's first birthday after their marriage he gave her a beautiful diamond necklace. This was not as reckless as you might think, for each stone on the necklace represented a year of Mrs. Brown's life, and he let every one know that. And he arranged to give Mrs. Brown a new diamond each birthday. And he let the neighbors know that too.

He has just missed giving his wife a birthday present for the ninth successive year.

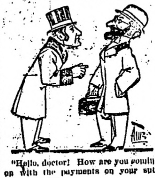
As to when greed will conquer pride and his wife will ask for another birthday present, we shall have to wait and see.—Pearson's.

Why He Applauded.

"Are you fond of music?" asked a stranger of the young man at the concert who was applauding vigorously after a pretty girl had sung a song in a very painful way.

"Not particularly," replied the young man frankly, "but I am extremely fond of the musician."

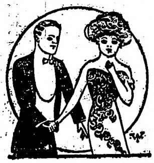
Cutting 'Em Down.



"Hello, doctor! How are you coming on with the payments on your suburban home?"

"I am within one appendicitis of the last one."

A Deal In Futures.



Curby (to the lady)—May I present myself as a suitor for your hand?

"I betrothed myself today to another"

"How about tomorrow?"

Out of Her Reach.

"Does your heart ever reach out for the unattainable?"

"No, but my hands do when my husband is not at home. There are three buttons at the back of my gown that I can't reach."

More Appropriate.

"I teach my parrot only short words."

"Do you? Now, I should think that parrots were better adapted to learning polysyllables."

THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS, THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.

We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W.G.Hunt.
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money, To Loan On Land.

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Folkedahl,
Highlanding Minn

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examine this fine horse.

C W Johnson, Owner.

"All Things Come."

The magnate looked up impatiently from his work.

"Well, my good man," he snapped at the diffident rural person who stood twirling his rusty hat, "what can I do for you?"

"I guess ye don't remember me, Hank," faltered the caller. "But you an' me use ter go swimmin' together in th' ol' town. Then you got a job in th' bank, an' I got a job in th' grocery store."

"This is all very interesting, and I seem to remember your face. But come to the point—my time is valuable."

"Yes, Hank. You got a better offer and left the old village. I stayed plugging along in th' grocery store."

"Well, well?"

"Well, Hank, when you left you owed $3.12 on a grocery bill. Here's where you pay up!"—Cleveland Leader.

The Salt Charm Failed.

Some three years before the Franco-German war broke out Count Seckendorff accompanied King William I. on his visit to Napoleon III. and was present at the celebrated dejeuner given in the Pavillon de Diane at Fontainebleau. King William, who was sitting next the empress, was asked by her to pass the salt; and in complying with this request he threw a little salt over his shoulder. Upon the empress exclaiming, "Why do you do that?" the king explained that in his country it was the custom to do so when passing the salt to ward off bad luck and any chance of a quarrel. The empress in a prettily turned speech at once replied, "But surely there is no danger of anything interfering with our friendship." In less than three years the Germans had crossed the Rhine.—London Spectator.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

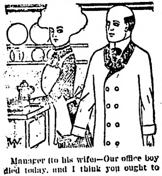
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Paid the Penalty.



Manager (to his wife)—Our office boy died today, and I think you ought to send some flowers.

"I don't see why."

"Well for the last month he's been eating the lunches you put up for me."

Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him.—Franklin.

A Versatile Garden.

The dwellers in a seaport town of Massachusetts are justly proud of their gardens. It remained for a visitor from a tiny village "way round the Cape" to say the first slightly disparaging word of these gardens. "Isn't this beautiful?" his hostess asked as she paused under a rose arbor and looked back over the stately ranks of larkspur, monk's hood, hollyhocks and many other favorites.

"It's a handsome gardin—of its kind," said the visitor dispassionately, "but it ain't quite up to the mark when you consider our gardins."

"Indeed!" and the lady looked at him, too amazed to be angry. "What sort of gardens have you, please?"

"Well," said her Cape visitor calmly, "what we call a good gardin is one where you can start out with two big baskets and a hoe, step through the flower gardin part, past the vegetables, down to the water; dig your clams fust, pick your sweet corn, lay your posies on top o' that and hand the whole lot over at the kitchen door. There's your shore dinner and trimmin's all from one gardin."—Youth's Companion.

The Wise Woodpecker.

In California the woodpecker stores acorns away, although he never eats them. He bores several holes, differing slightly in size, at the fall of the year invariably in a pine tree. Then he finds an acorn, which he adjusts to one of the holes prepared for its reception. But he does not eat the acorn, for, as a rule, he is not a vegetarian. His object in storing away the acorns exhibits foresight and a knowledge of results more akin to reason than to instinct. The succeeding winter the acorns remain intact, but, becoming saturated, are predisposed to decay, when they are attacked by maggots, which seem to delight in this special food. It is then that the woodpecker reaps the harvest his wisdom has provided at a time when, the ground being covered with snow, he would experience difficulty otherwise in obtaining suitable or palatable food.—Cleveland Leader.

Cupid and the Proprieties

By Catherine M. Patterson

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Monday morning was drawing perilously near and the party had just broken up. It was one of Patricia Norton's regular Sunday night supper parties, whose guest list never numbered more than eight and usually less—and the Falwells and Jimmie Brent were the latest stayers. Mrs. Falwell and her husband were just leaving. Mrs. Falwell and her husband! It was always that way, not that Mrs. Falwell was the more important of the two or was the possessor of any mental, moral or physical superiority, but it just naturally was. Yet every one liked Mr. Falwell and he himself seemed quite content with things as they were.

Jimmie Brent had risen with the Falwells, but after they had gone he still remained. In his hand he held a half smoked cigar.

"May I stay until I finish this?" he inquired, indicating his weed.

"Surely," said Patricia.

Brent promptly knocked off not only the ashes, but the live end of the cigar. Patricia's eyebrows went up inquiringly.

"Your motive, Jimmie?" she questioned.

"You said I should stay until I finished this cigar," holding it off and admiring its proud, brown beauty.

"But I don't expect you to be forever doing it."

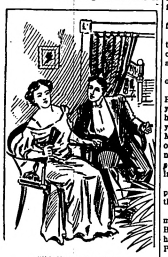
"Forever!" mused Jimmie. "I'd like to make this last forever."

"Jimmie Brent, you are coming back to a forbidden subject. Finish that cigar in five minutes—for then out you go."

"Do you mean that, Patricia?" making no move to light his cigar and—if possible—settling himself still more comfortably in his chair. "May I ask how you are going to do it? You can't use brute force, you know."

"I shan't attempt to do it myself," she said, with dignity. "I shall call Aunt Nancy, and if she can't accomplish it she will call the janitor."

"Call Aunt Nancy? Good. She thinks you are making the mistake of all the many mistakes of your life in so persistently refusing to marry me. Call Aunt Nancy in if you wish, she is on my side."



"I'd Never Do That.

"I should say she is. She made the coffee so strong tonight that if it had wanted to do so it could have walked off bodily with this entire apartment. And all that because 'Mar'se Brent he likes his cawfee dat strong dat if de cup was ter bre'k de cawfee would 'most stand up alone.'"

"All of which goes to prove my point. As for the janitor, nice sort of a name you would have if one of your Sunday nights ended in a disgraceful brawl between the janitor and one of your guests."

"Nice sort of name I'll have, anyway, if you stay here much later," muttered Patricia, glancing at the clock. "Those new people across the hall are taking a lively interest in me as it is, and they have been here only a week."

"You don't say so!" offered Jimmie, politely, covering his lips quickly with his hand, ostensibly to conceal a yawn.

"Jimmie, you are sleepy. Please go home."

"Haven't finished my cigar."

"You are not likely to if you don't get busy and smoke it."

"I'm not in a hurry, thank you. But about those new people across the hall, Patricia? Tell me more about them. What do you think of them?"

"I think they are horrid," said Patricia in a tone that bore the hallmark of conviction. "I've seen only two members of the family, but they are enough. There is an old, gray-haired woman, so lean and angular you could use her for a costumer. She owns a barbed-wire voice that corresponds perfectly with her hatchet-face."

"Barbed-wire voice, hatchet-face," repeated Jimmie. "She is perfectly safe from me. But what sort of person is she? Your description doesn't reveal that little detail."

"Oh, doesn't it? Then perhaps the fact that she discusses the other people in the apartment building with the servants may throw some light on the subject."

"It does help some. But what has she said about—about—well, about you, for instance?"

"Well, she said that if I were not—" Patricia stopped in the middle of her speech, and her face flushed.

"Go on. What did she say?"

"She said," repeated Patricia, with an effort, "that if I was not engaged to you I ought to be, and—"

"My sentiments exactly. The lady of the hatchet-face is not such a bad sort, after all. But to go on. What else?"

"She said it was disgraceful the number of times that you come here, and the lateness of your stay is always perfectly shocking. And those are my sentiments, Jimmie; you simply must go."

"Not until you have promised to become Mrs. J. Brent before the year is over."

"I'd never do that."

"Very well, then, here I'll sit. Meantime, take heed unto yourself and remember the hour."

"I am remembering it, Jimmie. Please, please, go. Finish your cigar as you cross the park."

"No, thank you; that isn't included in my campaign plans. Tell me more about these interesting people. Who is the second member of the family that you know?"

"A horrid, freckled boy, who is the most ubiquitous person with whom it has ever been my misfortune to come in contact. He is always in the halls and lately he has insisted on posting my letters for me. Fairly snatches them out of my hand and races off like mad. I can't stir any more without finding him at my heels."

"You seem to have made a conquest, and, after the manner of womankind in general, you don't appreciate it. By the way, how did all these remarks of the hatchet-faced one reach your ears? That point isn't quite clear to me."

"Aunt Nancy told me. The woman herself and the janitor, to whom my most estimable neighbor across the way has also been talking, it seems, told Aunt Nancy."

"But, Patricia, what was that you said about people listening to tales from servants, and talking to them?"

"Jimmie, you are horrid. It is different with Aunt Nancy. She is—"

"A dear, as I have always maintained," interrupted Jimmie. "But come, Patricia. Aren't you going to accept me this time?"

"No, I am not. Oh, Jimmie, it is one o'clock. Please go."

"Can't help it if it is 5 o'clock a. m. Patricia, you know you love me, only you are too contrary to admit it. You have kept me in suspense for six long years and that is more than enough. Moreover, you have yourself to think of. If the people across the hall have noticed my numerous and late visits, so have the other people in the building."

"Stop!" cried Patricia. "Please, please don't say anything more like that. And won't you go home?"

"I will not until you promise to be my wife, Patricia," and, rising quickly, Brent crossed to Patricia, who also had risen. He took her in his arms. Patricia attempted to free herself.

"Promise me, Patricia, that you will be my wife," coaxed Jimmie, gently, but there was underneath it all a stern tone that implied that the man would brook delay no longer.

"Will you go at once if I do promise?"

"I'll go in five minutes. I want to tell you something first. Is it a bargain?"

"Yes, Jimmie, I will marry you."

"Before the year is over?"

"Yes."

Brent bent and kissed her before he asked: "On your word of honor, in spite of what I am going to tell you? Oh, I promise you I haven't committed a penal offense or disgraced the family in any way," he said, quickly, in answer to the glance of startled inquiry from Patricia.

"Tell me. You have my word, and that once given holds good for all time."

Brent bent and kissed the face he held between his hands before he spoke. "Patricia, I am the main part of the new family that has just moved into the apartment across the hall."

"You!" gasped Patricia. "And, and the woman with the awful face and voice? They are dreadful, even if she is related to you."

"But she isn't a relation of mine, so don't look so distressed. She will not come to pay us long visits. She is a most estimable woman, however, and my—housekeeper."

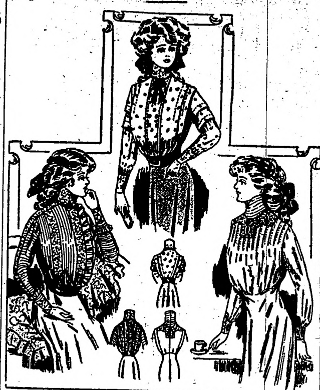
"And the boy?"

"The 'horrid imp,' which I believe was the affectionate and tender term you used in conjunction with him, is my young brother, who, by the way, thinks that you are the one woman. And all those tales were purely my own invention, carried to the right person by my faithful housekeeper. You see, dear, I was getting desperate. Remember, you have promised, on your word of honor, to marry me; so there is to be no retraction of your promise."

"Marry you? I certainly will," said Patricia, positively, "if for no other reason than to keep my eye on you in the future and prevent your doing something still worse. But do you remember your own promise to go?"

"Yes; and I'll go," said Jimmie, snatching up his cigar from the chimney piece. "Only I'll smoke this, not as I cross the park, but as I cross the hall."

Ideas in Blouses



THESE three blouses may be copied in most blouse materials. The first is in white washing silk, finely tucked and trimmed with Valenciennes lace insertion. A frill of silk finishes the right front. The deep cuffs are of wide insertion. Materials required: 2½ yards 36 inches wide, 4 yards narrow insertion, ½ yard wide for cuffs.

The second is in spotted zephyr, made with two wide tucks over the shoulder that are stitched to bust. A wide box-pleat, stitched at each edge, and ornamented with buttons, trims the front. Collar band and cuffs of embroidery insertion. Materials required: 2½ yards 28 inches wide, 1 dozen buttons, ¾ yard insertion. One of the most attractive blouses.

The third is a style suitable for voile or other thin material, to be made of the same as is used for skirt. It has first a small round yoke and collar of tucked net, then a shaped yoke of fancy silk or embroidered net, the material being arranged in short tucks. The sleeves are gathered into shaped cuffs to match the yoke. Materials required: 1½ yard 44 inches wide, ⅝ yard embroidered net or silk, ⅝ yard tucked net.

EXTENDING THE CLOSET ROOM

Good Plan by Which Space May Be Made When the Compartment Is Small.

If one is short of closet room a very good plan is to hang skirts sideways in the closet instead of hanging skirts, frocks and coats all flat against the back wall of the closet. Frocks may also be hung sideways, leaving only the coats to be stretched on hangers and suspended from the back wall of the closet. In order to hang garments sideways it is necessary to have a shelf across the top of the closet and to screw small hooks on the under side of this shelf. The hooks are arranged in pairs along the under side of the shelf, each pair of hooks being meant for a single skirt or frock. Two loops of braid are sewed in each skirt band and two in each frock at the waist line, one loop being hung on each hook. The garments are much more easily gotten at in this way than when they are hung one over another at the back of the closet. This method of hanging also permits the garments to hang perfectly straight, and makes it possible to store a large quantity of clothes in one closet. If the closet is deep enough the coats also may be suspended on stretchers from the shelf. This is an ideal arrangement, for it leaves the closet door free for a pier glass, which is a most useful adjunct to a girl's room.

In Place of a Knot.

The use of a knot is to be avoided in sewing and not to be tolerated in embroidery. The accomplished needle woman rarely finds it necessary to start with a knot, save in gathering or basting. Sometimes a tiny one is slipped under a hem, but it will show on right side if material is sheer and makes an ugly lump in ironing. Two or three over-and-over stitches taken on wrong side of material is as secure as a knot, and much more sightly. In embroidery there is no excuse for a knot. Two or three tiny stitches taken on outline or in body of work where it is afterward covered will hold any stitches. Knots only tend to an untidy wrong side, which no good embroiderer will tolerate, and make the work rough in laundering.

Embroidered Pongee.

Pongee frocks are now ready for the last touch, which is given by the embroiderer. Handwork put upon this excellent surface is never wasted, and the tone of the pongee is the exact background for the dull leaf green and old rose of the conventional running vine of the Tudor rose design.

This is used successfully on the side opening of a plain Russian blouse house frock, and its sections are repeated in short strips at intervals on the tunic's side opening. The work is flat in effect, suggesting very little padding.

A Bathing Hint.

A hint for women who bathe in the brine and at times find the temperature of the water chilling is to wear a close fitting one-piece garment of very think flannel under the silk bathing suit. This makes the salt water bath no less efficacious and is a safeguard against rheumatism. The precaution is an especially good one for those who swim at the Maine seaside resorts.

MADE HER OWN CHATELAINE

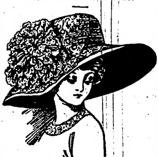
Good Use of Silver Ornaments by Girl Who Was Possessed of Originality.

Arranging some of her silver ornaments to be especially useful is the work of a girl who has just gone into mourning and does not wish to buy a nice black purse bag. Considering that silver was permissible with black in which there was no crepe, she evolved a chatelaine, using an oxidized silver chain on which to string them.

The chain was one that had been used for keys by the departed relative, and, in order that the cable it represented should be formed into a hook, the girl removed the original fastening and substituted a small silver slip ring, through which each end of the chain passed. Then it remained only for her to put on a silver card case, which depends from a short chain of its own; a silver coin purse, a tiny box of the same metal, in which she carries a powder puff, and a silver backed ivory memorandum tablet.

In her card case she keeps such of her money as is in bills, the coins, of course, going into the tiny purse. When she wishes to have the case for its original purpose, in the afternoon, she has only to open the slip ring and off comes the short chain.

HAT FOR SUMMER



Picture hat for summer wear of pale blue chip, lined with black chip. Medallions of blue linen edged with lace and large chou of lace.

Washing Irish Crochet.

Irish crochet collars and neckwear may be the most durable a girl can use or the most unsatisfactory. It depends upon the laundering.

Wash in thick hot suds made from pure white soap. Rinse through several waters and put through a thin starch water. Squeeze out excessive moisture between cloths.

Pin the crochet piece to a cushion or heavily padded board. Pull out all the points and edges, fastening each one with a pin to the cushion. Allow it to remain until dry, when it will look like new.

If the lace is much yellowed the cushion can be stood in the sun during the drying process.

A drop of bluing can be added to the last rinsing water, or if a creamy tint is liked the lace can be put through a weak tea.

Printed Net.

Printed nets in black and white effects are very stylish and are extremely smart when trimmed with black lace and black velvet.

The DAIRY

DAIRY NOTES.

Plenty of sunlight in the cows' stable

The simple brick-shaped pound print is the most popular way in which butter can be marketed.

It is best to raise your own dairy cows if possible to do so. Then you know what you have.

It requires grain as well as roughness to produce butter fat, and butter fat at present prices is what pays.

A liberal banking of sheds on the north side will prove a boon to the cows when the cold weather comes.

The Babcock tester never finds that very good cows are owned by a poor feeder.

Remember even the best dairy cow cannot pay good returns without plenty of good feed.

A pail of milk standing in a foul stable for ten minutes will absorb enough bad odors to spoil it.

The condition of the animal as well as the condition of the market should determine the time to sell stock.

Before warm weather comes prepare a cool place for the milk and cream. Make the milk and cream room cool, sweet and clean.

Some of the biggest dairy farms pay the smallest interest on capital invested, and some of the smallest pay the biggest. Some men are land and cow poor.

The dairyman who does not use the Babcock tester in determining the value of his cows should sell his dairy, buy a grocery, and sell sugar by guess.

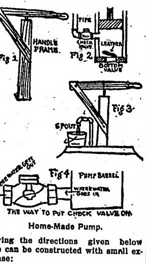
The man who does not get more than two dollars returns from every dollar's worth of feed his cows consume has not yet learned the first lesson of good dairy management.

Don't be afraid to use disinfectants about the cow stables. To be sure milk soon absorbs the odor of these things, but milk has no business standing around the stable a minute after a cow is finished.

PUMP FOR WATERING STOCK

Detailed Instructions, With Illustration, Showing How to Make One Cheaply.

A pump is an absolute necessity on any farm and, the nearer it is located to the live stock, the better. By following the directions given below one can be constructed with small expense:



Home-Made Pump.

Get check valves ¾ inch to an inch in size and pipes to fit. Bore a hole in the side of pump barrel near the bottom, put in a nipple and screw on a check valve. Then screw on an elbow with the opening upward. In the bottom of barrel bore a 1½-inch hole and put a piece of leather over it. Leather should be put on the inside of barrel and nailed down on only one side so it can flap up and down.

Make the plunger of hard wood, making it to fit rather loosely on the inside of barrel. For a rod get a straight pole 1¼ inches square and fasten it securely to the plunger. When this is done all that remains is to make a box frame for rod running to pump handle and a frame to run the pipe out of the top of well.

To do this take boards long enough to reach down into the water, cut the ends off square and plane them smooth. Then, using a square, make a box 4 inches square on the inside. The barrel with its valves should be sunk below the surface of the water 1½ to 2 feet. By putting two elbows on the upper end of pipe the water will be thrown downward into pail or trough.

The pump can be let down into the well by nailing cleats on the sides, but one must be careful not to let the nails go through into the barrel and thereby spoil the pump. This pump can only be used in shallow wells as it could not be made strong enough for a deep well.

Scours an Infectious Disease.

Scours in calves is an infectious disease. Prevent trouble from this source by keeping the surroundings clean and feeding clean warm milk in vessels that are scalded frequently. A little trouble? Certainly. Disease was invented to make trouble so cleanliness would be necessary to prevent it. If we had no troublesome things in the world we would still be living in caves and hunting each other with clubs.

UNDEFEATED CHAMPION OF THE NORTHWEST.

T. A. Ireland, Rifle Shot, of Colfax, Wash., Tells a Story.

Mr. Ireland is the holder of four world records and has yet to lose his first match—says he: "Kidney trouble so affected my vision as to interfere with my shooting. I became so nervous I could hardly hold a gun. There was severe pain in my back and head and my kidneys were terribly disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after I had doctored and taken nearly every remedy imaginable without relief. I will give further details of my case to anyone enclosing stamp."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Hibernian Verdict.

A New Yorker is the happy employer of an aged Irishman, who grows eloquent over the woes of the Emerald isle. Said the boss: "Pat, the king of England is dead."

The old man was silent for a moment. Then he took off his hat.

"Well," he said slowly, "as a man he was a fine bit of a boy. As Englishmen go, he was as good as yez can make them. As a king, there was nobody on earth as could beat him. But still, I'll keep me eye on George."

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

A Serious Blunder.

"Yes," said the drug clerk, "I am called up occasionally to compound prescriptions at night."

"Isn't a man apt to make mistakes working in semi-darkness?"

"You bet he is. I took a plugged quarter once."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

A woman can stand a lot of suffering if she doesn't have to keep quiet.

Dr. Pierce's pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take.

A man is never so easily deceived as when he is trying to deceive others.

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel (800 miles north of the International boundary). Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year.

1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item.

Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions.

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.

For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.

Chas. Pilling, Clifford Blk, Grand Forks, N. D.
J. M. MacLachlan, Box 116, Watertown, S. D.
E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson St., St. Paul, Minn.
(Use address nearest you)

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

FREE INFORMATION about irrigated farms in the Sacramento Valley, Cal. Ideal climate. Rich soil. Six and seven cuttings of alfalfa. First class poultry and dairy country. All the fruits. Easy terms. H. L. Hollister & Co., 203 LaSalle St., Chicago

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair.
Promotes a luxuriant growth.
Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color.
Cures scalp diseases & hair falling.
50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

Wanted Confidential Correspondents Everywhere in the UNITED STATES. Experience unnecessary. School Teachers, Stenographers, Telegraph Operators, Clerks and Professional men or women eligible. An unusual opportunity to increase your income. Particulars. Box 971, Los Angeles, Cal.

AGENTS can you sell lots in a county seat and commercial center of Rio Grande Valley. Splendid contract. Write for booklet F. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

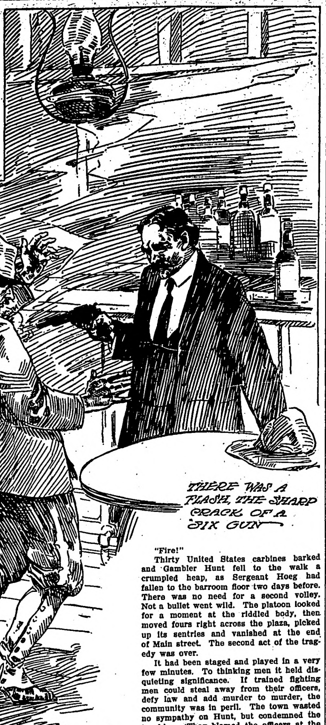
PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

AN ARMY TRAGEDY

by JOHN BRAND

COPYRIGHT by THE AUTHOR



THERE WAS A FLASH, THE SHARP CRACK OF A SIX GUN

"THE Stars and Stripes is a dirty rag," said Gambler Hunt.

"Apologize for that," demanded the chevroned sergeant.

"No," said Hunt.

Sergeant Hoeg leaned forward and slapped the gambler's face. There was a flash, the sharp crack of a "six-gun," and the sergeant lay a crumpled heap on the barroom floor.

Sergeant Hoeg was taken to the hospital at Fort Willamette, a mile away. Gambler Hunt was placed in the new county jail under the courthouse on the plaza, in charge of the county sheriff. And the town of Willamette went its way, but with a difference. No gamblers sunned themselves and trimmed their finger nails in front of the Main street saloons. No soldiers traveled to and from the fort across the dusty flat. The Twentieth United States cavalry deserted the town and attended strictly to its own affairs on the military reservation.

Stillness hung over the town, the tense stillness that spells danger and waits for an event. No crowds gathered. Citizens talked of the shooting with an unspoken question in their eyes as they looked out toward the fort. The sheriff was uneasy. "If that man Hoeg dies—" he said, and shook his head.

Out at the fort military routine ground along without a ripple—stables, guardmount, drill, parade—and if the men were dangerously angry they gave not a hint of it. The post commander, who was also colonel of the Twentieth, eyed them proudly. "They are taking it well," he said to his officers. "I know them. They are veterans, and obey orders. The law will take care of that man Hunt." The officers agreed. Not a threatening or angry murmur reached officers' row from the barracks. As a matter of precaution all passes were stopped and orders issued that no enlisted man should leave the reservation except on duty.

It was all that could be done. The men meant no mischief, but suppose they did? The strongest guard would be a rope of sand around the cluster of frame buildings called "fort." The one only way to prevent any possible trouble would be to take the troops out on a "hike"—practise march, it was called then—somewhere away from the place for a time. But the colonel would have had to ask orders from the war department to do this. And when the war department heard the reason for the request it would have thrown an official fit, and probably have convened a board of doctors to inquire into the sanity of the post commander at Fort Willamette. It is not probable, however, that such a thought entered the veteran colonel's head. He knew his men. They were veterans, proud of the flag they served and the cloth they wore.

Next day word came to the town that Sergeant Hoeg was dead. The sheriff went to see the prosecuting attorney. "That Hoeg man's dead. I don't like this business a heap," he told the prosecutor.

"What's the matter? The town's quiet."

"So's the fort. Too plenty much quiet. If the soldiers was buckin' round in town, or even out at the fort there, I wouldn't mind. But they're quiet—fightin'' quiet. They're keepin' away from town, and when they do come—" The sheriff wagged his head dismally.

"Very well," said the prosecuting attorney. "We'll go out to see the post commander and ask him to put an extra guard on and keep his men away from the town until things quiet down."

The prosecuting attorney was young, but he should have known better. He had been a soldier himself, had studied law while wearing a blue uniform at this same Fort Willamette. For civil authority to give or suggest orders to an officer in the regular army is to invite flat snubbing. He should have known, but he bustled confidently out to the fort. The sheriff followed, protesting. "We're goin' to the snubbin' post," he said.

The old fort smiled peacefully in the afternoon sun. Blue-shirted troopers lounged in the shade of barrack porches and corrals. The guard dozed on the benches in the guardhouse sallyport. A casual officer sauntered along the board walk down officers' row. The canteen was deserted. "Too plenty much quiet," commented the sheriff.

At headquarters the colonel received them courteously.

"What can I do for you, gentlemen?" he asked.

"We are afraid your men will lynch Hunt."

"My men have been forbidden to leave the reservation until further orders. They obey orders."

"We have heard rumors. You must put a strong guard around—"

"I command this post, gentlemen. Good afternoon."

Civil authority went back to town in a hurry, the prosecutor angry, the sheriff apprehensive. For the sheriff felt that he knew the situation better than did the colonel. The Twentieth cavalry had not been stationed long at Fort Willamette. They had come fresh from scouting and Indian chasing in the southwest in joyous anticipation of the comforts of a quiet post and of a civilized "sure enough," real town, not a group of 'dobe shacks in a desert. The enlisted men found a state of things they weren't used to and didn't like. Willamette had long since forgotten the days when the fort was a protection, and looked on it mainly as a source of revenue, while the enlisted men were merely more or less of a nuisance. Like all other western towns in the '80's and '90's Willamette was "wide open." Gamblers and gambling were a strong element in its life. From the suave and solid man of family who owned his home and business property, and dealt parental discipline by day and faro at night, to the casual "tin horn," the sporting fraternity was always in evidence. The Eighteenth cavalry, which had preceded the Twentieth at the fort, had learned to let the gamblers alone. Whenever a row occurred between the sport and the soldier the town marshal grabbed the soldier first—and last generally. Then the unlucky soldier was whipsawed—fine and jail in town—guardhouse and court-martial when he went back to the post. "Fighting B" and "Drunken G" and "Crazy I" troops of the old Eighteenth grew discreet if not wise. They avoided trouble and the gamblers grew to think they owned the town. The Twentieth knew nothing of this and its enlisted men were neither discreet nor wise. The result of several clashes with the town "tin horns" and sports had already made them feel that they were not getting an even break. Moreover, had not a man just been pardoned by the governor after receiving a 20-year sentence for a deliberate, foul and unprovoked murder? The case was an offense to justice still rankling in the minds of soldiers and civilians alike. Every one said it was safer to kill a man than steal a cow. The sheriff knew all this and feared that this murder of Sergeant Hoeg, one of the best-liked men in the regiment, would be more than they would stand. On his return from the post he deputized twelve good men and placed them as guards in the jail. Gamblers eagerly volunteered, but he would have none of them.

The town buzzed now. Soldiers were going to attack the jail, it was said. But not a blue uniform was seen on the streets. When taps had sounded across the flat, the fort was silent, with only the sentries pacing back and forth in the moonlight. Just the same, Sheriff McFarland posted his men in the jail and waited. Near midnight a whisper went round the saloons: "They're coming." The walks around the plaza filled with an expectant crowd. The jail in the basement of the courthouse was dark, but everyone knew that behind it was Hunt, guarded by the sheriff and twelve determined men with Winchesters. An attempt was made to notify the fort, but wires were cut and messengers were all too slow.

Across Poverty flat, down Main street, into the plaza swung a body of men, in army overcoats turned wrong side out, campaign hats, carbine at shoulder, Colt's forty-five at hip. It was the army-trained machine in action, swift, silent, certain. It circled the plaza in column of fours. Sentries took post at a curt word of command. The crowds fell back before threatening carbine muzzles. Up the broad stone walk, "Right front into line. Halt," and a grim platoon faced the jail door with carbines at the ready.

The leader stepped out briskly and hammered with a pistol butt.

"What do you want?" asked the sheriff from inside the door.

"We want Hunt."

"Now, boys, you don't—" began the sheriff. But the leader's voice cut in, clear, determined.

"No talk, sheriff. Open that door or we dynamite it."

Dynamite! The sheriff weakened. He looked up at his men standing with ready Winchesters at the head of the corridor steps, where they could have held back a regiment. "They've got dynamite. I guess we'll have to let 'em in, boys. Don't shoot," said he, and opened the door.

What followed was short, sharp—and terrible. Three men took Hunt from his cell and marched him to front and center of the waiting platoon.

"Have you anything to say?" the leader asked.

"No."

"Do you want to pray?"

"No."

He was given a shove forward. The men who held him stepped back to the ranks.

"Fire!"

Thirty United States carbines barked and Gambler Hunt fell to the walk a crumpled heap, as Sergeant Hoeg had fallen to the barroom floor two days before. There was no need for a second volley. Not a bullet went wild. The platoon looked for a moment at the riddled body, then moved fours right across the plaza, picked up its sentries and vanished at the end of Main street. The second act of the tragedy was over.

It had been staged and played in a very few minutes. To thinking men it held disquieting significance. If trained fighting men could steal away from their officers, defy law and add murder to murder, the community was in peril. The town wasted no sympathy on Hunt, but condemned the lynching. They blamed the officers at the fort for having, as they put it, allowed the outbreak to occur. The gambling contingent held it only proved the army no good, anyhow. The soldiers were loafers, too lazy to work. They did nothing but eat up the money of the taxpayers, said the hardworking experts of the faro and monte tables. The post commander could have prevented the lynching if he had done what the sheriff told him to do.

Then the prosecuting attorney did a most amazing thing and the last act of the tragedy began. Though not a soldier was to be seen about the town, he telegraphed to Washington: "Town in the hands of a military mob from the fort. Send help at once." The message struck the national capital like a Kansas cyclone. Thunder and lightning from the war department followed. Orders for arrests, boards of inquiry, courtmartials galore, chased each other after the first stuttering inquiries over the wires from stanch old officers who couldn't believe their military ears and eyes.

The court of inquiry developed little not already known. Hoeg was dead. Hunt had been killed by soldiers. But who were they? As witnesses the enlisted men were a frost. They stuck together and were either volubly ignorant or sullenly close mouthed.

Courtmartials were convened. A few—a very few—men were punished, more or less. Several deserted when things grew warm. And last of all happened a thing which must have caused the county officials who failed to protect their prisoner much satisfaction. No hint was dropped of the sheriff's failure to do his sworn duty. But the war department had to save face somehow. Its action reminds one of the Chinese emperor, who when his army mutinied always beheaded the general. The post commander of Fort Willamette was court-martialed for neglect of duty. He was already broken in spirit, weighed down by the stain on the honor of his regiment, but he was convicted, and sentenced to confinement to reservation limits and loss of pay for a year. The sentence didn't count for much; it was the stain on his record that must have most deeply wounded him.

The murder of Sergeant Hoeg "just happened." The lynching of Gambler Hunt might have been prevented if the army had not been tied hard and fast in red tape, or if among the officers, civil and military, on the spot there had been one big enough to meet the crisis.

As for the punishment of the enlisted men who were the real offenders, well—all this happened 20 years ago. There was no "big stick" in the White House then.

FIREWORKS TO PROTECT CROPS.

The great grain fields of the Sandborn ranch in Shasta county, Cal., are ingeniously protected at night from the vast flocks of wild geese and other aquatic fowl that do immense damage to crops by means of a display of fireworks.

Skyrockets and Roman candles were bought in large quantities by the management of the ranch and men are stationed at various points. Whenever a flock is heard honking in the distance several skyrockets or a shower of colored balls from a roman candle are sent upward and as a result the birds give the ranch a wide berth.

HARD TO PLEASE.

"You have lost two cooks this week, haven't you?"

"Yes; one left because my husband flirted with her, and the other left because he didn't."—Houston Daily Post.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature R.V. Pierce M.D.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

German Alcohol Stills.

An authority on alcohol stills says that there are 20,000 farm stills in operation on as many farms in Germany. The German government permits the farmer to produce a certain amount of grain or potato alcohol, the amount depending upon the size and location of the farm and the annual demand for the product, upon the payment of a reduced revenue tax. Alcohol distilled in excess of the quantity allowed is subject to the higher rate of taxation. Denatured alcohol, however, is not subject to any tax.

Girls don't take much interest in pugilism, but they will continue to train for the engagement ring.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Don't throw kisses, my boy; deliver them in person.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES

FOR RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES

1875 "Guaranteed"

Try Gillette Shaving

NO STROPPING NO HONING

Gillette

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT IT. It's a county seat in center of Rio Grande Valley and irrigation; railroad, canals, court house, bank, school, brick business houses. People needed to build its great resources, rich enough to make you rich. Write for booklet F, quick. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 28–1910.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief--Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion—improve the complexion—brighten the eyes. Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

GENUINE must bear signature: Brent Good

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.

Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

PAXTINE
TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE

PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK) C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES

SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC.

AT DRUGGISTS. TRIAL BOX BY MAIL 50C.

PLANTEN, 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.

Health and Wealth in Colorado

Of course you are familiar with the delights of Colorado's climate and it's scenic grandeur but do you realize that Eastern Colorado has millions of acres of fertile land which can be bought cheap now. This is

Your Opportunity

This land produces wonderful results and big profits. It is a marvelous dairy and poultry country and high price markets with splendid transportation facilities are close at hand. Dairy cows thrive on the natural grasses and are free from many of the troubles elsewhere.

Now is the time to see these rich lands along the Rock Island Lines and learn what others are doing.

Very Low Excursion Fares

are in effect daily to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, via Rock Island Lines, with long return limits.

Why not combine business and pleasure? Enjoy an outing among the Colorado Rockies and investigate the wonderful land opportunities on the way. Write me today and I will give you interesting literature and tell you how easily you can do it.

Rock Island

L. M. ALLEN
Passenger Traffic Manager
236 LaSalle Station Chicago, Illinois

KANTLEAK METAL SHINGLES

Cover your "Lid" with Kantleak Metal Shingles and keep dry! Best metal shingles on the market. If your dealer does not handle them, write to

DULUTH CORRUGATING & ROOFING CO.
Manufacturers of Metal Shingles, Roofing, Siding, etc.
DULUTH MINNESOTA

MSB

Minnesota School of Business

ESTABLISHED A THIRD OF A CENTURY

This school has been built upon the recommendations of satisfied students, who are now pleasantly and profitably employed all over the United States. May we satisfy you? Our free catalog will tell how.

54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

MICA AXLE GREASE

is the turning-point to economy in wear and tear of wagons. Try a box. Every dealer, everywhere

STANDARD OIL CO. (Incorporated)

SAVING THE SHAVINGS

by WILLARD G. BLEYER

OUR FORESTS will last but 25 years longer if we continue to cut them at the present rate, declares Gifford Pinchot, former general forester, and one of the best informed men on the forest problem of the country.

The increased cost of lumber, the scarcity of many kinds of woods, the high price of print paper, already bear witness to the forest famine that faces the United States.

And still only one-third of every tree cut down is now being utilized.

Two-thirds of every one of the millions of trees felled annually, including the big stumps, the heaps of branches, cords of slabs and tons of sawdust are being destroyed, burned up to get rid of the so-called waste.

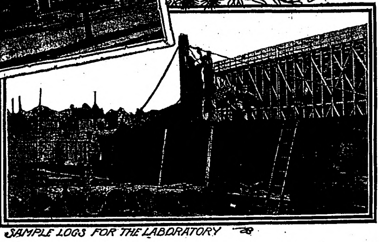
Incidentally burning over the slashings starts forest fires that destroy annually millions of feet of standing timber.

Now Uncle Sam is going to try to save the shavings and make cheaper print paper, wood alcohol, turpentine and other useful products out of the two-thirds of the tree that is now being thrown away.

The United States forest service has just established a big experimental laboratory out in the heart of the middle west, at Madison, the capital of the state of Wisconsin, in connection with the state university, in which government experts will attack the problems of these forest products.

TIMBER-TESTING LABORATORY

NEW FOREST PRODUCTS LABORATORY AT UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN



SAMPLE LOGS FOR THE LABORATORY

EXPERIMENT IN MAKING OF PRINT PAPER

The new building has just been formally dedicated and the fine equipment of machinery and testing apparatus which is to make it the most complete laboratory of its kind in the country is rapidly being installed. The staff of some twenty government investigators has already arrived and been established in the suite of offices in the new building and for some months have been delivering lectures before the students of forestry.

In the new laboratory the United States forest service and the University of Wisconsin will co-operate in the investigations which will be made to solve problems confronting the paper manufacturers, lumbermen, builders and others who deal with the products of the American forests. The building itself, which cost some $50,000, and the site upon which it stands, south of University avenue, between Camp Randall and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks, were furnished by the university. The equipment was furnished by the government at a cost of about $75,000 and the staff of investigators is also maintained by government appropriations. These men, in addition to their laboratory work, will deliver lectures in the regular forestry course of the university. The laboratories, too, although devoted chiefly to the government experiments, are open to the faculty and students for advanced research along the lines of study undertaken by the experts.

The laboratory, which faces north on University avenue, is a fine fireproof building of dark brown brick, trimmed with white Bedford stone and roofed with red tiles, with a 180-foot frontage and a depth of 80 feet. Immediately east of the building a private spur from the railroad carries the lumber into the laboratory yards. A derrick is to be erected north of the track for unloading the big logs and stumps for the experiments from the flat cars. Immediately opposite, south of the track, is to be installed a small sawmill with a saw which will cut timbers up to 20 feet in length.

Already logs of long-leaf, short-leaf and loblolly yellow pine have been sent in to the laboratories by lumbermen and paper manufacturers at Kenwood, La., Hattiesburg, Miss., Thornton, Ark., and spruce logs from the Maine woods. A number of fat pine stumps for the turpentine, rosin and alcohol tests have also been received.

Sheds for air drying the lumber line the west side of the yard, which is to be graded and covered with cinders. Immediately back of the building is a deep, cement-lined pit to hold the creosote to be used in experiments until it is pumped out into the laboratory tanks.

The problem of making a satisfactory print paper from materials other than spruce and hemlock is one which will receive particular attention, and for this purpose a complete paper making plant has been made a part of the laboratory equipment. Every process, from the breaking of the wood into chips for the first treatment by soda and sulphite solutions to the final running of the sheets of paper through the calendering rolls to produce a finished surface, will be followed carefully, so that the results of substitution of various woods for the usual materials will be noted at each stage of manufacture.

Both soda and sulphate processes of treatment of the chips will be used and the laboratory will make its own sulphite liquor in a vat adjacent to the digestors, in which the wood is cooked by steam until the lignin is all dissolved and only the cellulose left. A blast of high-pressure steam drives the chips against the side of the digestor, further dividing the cellulose fibers, and then the whole mass is pumped out by a centrifugal pump into a tank in which it is stirred until the fiber is still further broken up. Over and over it is run through "riffler" troughs and over screens where suction draws out the fiber to be used and leaves behind the small chips, splinters and other waste.

When the liquor has been washed out of it in a washer driven by an electric motor (a contrivance much like the housewife's washing machine) it is put into a press and the water is squeezed out of it. Such of the pulp blocks from the press as are not wanted immediately are then in convenient form to store away on shelves.

After going through the beating engines the refined pulp is run on to the screens of the paper machine and taken up by felt rollers, from which it goes to wooden rollers and then between metal rollers to the steam-heated drying drums, where the wet sheet is run back and forth until it is ready for the final smooth finish of the hot steel calendering rolls. Any grade of paper can be made on this machine, from the roughest brown paper to fine correspondence paper, in a running sheet 15 inches wide, and even a water-marking device is attached, so that the impression can be made on the wet sheet before it goes through the rollers and on to the winding drum at the end.

How to make timber last longer by protecting it with preservatives from the various borers and fungous growths which attack wood will be another important problem to which considerable time and laboratory space are to be given.

Beneath the building is a great pit, heated by steam to a temperature most favorable to rot, and there, in separate glass compartments all about the walls, are to be samples of timbers with the various fungous growths and animal and insect enemies of the wood attached. The progress of their effect upon the wood will be closely watched and compared with that of the same pests upon samples of the wood treated with different preservatives, prepared and applied in the room above.

A big skylight and many windows make the preservative laboratory an excellent place to work and every facility is provided for testing the various forms of preservatives and antiseptics to protect timbers, such as those in mines and water-front piers, which are much subject to the attack of minute animals and plants.

Into two great treatment cylinders the timbers are shoved and steam pumps force the oil from tanks above at high pressure into the cylinders. When no more oil will enter the cylinder, even under 150 pounds pressure per square inch, it is drawn off and again returned to the tanks and measured. The difference between the amount drawn off and that originally forced in, deducting the oil collected from the vapor condenser, gives the exact amount absorbed by the timber, which is always weighed before and after treatment as a further means of calculating the oil absorbed.

In a small cylinder the preservative may be applied at a pressure of 600 pounds per square inch for smaller specimens and the resulting protection can be compared with that of the lower pressure preservatives.

Open tanks are provided for tests of preservatives that do not require pressure. These are heated with steam coils and an iron cage hung above lets the railroad ties or other timbers down into the hot oil. By a trolley arrangement the cage can be lifted and run across to other tanks filled with cold oil, so that it is not necessary to pump out the hot oil and replace it with the cold, as in laboratories where there is but one set of tanks.

All about the inner walls of the preservatives laboratory are ranged shelves to accommodate the samples of wood for treatment and those already submitted to the different forms of protection against rot and other attacks.

What woods will best stand various kinds of strain, in bridges, buildings and different structures will be determined in the timber testing laboratory, where two seven-horsepower motors furnish the electric current to run the machinery.

In the torsion machine timbers can be twisted until the strain reaches 30,000 inch-pounds. Five "Universal" testing machines are provided to test the strength of different woods under slow pressure, one having a capacity of 100,000 pounds, another twice that, and three other smaller ones 30,000 pounds.

To see what sudden strains oak, pine, maple and different woods will withstand a Hatt-Turner impact machine was built in the machine shops of the Purdue university and sent to the forestry laboratory for experiments. It can be so gauged that the hammers, ranging in weight from 50 to 250 pounds, can be dropped from heights up to six feet upon the beam or block of wood, exerting a sudden pressure of hundreds of pounds.

In a laboratory where so much machinery is in constant use there must be facilities for instant repairs. For this purpose one end of the laboratory is fitted up into a machine shop. Here, too, much labor is saved by use of electricity to run the engine lathe, milling machine and other necessary apparatus. Beside the anvil there is a gas forge for heating and tempering steel.

The equipment of the wood shop, where timbers and samples of wood are to be prepared for tests, is very complete.

Steam heated ovens for drying wood, in order to test the shrinkage, warping tendencies and water content of different woods are a part of the laboratory equipment, and a portion has also been set off for a seasoning room.

In this connection, in another laboratory, tests will be conducted to discover the heat conductivity of different woods, to assist in the work of the kiln drying and preserving tests.

Stumps and other resinous portions of the trees now burned as trash will be put into stills and retorts and the turpentine, tar and gases will be extracted, carried off, separated and refined into the various commercial products. If methods of doing this economically can be fixed upon, the problem of utilizing much of the big pine trees now wasted will be solved.

All of the many chemical tests made necessary by the work of the different departments will be centered in a big chemistry laboratory on the second floor, where eight large windows on the east and south furnish admirable light, and eight stone tables, besides those running all about the room beneath the windows, give room for the apparatus and experiments.

As some of the tests will produce strong fumes, there are tables encased in glass with hoods and ventilators above to carry off the smells and small doors through which the experimenters will work.

A corner room is set apart for special work in distilling turpentine and other products and special unlighted space is provided as a chemicals storage room. Still other unlighted spaces are reserved as photographic darkrooms and record vaults for the safe keeping of the valuable reports of the work done.

One of the most interesting offices is that of the pathologist who has charge of the experiments with the fungi and other enemies of the woods. Upon his desk are large collections of glass tubes containing cultures of every sort of vegetable growth which feeds upon wood fibers, and samples of all the minute animalculae which attack timbers. Many he secured last summer in his visits to mines in different parts of the country, since one of the greatest sources of the dangerous mine cave-in is the destruction of supports by these little enemies.

A large drafting room, lighted from the north and east, a library and filing room, a lecture hall and a suite of 17 offices for the staff officials and their clerks and stenographers complete the building arrangements below and in the attic a space for storing materials which cannot be left in the open yard and which is reached by an elevator from the basement.

The government will appoint to regular work in the laboratory, as an addition to the present staff, several of the students who have been doing forestry work the past winter at the University of Wisconsin.

The forestry lecture course of the university, just closed, included this year, besides the regular work under State Forester E. M. Griffith, lectures by W. L. Hall, assistant forester at the Washington office; R. S. Kellogg, who holds a similar position; Franklin H. Smith, in charge of the wood utilitization office of the government at Chicago; H. F. Weiss and H. S. Bristol, assistant directors of the new laboratory; L. F. Hawley, in charge of the wood distillation of the laboratory, and Frederick Dunlap, in charge of the kiln drying investigations.

At the time of the formal dedication of the laboratory the various departments of the government work were in full operation, that the visitors may see the actual work in progress—just how paper is made; how timbers are tested; how stumps are distilled, and how the little marine animals are prevented from boring through shipping.

The staff of the new laboratory is as follows: McGarvey Cline, Purdue '04, director; H. S. Bristol, Yale, and H. F. Weiss, Yale, assistant directors; H. D. Tiemann, Stevens Institute of Technology, in charge of technology; Ralph Thelen, University of California, mechanical engineer; W. H. Kempfer, University of Michigan, in charge of maintenance; Edwin Sutermeister, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood pulp laboratory; E. Bateman, Yale, in charge of chemistry; L. F. Hawley, Cornell, in charge of wood distillation; Frederick Dunlap, Cornell, in charge of kiln drying operations; F. W. Bond, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood preservation; C. T. Barnum, Cornell, and C. P. Winslow, Yale, engineers in wood preservation laboratory; J. A. Newlin, Purdue, in charge of timber tests; H. E. Surface, Ohio State university, engineer in wood chemistry; H. E. McKenzie, University of Maine, engineer in timber tests; C. J. Humphrey, University of Nebraska and Cornell, pathologist, and A. W. Schorger, Ohio State university, chemist.

RIVAL OF WESTON

Septuagenarian Walks 13 Miles Before Breakfast Daily.

Capt. N. H. Chittenden at 70, Takes Long "Hike" Every Morning—Has Many Friends Among the Indians.

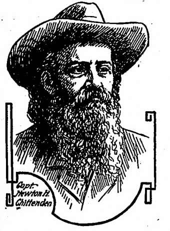
New York.—The sight of a gaunt and bearded man in sombrero and corduroys who daily turns in his tracks at the New Jersey end of the Fort Lee ferry, has awakened the curiosity of dwellers in the vicinity.

The appearance of the man is decidedly "Wild West," and the youngsters near the ferry who are astir at about seven o'clock mornings have had visions of redskins and buffaloes lately when the stranger has rewarded their vigils by coming on the scene.

The western-looking one is Capt Newton H. Chittenden, the first explorer of the Queen Charlotte islands, who although 70 years old, walks from Alpine, N. J., to the ferry, a distance of 13 miles, regularly before eight o'clock each morning as a "constitutional."

That Captain Chittenden deserves a nicely ornamented spot in the walkers' section of the Hall of Fame along with Colonel Weston and Mayor Gaynor is evident from his exploits.

In 1888 and 1889 he broke the record for long walks by making a continuous journey on foot diagonally across the continent from the Pacific to the Gulf of Mexico, a distance, including several hundred miles of side expeditions, amounting to 3,350 miles. He was accompanied by a pack burro.



Capt. Newton H. Chittenden

The trip was for archeological and ethnological research, and Captain Chittenden considers it one of the severest of his career. He estimates that he dragged his donkey more than five miles through the overflowed bottoms of Louisiana.

Of the more than 200,000 miles which Captain Chittenden has covered in his 40 years of traveling, 25,000 miles have been on foot. Testimony of his researches are found in most of the famous museums in this country, and in museums of Canada and England as well.

Among American pathfinders it is said that this explorer has devoted more severe labor to the accomplishment of his many expeditions than any other ten men of this country. His donations to museums have included many valuable relics and much data pertaining to the Indian tribes and prehistoric Americans.

Captain Chittenden has visited practically every Indian tribe on the continent and has lived with some of the distinguished old chiefs as long as six months, or a year. He has consequently become versed in several Indian languages. It is an interesting fact that, save on one or two occasions when protection from border ruffians demanded it, he never carried a weapon.

Chief Edonsau of the Queen Charlotte tribe was Captain Chittenden's great friend. Poundmaker, chief of the Saskatchewan Crees, whom he visited during the Riel rebellion, was another intimate. Others were American Horse, a great war chief of the Sioux; Red Cloud, Sitting Bull, Two Strike, and the noted Chief Joseph, who came to see him in camp on the Spokane river in the early days.

In the winter of 1908-'09 upon visiting Chief Manuel of the Cahuilla and Serano Indians of southern California he was invited to address the tribe at their fiesta, and he remained in camp with them for 40 days.

As evidence of his pedestrian habits, Captain Chittenden in 1882, when provided with free transportation to and from the gold fields of Caribou, left the stage in the interior and proceeded 300 miles alone on foot among the various Indian tribes inhabiting that portion of British Columbia. Two years later, in the dead of winter, with the thermometer reaching 15 degrees below zero and the snow in places 15 feet deep, he walked alone over the mountains into the gold fields of Coeur d'Alene and then crossed the Bitter Root range into Montana a distance altogether of more than 300 miles.

Country roads are child's play to Captain Chittenden, whose pedestrianship has been devoted to rougher travel than that which his rivals have experienced. He attributes his unusual degree of endurance to inheritance and careful living. He has never smoked nor taken a drop of liquor, wine, or beer, and has not drunk a cup of tea or coffee in 40 years.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

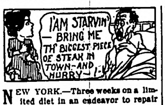
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1910. NO. 16.

City Items in Terse Form

Metropolitan News of Interest to All Readers

Some Woes of Diet Treatment Victim



I'AM STARVIN' — BRING ME TH' BIGGEST PIECE OF STEAK IN TOWN—AND HURRY—!

NEW YORK.—Three weeks on a limited diet in an endeavor to repair the internal damage done by a runaway appetite couldn't obliterate the memory of three-inch steaks and milk-fed clams and all the while that James McGowan sat in front of a mirror in the Memorial hospital at Orange watching his waistline assuming Polaire proportions his mind kept reverting to menu cards he had met. He talked constantly in his sleep, the burden of his oratory being "with mushroom 20 cents extra," and "dishes marked X are ready."

Try as he would he could not erase recollections of times when he had compelled the cook to beg for mercy. He read whole reams of antifat fiction and did everything possible to discourage his appetite, but it wasn't any use. For breakfast, luncheon and dinner he has been allowed a walnut, a sprig of lettuce and ten drops of diluted water. He tried hard to convince himself that he was overeating and begged the hospital authorities to cut the menu to one course.

But his dreams were haunted with sides of beef, acres of French fried potatoes and showers of gravy. He stood it as long as he could, but yesterday morning at precisely a quarter of four o'clock, after the last of a regiment of savory squabs had marched directly under his nose, each squab carrying a julienne potato for a musket, he sat up in bed and in clarion tones demanded that the nurse bring him two yards of porterhouse steak, half a peck of French fried potatoes and such vegetable brick-a-brack as might be necessary to accompany the steak on its journey.

"Nothing doing in the steak line," said the sleepy nurse. "Go back to bed and I'll give you another walnut."

"Im done with walnuts," said Mr. McGowan. "I've eaten so many I'm beginning to feel like a squirrel. It's James for a little broiled cow and fixings."

The nurse assured him that it was against the rules to allow diet patients to break training. She left the room just then and her patient embraced the opportunity to take himself by the hand and make a dash for freedom and regular food.

Policemen McManus and Almond saw the white-robed figure and sneaked up behind it with drawn clubs. Believing it to be the ghost of some misguided commuter, they were getting ready to soak it on the head when Mr. McGowan saw them.

"Gentlemen," he pleaded, "have pity on me and get me something to eat."

"What you need is something to wear," said McManus. "What do you mean by frightening two honest policemen out of a night's rest with your night-shirt drill?"

Cubs' Mascot Tamed After Wild Chase

CHICAGO.—Bruno, a black cub bear late of Montana, mascot of the Cubs baseball team, was tamed a few days ago.

Bruno escaped from his cage home in the basement of the Monroe club, West Monroe and Green streets, and ran amuck on the West side, creating a panic among pedestrians and children, snapping at cats, growling at chickens, and attacking stray dogs.

Two baseball "fans" were in the midst of a heated argument over the merits of the Sox and Cubs when Bruno, running at full speed and pursued by a score of club members, pedestrians, policemen and children, rudely upset the Sox fan.

"Pretty good team we have, eh?" asked the Cub fan of the Sox supporter, who was brushing the dust from his clothes.

"Oh, I don't know."

"Well, that was our mascot. And the team is traveling about as fast as Bruno," added the Cub rooter.

"Then the team is going some," admitted the Sox fan as he turned and watched the bear mascot disappear in a cloud of dust.

Bruno, closely followed by the small army of pursuers, continued to fight everything that came his way, until, bleeding from a dozen flesh wounds, the animal fell exhausted at West Adams and Morgan streets.

The cub was penitent, and showed no desire to romp and play until one of the club officials had tied a red ribbon about its neck. Then Bruno brightened up, but did not try to escape again. The cub was to make its first public appearance at the West side ball grounds as mascot of the Cubs in the afternoon.

Trials of Girl at the Music Counter

?
PLEASE PLAY THIS LIST OF SONGS

ST. LOUIS.—"Young woman," said a motherly individual, holding two small children in her weary arms, "will you play 'When the Roses Bloom Again' for me, please?"

The music counter young woman, perched on her stool, selected the piece mentioned among a heap of others and prepared to "reel" it off.

The shabby woman listened attentively until the last notes died out.

"Thank you very much," she said, and strolled slowly off.

"There," grumbled the girl behind the music counter, "that is only one of the things that we've got to put up with. There are a hundred others, and as soon as I can get in the ribbons' I'm going to get out of the music, once and for all. The work is worth twice as much as any other job in the store. People think that you are there to entertain the public instead of to sell goods. I feel safe in saying that fully 65 per cent. of the people who ask for a concert do not buy a single ten-cent song."

Lawyer's Odd Plea Sets Negro Free

TREAT HIM LIKE A DOG IS WHAT I ASK

NEW YORK.—M. Bourke Cockran's eloquence won the acquittal in the court of general sessions of Victor Nelson, a negro, accused of the murder on March 28 last of Claude Humphreys, another negro. Cockran was assigned to defend Nelson by Judge Malone.

"I can scarcely expect you to treat this negro like a peer. Then treat him like a dog," said Cockran in his summing up of the case. "Yes, treat him like a dog, if you must. A dog that bites wantonly we kill, but a dog that bites in defense of his own master's home we protect. Men have given their lives in defense of such a dog. Give my client the samt shift you would give such a dog."

Mr. Cockran began his address to the jury by reminding the jurors that with one exception they had said they were not prejudiced against a negro.

"We accepted this one man with an avowed prejudice," said Mr. Cockran, "because we believed he was honest in his avowals that he would be fair in any case.

"But I am sure that you all feel a prejudice against a negro. I feel the same prejudice myself. I once stopped in a hotel, where there were private baths. I started to take a bath and found that a negro was using the tub. Do you think that I bathed in that tub afterward? I could not. It was prejudice that I could not rid myself of, and I do not feel that such prejudice can be avoided."

The killing, according to Mr. Cockran, was the outgrowth of the social and economic conditions in this country. He said that his client, while a high school graduate, had tried to secure decent work in this country, but had finally found himself driven to accept work as a scullion, in the house where Humphreys was introduced to him

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

"Con" Men Find Virginian Easy Mark

YOU BET I'LL KEEP IT. I AM GREAT AT THAT EMPTY
YOU'LL KEEP IT FOR ME WONT YOU?

A STORY told at police headquarters by Clarence Davis of Glenallen, Va., recalled to older members of the force the day when confidence men had full sway here. The Virginian related that three men had inveigled him into matching twenty-five-cent pieces in a room at the Raleigh hotel, and that they had disappeared, one of them taking $458 belonging to him.

When Davis reached the city and he registered at a hotel near John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue, he was seated on the coping at the northwest corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 7th street when a stranger spoke to him. He did not hesitate to tell the stranger he was from near Richmond, and the lattes said he was acquainted with people in Richmond.

The Virginian informed the stranger that he was thinking of going to New York, and that he was a bricklayer by trade.

"So am I a bricklayer," the stranger said, "and I'm out of work."

"Come to New York with me," Davis told him, "and I will see that you get a job."

Soon a second man, a red-haired individual, who said he was an Englishman, appeared and was introduced. A drink was suggested. The men had one in a saloon on Pennsylvania avenue.

Davis said he would go back to Richmond and draw his money from bank in order that he might have funds enough to see him through his trip to New York. Accompanied by Smith, the man who first accosted him, Davis went to Richmond, drew his money and returned the next day. The red-haired man and a friend met them and the quartet went to the hotel where the alleged swindlers had taken a room.

A game of matching quarters was indulged in and Davis lost what silver change he had. It was then necessary for him to get out his roll of bills. It was the first time Lawrence and Hopkins, as the two "con" men were known, had seen the roll. At the suggestion of one of the men, Davis handed his roll to Hopkins to hold. Lawrence then said he wanted to get a check cashed, and it was while he was pretending he was looking for a man to cash it that those in the party became separated.

Fire Drill in the Big Printing Shop

FIRE." The word was passed around among amateur firefighters of the government printing office one afternoon recently. The fire brigade is said to consist of about a dozen laborers.

Really there was no fire about the big printing office, save in the engine room furnaces and under the smelting pots.

Some one high in authority at the printery had read a newspaper account of a disastrous conflagration in the west. The story of the blaze put the notion in his head to resurrect a "general order" of several years' standing which provides for a fire drill at intervals.

Upon the receipt of the order from the front office the amateur firemen got busy without delay. There was a dragging forth of hose and other apparatus for fighting "the red demon." A tall man, who seemed to be in supreme command of the firemen, gave the orders in cool, confident tones.

Innumerable hose lines were connected with fire plugs in the new building. Nozzles were aimed at the venerable structure across Jackson alley. As the streams of water began to play and the spray was rising in clouds, like the mist from Niagara Falls, the printers, bookbinders, woman folders and other workers began to file out of the buildings.

There is an order that the exit of the workmen and workwomen must be through the side doors along the alley and G street. Consequently, as the head of the line of workers reached the doors on the alley and witnessed the deluge of water crashing against the walls of the old building and flying back in foaming masses, they tried to force thier way back into the new structure.

Hundreds of toilers behind, not aware of the conditions in front, pressed forward and forced the front rank out into the alley and into the torrents of flying water. The ensued a scene of excitement.

Army of Bees Sting Horses to Death

A TEAM of horses, stung by a couple of bees, plunged madly into twenty hives, upsetting them, releasing an army of 80,000 angry bees, which stung the horses to death, a few days ago, over on the Virginia side of the Potomac river.

The negro driver, who ran at the first alarm, did not escape unwounded. Thousands of bees pursued his flight, and he was terribly stung, but lives.

The coal wagon, driven by George Low, drew up in front of the place about 8 o'clock in the afternoon. Low was a little dubious about venturing inside. He could plainly hear an occasional buzzing that was not altogether music to his ears.

A black swarm of buzzing bees immediately flew toward the horses and Low. The latter went scampering down the road with his hands up to his face, brushing away a thousand or more of the insects which had gathered about him.

The frightened horses were almost instantly covered with the insects. They started to turn toward the road, but sank limply in the traces, whinneying wildly with pain.

The entire neighborhood was instantly aroused. A crowd collected at a safe distance to watch the unusual event. No one dared at first to go to the rescue of the horses.

Fervid Vocabulary Cause of Arrest

THAT S'NUF YUH
!!-!!- SAH

THE lone policeman who stands guard by the District building in Washington was making his rounds placidly when there dawned upon his horrified mind the fact that a horse was standing with his fore feet upon the District building's own sidewalk.

The horse was hitched to a two-seated surrey. Upon a seat of the surrey sat a gentleman with a broad black hat.

"Get that horse off the sidewalk," said the policeman.

"If you want this horse to get off that sidewalk you put him off yourself, you—" The remainder of the sentence was more in the way of expletive than explanation.

"You better shut up and get that horse where it belongs," the policeman pursued.

And then there followed a controversy. It was heated, to use a well-worn but perfectly good phrase, and in the end the policeman hopped into the buggy and took the broad-hatted gentleman around to police station No. 1, where it became evident that the prisoner was a southerner and was being charged with profanity—and lots of it, varied, variegated, lurid, personal and original.

The southern gentleman kept it going to some extent even while he was being examined at No. 1, but he did quit in time to let them know that he was not the owner of the horse.

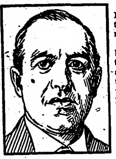
About this time a hatless, breathless real estate agent rushed out of the District building.

"Somebody's run off with my horse and buggy! Where did they go?" he shouted.

Meantime No. 1 had managed to cool the southern gentleman to a state where he would disgorge $5 as collateral, the price of his profanity.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

JOHN MITCHELL'S WORK



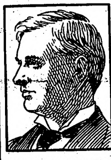
John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, continues to work for the improvement, advancement and safety of the man who toils with his hands.

For a couple of years now, Mr. Mitchell has been connected with the National Civic Federation, an organization backed by Andrew Carnegie and other millionaires. His office has to do with the welfare of the workingman and results of his work have shown that no better choice could have been made.

John Mitchell is a self made man. He knows what it is to toil in a coal mine. He has gone down in the pits not knowing whether he would come out alive. He has had some narrow escapes, and he has seen his companions and friends die at their work. He is noted for his kind-heartedness. In the fall of 1898 he was vice-president and organizer of the United Mine Workers of America. There was a strike at the Virden Coal company's mine in Virden, Ill. For days the striking miners camped around the stockade the company had erected for the protection of its property. Mr. Mitchell, acompanied by several newspaper men, visited the camp of grim toilers one night, and the sights he witnessed touched his heart. Then came the day when the company attempted to land a train-load of negroes from Alabama to take the places of the white men. Governor Tanner had refused to order out the militia to protect negroes from other states. There was a riot. Nineteen or twenty men in the ranks of the strikers fell dead under the shower of bullets from rifles used by hired detectives from an agency in St. Louis. Negroes were killed, and one or two guards slain. The engineer of the train was shot through the arm.

The other day he went out to St. Louis from New York and talked on the subject closest to his heart—that of placing safeguards around the working man.

GORE SHOCKED SENATORS

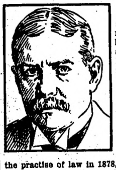


Thomas Pryor Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma, caused his fellow members of the Unitell States senate to sit up and take notice a day or so before the adjournment of congress. It takes a great deal to cause the staid old senate to show anything like a panic, but when Senator Gore intimated that an effort had been made to bribe him to the extent of $25,000 to $50,000 in connection with legislation affecting $3,000,000 in attorney's fees for services rendered to the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, in land and township sites, the senator gave immediate attention.

Then when the senator involved two former members of the senate in the alleged plot the upper branch of congress strained its ears to catch every word. The senator's charges reached across the capitol to the house side, and a member of the lower branch also was dragged into the affair.

Mr. Gore did not let the loss of his eyesight interfere with his schooling. He was graduated from a normal school and then went through Cumberland university, in Tennessee. He was married to Miss Nina Kay, in 1900, and she has been a great help to him in his reading. He removed to Texas in 1895, and was a delegate to the National Populist convention in St. Louis, in 1896. He was nominated by the Populists as a candidate for congress, but was defeated. After he had removed to Oklahoma in 1901 he became a member of the Territorial council, and when Oklahoma became a state, he was elected senator.

JUSTICE MOODY TO RETIRE

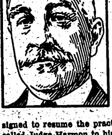


Because of his continued illness, Associate Justice William H. Moody of the United States supdeme court must resign. Under the law a member of the court must serve ten years before he can retire on pay. To aid Justice Moody, Senator Lodge introduced in the senate a bill giving him his pay in future because it was illness and not a desire to enter other business that caused his inability to give his attention to court duties.

Justice Moody was attorney general when President Roosevelt appointed him to the bench in 1906. He has been ill much of the time since then, but it was not until about one year ago that his ailment took such a serious turn that he was not able to give his attention to his duties.

Justice Moody is a native of Massachusetts and a graduate of Harvard. He was admitted to the practise of law in 1878, and served as solicitor for Haverhill and district attorney for the eastern district of Massachusetts. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress from the Sixth district to fill a vacancy, and was also a member of the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh congresses. He was secretary of the navy for two years before he was attorney general.

HARMON FIRST IN CONTEST



Judson Harmon, governor of Ohio, who has been renominated by the Democrats of his state for a second term, is the first in the field for the presidential nomination in 1912. Of course a great deal depends upon whether he is elected this fall, but his friends are sanguine of success. Should he be defeated in his race for governor it naturally would put him out of the contest for the presidency.

Governor Harmon was born in Hamilton county, Ohio, in 1846. His father was a clergyman. He was graduated from Denison university in 1866, and from the Cincinnati Law school in 1869. The first public office he held was that of common pleas judge from 1876 to 1878. Then he became judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, holding this office from 1878 to 1887, when he resigned to resume the practise of law. On June 8, 1895, President Cleveland called Judge Harmon to his cabinet as attorney general. He held this important position two years and again went back to the practise of his profession. He was president of the Ohio Bar association and member of the faculty of the law department of the University of Cincinnati.

In January, 1910, he took the oath of office as governor of the Buckeye state to serve two years. His renomination and his endorsement as the party's candidate for president by the Ohio convention speaks louder than words so far as his record as governor is concerned.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. - MINN.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

At various points throughout the country there are vivid recollections of the deaths due to the mysterious outbreak of infantile paralysis. Not only children, but elderly persons were among its victims. At New York those who died from the malady included a prominent business man and a priest who had visited young members of his flock afflicted with infantile paralysis and caught the illness from them. There were numerous cases in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Specialists in the Rockefeller laboratories at New York have been working on infantile paralysis for a year, using monkeys in experiments which have demonstrated that it is not due to an abnormal condition of the blood, but is an infectious disease of the spinal cord. Despite acreful microscopic search for a distinctive microbe, so far none has been found. Experiments are now directed to the discovery of an antitoxin for infantile paralysis such as that which has been used with marked success in the treatment of diphtheria. The knowledge that has been gained of the nature of the disease is expected to facilitate the discovery of its cure.

It transpires that the recent report from Germany that a certificate of inspection on importations of pork from America would be deemed adequate was erroneous. The German government has not removed its interdict in this regard. Knowing that the special inspection for trichina has been abandoned in this country, Germany will no longer request special certificates as to that disease, because it is realized that no such certificates can be produced. This, of course, leaves matters unchanged. But at present there is no worry as to exportations of American pork because a short supply of hogs and an avid market for pork have caused prices to mount to heights at which exportation is unprofitable.

A New York yachting writer remarks that the schooner Shamrock, once a proud bearer of the New York Yacht club pennant, has been "humbled" by conversion into a fishing boat with gasoline engine. The service may be humble in comparison with the royal service of a well-kept racing craft, but it is far from humble in comparison with the fate of the latest racers for the America's cup, the majority of which have gone to the scrap yard with their first paint on their plates.

A French astronomer announces that the comet which was visible recently is not Halley's, and he promises that the genuine comet will appear in August. We positively refuse to get excited over any more comet announcements. It is too late now to get anything into the magazines about an August comet, anyhow.

An immigration inspector passed a woman who could not speak the language when her parrot, weary of the parley, ejaculated, "Cut that out!" "All right," said the inspector. "Your parrot speaks English. That shows you have been in this country, as you say. You're admitted." Look for a boom in educated parrots.

Ingenuity worthy of a better cause was that of a couple of Jersey robbers who, on calling at a house and being admitted, bound and gagged the inmates, after which one joyously played the piano to deceive the neighbors while the other gathered up the loot. This is the whistler at the plow with a vengeance.

It may become necessary for a benign government to arrange a system of pensions for those who are killed or wounded in the war the automobile is waging on the human race.

A New Jersey man receivec $200 for a tooth he lost in a fight with a street car conductor. This is one of the crudest as well as most expensive cases of dentistry on record.

According to a physician everybody will be crazy in 2175, if the present ratio of increase does not decline. That will be a great year for musical comedies.

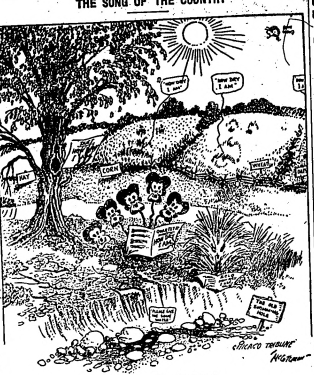
A Pittsburg sculptor arrested on a Paris street wore nothing but a pair of socks. He probably thought he was at home and sufficiently clothed in smoke.

Man gets five years in prison for putting dynamite on car tracks "just for fun." It's horrible to think what would have happened to him if he'd been in earnest.

That professor who wants imbeciles killed at birth overlooks the possibility that he might not have survived to make the suggestion.

The safe and sane coal mine is among the things eagerly hoped for, but as yet not probable.

THE SONG OF THE COUNTRY



"How dry I am, how dry I am;
Nobody knows how dry I am."

INDICTED AS JURY TAMPERER

CHICAGO GROCER CHARGED WITH TRYING TO CORRUPT.

Indictment Furnishes Sensation in Legislative Bribery Scandal—Browne's Case Continued.

Chicago.—A fresh sensation in connection with the legislative bribery scandal arose when State's Attorney Wayman Wednesday announced that an indictment had been voted charging John A. Maloy, a grocer, with attempting to corrupt Oscar T. Morford, a juror in the recent trial of Lee O'Neil Browne.

Morford, his wife and his father, Thorough Morford, testified before the grand jury. Mrs. Morford testified that shortly after the Browne jury had been sworn, she went to Maloy's grocery within the neighborhood in which the Morfords live. Maloy, she said, gave her two cigars, which he asked her to give to her husband, who had been accepted on the jury. Maloy asked her to use her influence to persuade her husband to vote for the acquittal of Browne, holding out as a reward of doing so that Morford would not have to work for a railroad any more as he would get a lump of money.

By agreement between counsel the retrial of the case of Lee O'Neil Browne, charged with bribing Representative Charles A. White to vote for William Lorimer for United States senator, was continued to July 20.

DEATH IN TORNADO'S PATH

Hits Circus and Shatters Tent, Killing One—Levels Crops—Wires Are Down.

Watertown, S. D.—One dead and a score injured, the main tent and menagerie tent of Ringlings' circus in ruins and two horses killed is the result of a tornado here.

The spectators had barely left the tent when the first blast ripped the canvas into ribbons. The canvas caught fire from the lamps and was carried blazing into the air by the gale.

It was the heaviest hailstorm ever witnessed in the Red river valley.

It extended over the northern part of Grand Forks county and across Polk county, Minnesota.

In some sections the crops were pounded down to the ground and leaves were stripped from the trees.

Details are meager, as all wires are down west.

Reports received from Breckenridge, Minn., Grand Forks, N. D., Sioux Falls and Brookings, in South Dakota, tell of bad storms and much damage inside the storm belt, but details are lacking.

NAVY HEADS ARE FORCED OUT

Captains Veder, Wright and Underwood Make Way for "New Blood"—Selections Cause Surprise.

Washington.—"Plucked" from the active list of the navy, Captains D. W. Veder, Edmund B. Underwood and Edward Everett Wright were retired. The trio of compulsory transfers completes the quota of fourteen vacancies necessary in the active list to permit promotions under the "new blood" provisions of the naval personnel act.

The selections made by the board of five admirals surprised naval officers.

American Warships at Marseilles.

Marseilles.—The naval academy practise squadron consisting of the battleships Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts, with 500 midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis, arrived in harbor Friday from Plymouth.

Rain Stops Forest Fires.

Calumet, Mich.—Heavy rain here Friday broke the prolonged drought and proved a blessing to farmers whose crops were greatly damaged. The rain extinguished the forest fires in numerous parts of this district.

WRECK DEATHS NUMBER 23

Big Four Officials Place Blame for Railroad Accident at Middletown on Train Dispatcher.

Cincinnati, July 6.—Three names were added to the list of killed in the wreck on the C. H. & D. tracks near Middletown, and the death of two more, which is expected by the physicians, will bring the number up to 25.

William Anninger of Springfield, an unidentified white man now at Middletown, and Evelyn Lloyd of Round-Point, Mc., who died at the Dayton hospital, complete the list of those who lost their lives as a result of somebody's blunder.

Officials of the Big Four say that the cause of the wreck can be found in the fact that train dispatcher Smith of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton road in Dayton, is alleged to have "busted" or revoked an order giving the freight train until 1:07 p. m. to make the siding at Poasttown, and is said to have failed to give the passenger a copy of this order. Had he given Pilot Wall a copy of this order the passenger train would have remained at Poast-Town until the freight passed it. General Manager Gould of the C. H. & D., replying to the statements made here by Wall, says the case was something like that, but he would not say so positively.

An eleven-months-old baby hurled 100 feet from the telescoped second car of the wreck was found alive in a near-by corn field many hours after the accident. The baby was orphaned by the wreck, both parents having been killed in the wreck.

HUGHES FOR CHIEF JUSTICE

Governor Will Probably Succeed Melville W. Fuller As Head of Supreme Court.

Washington.—With the death of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller and the probable retirement of Associate Justice William H. Moody of the Supreme court, President Taft will have two vacancies in that court to fill within the next few months.

It is generally believed that Gov. Charles E. Hughes of New York, who has been confirmed as an associate justice, will be promoted to chief justice, and that Lloyd W. Bowers of Chicago, solicitor general of the department of justice, will be appointed justice in his place. The other alternative suggested is that Mr. Bowers be made chief justice, it having been understood here for some time that the president considered him qualified in all legal respects for the place. It is known, however, that President Taft has considered Governor Hughes also in this connection so far as his abilities are concerned.

YOUNG TAFT IS EXONERATED

State Commissioners Find That President's Son Was Not Responsible for Auto Accident.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft was informed that the state highway commissioners have completed their investigation into the accident in which Robert Taft, son of the president, ran down with an automobile Di Gregordio, an Italian laborer.

Young Mr. Taft is completely exonerated, the commissioners deciding that he was in no way responsible for the accident and the president will be informed that his son may have an automobile license as soon as he cares to apply for it.

Paris Faces a Railway Strike.

Paris, France.—A general railway strike is threatened. The men, who demand an increase in wages and other concessions, Thursday voted to strike in principle pending the result of negotiations with the companies.

Building to Honor Bill Nye.

Salisbury, N. C.—The Bill Nye memorial committee has decided that the memorial shall take the form of a building at the Stonewall Jackson Training school at Concord, N. C.

SLAYER IS LYNCHED

MOB STORMS NEWARK (O.) JAIL AND HANGS "DRY" DETECTIVE.

HAD KILLED A SALOONIST

Officers of Anti-Rum League Raid "Near Beer" Saloons in Which Man Is Shot and Dies Later—Then Trouble Begins.

Newark, O.—Battering down the doors of the jail, a mob of women, men and children Friday took Charles Etherington, an anti-saloon detective, who confessed to having killed a man here, and lynched him in the public square.

The mob which had been increasing all evening at the jail became frenzied and refused to listen to pleadings for preservation of order.

They broke all the jail windows and rammed in the outer door, taking the keys from the jailer. They quickly found the prisoner's cell on the second floor and then, dragged by a rope, the man was taken up Third street to the square and across the park to the southeast corner, where he was strung up over the arm of a telephone pole.

The shooting of Howard and the lynching of Etherington is the culmination of long standing trouble between the "wets" and "drys" here.

Etherington and twenty others, all said to be "dry" detectives, came here from Cleveland and other places to get evidence against "near beer" saloons. At the first place no trouble arose. At the second Charles Richards, the bartender, was handcuffed for over an hour. At the third place visited the trouble started.

A mob of 2,000 gathered and threatened the detectives. With revolvers drawn the Anti-Saloon league officers retreated to a hotel. The police interfered there, arresting eight of the detectives.

At the police station, where they were searched, revolvers, black jacks and cartridge belts were taken from them.

The remaining twelve detectives broke and ran, pursued by the howling mob. Half a dozen were caught and beaten. The police rescued most of them. A downtown crowd fell on James Henderson of Columbus, and beat him so severely that he was taken to the Newark hospital. Etherington, who fled to the ball park, stumbled in his flight and the crowd set upon him. Howard, the proprietor of a "near beer" saloon, the last place searched by the detectives, was in front of Etherington when the latter drew a revolver and fired.

Etherington was hurried to the jail with a yelling mob at the heels of the police who were protecting him. All afternoon the crowd stormed about the place threatening to lynch the detective.

The crisis came when word was flashed from the Newark hospital that Howard, who was a former city policeman, had died there of his wound. Up to this time Sheriff William Linke apparently had the situation well in hand. When it became known that Howard was dead an immense crowd gathered in front of the jail, the windows were smashed, the door battered in and Etherington dragged out and strung up.

Newark, which over a year ago was voted "dry," has "near beer" saloons which the Anti-Saloon league officials have in the past said they suspected of selling beer. Feeling has been high against the Anti-Saloon leaguers for a long time.

FALLS FAR WITH AEROPLANE

Baroness De La Roche Loses Head at Approach of Other Aeronauts—Is Fatally Hurt.

Bethany Plain, Rheims.—Baroness De la Roche, the first French woman aeroplanist, was injured probably fatally here Friday by falling from a height of more than 150 feet.

Baroness De la Roche had flown around the field once at a height of 80 meters (250 feet), when suddenly in front of the applauding tribunes she appeared to become frightened and confused at the approach of two other aeroplanes. She began to descend, but while still 50 meters from the ground lost control of the machine. The aeroplane turned over and fell like a log.

The baroness' legs and arms were broken. Her mangled body was removed from the wreckage and taken to the hospital, where she is said to be dying. It was found that her skull was fractured.

While momentarily conscious the baroness said that the rush of air from a motor passing over her head had frightened her, whereupon she cut the ignition and lost control of her machine.

This is the second fatal accident at this meeting, Aviator Wachter having been killed.

One Killed in a Wreck.

Mason City, Ia.—One person was killed and several injured when a south-bound Illinois Central freight train plunged into Red Cedar creek near here, Friday. Fifteen cars went over the 20-foot embankment.

Pinchot to Speak in Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo.—It was announced Friday that Gifford Pinchot, ex-chief forester of the government, will deliver an address before the Knife and Fork club of this city on the night of July 15.

HAS PRAISE FOR POINDEXTER

CONGRESSMAN HAS CONFERENCE WITH ROOSEVELT.

"Insurgent" Is Candidate for United States Senator From State of Washington.

Oyster Bay, N. Y. — One of Colonel Roosevelt's important conferences was held with Representative Poindexter, an Insurgent from the state of Washington.

It can be stated that Congressman Poindexter left Sagamore Hill with strong assurances that he will have the support of Colonel Roosevelt in his campaign fight for the United States senatorship.

Mr. Poindexter, after his visit with Colonel Roosevelt, said: "He is the same old president. The man I have worked with and loved, and I am still going to work with. He is just the same as ever. He is a wonderful leader, and he is still the leader. I am tremendously pleased with my talk with him. He must tell the details, if he wishes, of our conversation. Colonel Roosevelt and I and my associates have always worked together, and he assured me that we will continue together.'

Congressman Poindexter represents the district from which Secretary Ballinger comes.

In speaking of the visit of Mr. Poindexter, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Representative Poindexter and I went over together the political situation in the northwest. He assured me that he is in hearty sympathy with my conservation policies. Mr. Poindexter is a candidate for the position of United States senator and he is politically opposed to that wing of the party headed by Secretary Ballinger. Mr. Poindexter is a fine type of a man."

Washington.—Secretary Ballinger of the interior department, who returned to Washington from Beverly Wednesday, referred to a report from Oyster Bay that former President Roosevelt had espoused the cause of Representative Miles Poindexter as a candidate for the senate to succeed Senator Piles of Washington, and said:

"If the published report is true Mr. Roosevelt has been led astray by the deception of people who claim to be his friends." He added that he had taken no active part in the politics of Washington for a long time and denied that he headed the party in that state or any wing of it.

"I do not consider Mr. Poindexter a Republican," he continued, "but a rank Socialist or, rather, if he is not one he will be one soon."

TAFT TO TAKE YACHT CRUISE

President Will Extend Vacation Ten Days and Make Trip Along Maine Coast.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft decided Thursday that at the end of his ten days' vacation he will take a ten days' cruise in the naval yacht Mayflower for the purpose of resting up. The cruise will start on July 18, on which date, donning the uniform of commander-in-chief of the navy, which, by the way, is the same as that of commander-in-chief of the army and president, Mr. Taft, accompanied by his family, will board the Mayflower and weigh anchor for Bar Harbor and other summer ports of call on the Maine coast.

Bar Harbor will be the base from which short trips will be made to near-by points. The party will sleep on board the yacht at night, but will probably go ashore at various places where the golfing looks good.

A convoy will probably follow the Mayflower, as it is regarded as too great a risk to have the president go to sea without assistance being in easy reach in case of accident.

BEGINS AN INFAMOUS RULE

Nicaragua Adopts Reconcentration Policy Under Which, for Years, Spain Governed Cuba.

Washington.—The state department is informed that Nicaragua has begun the reconcentration policy which made Spanish rule in Cuba so infamous.

The department has the text of an order issued by Sebastiana Salinas of the department of Granada, which commands "all the inhabitants of the Mombacko Ridge to assemble within twenty-four hours in Granada, without distinction of age or sex."

Persons not complying will be "regarded as revolutionists and treated as such." That is, if General Salinas thinks fit he may shoot them or starve them into submission. The people of this ridge are anti-Madriz and they are to be crushed in the most barbarous manner.

Normal Corn Crop in Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia.—Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, who spoke at Ames, said that Iowa would have a normal crop and that oats looked safe.

Carson Will Go Abroad.

Washington.—Maj. John M. Carson, chief of the bureau of manufactures of the department of commerce and labor, has been selected to go abroad to look into the general trades conditions and opportunities for nine American manufactures.

Treasury Gets New Building.

Washington.—Plans have been completed by the supervising architect of the treasury for a new building for the bureau of engraving and printing which is to cost $1,750,000.

A BAD THING TO NEGLECT.

Don't neglect the kidneys when you notice lack of control over the secretions. Passages become too frequent or scanty; urine is discolored and sediment appears. No medicine for such troubles like Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly remove kidney disorders.

Mrs. A. E. Fulton, 311 Skidmore St., Portland, Ore., says: My limbs swelled terribly and I was bloated over the stomach and had puffy spots beneath the eyes. My kidneys were very unhealthy and the secretions much disordered. The dropsical swellings began to abate after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and soon I was cured."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Every Picture Tells A Story

He Rose to It.

"Do you know," said a little boy of five to a companion the other day, "my father and I know everything. What I don't know my father knows, and what my father don't know I know."

"All right! Let's see, then," replied the older child, skeptically. "Where's Asia?"

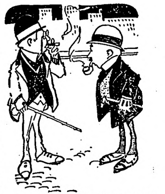
It was a stiff one, but the youngster never faltered.

"Well, that," he answered coolly, "is one of the things my father knows."—Harper's Bazar.

A BURNING ERUPTION FROM HEAD TO FEET

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nenning, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

HE'D HAD SOME HARD KNOCKS.



"Fortune knocks once at every man's door."

"Fortune is a knocker, all right."

Well, Wasn't He Right?

The minister was addressing the Sunday school. "Children, I want to talk to you for a few moments about one of the most wonderful, one of the most important organs in the whole world," he said. "What is that that throbs away, beats away, never stopping, never ceasing, whether you wake or sleep, night or day, week in and week out, month in and month out, year in and year out, without any volition on your part, hidden away in the depths, as it were, unseen by you, throbbing, throbbing rhythmically all your life long?" During this pause for oratorical effect a small voice was heard: "I know. It's the gas meter."

Real Reform

Knicker—What is your idea of municipal government?

Bocker—First provide an auto and then create an office to fill it.

Delightful
Desserts

and many other pleasing dishes can be made with

Post
Toasties

A crisp, wholesome food—always ready to serve.

With fruits or berries it is delicious.

"The Memory Lingers"

A little book—"Good Things Made with Toasties"—in packages, tells how.

Sold by Grocers—pkgs. 10c and 15c.

POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD.
Battle Creek, Mich.

Farm School Letter

Interesting Information on Minnesota Agriculture by Our Special Correspondent.

SELECTION AND CARE OF DAIRY CATTLE.

Valuable Hints on Dairy Industry From the Dairy Division Minnesota Department of Agriculture.

The most economical method of building up a fine herd of dairy cattle is by the use of the pure bred sire upon common stock. For those who have plenty of capital and some experience the breeding of pure bred stock may prove exceedingly profitable.

In order that success may be attained either through a grade or pure bred herd, great care must be given to the selection of the herd bull as he is at least half the herd. When looking for a bull to head the herd select one with dairy qualities. He should have a large deep barrel with reasonable spread of ribs. He should be very masculine in appearance, having a strong head and crest, which denotes prepotency. He should be very sharp over the shoulders with spine prominent, well cut up in the rear flank and twist, thighs nicely chiseled out, rudimentary teats placed well forward and milk veins prominent.

Look well to the breeding of the bull placed at the head of the herd. See that his dam and granddam as well as the dam of his sire have good records. If the animals appearing in the bull's pedigree have been kept for generations for dairy purposes, the bull of the proper conformation himself should transmit these qualities. There is a great difference between the prepotency and value of bulls of the same breed.

It is well for farmers and breeders in the same locality to select the same breed and practice community breeding, first because bulls can be rotated and thus kept in service up to a ripe old age; second, buyers will be attracted to a section where stock can be had in large quantities; third, if one breed is kept in common, all are interested in proclaiming the merits of the same line of stock.

When rearing calves it is important to give the dam from four to eight weeks rest before freshening again for these reasons: First, to give the unborn calf better nourishment in the foetal stage; second, that the cow may form colostrum milk which is needed in cleaning out the alimentary canal of the little calf; and third, because the cow will make a better record the following year if given this rest.

The calves at the Minnesota Experiment Station are raised on skim-milk and a grain mixture after the third week. They are taken from their dams at once after sucking the colostrum milk and are started on from three to four pounds of whole milk per feed. They are then gradually gotten on to skim-milk and grain.

G. P. GROUT,
Assistant Professor of Dairy Husbandry.

Swill Barrel Cholera.

Dr. H. M. Reynolds, veterinarian at the Minnesota Experiment Station says that swill barrel cholera has often been mistaken for true hog cholera, and that it may kill hogs quite rapidly and cause just as severe losses for the farmer. It is a less serious disease than true hog cholera, for it does not spread by infection. The doctor says:

The symptoms frequently resemble rather closely the true hog cholera, but hogs die from this disease that are supposed to be immune to cholera. This disease does not spread to other hogs and involves only those which are receiving swill from a certain barrel or tank. The condition of the barrel or tank itself usually gives very good reason for suspecting that the disease is swill barrel cholera rather than true cholera.

Serious losses among garbage feeders using hotel slops frequently occur and are often due to the presence of washing powder or other material containing a high percentage of irritating alkalies. These appear to cause disease by direct inflammation of the bowels due to chemical irritation. Possibly these chemicals in the swill may simply irritate and reduce the vitality of the membrane lining the digestive organs for invasion by germs which otherwise could not produce disease.

A case of swill barrel cholera has recently come to the attention of the experiment station. Mr. B., a farmer living in Southwestern Minnesota, lost fifty-nine out of sixty hogs. The one hog which did not die was kept in a pen adjoining the yard where sick hogs were kept and with every opportunity for transferring the infection, if there had been infection, from the yard to the pen. The fifty-nine hogs were fed sour buttermilk from a local creamery. The buttermilk had been kept in a wooden tank, the sides of which were green with mold.

Near-by neighbors who did not use this buttermilk lost no hogs.

Moral: Clean out and scald your swill tank as often as necessary and give the interior of it a good sun bath once in a while.

Grasshoppers.

By F. L. Washburn, State Entomologist, University Farm, St. Paul.

A report was received shortly after the cold weather, occurring the middle of April, that grasshoppers had hatched in the unusually warm weather of early spring, and had been killed by the freeze in April. This would have been good news if it had been actually the case in all parts of the state. Unfortunately grasshoppers were found hatching in quite large numbers early in May, when all danger of cold weather had passed, and we will probably have in some locations more or less trouble this season.

Common red-legged locust or grasshopper.

We have found in here in the laboratory that young grasshoppers can live five days without food, under trying conditions, which is not, particularly encouraging to the farmer.

This Division will send directions for treatment to any locality troubled with this insect, or, if necessary, will send a man to help an afflicted farmer. Use the telegraph in cases of emergency. Young hoppers just hatching can sometimes be taken care of by plowing them under, beginning on the outside of the field where they are hatching, and plowing toward the center. A poisonous bait, known as the Criddle Mixture, is also effective when grasshoppers are young. Since the above was dictated we have received a report from near Foxhome, Wilkin Co., under date of May 24th, that grasshoppers were hatching in large numbers on land owned by non-residents, and that nearby crops were threatened. We have a law in Minnesota to prevent this evil, obliging land owners or tenants to plow infected land.

Pigeon Grass may be held in check by fall pasturing, early fall plowing, cultivating crops, growing of rape, grass and a rotation of crops. Above all—use clean seed.

Continue Sending Names to the Division of Extension, University Farm, St. Paul for the Farmers' Library. It is free to all who ask for it. Six numbers have already been published, and the July issue will soon be out of press.

Quack Grass Eradication.—Experiments at the Minnesota Station have proven that carefully hoeing and otherwise cultivating corn on land infested with quack grass is a good remedy. Following careful cultivation for a year or two will clean the land.

Germinating the Seeds of Annual Weeds like pigeon grass, pig weeds, wild oats, etc., in the fall, in time for the frost to kill the tender roots, is a good way of cleaning the land. Discing the stubble field as soon as the grain is removed, if removal is promptly done, is a help. Remember this in August, Mr. Farmer.

Animals in Ill Health Are Unfit For Human Food, and the Minnesota Experiment Station advises that flesh from animals that have recovered from disease before slaughter does not cure well and is difficult to keep after curing. Bruises, broken legs or similar accidents have the same effect on the meat as ill health. Unless an animal is bled and dressed immediately after an accident, before the temperature rises, do not use the meat for human food.

Manuring the Soil, the prime object of which is to increase the crop yielding capacity, may be done with stable manure, commercial fertilizer, or by plowing under green vegetation, such as clover, grasses, and weeds—before their seeds ripen. To justify the practice the increase in product from the soil must be more than enough to offset the cost of fertilizers and labor employed. Good profit almost invariably results fromt he application of barn yard manure and plowing under green crops.

Minnesota Insect Life is the name of a little booklet published for free distribution among those who ask for it by Prof. Washburn state Entomologist, at University Farm. The booklet will appear in April, May, June, July and August, and will tell of the insects in Minnesota and how to fight them. Send a request by postal card to Prof. Washburn and the name will be entered on his mailing list.

Frequently the question of a creamery comes up in different sections and the objection is soon raised that there are not enough cows. There never will be while the heifers are sold for beef, and at five and six cents a pound. Butter sold from the experiment farm at the grocery store averaged 31 cents per pound during 1909.

A. J. McGUIRE, Supt.,
N. E. Minnesota Experiment Station.

CORRECT YOUR MISTAKES IS FALKENBURG'S ADVICE

BASEBALL IS A GAME OF IMPOSSIBILITIES DECLARES THE CLEVELAND PITCHER.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

I am asked to write how to win, but the ball player does not learn from that, but gets his lesson from losing. We study our mistakes and try to correct them, and after correcting and correcting up to near the time the arm wears out some of us get to learn part of the game.

There is no game in the world that offers such a variety of plays and so great a number of ways to make each one. It is a game of possibilities, and to take advantage of them a player must study his own profession all the time. One might learn it all, but for the fact that the other fellows are studying at the same time, and just when he thinks he knows all about them they switch on him and he must start all over again.

I have studied pitching and studied batters ever since I was a school boy, and there are times when I think I know less than when I first started. For a pitcher, no matter what curves and speed he may have, I think the most essential thing is that he shall possess the keenest power of observation. Pitching, in fact, is the one acquired art of baseball. Every other position depends more upon the natural ability of the player, while any one with a good arm, a free motion and a fair brain can become a pitcher through constant practise and study. Whether he is a success or not depends largely upon what kind of a brain he has and how rapidly he can think.

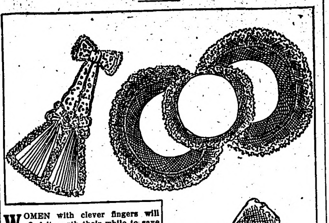
A boy who aspires to become a pitcher ought to begin early—and to begin caring for his arm from the first. I believe four out of every five school boys who start to pitch ruin their arms before they really learn anything about pitching. As I understand it, this is intended to be merely a few hints to pitchers, and I am trying to tell boys not how the big leaguers pitch curves, but how boys who aspire to be big leaguers ought to start. Most of them begin pitching with full power, and as soon as they learn to pitch an outcurve they pitch it all the time until the arm weakens and a baseball career is made impossible. I have talked with dozens of major league pitchers and very few of them pitched when they were "kids," but began late. I have watched school boys of fourteen and fifteen cracking their arms. A few hints to these boys may help. In the first place, a boy ought to learn to "warm up" before he starts to pitch. Few do. The pitcher who is going to work in a game ought to start perhaps ten minutes before time to play, throwing the ball easily, and with a free swing of the arm and body and gradually increase the speed as the arm warms up and the muscles work freely. Then he can pitch as hard as he pleases without endangering the arm. If he starts pitching hard without this preliminary warming up he will ruin the shoulder sooner or later instead of developing and strengthening it, and have a sore arm all the time.

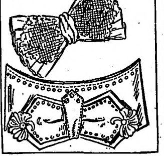
FRED FALKENBERG.

Another thing, he should not pitch too many curve balls. The first thing a boy ought to learn is that a curve it not effective unless other balls are being pitched. Control is the first essential. I know we won college pennants for years because our coach taught us two things: First, that the pitcher should get control and pitch at the plate steadily, and, second, that the batters should learn to wait. The success of our team was in the fact that our pitchers seldom gave bases on balls and had control enough to put the ball over. A boy ought, however, to remember that when the other team is swinging at bad balls not to pitch them good ones, and that a straight ball a foot away from the plate will be missed as often as a curve is.

A boy who will take care of his arm, avoid straining it and practise slowly and steadily, tossing the ball either at a mark or to his catcher and striving always to get control, rather than speed and curves, can make a pitcher of himself. The other things will come naturally and if he has the arm and the control he will last long enough to learn more.

For Pieces of Lace





WOMEN with clever fingers will find it worth their while to save all bits of lace, ribbon and embroidery that are in good condition, for they can utilize every scrap in making the jabots, bows and collars that are now so much worn. The construction of these trifles makes pleasant work for the summer vacation, and they are as useful for gifts as for personal use. The four designs given are not commonplace, yet they are easy to make. The jabot is made of mull Valenciennes lace, with embroidered butterfly tabs of linen. The large design hardly needs an explanation, as it is a working drawing for a collar to be worn with a collarless gown. The bow has ends of malines under squares of lace. Linen is the material used for the standing collar. French knots in blue and Irish crochet lace motifs ornament it. The strap is fastened by three pearl buttons.

SOME PARISIAN COIFFURES

Tendency Now Shows a Less Close Mass of Hair Surmounted by an Aigrette.

We turn to Paris for the prevailing coiffure, and in turning we find slight but noticeable changes.

The present tendency is toward a less close mass of hair to which an aigrette or plume adds height. This decoration is here shown worn with a jeweled band of ribbon, which may be gold or silver or a color studded with brilliants or with iridescent gems, according to the gown.

Particularly appropriate for the young girl is the wreath of roses worn with a not-too-flat coiffure, but a simple one. Leaves are often substituted for the roses and to good effect.

With two winged ends of black velvet, altogether suitable for an older woman, is that broad band of black tulle wired along its edges and studded with jet.

And last we recommend for the more youthful one a simple fillet of gold or silver gauze, with at each end a large rose, made of cloth of gold or silver.

Time was when the young girl looked overdressed with her hair in a fillet unless it was a very simple affair, indeed; but fashions have become so much more elaborate that, with a little discrimination, it is quite possible to single out many simple enough hair ornaments for the youthful face.

Girls and Their Figures.

Stiff corsets are unknown in France. French corsets are always supple and bendable, and this accounts much for the ease of French figures, which are never tightened except at the waist, leaving the bust and hips quite free.

If the figure is tightened in too much at the bust and hips, it gives too straight a look to the figure and makes it stiff and uncomfortable, movement being rendered ungraceful by this stiffness. Let any girl try to lace her corset only at the waist and let her select it as soft and light as possible, and then see if her figure be not as graceful in shape as the French figure.

No tight, straight down, even lacing will ever make a pretty figure. If the corset cannot be made expressly to suit the figure, then let it only be laced in the middle of the waist. Even then no real corset should be worn by girls until they are well in their teens.

Uses of Cretonne.

The "cretonne girl" is trimming her hat to match her waistcoat, jumper, girdle, belt and collar and cuff sets. With whatever materials she has left she fashions a bag which is mounted on the gilt frame of a shopping purse that is out of commission because its handles are broken and its leather sides shabby. This does not matter, because she throws the leather away and substitutes cretonne bands for the broken or worn handles of leather. If the "cretonne girl" is unusually energetic she may contrive a parasol to match her other flowered accessories by carefully matching the cretonne figures upon the gores of an ancient parasol cover and then mounting it upon the original frame.

With Manicure Scissors.

The small curved scissors is an invaluable little implement in the hands of the all-round capable woman. It belongs to the work basket as well as a stencil cutter, and it will prove equally necessary for the cutting out of embroidery, whether machine or hand made, and for the cutting away of material under laces to make them transparent.

There are curved lines in sewing that will be more safely cut out and small spaces into which no other scissors will so successfully get as the manicure blade.

MANTLE USED IN MANY FORMS

Transparent Wrap Has Caught the Fancy of Fashion, and Is Surely Here to Stay.

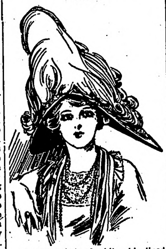
Chiffon, marquisette, silk voile, or any other material that has not warmth, but a beautiful transparent color, is now used for outer wraps that may not be useful if the primary use of dress be considered, but they are decidedly beautiful, which is their own excuse for being.

Mantles of beautiful hues fall like clouds around the forms of their fortunate wearers. They are weighted with heavy fringe, silk or beaded, or they are adorned with marabou or heavy oriental embroidery.

The shapes are so varied that were any attempt made to describe these mantles there would be no end. Suffice it to say that all lengths, degrees of fulness, variations of the lower line and disposition of ends are allowable, the individuality of the designer coming into play as the deciding voice.

The effect of these transparent wraps over the filmy evening gowns of the season is indescribable. Mere man might ridicule and scorn the idea of a chiffon cloak, but flaunt one of these before the sensible creature, and if he have an appreciation of the beautiful he will uphold you in your choice of a lovely accessory.

LATEST HAT MODEL.



The latest hat, of white chip lined with black chip, the brim covered with valenciennes and a mass of white knotted feathers.

For Fashion's Sake.

Too many women wear things because they attract the eye, with too little consideration of the becomingness. Waiting for a car at one of the subway stations the other day was a young woman, rather unusually well dressed. But her face was horribly marked, especially about the cheeks and chin. More than one of the waiting crowd looked curiously, and no doubt pitied her misfortune. As she drew nearer the electric light, however, these markings resolved themselves into nothing more terrible than the pattern of her heavily embroidered veil! Seen in the light, the pattern—a design that might have been enlarged to some purpose on a pair of curtains—was not beautifying. Seen from a little distance, or in a dim light, the effect was as described.

Innovations In Rings.

The latest jewelry novelty originates in Germany, and is a special type of ring for the divorced and the widowed. It is claimed that these rings save the wearers, particularly the feminine sex, from embarrassing or painful explanations, and in a delicate way inform interested persons of their circumstances. What next?

Your Liver is Clogged up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days. They do their duty. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, and Sick Headache.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

AGENTS can you sell lots in a county seat and commercial center of Rio Grande Valley. Splendid contract. Write for booklet H. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

Midas.

Midas had come to that point in his career where everything he touched turned to gold.

"What shall you ever do with the stuff?" asked his entourage in visible alarm.

Midas affected not to be uneasy. "Just wait till the boys begin to touch me!" quoth he, displaying an acquaintance with economic tendencies far in advance of his age.—Puck.

TAKE A FOOT-BATH TO-NIGHT

After dissolving one or two Allen's Foot-Tabs (Antiseptic tablets for the foot-bath) in the water. It will take out all soreness, smarting and tenderness, remove foot odors and freshen the feet. Allen's Foot-Tabs instantly relieve weariness and sweating or inflamed feet and hot nervousness of the feet at night. Then for comfort throughout the day shake Allen's Foot-Ease the antiseptic powder into your shoes. Sold everywhere 25c. Avoid substitutes. Samples of Allen's Foot-Tabs mailed FREE or our regular size sent by mail for 25c. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y. "Foot-Tabs for Foot-Tubs."

Household Consternation.

"Charley, dear!" exclaimed young Mrs. Torkins, "the baby has swallowed a gold dollar!"

"Great heavens! Something must be done. There will be no end to the cost of living if he gets habits like that!"

Important to Mothers

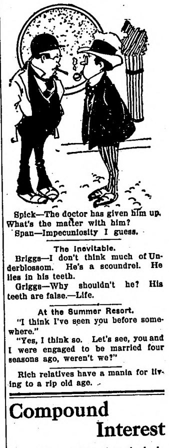
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THE REASON.



Spick—The doctor has given him up. What's the matter with him?

Span—Impecuniosity I guess.

The Inevitable.

Briggs—I don't think much of Underblossom. He's a scoundrel. He lies in his teeth.

Griggs—Why shouldn't he? His teeth are false.—Life.

At the Summer Resort.

"I think I've seen you before somewhere."

"Yes, I think so. Let's see, you and I were engaged to be married four seasons ago, weren't we?"

Rich relatives have a mania for living to a rip old age.

Compound Interest

comes to life when the body feels the delicious glow of health, vigor and energy.

That Certain Sense of vigor in the brain and easy poise of the nerves comes when the improper foods are cut out and predigested

Grape-Nuts

take their place.

If it has taken you years to run down don't expect one mouthful of this great food to bring you back (for it is not a stimulant but a rebuilder.)

Ten days trial shows such big results that one sticks to it.

"There's a Reason"

Get the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30, 19[illegible] at the post office at Sunbeam, Minn., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

ROT AS FACTS

"When the proper time arrives, [illegible] and abundant evidence will be forthcoming to show that Pennington county will not pay one cent of the cost of the court house now in course of construction in Red Lake Falls. The claims of the "men in hiding" that the new county will have to assume its share of this burden will look like and be of the same value as a settler's shack after a Kansas cyclone has ceased playing tag with it. —The Thief River Falls News.

Now stop a little, gentlemen! We have repeatedly said that we don't care to take part in the county division fight and we are satisfied with the result, whatever it may be and we will try to pay our taxes; but this question of county division is to be decided by the tax-payers and we want the facts put fairly before them, then we are willing to abide by their decision. The above are not facts and no one knows it better than the publishers of it.

The money for building the court house was raised by bonding the county for $37,000. The whole county was bonded; the Pennington County part as well as the Red Lake County part, and no matter what the result of the vote on division is, Red Lake County, as it stands to-day, will have to pay those bonds.

It is all right to talk about a Kansas cyclone playing tag with a settler's shack, but we never yet heard of a cyclone blowing away a mortgage on real estate. These bonds are literally a mortgage on the real estate of Red Lake County, as it is now. If a real estate mortgage could be disposed of in this way, why not let the farmers in on the deal. Let them go to the loan companies and say: "We have concluded to dissolve partnership with you. You can take that back forty for your mortgage and we will keep the three best forties and have them clear." This is exactly what the above would make you believe regarding the division.

We say to the farmers, "Divide or not, as you please; but do not repeat such rot as facts, for they are not facts. We would blush to publish such rot as facts."

Henry O. Bjorge is making a strong campaign for the republican nomination for congressman from this district. He presents a very good platform for the consideration of the voters, but the trouble is: he will not be able to carry out his views, when he gets into congress, as well as he can express them in print. A new man in that august body is usually requested to go way back and sit down during his first and second terms.

P. J. Russell, of Bemidji, in his Fourth of July oration at that place, hit Senator A. L. Hanson a rap, when he said, in discussing the crying need of legislative reapportionment: "To illustrate: Waseca county, in the southern part of the state, has a senator and two representatives; the senatorial district to which Bemidji belongs comprises five counties, with more than twenty times the area of Waseca county and more than twenty times its population, yet we have but two representatives and one senator, [illegible] —Crookston Times.

How About This?

Neptune, Minn.,
July 3rd, 1910.

Editor, THE SUNBEAM:

As it has been said, that the county division fight should be considered by the farmers; I wish to express my views and give a few facts as I see them: It will be remembered that two years ago, the Soo Railroad was going to build their line east from Thief River Falls, between the Clearwater and Red Lake Rivers, to Duluth. This, of course, would cut off all the trade from this part of the eleven towns with Thief River Falls, as new towns would spring up so the farmers would have had a market for their produce nearer home.

Then we heard of a big banquet at Thief River Falls, at which the officials of the Soo Line were royally entertained by the citzens and the next thing we heard was that the Soo, to Duluth, was going to follow their main line until south of Plummer, then branch off to Duluth; thus not entering this territory, which is tributary to Thief River Falls. Later, we heard that the new county was to be called Pennington, in honor of the president of the Soo Line. A fine trade, was it not? No mossbacks or hayseeds were invited to that banquet. Oh, no! They had no use for them at that time; but, now they are ready to load them down with smooth talk and ask them to vote for the deal that cut their throats in depriving them of a railroad market for a good many years, so they would be compelled to haul their produce to Thief River Falls.

Now, brother farmers, living in the eleven towns, pull off your coats and hustle and vote for Pennington County. Let them know you are just as big suckers as they took you for. Hooper up! Rah! Rah! Pennington County!.

Written by a Farmer, over nine days old; who has gotten his eyes open

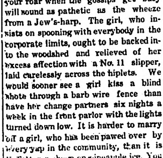
For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River one-half mile south of the High landing creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office

Is This Your Girl?

The mother, who allows a 16 year old daughter to float around the township in a top buggy until 2 a. m. with a counterfeit sport of weak jaw and weaker morals, merely opens the front door to grief and disgrace. If you don't know what company your girl keeps or what time of the night she turns in, your roar when the gossips get busy will sound as pathetic as the wheeze from a Jew's-harp. The girl, who insists on spooning with everybody in the corporate limits, ought to be backed into the woodshed and relieved of her excess affection with a No. 11 slipper, laid carelessly across the hiplets. We would sooner see a girl kiss a blind shote through a barb wire fence than have her change partners six nights a week in the front parlor with the lights turned down low. It is harder to marry off a girl, who has been pawed over by every yap in the community, than it is to fatten a sheep on pineapple ice. You can't gold-brick a sharp-eyed suitor with second hand goods anymore than you can fit a bath-robe on a goat. There are a lot of weak minded parents, who are going up against judgement day with about as much show as a cross eyed girl in a beauty show, their children will rise up and called them blessed with the enthusiasm of a one-legged man at a club dance.—Ex.

His Only Friend.



First Gravedigger—Who was the man at the funeral who looked as if he had lost his last friend?

Second Gravedigger—He has. He is a funny editor. The deceased died laughing at one of his jokes.

Badly Expressed.

"For heaven's sake, be careful with that rifle, man!" exclaimed a musketry instructor. "You just missed me that [illegible]." "[illegible] I'm awfully sorry [illegible]"

THE CABMEN OF PARIS

Hailing One Is the Same as a Declaration of War.

THEY ARE INSOLENT ROGUES

Sneers and Caustic Advice Are Showered Upon Those Who Engage Them. On Wet or Festal Days the Cabbies Spurn Those Who Want to Ride.

Among Anglo-Saxons there is a general and instinctive desire to do business on the basis of an entente cordiale. In Paris the hailing of a cabman is looked on by both parties to the transaction as an implied declaration of war. The cabman takes your measure, and you take his number if you are wise. At once he will give you a reason to remark that he has a rooted and premeditated objection to drive you where you wish to go. Perhaps he prefers the opera quarter because it is central, or should the weather be fine his heart is probably set upon driving in the Bois, while you may have business at the bourse. He explains his views on the subject selfishly and rudely.

A foreigner alighted recently from the Calais train at the Northern railway station in Paris and ordered a typical Parisian cabman, bloated, pale and absinth soaked, to drive him to the Rue Blomet, which is a street in the relatively distant Vangirard quarter. "Peut on habiter la Rue Blomet?" ("Is it possible to inhabit the Rue Blomet?") exclaimed the ragged ruffian in an epigrammatic note of disdain which would have done honor to Beau Brummel.

But it is when the Paris cabman has once started on his "course," a warpath in the strict sense of the term, that he proves to what a limitless extent he is the enemy of mankind. His hatred of the "bourgeois," the "man in the street," in spite of and indeed because of his being a potential client, is expressed at every yard. He constantly tries to run him down, which makes strangers to Paris accuse the Paris cabman of driving badly, while in point of fact he is not driving at all, but playing with miraculous skill a game of his own which suggests cannon billiards in the hands of a world's champion.

But it is not with the public alone that he is at war. On all other cabmen whose path he crosses, on omnibus drivers, motorcar men, bicyclists, private coachmen, costermongers with barrows and (sotto voce) the police he heaps deadly insults, the least outrageous of which are "Ours!" ("Bear!") and "Fourneau!" ("Oven!"), the latter containing a subtle double meaning, intelligible only to those who have Paris "argot" or slang at their finger ends and too long to explain.

The cabman's wild career through the streets, the constant wavering and slashing of his pitiless whip, his madcap hurtlements and collisions, the frenzied gesticulations which he exchanges with his "fare," the panic stricken flight of the agonized women whose lives he has endangered, the ugly rushes which the public occasionally makes at him with a view to lynching him, the sprawlings and fallings of his maddened, hysterical, starving horse, contribute as much as anything to the spasmodic intensity, the electric blue fire diablerie, which are characteristic of the general movement of Paris.

All that can be said in mitigation of the Paris cabman's method is that "he has them in the blood." Every Parisian (and the cabman is no exception) has the soul of a dictator and the spirit of an artist. To exercise autocratic power and, failing this, to enjoy the maximum of personal freedom from all restraint, moral or social, is the goal at which he is ever aiming, openly or secretly.

Watch a Paris cabman, for instance, on a wet day or on some festival occasion, such as the New Year, when there is a big demand for his services. With what haughty disdain does he drive along the streets, deaf to every appeal, refusing every fare, rejoicing in the discomfort and inconvenience he is causing, triumphant in the thought that at last he has "the bourgeois" at his feet; that the clientele which he detests and which detests him is now a humiliated, bemuddled or bedraggled mob of supplicants waiting on his will, whom he can enrage to boiling point with his sneers and his silence or lash with his sarcasms as cruelly as he beats his horse.

Cheerfully does he sacrifice half a day's earnings to the enjoyment of this exquisite revenge, for at least he can say to his hungry wife and children when he gets home, "J'ai vecu." They may not have dined, but he has lived.

It is because the Parisian recognizes in himself a certain community of sentiment with the cabman in this attitude toward life that he tolerates him, though he does not forgive him. —Harper's Weekly.

The Cure.

He—There is a certain young lady deeply interested in me, and while I like her, you know, still I never could love her. I want to put an end to it without breaking the poor girl's heart. Can you suggest any plan?

She—Do you call there often?

He—No, indeed, not any oftener than I can possibly help.

She—Call oftener.

What Did He Mean?

[illegible]

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub in The Sunbeam June 17, 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 29, 1904, made Homested Entry No. 435, Serial No. 0489, for N. W. ¼ Section 29 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafdal, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 8, 1910.

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that John Wzlentek, of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 567, Serial No. 04211, for N. E. ¼, Section 12, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

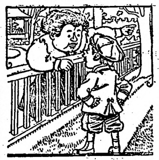
B. Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Olaf B. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn., and John Radoecki, of Radney, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Pop as an X Ray.

Brother (to her beau): Pop told sister you're like a ladder, 'cause he could see through you.

When the Boss Is Out.



Lady—Little boy, isn't that your father calling you?

Kid—Yep.

Lady—Why don't you answer him?

Kid—Don't have ter. Mam's away.

McCALL PATTERNS 10¢ AND 15¢ NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

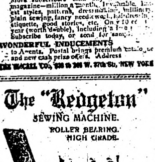
McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., [illegible] W. 37th St., NEW YORK

The "Redgelun" SEWING MACHINE.

ROLLER BEARING.
HIGH GRADE.



by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

[illegible] Sewing Machine Co. [illegible]

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER, IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. Winton,
Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

His Question.

Edgar, aged six, was recently sent to school for the first time, and upon his return home he asked, "Papa, who taught Adam the alphabet?"

Oh!

"How did you act when he proposed?"

"I sank gracefully on one knee."

"How ridiculous! What in the world did you sink on your knee for?"

"On his knee, not mine."—Houston Post.

Perseverance.

Perseverance is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS FOR Headache

FOR NEURALGIA. SCIATICA. RHEUMATISM. BACKACHE. PAIN IN CHEST. DISTRESS IN STOMACH. SLEEPLESSNESS.

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

If you have Headache Try One

DR. MILES' Pain Pills

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

Put up all the hay you can, for you will find it easier to sell than to buy hay, next winter.

Ye editor is busy haying this week and the printer's devil is doing most of the office work.

There is a new office in the post office department, "Deputy" postmaster, at Erie. We wonder what his duties are?

We believe the farmers of this part of the county will succeed in getting hay enough, so they can winter their dairy cows.

Remember, that it will be very easy to trade hay for a cow, this fall; but very hard to exchange a cow for hay.

George Singer, of Rhoda, had the largest cream check for May of any farmer in Red Lake County. How is that for a farmer of the eleven towns?

Our old friend, Ole Olson, has promised to write some articles on the county division question for us, which will be published later.

Walter McAndress has a very fine field of corn, that promises to be a fine crop. This is going to be a good corn and stock country at no great distant date.

There was a bowery dance at Highlanding, last Saturday evening. The youngsters had a very pleasant time, stepping lively to the music of Oscar Lofthus' violin.

The farmers are beginning to send in communications on county division faster than a daily with a linotype machine could put them in type. Be patient, gentlemen, and we will get the best of your articles before our readers soon.

Should Pennington County be established, Thief River Falls could save the expense and trouble of getting down delegates from Highlanding two years hence, as they would have plenty in town to run matters to suit themselves.

The publisher of the Eleven Towns has come out in favor of county division. We wonder if he has been promised the appointment of county attorney of the new county; he would be a good one. He says the people do not need to worry about the taxes being more. Of coarse, he does not care as he is not on record as a tax payer.

Simon O'Toole, of Crystal, N.D. was up here, this week, looking after his real state interests. He remarked that the crops, up this way, were looking much better than in some parts of the country. He says all the owners of land in the south-western part of Kratka are well pleased that the new ditch just west of the range line is going to be dug.

You know it is the law that any man, who is accused of a crime, is entitled to a defense; and as all the other papers in the northern part of the county are jumping onto Red Lake Falls, we shall endeavor to bring out some facts on the other side of the question. We don't care a rap how you vote, as we can stand it if the other fellows, who pay taxes can; but we would like to have the farmers understand both sides of this question, as it is one of vital importance to them, for the future.

News From Clearwater.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bender spent Sunday with family of [illegible].

Mrs. Christ Lindberg and daughter Sarah, visited Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Lindberg on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. R. N. Fore returned home from Fosston on Monday, after a short visit with her mother.

Mrs. E. V. Carlson and Mrs. Andrew Hanson left for Hill River, on Sunday, to visit with friends and relatives.

Miss Dourthy left for home in Red Lake Falls, on Monday, after teaching school near the Lynch Place.

The Fourth of July Celebration was well attended, a larger crowd than expected being present.

Mrs. Martin Short is visiting with her daughter, Maggie, in Plummer, this week.

Dr. Clark was called out to the home of John Lynch, on the Fourth to see Mrs. Lynch, who was taken sick in the morning; but she is on the road to recovery.

NOTICE. The annual school meeting of District No. 87 will be held at the school house, next Saturday evening, July 16, 1910. All turn out.

W. G. Hunt,
Clerk.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 12th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestby, of Anstad. Minn., who, on June 7th. 1909, made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial No. 04810, for W. ½ S.W. ¼. Sec. 2 & N. ½ S.E. ¼. Sec. 3 Twp. 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 22nd day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lund, Casper Lund, Ole E. Wiseth, and George Wold, all of Anstad. Minn.

Aurther P. Toppin,
Register.

Dog's Sudden End.

Peter McArthur, talking about a novelist who was arranging for the dramatization of a novel that he had not yet completed, remarked: "He is a good deal like a Canadian friend of mine who went hunting with a dog. The trip was all right for a time, but there came a sudden end when the dog undertook to jump over a deep well at two jumps."

THE WORLDS GREATEST SEWING MACHINE
LIGHT RUNNING
NEWHOME

If you want either a Vibrating Shuttle, Rotary Shuttle or a Single Thread [Chain Stitch] Sewing Machine write to
THE NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE COMPANY
Orange, Mass.
Many sewing machines are made to sell regardless of quality, but the New Home is made to wear. Our guaranty never runs out.
Sold by authorized dealers only.
FOR SALE BY

AUTHORITY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

can well be claimed of a book that has the unqualified indorsement of the Executive Departments of the Government, the U. S. Supreme Court, all the State Supreme Courts, all the State Superintendents of Schools, nearly all of the College Presidents, Principals of Normal Schools, and Educators generally.

The New and Enlarged Edition of Webster's International Dictionary of English, Biography, Geography, Fiction, etc., has 2380 quarto pages with 5000 illustrations. It also has 25,000 new words, new Gazetteer of the World, and a new Biographical Dictionary, all edited by W. T. Harris, Ph.D., LL.D., U. S. Commissioner of Education, bringing the work fully up to date. It received the HIGHEST AWARD at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

THE GRAND PRIZE

FREE—"A Test in Pronunciation," instructive and entertaining for the whole family. Also illustrated pamphlet.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,
PUBLISHERS,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste
It in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS,
KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place
to Buy the Right Goods
At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT
WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2. 50 EVERY DAY SUITS,
UP TO FIRST CLASS
TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.
Kratka Minn.

THE MERCHANTS
State Bank,

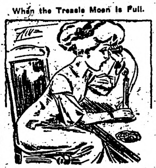
OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds, Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US. J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,
THAT RAISE CROPS.
For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County,

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

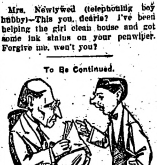
Call on, or adress, W. G. HUNT,
Sunbeam Minn.

When the Tressle Moon Is Full.



Mrs. Newlywed (telephoning boy hubby)—This you, dearie? I've been helping the girl clean house and got some ink stains on your penwiper. Forgive me, won't you?

To Be Continued.



City Editor to Cub Reporter—You say in your story that Mr. Topper forged his way from a clerkship in the bank to the presidency.

Cub Reporter—That will be explained in the sequel.

The Cure.

He—There is a certain young lady deeply interested in me, and while I like her, you know, still I never could love her. I want to put an end to it without breaking the poor girl's heart. Can you suggest any plan?

She—Do you call there often?

He—No, indeed; not any oftener than I can possibly help.

She—Call oftener.

JAPANESE HEROISM.

The Brave Record of the Loss of a Submarine Vessel.

Subjoined is the translation of a message written by Lieutenant Tsutoma Sakuma, who was in command of the Japanese submarine No. 6, which foundered while maneuvering in Hiroshima Bay. The message was found in the conning tower of the submarine after she had been brought to the surface:

"It is with the deepest regret that I write this message to describe the loss of this boat with my fellow officers and men, due to my own fault. I would here specially mention that all steps have been taken to raise her, my comrades and men working earnestly and calmly till the end. I ordered the ship to dive with the engine running, but as I found she went down too far I tried to shut the valves which admit the sea water to the ballast tank, but unexpectedly the chain working these valves broke, and I was left helpless, unable to control the boat. Meanwhile the tanks filled with water, and the boat went down at an incline of about twenty-five degrees. After striking the bottom the water began rushing in, the switchboard was immersed in water, all electric lights went out, the fuses burnt away, and the boat was filled with poisonous gases, so that we experienced the greatest difficulty in breathing.

"Under these conditions we worked our very utmost with the hand pumps to empty the main ballast tank, which, I believe, we succeeded in doing, although we could not read the gauges owing to darkness. No electric current was available, as I mentioned before, and our last hope of rising to the surface lay in working the hand pumps only.

"I write this in the dim light coming from the conning tower—11:45 a. m.

"I earnestly beseech his majesty to grant me forgiveness and to succor the families of my comrades and men who have lost their lives in this perishing boat. This is my only wish. 12:30 p. m.

"It is with the utmost difficulty that I can breathe, though I am sure we must have blown out the gasoline entirely from the tanks. I cannot continue any more. 12:40 p. m."—London Times.

W.G.Hunt.
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels
Of Money,
To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

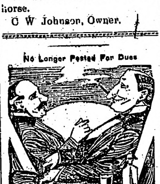
Hover O. Follkedahl,
Highlanding .....Minn

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of O. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examine this fine horse.

O W Johnson, Owner.

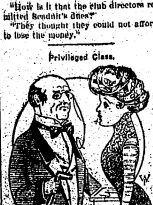
No Longer Posted For Dues



"How is it that the club directors remitted Scadult's dues?"

"They thought they could not afford to lose the money."

Privileged Class.



Crabbed Uncle (to niece)—Remember, take the young man's arm when you are out with him in the evening. Don't let him take yours. Nobody ever grabs a lady's elbow unless he's a regular cad or a church usher.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Clyde Fitch's Joke.

"Clyde Fitch was an indefatigable worker," said an actor who has played in many of the Fitch comedies. "When he had a play on the stocks he would labor over it day and night, often scarcely pausing for his meals and getting very little sleep; consequently his health suffered. He would work until on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and then his physician would step in and force him to knock off.

"During one of these periods of enforced idleness he was lounging in the Players club one day when Harry B. Smith, the prolific comic opera librettist, strolled in.

"'What are you doing now?' asked Smith.

"'I am in my doctor's hands,' replied Fitch. 'He tells me I'm in a bad way and has absolutely forbidden me to do any brain work.'

"'That's tough,' said Smith. 'How do you manage to put in the time?'

"'Oh, I'm writing the libretto of a musical comedy!' replied Fitch, with one of his cynical smiles."—New York Times.

His Question.

Edgar, aged six, was recently sent to school for the first time, and upon his return home he asked, "Papa, who taught Adam the alphabet?"

Pensions From Napoleon.

Paris has a dozen old soldiers who draw pensions that come to them from the great Emperor Napoleon I. These are not heroes of his epoch, for the last of those died long years ago. But Napoleon by his will devised several millions of francs to his companions in arms, and this capital in default of heirs of the grand army was deposited in the public treasury. Today the revenue this fund produces is paid out in the form of pensions of 200 francs each to old soldiers in French territory, and Paris has twelve of these beneficiaries to whom at the first of the year these little pensions are remitted.—Paris Figaro.

A Wise Woman.

Mr. Snaggle (snappishly)—Don't be correcting that boy always, Sarah. Let nature take its course, won't you?

Mrs. Snaggle (laying aside the shingle)—I'll do nothing of the sort, Mr. Snaggle. I don't intend that any woman shall have such a husband as I've got if I can prevent it.

A Paradoxical Reply.

"Doctor, do you think eyeglasses will alter my appearance?" inquired Mrs. Gunson anxiously.

"I shall at least expect them to improve your looks," replied the physician.—Lippincott's.

The Boy's Bit.

"You seem to have got your boys interested in mythology very nicely."

"Yes; I explained to them that Hercules held a championship."—Washington Herald.

Sure Test.

She—They held a mirror over her face to see if she was alive. I don't understand that. He—Why, you see, if she was alive she'd open her eyes and look in it.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

“Cold Molasses”

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

There was to be a leap year dance down at the Corners, and consequently all the young men in the vicinity wore a half receptive, half sheepish air Two of them, Warren Youngs and Arthur Haskell, rivals for the affections of Hetty Lane, were in a state of great anxiety. Hitherto odds had been even, but now surely Hetty must needs show her hand, and the man who was invited to the dance would have reason to believe himself to be the favored one.

Hetty was wise and wily. Warren had the fastest horse in the county and Arthur was going to buy an automobile in the spring. So she did not mean to let things come to an issue for some time yet. Besides, she really didn't know which one she liked the better, so she decided to invite a third young man.

"It doesn't really matter whom I go with," she reflected, "for once there I can dance with any one I choose. I have a great mind to ask John Wylie. It would be such a surprise to every one, and it might be a kindness to him, for I don't believe he has ever been to a party, and no one else will ask him. He has never taken a girl anywhere."

She put her idea into execution. John was quite overwhelmed at the honor.

"It isn't a joke, is it, Hetty?" he asked wistfully.

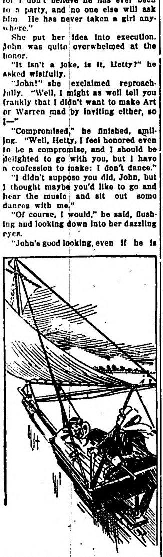
"John!" she exclaimed reproachfully. "Well, I might as well tell you frankly that I didn't want to make Art or Warren mad by inviting either, so I—"

"Compromised," he finished, smiling. "Well, Hetty, I feel honored even to be a compromise, and I should be delighted to go with you, but I have a confession to make: I don't dance."

"I didn't suppose you did, John, but I thought maybe you'd like to go and hear the music and sit out some dances with me."

"Of course, I would," he said, flushing and looking down into her dazzling eyes.

"John's good looking, even if he is big and clumsy," she reflected as she returned home.



She Was Enjoying Her First Ride in an Ice Boat.

On the way she met two girls.

"Who are you going to invite, Hetty?" asked one of them, eagerly.

"I have already invited," she replied. "I asked John Wylie."

They both laughed hilariously. "Don't fool, Hetty. Tell us who, Warren or Arthur?"

"I have just this moment asked John, and he has accepted.

"Why, Hetty, whatever has possessed you? I should as soon think of taking an elephant."

"I like elephants," she replied.

"But, Hetty, they call him 'Cold Molasses' because he is so slow. You won't get there till the party is over."

"Molasses melts at times, you know."

Hetty tripped away, giggling at the sensation she was going to create.

"Well, Hetty," asked her father at supper, "who are you going to take to the dance—Art or Warren?"

"Neither, father. I have asked John Wylie," she replied, preparing herself for a lecture on flirting.

To her surprise, her father's face was full of approval.

"Well, Hetty, I am glad you are getting sensible at last. John Wylie is as good as gold. He's a little slow—"

"Yes; they call him 'Cold Molasses' and 'Old Hundred.'"

"It isn't always the fastest that make good."

Warren and Arthur were not at all disturbed when they heard Hetty was going to the dance with "Cold Molasses." They did not fear such a rival. At the party Hetty put her name down in four spaces on John's program.

"Won't you ask me for more?" he pleaded.

Hetty laughed. "This is leap year, John. You mustn't ask for dances."

She was at a loss to know what to talk about when she came to sit out the first dance with him, but he began the conversation.

"I'm like a bull in a china shop at a party, Hetty, but I'm glad I am here, and I want to give you a pleasure in return. May I?"

"Certainly," she replied, hoping he would not ask her to ride after his sauntering old mare.

"I can give you a faster ride than either Art or Warren can," he said, proudly.

"Oh, have you got a new horse, John?"

"Not a horse. Keep on guessing."

"An automobile?"

"No."

"Balloon?"

"No."

"Well, I give up, John."

"I don't believe I'll tell you just yet. Not until you are sitting out the fifth dance with me."

"John isn't so slow," she thought, as she took his program and wrote her name once more.

When the fifth dance came he asked her if she wouldn't enjoy it more to have it a surprise until it materialized. "I'll come over tomorrow afternoon and take you to it."

When he called the next day he didn't drive the old mare.

"This looks like Warren's horse," said Hetty, as she got into the sleigh.

"It is," he replied, touching up the horse. "I borrowed it because I heard you couldn't bear to ride behind a slow horse."

"Did Warren know you were going to take me riding?"

He looked at her in surprise. "Why, no," he replied. "He would have made some excuse not to lend it to me if he had known that."

"And they call John slow," she thought with a smile.

They drove five miles to a farmhouse where some of John's friends lived. He left the horse and sleigh in the barn and then escorted Hetty down to a lake.

"Here," he said, "we can have the sport I love."

In a few moments she was enjoying her first ride on an iceboat.

"John," she cried, ecstatically, "there's nothing like it, is there?"

"Except sailing," he replied. "I come here for my recreation in summer and winter."

"I'll never think of John as 'Cold Molasses' again," she thought as they finally went up to the farmhouse to get warm before starting for home.

When they reached her house Mr. Lane came out to the sleigh.

"My wife sent me to ask you in to supper, John."

"Yes, do, John," urged Hetty.

"I've got to get this horse back," said John, sorrowfully. "Warren wants it tonight."

"Ben Childs is here. He lives next to Warren's. He'll be glad not to have to walk home."

After supper Mr. and Mrs. Lane went to a neighbor's to call and Hetty settled herself for a comfortable visit with John without perturbation. She knew from a certain expression in his eyes how much he thought of her, but she also knew his slow way of doing things, and calculated that it would take him at least a year to reach the proposing point. Therefore, when he suddenly put his arm about her and asked her tersely if she would be his wife she was so surprised that she accepted him.

"John," she said later, "how did you come to ask me so soon?"

"So soon!" he echoed, in surprise. "Why, little girl, I've been wanting to ask you since the first time I saw you."

A Kneepad for Miners.

The miner's calling is what accident insurance companies would term an "extra hazardous risk," but every little while some inventive genius brings forward an article designed to eliminate some of the dangers. One of these devices is the kneepad designed by three Illinois men. This pad is a concave steel piece worn over the knee with two sharp points turned outward. On the inside of the pad, toward the knee, is a cushion lining to allow the wearer to kneel on it without bruising himself. The harness worn with this guard consists of a pair of side bars running from the ankle to the knee. At the upper point they are attached to a strap, which buckles around the joint and at the foot they terminate in a contrivance which fits over the instep and around the heel, thus keeping the pad in place and preventing it from slipping around to one side. Equipped with this device a miner can crawl around on dangerous ledges with safety.

Faults of Women's Dress.

Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, wife of the mayor of Boston, says that individuality should be the essential feature of women's dress. Society women, adhering so closely to the styles, she says, often make themselves unconsciously ridiculous. Many women, she says, wear the latest styles in order to avoid gossip, when they would much prefer to dress in a simpler manner.

Not So the Eggs.

Rooster—Did you see where they are going to require all eggs to be tagged with their age?

Hen—These humans are getting too fresh.

POULTRY

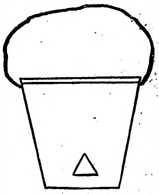
IMPORTANCE OF GOOD FEED

Well Established Fact That It Is Easier to Hatch Chickens Than to Raise Them.

It is a well-known fact that it is easier to hatch chickens than to raise them. The following method has given satisfactory results on a successful poultry ranch:

For the first six days a commercial chick feed is used, consisting of cracked grains, such as wheat, oats, corn, millet seed, weed seed, grit, egg shells, and meat scraps. Part of the feed is placed in shallow saucers and the remainder scattered among the chaff. It is important that the young birds should be active, so scratching for food is good exercise. Clean water is kept before them at all times.

When the chicks are let into the outdoor runs, which is about the sixth day, if the weather is favorable, skim milk is added to the ration. This is fed once a day, in the morning, and is placed in drinking fountains in the outside runways. The quantity of milk fed is determined by what will be cleaned up within a short time, for it is not allowed to stand in the fountains all day. Meanwhile the drinking fountains in the brooders are kept supplied with water, and can be removed to the outside runways when desired.



Self-Feeder for Chicks.

At this period one or even two of the three daily feeds of the commercial chick feed may be replaced by "johnny cake." When the chicks are about three weeks old the commercial feed is gradually replaced by a mixture consisting of one-half of whole wheat, one-fourth of cracked corn, and one-fourth of steel cut oats. This is thrown into the inside runways, mornings and evenings, in a quantity a little less than the chicks will eat. In the middle of the day fifty chicks receive in place of the grain mixture a piece of home-made bread, called "johnny cake," about six inches square and two inches thick. This is made of one part oatmeal, two parts corn meal, a little whole wheat flour, a pinch of salt and infertile eggs from the incubator, the whole being mixed with sour milk and soda. From two to six eggs are used in a johnny cake eighteen inches square and two inches thick. The rule is to feed half to two-thirds of what the chicks will eat of this cake, and never feed anything in such quantity that portions will be left to be trampled on after the chicks have lost interest in it.

In additon to the mixed grains and cake, a small quantity of some succulent material is thrown into the runways. For this purpose grass, carrots, kale, lettuce and the like are used. Kale is much relished, and lettuce is one of the best feeds of this kind. The quantity of this material fed may be judged from the statement that one apple or one loaf of kale is given to fifty chicks.

Chickens will not scratch when they are overfed nor when there is no feed in the litter. The idea is to keep them scratching.

The changes in rations are made gradually. Disorders are easily caused by sudden and radical changes of feed. During this period finely chopped meat is fed sparingly. The chicks get a good many angleworms from the freshly spaded soil in the outside runs.

Scrupulous cleanliness is observed about the brooders and runways. Everything is carefully disinfected by the free use of disinfectants before the chicks are placed in their quarters. This prevents trouble with vermin and sickness. Any chicks that do not show growth and activity from day to day are immediately removed, thus insuring the strength and vigor of the flock.

The self-feeder shown in the illustration is a useful article for the poultry raiser. It is made out of a tin pail, new or old, having a lid to it. A hole is cut three inches long and the tin pressed back, as shown. This will allow the feed to run down as fast as the chicks eat it.

Milk for Chickens.

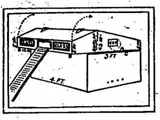
Buttermilk, sour milk or sweet skimmilk are excellent, but if the latter is fed, it should never sour in the vessel, nor should any other article of food ever sour or remain after the meal. Keep vessels and feedboards strictly clean. Greens, such as lettuce, clover and chopped vegetables, must not be missing, but fed liberally with other feed when the chicks are housed. Insist upon variety in feed and feeding, systematically embracing the foregoing diet. Good mixtures may also be had from reliab's supply houses.

USEFUL FARM-MADE BROODER

Missouri Poultry Raiser Gives Sketch of Device Intended to Shelter Little Chicks.

My brooder is 3 by 4 feet, divided into two sections, the upper being for the chicks, the lower for the lamp which heats it, writes Preston Mitchell, in Valley Farmer. An extension (BB) 12 inches wide is built at one side for a cool-air room.

A No. 1 kitchen lamp is used for heating, a free space of 4 inches being allowed between top of chimney and brooder floor. Lamp may be removed through a 12 by 12-inch door in back. Openings in the lower part of box provide fresh air for lamp. The floor is made of good lumber matched to fit very closely. An inch and a half below floor is a solid piece of sheet iron or tin (not zinc) which keeps out the fumes from the lamp. The lamp heats the sheet iron and the dead-air space above, thus warming the boards in brooder floor.



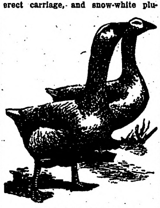
Farm-Made Brooder.

In front of brooder are three doors, two of glass and one for the runway. From floor to eaves is 5 or 6 inches. Roof is covered with a prepared roofing. The front part is hinged with 6-inch strap hinges so it will lie flat on main top. Rear part is on hinges at back of brooder, so the entire top can be turned back for cleaning and airing. The joint between the two parts of roof may be covered with a strip of oilcloth. A few folds of burlap sacking split up to to 3 inches form the division between the main brooder and the cooling room.

HARDY WHITE EMBDEN GEESE

Considered Very Practical Birds for Farmers and Pay Well for Their Care and Keep.

White Embden geese are considered very practical birds for farmers and pay well for their keeping. They are nice looking, of large size, tall and erect carriage, and snow-white plumage. They orginally came from Embden, in Westphalia, and have been bred in this country for many years.



Pair of White Embdens.

POULTRY NOTES

Eggs should be regularly collected at least twice daily.

A light placed in the roosting quarters will keep the ducks quiet at night.

Grain should be fed poultry at night, as it remains in the crop the longest.

There is no place for a sick person in the poultry business. It's hustle, hustle, hustle.

Nearly all disease of poultry can be traced to filth. Clean off the drop boards frequently.

Young ducks should be ready for market at ten weeks old. No profit in feeding them after that.

The ground and duck pen should be disinfected every spring and fall by digging up and sowing green crops.

Young ducks are extremely nervous and cannot stand undue excitement. Keep the dogs and strangers away from them.

Hard-shelled eggs are always preferable; consequently give the laying hens plenty of egg-forming material. Oyster shells are one of the excellent foods.

We often read of hens that lay 200 eggs in one year. This is a good record to aspire to, but count how many you have in your pen that can go one better.

On most farms it will prove better and more economical to allow the poultry free range during favorable weather and fence off the lawn and garden.

With the common knowledge of the earning of the farm flocks have come a desire to keep more fowls and make their keeping a special department of the farm operations.

The gains made by chickens during the summer are rapid and poultrymen are fast beginning to realize that if they have large healthy birds they must have abundant range during the period when they are growing and developing.

It Is a Mistake

Many have the idea that anything will sell if advertised strong enough. This is a great mistake. True, a few sales might be made by advertising an absolutely worthless article but it is only the article that is bought again and again that pays. An example of the big success of a worthy article is the enormous sale that has grown up for Cascarets Candy Cathartic. This wonderful record is the result of great merit successfully made known through persistent advertising and the mouth-to-mouth recommendation given Cascarets by its friends and users.

Like all great successes, trade pirates prey on the unsuspecting public, by marketing fake tablets similar in appearance to Carcarets. Care should always be exercised in purchasing well advertised goods, especially an article that has a national sale like Cascarets. Do not allow a substitute to be palmed off on you.

Statistics Go Lame.

"'Pears t' me thar's somethin' wrong with stertisticks," remarked the oldest inhabitant as he dropped into his usual place on the loafers' bench.

"What's wrong with 'em?" queried the village grocer.

"Wall, ercordin' tew 'em," continued the o. i., "we orter hev had a death in teown ev'ry six weeks fer th' past tew years."

"Is that so?" said the grocer.

"Yaas," answered the other, "an' by ginger we ain't had 'em!"

A Protection Against the Heat.

When you begin to think it's a personal matter between you and the sun to see which is the hotter, buy yourself a glass or a bottle of Coca-Cola. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send 2c stamp for booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" and the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910. The latter contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues, and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. Address The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

He Had Been Observing.

"Why don't you call your invention the 'Bachelor's Button?'" I asked my friend, who was about to put on the market a button that a man could attach without needle or thread.

"I fear that the appellation would imply too much restrictiveness," he answered. "You see," he went on, giving me one of his knowing smiles, "I expect to do just as much business with the married men as with the bachelors."

Coming Down to Earth.

"Happiness," declaimed the philosopher, "is in the pursuit of something, not in the catching of it."

"Have you ever," interrupted the plain citizen, "chased the last car on a rainy night?"

For Red, Itching Eyelids, Cysts, Styes Falling Eyelashes and All Eyes That Need Care Try Murine Eye Salve. Aseptic Tubes—Trial Size—25c. Ask Your Druggist or Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Notes and Comments.

Church—"Does your neighbor play that cornet without notes.

Gotham—"Yes; but not without comments."—Yonkers Statesman.

Controlled Newspapers.

The Atchison Globe says that no advertiser has ever tried to control its editorial policy, the remark being occasioned by the charge often made nowadays, that the big advertisers direct the editorial policy of newspapers.

The experience of the Globe is the experience of most newspapers. The merchant who does a great deal of advertising is more interested in the circulation department of a newspaper than in the editorial department. If a daily paper goes to the homes of the people, and is read by them, he is satisfied, and it may chase after any theory or fad, for all he cares. He has troubles of his own, and he isn't trying to shoulder those of the editorial brethren.

There are newspapers controlled by people outside of the editorial rooms, and a good many of them, more's the pity; but the people exercising that control are not the business men who pay their money for advertising space. The newspapers which are established for political purposes are often controlled by chronic officeseekers, whose first concern is their own interests. There are newspapers controlled by great corporations, and the voice of such newspapers is always raised in protest against any genuine reform.

The average western newspaper usually is controlled by its owner, and he is supposed to be in duty bound to make all sorts of sacrifices at all sorts of times; there are people who consider it his duty to insult his advertisers, just to show that he is free and independent. If he shows a decent respect for his patrons, who pay him their money, and make it possible for him to carry on the business, he is "subsidized" or "controlled." The newspaper owner is a business man, like the dry goods man or the grocer. The merchants are expected to have consideration for their customers, and they are not supposed to be subsidized by the man who spends five dollars with them, but the publisher is expected to demonstrate his courage by showing that he is ungrateful for the patronage of his friends. It is a funny combination when you think it over.—Emporia Gazette.

Caring for the Baby.

Old Lady—What a nice boy, to watch your little brother so carefully!

Nice Boy—Yes, 'um. He just swallowed a dime and I'm afraid of kidnapers.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM
BRIGHT'S DISEASE
BACKACHE
DIABETES
375 "Guaranteed"

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT IT. It's a county seat in center of Rio Grande Valley and irrigation; railroad, canals, court house, bank, school, brick business houses. People needed to build its great resources, rich enough to make you rich. Write for booklet H, quick. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS. They may bring you wealth. 64-page Book Free. Est. 1880. Fitzgerald & Co., Pat. Attys., Box K, Washington, D.C.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

Colorado Lands Richer Than Gold Mines

There are bigger profits in eastern Colorado in proportion to the cost of land than almost anywhere else. Colorado's agricultural products are more than double the value of its mines.

Irrigation is unnecessary. By deep plowing and continual shallow cultivation the soil never dries out during the growing season, making big crops and surprising profits on $5.00 to $20.00 land.

What Some Men Have Done:

One man raised enough potatoes on 12 acres to buy 160 acres. Another man makes affidavit that he has not lost a crop in fifteen years.

Without irrigation one man's 800 cherry trees brought him $900. Five hundred plum trees produced $225. One hundred apple trees gave 300 bushels, $150; 1,400 currant bushes, three years old, yielded $225.

Hogs raised on alfalfa, fattened on corn (also raised on the same farm), cost $4 per head (including first cost of parent stock) and sell at top prices.

It's a great dairy and poultry country where dairy cows thrive on natural grasses.

The climate of eastern Colorado is the healthiest in the world. It makes healthy families and prolific crops. Good churches, good schools and splendid markets close at hand.

Combine business with pleasure. Enjoy an inexpensive vacation among the Colorado Rockies and all these wonderful lands along the Rock Island Lines on the way. Now is the time to go. See for yourself what a glorious section it is.

Low fare excursions to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo every day with long return limits

L. M. ALLEN, Passenger Traffic Manager
236 La Salle Station, Chicago.

Rock Island

IN VALAIS

BY LOUISE MURRAY

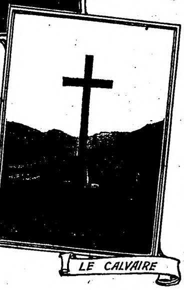
A VILLAGE STREET: CHAMPERY

ON A COUNTRY ROAD NEAR CHAMPERY

CHAMPERY AND THE DENTS BLANCHES

FEMININE COSTUME IN CHAMPERY

THE DENTS DU MIDI



LE CALVAIRE

APROPOS of all the present talk about woman suffrage, let us take a glance at the inhabitants of a small village in Switzerland, or, more accurately, the dwellers on the mountain slopes about Champery, in the canton of Valais, that sequestered and charming hamlet which lies contentedly at the feet of its famous neighbor, the Dent du Midi.

There the sturdy peasant women have solved the "equal rights" matter to their own satisfaction. Votes were never a factor in the question, but trousers were, and have been calmly appropriated for their own use; so it is as man's equal in freedom of movement and attire, at least, that the feminine half of the community tend their herds, cut hay on the almost perpendicular hill sides, and clamber up and down the stony and tortuous paths leading to their mountain homes.

If Americans are as yet in almost total ignorance of this little spot, successfully hidden for years at the extreme end of the lovely Val d'Illiez, it is by no means undiscovered, and, owing to the recent foreign invasion, these fair traitors to the conventional skirt have become as shy as the proverbial chamois, and one must seek them upon their own heights during the summer season, when the new electric tramway which has supplanted the old-time diligence renders this village almost too accessible to the ever-growing tourist army.

En route from Italy, one leaves the Simplon line at Saint Maurice, rides for a few minutes in a shuttle train of doubtful comfort, and, arriving at Monthey, takes the tram, which immediately commences an ascent of the fertile valley. Through vineyard and chestnut grove, over roaring mountain streams and past various hamlets, the little train wends its way, ever upward.

Leaving the heat of the plain below, one gradually emerges into an atmosphere of crystalline coolness. Champery, the end of the railway and the last village in the valley, lies 3,500 feet above the sea. Except its bracing air, one is unconscious of the altitude, as all about tower the infinitely greater heights of the Dents du Midi and the Dents Blanches, their white "teeth" so dazzling in the sunlight that one welcomes the almost ever-present curtain of cloud which veils their brightness. Some 300 feet below the village the rapid and noisy Vieze, home of that delectable fish, the "ombre," rushes down the bed of the valley from its source in the Col de Coux, another mountain, at whose summit lies the frontier of Savoy and a customs-house, and from whence one may continue one's walk in France to Chamonix.

The country abounds in walks and climbs to suit the most expert or inexperienced mountaineer. First and foremost of these is the ascent of the Dent du Midi, more than 10,000 feet in height. Of its seven teeth, the Haute Cime is most popular and least dangerous. Parties usually leave Champery in the afternoon, sup at Bonaveau, snatch a few hours of sleep, and are off before dawn in order to reach the summit for a far-reaching panorama of the sun-kissed Alps awaking from their sleep.

It was at this little chalet of Bonaveau that one party, finding their hopes of an ascent shattered by torrential rain, resolved to play bridge and amuse themselves as best they could until the wee sma' hours; but "English as she is spoke" and accompanying laughter evidently jarred upon the proprietor's nerves, for in the morning their modest bill was embellished with the strange item: "Extra: Pour bruit fait pendant la nuit (for noise made during the night), 5 francs."

To return to the village, its one street lined, by chalets with gayly flowering window-boxes and neat gardens, hotels, pensions, and little shops, let us occupy ourselves with the cosmopolitan throng that wanders back and forth on any August day.

The Hotel Dent du Midi, Champery's largest and most modern hostelry, is the best point of vantage for such a survey. Choosing a comfortable chair from beneath its striped awnings, we call a waitress wearing one of the typical scarlet kerchiefs on her head to bring us tea. While waiting we may listen to the orchestra and marvel at the many countries of the world represented in this small corner of it. The English and French element predominate, and as yet the American is in the minority, but electricity, steam heat and all the commodities of modern life that especially recommend a place to his luxury-loving heart are fast doing away with its former simplicity. What a field in which to study human nature, national characteristics, and that intangible something which stamps indelibly the types of each country for its own.

There goes a former prime minister of Austria off for a walk with his beautiful wife, his fox terriers bounding in glee at his heels. A distinguished Roman and his two sons are returning from an all-day climb, their arms filled with Alpine roses. Here comes an English army officer, pack on back and alpenstock in hand, off with his guide for "the Dent." A little Indian princess tosses a bit of cake to her squirming and anticipatory dachshund. Out in the garden four hilarious Parisiennes are settling their accounts at bridge. A Greek countess flicks the ashes from her cigarette, as she sips her tea in company with a young Roumanian. An Italian admiral strolls into the "poste," and the inevitable American girl returns from tennis. So one might continue indefinitely, for Swiss, Dutch, Russian, Hungarian, and even Egyptian are all represented in this out-of-the-way little place to such an extent that during the annual tennis tournament lodgings of any sort, be it ever so homely or primitive, is at a premium.

It is in June, however, that Champery is at its loveliest. Then the fields are carpeted with masses of wild flowers of the most extraordinary beauty and variety, delicate orchid-like blossoms that might have been hot-house grown mixing with the more sturdy ones, and it is with real regret that one sees them swept away by the relentless scythe in haying time. In the heart of the village lies the newly restored parish church, with its unique and ancient crown-capped bell-tower, from which a veritable chaos of chimes peal forth on feast days.

Mention of Champery would not be complete without a word as to its favorite strolls, the "Petit" and "Grand Paradis"—two lovely wooded spots by the rapid Vieze, where one may sit beneath the pines and listen to its noisy music—and "les Galeries," a natural rock formation in the sheer cliff rising from the right bank of the river, and from which a splendid view of the village is to be had.

But it is toward the east, a half hour distant, that we wend our way most frequently, for there lies "Le Calvaire," a stone cross set upon a projecting knoll which dominates the entire Val d'Illiez far down to the peaceful Valley of the Rhone and across to the distant peaks of Chaussy, Gummfluh, and the Mont d'Or glistening in the sun. From this point, midway between the valley and the mountains, seated beneath that cross, eternal symbol of death, one may best watch the mystery of the departing sun as it sinks behind the Col de Coux. Then the veil that hangs all day before the Dent du Midi lifts, and the dying rays slowly flood the mountains' cold, dead whiteness with the rosy glow of life and eternal promise.

Finds Homes For Children

Recently two large parties of children left Liverpool by the Allan liner Corsican, Captain Cook, for Quebec. One party, consisting of boys and girls, was from the Birt home, and the children were under the care of Miss Birt, who traveled in the ship. This lady has been engaged for 37 years in rescuing children and has taken out over 6,000 and settled them in the Dominion of Canada. The party in the Corsican was the eighty-first which has gone out under the auspices of the home.—London Times.

ROOSEVELT RETURNS AND IS GIVEN AN OVATION SELDOM EQUALED

The Mighty Traveler Goes Buoyantly Through a Long and Trying Reception-Parade, Showing Lively Interest in Everything American

The White Company Receives Unique Compliment for the Sturdy Reliability of Its Steam Car From Mr. Roosevelt and Family

Theodore Roosevelt and Party in White Steamer.)

After fifteen months' absence, exactly as scheduled, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt disembarked from the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, Saturday morning, June 18, at 11 a. m. To the keen disappointment of a large group of newspaper correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt absolutely refused, as heretofore, to be interviewed or to talk on political subjects, but his rapid fire of questions showed the same virile interest in public affairs as before.

If the welcome tendered by the vast throng may be considered a criterion upon which to base a "return from Elba," surely there was no discordant note in the immense reception-parade, nor in the wildly clamorous crowd which cheered at every glimpse and hung on his very word.

The incidents of the day in New York were many, but perhaps none better illustrated the nervous energy and vitality of the man, the near-mania to be up-and-doing, which he has brought back to us, than the discarding of horses and carriages for the swifter and more reliable automobiles. The moment the Roosevelt family and immediate party landed, they were whisked away in White Steamers to the home of Mrs. Douglas Robinson at 433 Fifth avenue. A little later, when the procession reached the corner of Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, Colonel Roosevelt again showed his preference for the motor car in general and the White cars in particular, when he, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Collector Loeb transferred from their carriage to White Steamers, which were in waiting for them.

After luncheon at Mr. Robinson's house, the entire party, including Colonel Roosevelt, again entered White cars and were driven to Long Island City, where they were to take a special train to the ex-President's home at Oyster Bay.

The supremacy of the White cars with the Roosevelt party was again demonstrated on Sunday, when the party was driven to church in the White Steamers, and a group of some forty prominent Rough Riders were taken in a White Gasoline Truck to a clambake at the Travers Island clubhouse of the New York Athletic Club.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

Every dealer everywhere; if not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the

Standard Oil Company
(Incorporated)

Looked Like a Pattern.

"My dear," asks the thoughtful husband, "did you notice a large sheet of paper with a lot of diagrams on it about my desk?"

"You mean that big piece with dots and curves and diagonals and things all over it?"

"Yes. It was my map of the path of Halley's comet. I wanted to—"

"My goodness! I thought it was that pattern I asked you to get, and the dresmaker is cutting out my new shirtwaist by it!"—Chicago Evening Post.

Theatrical expense accounts come under the head of play bills.

Constipation causes many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One a laxative, three for cathartic.

Many people are busy mortgaging the future in order to acquire a past.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Many a man enjoys a pipe because his wife hates it.

Up-Set Sick Feeling

that follows taking a dose of castor oil, salts or calomel, is about the worst you can endure—Ugh—it gives one the creeps. You don't have to have it—CASCARETS move the bowels—tone up the liver—without these bad feelings. Try them. 916

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

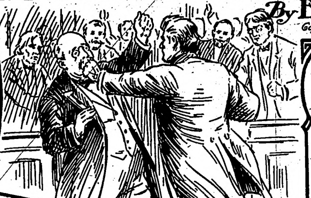
W. N. U., NO. 29-1910.

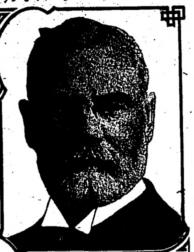
When LAWMAKERS Become PEEVISH

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Copyright, 1910, by W. A. Patterson

SPEAKER JOSEPH G. CANNON

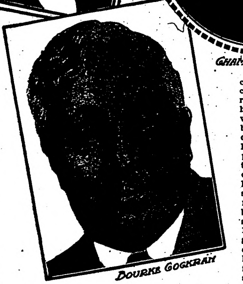




JAMES R. MANN

SERENO E. PAYNE

CHAMP CLARK



BOURKE COCKRAN

IT IS the custom to speak of the United States senate as the most dignified legislative body in the world, while on occasions the house of representatives has been described as a "bear garden." The senate is ordinarily a dignified deliberative body, but nevertheless it is a mistake to look upon the house of representatives in any way, except on the rarest occasions, as an assembly given to disorderly procedure. There have been within the last few months many scenes of intense excitement in the house, times when personal, political and factional temper has run high and when there was the "high spirited excuse" for scenes bordering on the tumultuous. In the main, however, through all the temper-trying times of the attempt to shear Speaker Cannon of his power, and during the intense moments of the debate on the railroad bill, the members succeeded in holding themselves in check, and in giving an exhibition of self-restraint that was admirable. On only a few occasions within the space of seven years that one correspondent has watched proceedings in the house, have there been personal encounters on the floor between members. In only one instance really could these affairs be spoken of as personal encounters, for in only one case were blows exchanged.

A former minority leader of the house and one of the leading members of his party, exchanged blows, but the matter was a personal one, and not a political one, and it might have happened outside of the house as well as inside. It was not brought about by the heat of debate, but by long continued friction which engendered heat enough to cause an explosion while the house was in session. One of the parties to this physical encounter is now dead, and the other, next March, will take his seat in the senate of the United States. Their names probably will suggest themselves at once.

There are many hot-headed members of the lower house of congress, and some of these "temperamental ones" are leaders in their respective parties. As leaders, however, these men long ago learned that if they were to maintain leadership they must keep a check on their tongues and a check on their birthright willingness to enter on a scrimmage.

The members of the house realize that men laboring under excitement, will say things that they will be sorry for in a minute, and so frequently, words that positively are insulting, are overlooked by the offended member for a few minutes in order to give the offender a chance to get his faculties back and apologize. If he does not apologize, though he generally does, the one who feels himself aggrieved, has his own way of securing retraction, either by appeal to the house, or direct appeal, sometimes made in pretty sharp language, to the member who has offended.

One of the most exciting times in the house of representatives in recent years was a verbal encounter between Representative Bourke Cockran, Democrat, of New York city, and Representative John Dalzell, Republican, of Pittsburg. Bourke Cockran is known as one of the greatest orators of the United States, and John Dalzell is known as one of the ablest debaters on the Republican side of the house of representatives, a small man physically, but absolutely fearless. Dalzell is one of the chief advocates of protection.

The New York member attacked the consistency of the Pittsburg member in a speech, and said some things about the inconsistency of the Republican party. To Dalzell, this seemed to give the opportunity that he wanted. He stood on the floor of the house and accused Cockran not only of inconsistency, but practically of using his gift of oratory, first to uphold one side of a question, and then to uphold another, and the Pittsburg man did not try to conceal the reasons which he thought were responsible for the change of opinion and the change of attitude on the part of the man whom he was criticising.

In that speech against Cockran, Dalzell was waspish. There were men on the floor who expected fully to see Cockran attack him, not verbally, but physically, but the New Yorker sat through the speech, and when it was ended arose in his own place. The New Yorker contented himself with saying that if he were guilty of the charges which the Republican member had made against him, he was not fit to stay in the house of representatives, and he demanded that congress as a matter of personal privilege to him, should make an investigation of his conduct, make a report thereon, and if he were found guilty, the fact should be published to the country.

The house refused to take any action on the New Yorker's demand for an investigation, and the whole matter went by default with the speeches of both men standing in the Congressional Record as evidence of a warm day in congress.

In a debate on the tariff last year, the dry subject of lumber came near causing a physical encounter between Representative Joseph W. Fordney of Michigan, and Representative Adam M. Byrd of Mississippi. The Mississippian had said that the Michigan member was interested personally in lumber matters and intimated that he was particularly interested in a section of a lumber trust. The Michigan man said something in retort which was a little stronger than a mere statement that the Mississippian did not know what he was talking about. At any rate, Representative Bryd stripped off his coat and started down the aisle toward the Republican side, and toward Mr. Fordney, who stood perfectly still, awaiting the attack. Not many years ago Fordney had worked in the capacity of what is known as a "lumber jack," and he is as hard as any nail that was ever driven into a board. Before the Mississippian could reach the scene of intended action, however, he was seized by several members, and his coat was slipped on to his back once more. Later, the two representatives made up their differences.

In seven years these are the only instances which can be recalled at this time of troubles between members that did, or seemed likely to culminate in serious encounters. The truth is that the house is seldom a "bear garden," and the best test of the tempers of the members was made during the time which preceded the change in the rules of the house which was secured by a coalition of so-called Insurgent Republicans and the Democrats. Led by Representative Norris of Nebraska, the Insurgents and Democrats together succeeded in taking away from the speaker his membership in that committee. It was a great change from former conditions, and it was a direct attack on the power of the speaker, an attack that had in it seemingly much that was personal, although most of the men who had a hand in it, denied that there was any personal feeling.

Men sat white in their seats or stood and spoke with shaking voices, so tremendous was the excitement, but during it all each man kept a firm hold on his temper, and while it seemed to the spectators that encounters must come, they never came, and the change in the rules was effected, involving as it did, an airing of factional differences with just as little outward show of disturbance as would attend the enactment of legislation of small degree of interest.

Every man has mannerisms, but of course in the house of representatives pronounced mannerisms of the leading members are the only ones which become impressed upon the public. Sereno E. Payne, the Republican leader, is the author of the last tariff bill as it passed the house of representatives. Outwardly, Mr. Payne suggests a condition of mind and temper indicated by the sound of his first name, but the Republican leader is not serene at all times, although he, perhaps better than any other prominent man in the house, keeps control of his emotions.

Mr. Payne is fat and he is jolly under ordinary circumstances. Occasionally when his good Republican soul is pierced by an arrow of sarcasm, invective or reproach fired from the Democratic side, Sereno loses his serenity, and he grows quite hot and emits what some members have dubbed bolts of lightning. On occasions of less heat, the Republican leader emits sparks only, but they are of the kind that burn. There are possibilities of indignation and anger in Representative Payne that no one would suspect who looks down from the gallery upon his ordinarily calm exterior.

Champ Clark of Missouri, the leader of the Democrats, loves his joke and it takes an occasion that is worth while before he rouses himself to anger. "When Champ Clark does get mad he gets mad," is the expressive way in which a Democratic colleague of the minority leader put the matter recently. There was an exhibition of how mad Champ Clark can get at the time when he was trying to hold his Democratic colleagues in a solid line in favor of a change in the rules governing house procedure. This was at the time when some of the Insurgents, in connection with the Democrats were trying to secure what is now known as Calendar Wednesday. It was at a time long prior to the fight which ended in the removal of the speaker from the committee on rules.

The Democratic leader found that he could not control all his party colleagues, and he had a suspicion that some of them knew that they were to get committee preferment at the hands of the speaker, provided they deserted the Democratic leader in the time of need. One New York Democratic member, with some others from different parts of the country, deserted their chieftain in the hour of trouble, and later the New Yorker was given a fine committee berth by the speaker.

No one will ever forget the castigation which Champ Clark gave this colleague, whom he looked upon as a deserter from the cause of his fellows. It was a scoring the like unto which few men have ever received. The New Yorker took it in apparent humbleness of spirit, and it may be that he did not have any excuse to offer. Time is a great healer, however, and now the Democratic leader and the man whom he excoriated are good friends, and seem to be working in harmony for the party good in the house of representatives.

The hardest worked man in the house of representatives, not even barring the speaker, is Representative James R. Mann, Republican, of Chicago. Mann is known as the great objector, and also as the watch dog. It is his duty to be on the floor of the house constantly, and to watch legislation, line by line, and to see to it that nothing is "slipped over," which the Republican majority does not think proper. Mr. Mann keeps an eye on amendments to the appropriation bills, and all kinds of things as they come before the house. It is he who objects to the consideration of many small bills when unanimous consent unquestionably would secure passage for them. This makes him in a sense tremendously unpopular with members who want to get something through, and can only get action under unanimous consent.

Day of the Hall Boy

In this day of complaint against incompetent servants of all sorts it is rather remarkable to study the general utility of the apartment-house hallboy. The resourceful New York woman finds many uses for the liveried lad and where he has been tested and found thoroughly reliable he is often trusted with responsible duties.

At one of the upper West side apartment hotels two extremely bright young colored men have been employed for four years and the commissions with which they are trusted are worth studying. One of them was seen at a neighboring bank the other morning depositing money for three guests at the hotel. Several other colored boys in uniform were performing a similar service. The receiving teller at the bank explained that many of his women depositors intrusted this work, especially on stormy days, to hall boys and elevator boys and that there has not been a single case of dishonesty or misunderstanding in the matter.

In some houses elevator and hall boys are not permitted to run errands, the New York World says. In others, where two or three lads are on duty, rules are relaxed and superintendents are glad to let the boys serve the tenants. Naturally the boys like to do the errands, because there is corresponding increase in their incomes.

Elevator and hall boys are also intrusted with all sorts of repairs, sponging, pressing, dyeing, etc. You will see them hurrying toward the uptown shops, their arms laden with all sorts of wearing apparel, from silk hats that need ironing to shoes that need half-soling. For such work the boy generally gets two bits of money, one from the tenant for performing the errand and another from the tradesman to whom he throws the work.

A busy time for many of the boys is Sunday afternoons and evenings, after the delicatessen shops open. Then housewives upon whom unexpected company has descended whistle for the hall boy, who makes an emergency run to the nearest purveyor of ready-cooked food.

On Sunday mornings you will find quite a line of colored boys in uniform lined up at the branch postoffices in the residence districts. These represent various apartment houses and apartment hotels whose tenants want their mail on Sunday mornings and who club together to give the colored attendants a small fee for making the trip to the branch postoffice during the hour at which mail is distributed every Sunday.

A very common source of revenue for hall boys is the care of baby buggies. Very few apartments offer room for such vehicles and it is not always safe to leave them in the basement. A bright hall boy will take care of the carriage, keeping it cleaned and repaired, locking it with a chain or padlock to some clean, safe place in the basement and having it ready for use at a signal from the mother or nurse.

Landlords may object to dogs, but hall boys—never. A valuable dog is pretty sure to mean a weekly stipend to an obliging colored attendant. Here again the iron fence or bar becomes useful as an anchorage for the pet in his care and many an uptown hall boy spends his noon hour giving a pedigreed dog its outing.

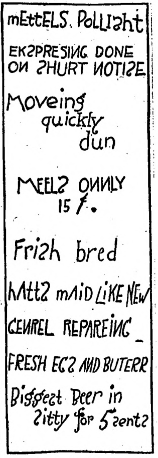
An upper West side boy whose Rooseveltian teeth are the hallmark of good nature said when interviewed on the subject:

"Yessir—we all can do most anything. Missus Powers, she has me open all her cans, 'cause her hands is shaky, an' I hooks her dresses when Mr. Powers he ain't home. I kin market fur her ef she's feelin' poorly, an' I allus meets her mother at the subway station an' takes her back again. I take keer of her cat when she's away and I feed Missus Brown's bird when she goes. Most all the ladies they give me their keys if they're 'spectin' some one to come while they're out, an' I ain't never made no mistake."

LIKE CRUDE SIGNS

Reason for Misspelled and Poorly Printed Ads.

Men of Education in City's Foreign Quarter Purposely Make Signs Ridiculous to Hold Their Trade.

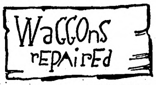


Indianapolis.—Most of the advertising signs in the foreign sections of the city present many humorous phases of business activities. They are inartistic, in bad taste, and seem to display a generous amount of ignorance or carelessness—but such is not the case.

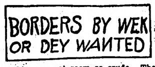
Investigation has disclosed the fact that those signs, at least most of them, serve as business getters. They are the mediums which bring and hold the foreigners together, and they attract hundreds of up-to-date Americans, who think those signs stand for just what they want. The advertising in the foreign districts, however crude it may seem, is in many respects more up to date than what is used downtown. Many of the foreigners—and many in the foreign districts are matured Americans—could prepare or order as pretty signs as seen anywhere, but this would spoil the business in those districts, and the old signs are retained.

A man on West Washington street, blacksmith by trade, and one who looks every bit a foreigner, is well educated. He knows every word in the English language adapted to his trade and does not have to stutter when spelling most any word called for. He writes a good hand and can print the capital and small letters of the alphabet almost as well as a graduate sign painter. But his sign over the door to the shop reads:

Another, almost as good, on the front of the shop, says:



As soon as these are noticed the onlooker will comment on the poor spelling, first of all. Then he will take into consideration the art of sign making and wonder why on earth a man should jumble the letters in that fashion. With that he will pass on and forget the apparent ignorance or carelessness displayed publicly until he arrives at the next establishment, which may have a sign something like this:



BORDERS BY WEK OR DEY WANTED

This may not seem so crude. The letters are uniform and present a good appearance. Evidently somebody with real artistic instinct had been employed to advertise the wants of the house. Here the spelling is the chief fault.

A large artistic and in every way beautiful sign, such as can be seen in the business district, would not attract the foreigners. First of all, they think an establishment carrying a sign of bright colors and worked out to mathematical precision would show too much prosperity, too much Americanism.

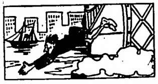
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1910. NO. 17.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Dives from Brooklyn Bridge for $250



NEW YORK.—A sharp-featured, undersized youth in ragged swimming trunks, with a skimpy coat and an old pair of trousers thrown over them, dived successfully from the center span of Brooklyn bridge to the East river, 135 feet below, for $250 in cash, two new suits of clothes and whatever renown the world may hold in store for a bridge jumper.

The late Steve Brodie acquired fame as a bridge jumper and long ran a Bowery saloon on the strength of it, but many say it was never really proved that Steve really jumped. Several would-be suicides have been fished out of the river unhurt after jumping, but Otto Eppers is the first to jump with unquestioned witnesses as part of a prearranged plan.

The boy's first words when he was fished out of the river by the crew of a passing tug were: "Gee! But I hit hard!"

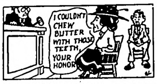
His next were: "Say, whose got the makin's of a cigarette?"

Eppers is seventeen years old and the son of a lithographer. He weighs about 110 pounds and has been unofficial swimming champion of the East river ever since he got into the big boy class. Recently he heard that a Brooklyn merchant was willing to pay $250 out of his advertising appropriation to the first man who would jump from any one of the bridges over the East river.

Otto was the boy for the job. He had jumped 104 feet from a bridge once before and the addition of a few more feet never caused him so much as a thought. "Sure, I'll do it," he said, and he did.

Otto meant to dive from the new Manhattan bridge, because he thought it was higher. The height in reality is the same for all the East river bridges. The police, however, were too watchful. He meant to shed his coat and trousers, but he didn't have time

Elusive Tooth Puzzle in Chicago Court



I COULDN'T CHEW BUTTER WITH THOSE TEETH, YOUR HONOR

CHICAGO.—"The mystery of the Missing Tooth," a novel exposition of how seven and three (sometimes) make eleven, was staged for a large and appreciative, not to say quizzical, audience recently in Municipal Judge Torrison's court.

Plot theme: "Can a dentist recover damages for a swallowed tooth?"

Leading characters: Dr. James L. Blount, Oak Park, praying a monetary revenge, and Mrs. Alice Andrews, heroine in the tragedy of "The Missing Molar."

Dr. Blount demanded his fee for 11 teeth, false if you please, while the heroine pleaded but ten—seven in hand and three hidden by rosy lips.

"The teeth not only were false in material, but they were false to their trust and fell out," said Mrs. Andrews.

"One at a time they began falling out. The first one went on a round steak which cost 25 cents a pound. I thought it merely a coincidence. But when No. 2 fell into the soup one noon, I knew there was something wrong.

"Nos. 3, 4 and 5 came out in unison and Nos. 6 and 7 when a boy set off a firecracker under my feet the last Fourth of July. It was becoming so common then, I lost track of the cause and scarcely noticed the effect. I couldn't even chew butter.

"I refused to pay the dentist's bill unless he did the work all over again, and he wouldn't. He said I must have been trying to chew rocks. Then he sued me."

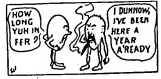
As proof of the deciduous nature of the teeth, Mrs. Andrews began counting them out on Judge Torrison's desk, while court bailiffs looked on agape. Then as she reached "seven," Mrs. Andrews said:

"Three I have in my mouth. He put in 11 for me in February, 1909. Most of them came out and I had three put back."

"But where is the other tooth? Three you still use, seven you have shown the judge, now where is the other one?" was the insistent query put to Mrs. Andrews.

"Where is the other tooth?" The woman faltered. "I don't know where it can be; I thought I had it, but I must have swallowed it while asleep."

Help! 45,000,000 Eggs Are Imprisoned



HOW LONG YUH IN FER?
I DUNNOW, I'VE BEEN HERE A YEAR A'READY

CHICAGO.—Faithful hens of Illinois Indiana, Michigan and Ohio have since April laid 45,000,000 eggs for the cold storage man, according to farmers who have sold their product to representatives of Chicago cold storage houses.

The eggs will remain in the warehouses until the high prices of last winter are duplicated.

Housewives feel that the usual corner in eggs will take place next year.

South Water street commission merchants admitted that warehousemen have canvassed the four states for the last three months, buying up fresh eggs from the farmers and egg commissioners.

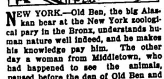
"Chicago cold storage houses are filled with fresh eggs," declared a merchant today, "and I have been told that 45,000,000 eggs are now stored away in warehouses, to remain there until next winter when the men who form the egg pool can demand high prices for the product."

The millions of eggs bought up by the cold storage representatives will not be put on the Chicago markets for sale until there is a scarcity.

The eggs were purchased from the farmers at an average price of 23½ to 24 cents a dozen. Two cents a dozen is added to cover insurance, storage costs, etc., which brings the total cost up to about 26 cents a dozen.

If the eggs can be retailed in Chicago next winter at 45 cents a dozen, at which they were sold last winter, there will be a profit of 19 cents a dozen or a total of something over $700,000.

Zoo Bear Trades Laughs for Peanuts



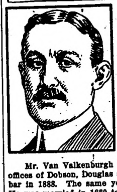
NEW YORK.—Old Ben, the big Alaskan bear at the New York zoological pary in the Bronx, understands human nature well indeed, and he makes his knowledge pay him. The other day a woman from Middletown, who had happened to see the animals, paused before the den of Old Ben and tossed in a shelled peanut. Instantly there was a stampede on the part of Little Ben, Brown Bess, Old Ben's wife, and Karnak, his nephew. Old Ben walked back to the rear of the cage while the others fought for the peanut and then crowded to the bars for more.

The visitor was about to toss in another when she was astonished to see old Ben standing on his hind legs, making motions to her to throw it high over the others' heads to him. At least that was what it looked like. He was standing up on his haunches, waving his right front paw over his head as a boy does when he means you to throw a ball high. The lady threw the peanut high and Old Ben got it—caught it in his mouth, at a distance of 20 feet, while the other bears in the cage raged over missing it. The woman threw more, and kept throwing the peanuts till they were all gone, and every one she threw over the heads of the other bears, just to see Old Ben stand on his hind legs and motion for more.

Ben learned this trick years ago, the keepers say, when he was a dancing bear. When he finally was put in the zoo he astonished the keepers by making signs to them to throw the best food over the heads of the other greedy animals to him. He always takes up his position in the background, motioning the keepers and letting the other bears fight at the iron bars. The result is that he gets the biggest part of the dinner because it is so funny to watch his secret signals to the feeders.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

VAN VALKENBURG IS JUDGE



Judge Arba S. Van Valkenburgh, recently appointed United States district judge, western division of Missouri, is one of the youngest jurists on the federal bench. He is only 48 years of age, but his friends say this will not prevent him from making an enviable record.

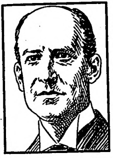
Mr. Van Valkenburgh succeeded Senator Warner as United States district attorney for the western district of Missouri in 1905 and was reappointed by President Taft in December, 1909. He had previously served seven years as assistant to Major Warner in that office. He was born in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1862. When he was seven years old his parents removed to Illinois and later to Michigan. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1884, attaining high rank as a scholar.

Mr. Van Valkenburgh went to Kansas City in 1885 and entered the law offices of Dobson, Douglas and Trimble, being admitted to the Jackson county bar in 1888. The same year he formed a law partnership with D. J. Haff. He was married in 1889 to Miss Grace Ingold of Kansas City.

Mr. Van Valkenburgh was appointed assistant district attorney by Major Warner in 1898, succeeding William Draffen. Upon Major Warner's election to the senate in 1905 President Roosevelt appointed him to the place he since has held.

Friends of the newly appointed judge say that at the department of justice in Washington Mr. Van Valkenburgh was considered as ranking among the ablest United States district attorneys in the country.

POINDEXTER IN LIMELIGHT



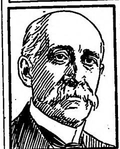
Representative Miles Poindexter of Washington, candidate for the United States senate, whose cause has been espoused by Theodore Roosevelt, was born in Memphis, Tenn., fifty-two years ago and has lived in Washington nineteen years. He has served only one term in congress and has been identified with the insurgents, which makes the action of Colonel Roosevelt all the more important to national politics.

Mr. Poindexter has been a political foe of Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior in the Taft cabinet, with whom Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester and friend of Roosevelt, has had a feud for some time.

The Washington congressman visited Colonel Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill a few days ago and came away in jubilant spirits. Roosevelt had promised to aid him in his fight for the senate and he had a right to feel happy, for help from Roosevelt means help of the right kind and Poindexter needed it.

Mr. Poindexter was educated at Fancy Hill academy, Rockbridge county, Va., and at Washington and Lee university, Lexington, Va., in both the academic and law courses. He located at Wallawalla, Wash., in 1891 and began the practise of law. He was elected prosecuting attorney of Wallawalla county in 1892 and in 1897 moved to Spokane. He was assistant prosecuting attorney for Spokane six years and in 1904 was elected judge of the superior court and remained on the bench until nominated for congress in the newly created third district of Washington. He was elected by a majority of 15,000.

GIVES MILLIONS FOR BOYS



David J. Ranken, Jr., one of the wealthiest men of St. Louis, has acted literally upon that much-advertised saying of Andrew Carnegie, that "he who dies rich dies disgraced," and has turned over his entire fortune, estimated at a little more than $3,000,000, to the David J. Ranken, Jr., School of Mechanical Trades, which he founded, reserving only $3,000 a year for his own modest uses.

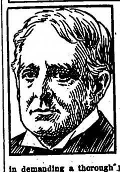
The school was established a year ago with an endowment of $500,000, its purpose being to give boys over fifteen years old a trade education for a nominal sum. The school has prospered and to amplify its usefulness the additional endowment by Mr. Ranken has been made.

Mr. Ranken, who was born in Londonderry, Ireland, in 1835, and who has been a resident of St. Louis since 1862, made his money in real estate and stock transactions. The students at the Ranken school are charged only $30 a year, payable in three installments, and are given a two years' course. All their education is of a practical kind.

Ranken occupies three small rooms over a grocery. When he enters the door and climbs to his rooms he shuts out the world and declines to be seen. Here he has lived for years and worked out the plans and ambition of his life—the founding of the trades school where poor boys can receive a trade education for a nominal fee.

Mr. Ranken visits his school every day and watches the boys at work. He wastes no time in teaching theory in the lecture rooms unless it has some practical application in the shop work. Geometry is taught, but instead of having the boys compute the columns of a cone, they are taught the holding capacity of a funnel of like dimensions. Classroom work in all branches of drawing, carpentry, bricklaying, painting and steam engineering is along similar practical lines.

ASTOUNDS CHOATE'S FRIENDS



Not only the judges and lawyers of the country but all citizens who follow the affairs of the nation were astonished when charges of unprofessional conduct were made against Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador from the United States to Great Britain.

The American Bar association, of which Mr. Choate is a former president, will thoroughly probe the charges at its convention in Chattanooga, Tenn., next month and Mr. Choate's friends say there is no doubt that the verdict will completely exonerate him from all blame.

James R. Watts of Staten island is Mr. Choate's accuser. He alleges that Mr. Choate caused him to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars through "omissions and wrongful acts" while acting as his attorney. Mr. Choate lost no time in demanding a thorough probe of the charges, the first ever made against him in his long and honored career.

Mr. Choate is 78 years old and internationally famous as a lawyer, diplomat, orator and after-dinner speaker. He was ambassador to the court of St. James from 1899 to 1905. His legal career began in 1855, when he was graduated as master of arts at Harvard and admitted to the bar of Massachusetts. He went to New York in 1856 and with the exception of the time he served as ambassador has been practising his profession there. He has been connected with many famous cases and was elected a bencher of the Inner Temple, England, in 1905, an honor conferred only on persons of distinction.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Uncle Sam Probes Third Degree System

HOW DO YOU LIKE THE THIRD?

WASHINGTON.—One of the investigating committees set in motion at the late session of congress that is expected to yield some interesting results is the subcommittee of five senators, members of the judiciary committee, who have been directed to investigate and report on the workings of the "third degree," as exemplified by federal officers in criminal prosecutions.

The investigation will take a wide range. One member of the committee will be sent to Oklahoma to learn what basis there is for the charge made by Gov. Haskell and his friends, that the prosecutions started against him under the Roosevelt administration were inspired by personal malice, and that the methods resorted to by the special agents of the government in their efforts to convict Haskell, were discreditable.

Another branch of the investigation will relate to some of the western prosecutions, especially those conducted by Robert Kay Devlin, as United States attorney for the Northern district of California. Devlin's nomination was hung up in the judiciary committee of the senate for a long time, on a complaint that he had persecuted Dr. Perrin, one of the defendants in certain land-fraud cases, who, after being indicted, was finally discharged for want of evidence.

A special agent of the department of justice sent out to investigate the charge made a written report that Dr. Perrin should never have been indicted; that improper methods were employed to bring about his indictment, and even after the government officers were aware that they could not make a case against Dr. Perrin, the indictment was allowed to hang over his head for many months, to his great personal detriment.

The methods of Francis J. Heney and Detective Burns may be inquired into, and it is not unlikely that some attention may be given to the charge made against the method of administering the criminal laws in Alaska, especially at Juneau, where the United States attorney and United States marshal were recently removed from office on the complaint of Gov. Walter E. Clark.

"Corpse" Aroused by Noise, Runs Away

O-O-H I BELIEVE HE'S DEAD !-!

"THERE'S a dead man in that alley."

This exclamation by an excited colored man at Eleventh and E streets, in Washington, caused considerable consternation among pedestrians and loungers in that vicinity a few days ago. He pointed to a narrow alleyway on the north side of E street between Eleven and Twelfth streets, between two buildings.

Pretty soon the mouth of the little alley was blocked by curious people. A business man in the neighborhood who peered over the heads of the morbid crowd and saw a man stretched out full length, and apparently very ill or dead, in the alleyway, telephoned to the Emergency hospital for an ambulance. Other men ran hither and thither in search of a policeman.

"He may be drunk," suggested an old man as he gazed at the prostrate form.

"No," another man declared, "I reckon it is a case of heat prostration."

"I think he's just dreamin' about Jack Johnson's victory," said a third.

In the meantime the Emergency hospital ambulance with clanging gong arrived on the scene, and a policeman with perspiration streaming down his face rushed up to the mouth of the alley and was forcing his way through the crowd to get at the supposed dead man.

The noise aroused the "corpse." The prostrate figure slowly arose, disclosing the stalwart form of a negro.

He gazed in astonishment at the crowd that blocked up the entrance to the alley and saw the policeman and white-coated Emergency surgeon elbowing their way toward him. With a yawn and a stretch of his arms, the negro darted into the side door of a printing office, slamming the door behind him.

Investigation disclosed the fact that the negro has been employed at the printing establishment a number of years. He said he was tired and went out into the quiet, cool alleyway to take a nap during the lunch hour. That was all.

Sold MacVeagh Spoiled Vinegar; Fined

I'LL NEVER 'DULTERATE NOTHIN' AGIN, YER HONOR, HONOS'

JAMES WILSON, secretary of agriculture, has been hot-footing it after a Chicago man who had the temerity to sell Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury, a barrel of bogus vinegar. MacVeagh bought the vinegar believing it was the real thing, the kind that father used to make on the farm, fit to put on lettuce and pickle pigs' feet with and all that sort of thing.

The looks and smell of the stuff made him suspicious, and so he hallooed for the pure food inspectors to come and examine. They reported the alleged vinegar was in reality adulterated and artificially colored and misbranded. A criminal information was filed against the luckless storekeeper and he was taken into the United States court, accused of deceiving and misleading MacVeagh. The man pleaded guilty and was fined $25. He promised to be good.

A Buffalo milling concern has been fined for mixing ground corncobs with flour middlings. The same concern was also found guilty of putting ground corncobs in a "gluten" preparation. A lot of "raisins," shipped from California to Texas, was discovered to be in part a decomposed vegetable substance. A Chicago firm selling a "quick-rising" buckwheat flour has been fined for fraud in having sold in reality a mixture of wheat flour and buckwheat without any quick-rising properties.

Government's O. K. on the Lowly Toad

UNCLE SAM KNOWS WHAT I AM WORTH ALRIGHT
GOOD RECORD

A RECENT bulletin of the department of agriculture in Washington has taken up the case of the toad, dispelling the "host of vague and ludicrous fancies as to its venomous qualities. Its medicinal virtues, or most commonly, the hidden toadstone of priceless value."

Touching toads, says the bulletin, does not produce warts on the hands. The toad's breath does not cause convulsions in children, nor does a toad in a newly dug well insure a good and unfailing water supply, nor in a new made cellar will one bring prosperity to the household.

The Massachusetts experiment station has been investigating the habits, food and economic value of the toad, and the result establishes its claim to consideration and appreciation. First of all, as to the longevity of the toad, the investigators express the opinion that many toads reach an age of at least ten or fifteen years. They also believe it possible for the toad to live for a limited time without food, but doubt stories about toads being found in rocks and trees.

"The toad," says the pamphlet, "is a nocturnal animal, and ventures out during the day only when tempted by an abundance of food or when the air and moving insects, centipeds, etc. At is full of moisture. It eats only living night, soon after sundown, or even before on cool evenings. It emerges from its shelter and slowly hops about in search of food. Almost a regular beat is covered. In the country this includes forays along roadsides, into gardens and cultivated fields and wherever insect food is abundant and grass or other thick herbage does not prevent locomotion. In cities and suburban villages the lawns, walks and particularly the spots beneath electric lamps are favorite hunting grounds.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. • • MINN.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

The question of divorces has been under careful consideration for many centuries. The Pharisees tempted Christ by asking his judgment on the Mosaic law of divorcement, and received an answer direct and fundamental. It has been a serious, a continuous, a vexatious question from time immemorial, says Newark News. All governments, clerical and civil, have tried to settle it and have failed. Our own government and each of the states and all the courts have for many years been trying to establish uniform divorce laws, and to discourage divorces, as much as possible. Yet they are increasing instead of diminishing. A few denominations will not tolerate divorces, but the civil laws recognize them. From the point of view of the latter the innocent party to divorce proceedings is guilty of no offense, ought not to be held in dishonor and should be permitted to marry again. It is the abuse of the divorce laws by immoral, unconscionable, undesirable citizens that has brought the most serious dishonor upon the dissolution of the marriage contract. The Reformed synod's attitude with reference to innocent parties in necessary divorce proceedings accords with general public sentiment. What should be done to the guilty ones is yet under discussion.

The bill advocated by the Audubon societies of the state of New York, forbidding the sale within this state of the plumage of any wild bird which is protected within New York, has passed the legislature and is awaiting the governor's signature. We trust it will receive his approval, says Rochester Herald. For many years the Audubon societies have labored unceasingly to educate the people of this state to the economic as well as the sentimental value of wild bird life. Their progress has been very slow. The rural communities of the state, even the fruit-raising sections of western New York, have been afflicted with almost incredible ignorance of the usefulness of birds. Farmers' boys often rob birds' nests of their eggs, and amuse themselves by aiming their newly acquired firearms at birds of every kind. It is seldom that a word of censure is heard from the male parent, whose property the young mischief-maker is hastening to destroy.

A porous plaster worth $50 is something of a novelty in the curative agency line. A druggist in Middletown, N. Y., is the possessor of this valuable article, and he is about to send it to the treasury department at Washington to be redeemed. The worthy druggist was troubled with a lame back and had his wife apply the plaster. The lady did not notice a $50 bill which her husband had placed on a dresser in their room, and the note was sticking to the plaster when the latter was put where it might do the most good. There was much mystery and a long hunt before the bill was located, but now plaster, bill and all will be sent to the government officials and "something just as good" will be substituted.

A Chicago doctor has arranged to give the dogs a drink this summer. He has bought a thousand two-quart basins and the city council has allowed him to distribute them about the city in front of stores and houses, and the tenants will be expected to see that they are kept filled with water for the benefit of the dogs. The doctor got the notion from the City of Mexico, where storekeepers are required to keep such basins at their doors. The idea is a good one, and should reduce the number of mad dog scares in Chicago this summer. There will be less hydrophobia if the dogs can get water whenever they want it.

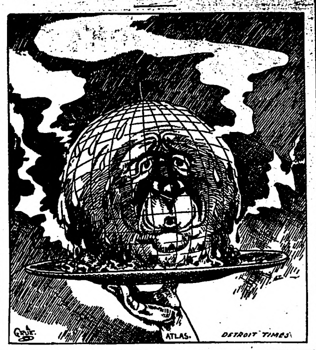
Connecticut is traditionally the land of steady habits, and perhaps a "whopper" of a fish story coming from that quarter will get more credence than if it originated in a more sinful source. Anyway, a resident of Winsted states that he found a fish in his well, and when he hooked it he discovered that it was a trout so large that the well curb had to be removed before the fish could be hauled out. The saving grace of this fish tale is that the narrator does not attempt to give the weight of the monster catch.

Scientists announce the production of edible roses. And are American beauties going to be cheaper than pigs' feet?

In spite of their frantic efforts to keep apart, Peru and Ecuador are allowed to go on making faces at one another.

It is only a short distance from New York to Philadelphia, but Aviator Hamilton found it farther going back.

BAKED



Grue. DETROIT TIMES

AVIATION'S DEATH TOLL GROWS

ERBSLOEH AND FOUR COMPANIONS KILLED IN PRUSSIA.

Winner of St. Louis Balloon Race Perishes in Accident—Rolls Loses Life in England.

Leichlinger, Rhenish Prussia.—Oscar Erbsloeh, the German aeronaut who won the international balloon race at St. Louis in 1907, and four companions were killed Wednesday when the dirigible balloon Erbsloeh burst at a height of several hundred feet and dropped to the earth a crumpled mass.

The Dead.

Oscar Erbsloeh, inventor and balloonist.

Herr Toelle, a manufacturer of Barmen.

Engineer Kranz.

Engineer Hoeppe.

Motorman Spicke.

The craft was of the nonrigid type, 176 feet in length and 33 feet in diameter. The motors were of 125 horsepower and drove the airship at a speed of 28½ miles an hour.

The war department recently purchased one of Erbsloeh's balloons.

The cause of the accident is a matter of conjecture, but it is believed that the bursting of the bag was due to the expansion of gas by the warm sunshine.

Bournemouth, England. — Hon. Charles Stewart Rolls, third son of Lord Llangattock and one of the most daring and skillful of British aviators, who recently made a flight from Dover to France and return, met a most tragic death at the close of the first flying machine tournament of the year in England Tuesday.

In the presence of a great company of spectators, a majority of whom were women and children, and many personal friends of the young aviator, the Wright biplane on which he was flying fell suddenly with terrific speed from a height of 100 feet.

It struck the ground close to the crowded grand stand, smashed into a tangled mass, and before the doctors and their assistants could reach the spot Rolls was dead.

RIVER STEAMER GOES DOWN

Cape Girardeau Strikes Snag in Mississippi and Sinks—All Passengers Safely Landed.

St. Louis.—The river steamer Cape Girardeau struck a snag and sank to the bottom of the Mississippi river at Turkey island, 50 miles south of here Monday. Ninety passengers were aboard, and all were taken ashore safely.

The boat was returning from Commerce, Mo. Many of the passengers were women and children. They were asleep when the boat hit an obstruction. The passengers crowded on the decks and members of the crew quieted them. They walked ashore on the gangplank. Later they were brought to St. Louis by train.

URGES LOEB FOR GOVERNOR

Taft Favors Collector New York Port for Gubernatorial Candidate in Empire State.

Beverly, Mass.—President Taft Monday urged William Loeb, Jr., to accept the Republican gubernatorial nomination in New York this fall. Mr. Loeb is averse to taking up the task and would prefer to complete the work that he has undertaken as collector of the port, but before he left Burgess Point he assured the president that if the demand was made he would accept the duty.

Hitchcock Off for Europe.

Washington.—Frank H. Hitchcock, postmaster general, sailed from New York Wednesday for Europe for a month's vacation. All the members of President Taft's cabinet are now out of the city.

Slays Woman and Kills Self.

Onawa, Ia.—John Krats shot and killed Mrs. Agnes McCoy and then committed suicide here Wednesday. Krats was infatuated, it is said, with the McCoy woman, who resented his attentions.

INDICTED IN RISK PROBE

Rock Island Jury Returns True Bills Against 13 Persons in Insurance Scandal.

Rock Island.—Seven indictments charging 13 people with conspiracy, embezzlement and perjury was the product of the grand jury investigation of fraternal insurance frauds.

Those indicted are:

Dr. A. L. Craig, Chicago, former medical director of the Fraternal Tribunes.

C. F. Hatfield, Chicago.

M. J. Franckel, Chicago.

Miss Margaret McElvain, Auburn, Ill.

Harold A. Weld, Rock Island, former supreme treasurer of Fraternal Tribunes.

Otto L. Caldwell, Springfield, Ill.

M. B. Garber, Washington.

Thomas W. Wilson, Springfield, Ill.

Dr. C. H. Walters, Springfield, Ill.

S. S. McElvain, Auburn, Ill.

George W. Kenney, Springfield, Ill.

K. M. Witham, Aledo, Ill., former supreme tribune of Fraternal Tribunes.

The indictments were returned Wednesday and are against the four former officers of the Fraternal Tribunes prior to the merger with the American Home Circle, and the four officers of the American Home Circle who gained control of the Fraternal Tribunes by means of the merger and by inducing the officers of the Tribunes to resign their offices; against C. F. Hatfield, who was, it is said, the man who brought about the deal; George W. Kenney, who is said to have secured money on fraudulent notes, and against three of the witnesses, who are declared to have testified falsely before the grand jury here with reference to money received on alleged loans they made to the Home Circle and for which they received payment after the merger with the Tribunes.

Harold A. Weld, H. M. Whitham and Doctor Craig furnished bail in the sum of $12,000 each.

DOES NOT SUPPORT MADRIZ

Emperor William, Through Foreign Office, Declares Germany Will Not Intervene in Nicaragua.

Berlin.—The foreign office Tuesday made public an authorized statement respecting the letter of Emperor William to President Madriz of Nicaragua. Reports have reached Berlin that attempts were being made in America to construe this letter as an indorsement by the emperor of the Madriz party.

The statement follows: "Madriz gave notice of his election upon undertaking the presidency, to the emperior in the usual written form. The customary formal reply was prepared by the foreign office. It was not an autograph letter, but was simply signed by the emperor. The address, 'great and good friend,' was in accordance with official courtesy. Any intervention by Germany in Nicaraguan affairs neither followed nor is intended. Germany neither sought nor designs to seek a coaling station. Rumors of Germany's intention toward the Galapagos islands are equally without foundation, as are all suggestions that the German government has in any wise modified the cultivation of friendly relations toward the United States."

Murder Plot is Suspected.

Chester, Pa., July 14.—The body of Col. Silas E. Comfort, vice-president of the Pennsylvania Military college and prominent in city affairs, was found in Leiperville creek, in the rear of the Colonial hotel, Leiperville, near here. A murder plot is suspected.

Sink Two Pirate Boats.

Hongkong.—The guns of the Portuguese gunboat Patria Wednesday dislodged the Chinese from the fort on Colowan Island. Many of the Chinese were killed during the bombardment. Two junks loaded with Chinese who were attempting to escape were sunk and all of their occupants drowned.

Drinks Nitric Acid and Dies.

Ottawa, Ill.—Emil Kuyl, proprietor of the Ottawa Marble Works, committed suicide Thursday by drinking nitric acid.

CRIPPEN IS HUNTED

SUPPOSED TO BE ON SHIP BOUND FOR THIS COUNTRY.

CORPSE DUG UP IN CELLAR

Killing of Belle Elmore, Actress, Strikingly Similar to Charlton Case —Suspected Husband Well Known in Indiana.

London.—Scotland Yard is seeking Dr. Harvey Crippen, an American dentist, in connection with the murder of his wife. He is believed to be on a steamer bound for New York. Crippen was a native of Coldwater, Mich., and was educated in Indiana, where he is well known.

The authorities Thursday cabled the police of the United States to arrest Crippen, who, it is thought, sailed from England Saturday.

Doctor Crippen, who is said to be fifty years of age, made his home for some time at 39 Hilldrop Crescent, North London. Some time ago his wife, Belle Elmore, a vaudeville actress and treasurer of the Music Hall artists' guild, disappeared, and subsequently a notice of her death appeared in the local papers.

The fact of her demise was generally credited, but there was more or less gossip among the women intimates and this finally reached the ears of the police. The latter visited Doctor Crippen and the interview appeared to be satisfactory.

Doctor Crippen disappeared last Saturday and a search of the Crippen house was made and the battered body of a woman was found buried in quick lime and was burned beyond recognition, but the finding of the body, together with other discoveries, has left no doubt in the minds of the authorities that the murdered woman was Mrs. Crippen.

The case is strikingly similar to that of the Charlton murder at Lake Como, Italy. Porter Charlton was arrested in Hoboken, but in the absence of an extradition treaty between the United States and Italy specifically providing for the return to either country of a citizen of the other country who has committed a crime abroad may go free.

In the present case no such complications are probable, as the British-American extradition treaty leaves no loophole of which a suspected criminal may take advantage.

Doctor Crippen, after attending schools in Indiana and Los Angeles, completed his medical studies in Michigan, Cleveland and New York city. He practised in Detroit, San Diego, Cal., Salt Lake City, St. Louis and Brooklyn as an eye and ear specialist.

He married Belle Elmore, as she was known on the stage, at New York.

PITTMAN IS FOUND STARVING

Nicaragua President Reported to Have Badly Mistreated American Prisoner—Creates Reign of Terror.

Washington.—The United States must soon intervene in Nicaragua or allow peace to be effected there by England and Germany.

Unmistakable significance attaches to important reports frrom its diplomatic representatives in Nicaragua to the state department Thursday showing that Madriz has produced intentionally a reign of terror in the western half of Nicaragua, in which four-fifths of the white people of that republic live.

The dispatches show that William Pittman, an American prisoner in the hands of Madriz, was inhumanly treated by starvation and other privations since he left Greytown on July 4 on his way to Managua.

When he was put in prison in Managua it was in a "filthy cell," five feet by six and there again he was starved. A prompt protest from Consul Olivares at Managua secured the transfer of Pittman to a better cell and the United States is furnishing the money to feed him properly, and it is also furnishing the money to take care of the relatives in Nicaragua of the murdered Groce.

The more serious aspect of the general situation is that citizens of Germany and Great Britain are protesting against the reign of terror in western Nicaragua. Nicaraguans openly make threats against the lives of American citizens and there is nothing to prevent an immediate outbreak of street murders, arson, robberies, etc., which will involve all foreign residents in Nicaragua.

Killed in Mistake for Another.

Kendallville, Ind. — Albert Lehr, thirty-eight years old, was killed by five Italians employed on a section gang while standing on the platform of the Lake Shore depot. The shooting is thought to be the outcome of the accidental killing of an Italian by a freight train three weeks ago.

For Mine Rescue Stations.

Victoria, B. C.—The British Columbia government Thursday placed orders in Pittsburg, Pa., for complete apparatus for three mine rescue stations to be installed in the principal coal mining areas of British Columbia.

Doukhobors Unclad on Trail.

Winnipeg, Man.—Doukhobor fanatics again have shed their clothes and are on the trail. The mounted police have been sent out to restrain them.

START ON NEW BEEF INQUIRY

SUBPOENAS ARE SERVED IN THE PACKERS' PROBE.

District Attorney Sims Takes Personal Charge of the Proposed Investigation.

Chicago. — Under instructions from Judge Landis deputy United States marshals will call prominent Chicago packers to appear before the federal grand jury to answer to the charges which have been made against the National Packing company.

Subpoenas were issued several days ago for different members of the packing firms, but they have been held in the office of District Attorney Sims, awaiting his instructions. Judge Landis will give the federal grand jury its instructions and while he is expected to tell them to make a searching investigation into the methods of the National Packing company, the government officials will be looking for the men named in the subpoenas.

Men who are claimed to have violated the Sherman anti-trust law and others who it is thought will be able to give the details of the inside workings of the company will be called.

PORTLAND SWEPT BY FIRE

Ten Acres in Oregon City in Waste—Two Men and 150 Horses Die.

Portland, Ore.—Two lives at least were lost, scores of persons were injured, 150 horses burned to death and damage amounting to half a million wrought in a fire on the edge of the business district here Thursday. The athletic field of the famous Multnomah Athletic club was swept by the flames and the magnificent grand stand destroyed.

The dead are: F. R. Price, foreman of the United Carriage company stable, and a helper whose name is Prude. Several of the stable employees are reported to be missing.

The fire is believed to have started in the salesroom of the Oregon Brush company.

The burned district covered approximately ten acres, but a large portion of this area was devoted to the athletic field of the Mulnomah club.

The fire started in the old exposition building, an immense wooden structure on the south side of Washington street, extending from Nineteenth street to Twentieth, having a length of about 400 feet and a depth of 220 feet.

CALL RATES CONFISCATORY

Pullman Company Lawyer Says Commission's Order Means Bankruptcy for Big Concern.

Chicago.—Contending that the interstate commerce commission's order for a reduction of sleeping car rates is confiscatory, attorneys representing the Pullman company and the railroads appeared in the United States circuit court to argue for a rehearing of their petition for an injunction to prevent the order being put into effect.

An injunction was previously denied them, but they seek to reopen the case on the ground that they have new facts to present.

Attorney Fernald of the Pullman company told the court that the new schedule of rates would ultimately mean bankruptcy for the sleeping car companies.

It would mean a loss of $116,000 annually on fares between St. Paul and the points of Fargo, N. D., and Seattle, Wash., alone, he said.

The reduction from St. Paul to Fargo is 40 per cent. on upper berths and 25 per cent. on lower, and from St. Paul to Seattle the fare is lowered 29 per cent. on upper and 6 2-3 per cent. on lower.

TRAINMEN SLAIN IN WRECK

New York Central Passenger Train Jumps Track—None of Passengers Seriously Hurt.

New York.—Three men were killed and a train load of passengers badly shaken up when north-bound train 59 on the New York Central, known as the Northern and Western Express, was wrecked Monday near Newton Hook, nine miles north of Hudson.

Engine and baggage car jumped the track and toppled over. The six other cars of the train, all Pullmans, left the rails, but remained upright and no one in them was seriously hurt.

Engineer Tyndall was caught under his engine and was flatly crushed, dying shortly afterward. The other trainmen were instantly killed.

A report received by the public service commission at Albany said the wreck was caused by the engine striking a door of a freight car that had fallen on the track.

President of $3,000,000 College.

Brunswick, Me.—Prof. William T. Foster of Bowdoin college has accepted the presidency of Read Institute, a college to be built at Portland, Ore., from a fund given by Mrs. Amunda Reed and now amounting to $3,000,000.

Man Aged 104 Dies.

Ripley, Miss.—Mike Cox, a native of Ireland, said to be the oldest man in the south, died here Thursday, aged one hundred and four years. He worked as a farm hand until he was one hundred years old.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable —act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

Gillette Blades Are Fine

NO STROPPING NO HONING

Gillette

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

ONE THING CERTAIN.

"Dou you know," shouted the earnest orator, "what to do to the trust?"

"No, but I know blame well what they're doing to us!" said a man in the front row.

The Stomach Hold.

Col. H. N. Renouf, at the "Old Guard" banquet at Delmonico's, emphasized the importance to an army of a good commissariat.

"You have perhaps heard," he said, "of the company of privates that a patriotic lady entertained one Memorial day to dinner.

"It was a good dinner, and at its end a pretty maid servant entered with a superb dessert.

"'Dessert, sergeant?' she said to the stalwart young soldier at the head of the table.

"'Desert?' the sergeant answered. 'When I can get eats like this for nothin'? Nixie! Not me!'"

His Claim to Prominence.

At a social gathering a certain man, intent on knowing every one, was introduced to Senator Julius C. Burrows of Michigan.

"The name Burrows is very familiar to me," he said. "I am certain that you are a man of some prominence."

"Yes," replied Senator Burrows, "I am the man that 'died at first' just before Casey came to bat in that celebrated ball game in Mudville."—Success Magazine.

Refinement of Assurance.

Busy Business Man (irately)—Sir, I didn't ask you to sit down!

Persistent Salesman (settling back comfortably)—That's all right—no apology is necessary. I knew it was only an oversight.—Harper's Weekly.

Mortgage the ship for all it's worth before giving it up.

HARD TO PLEASE
Regarding the Morning Cup.

"Oh how hard it was to part with coffee, but the continued trouble with constipation and belching was such that I finally brought myself to leave it off.

"Then the question was, what should we use for the morning drink? Tea was worse for us than coffee; chocolate and cocoa were soon tired of; milk was not liked very well, and hot water we could not endure.

"About two years ago we struck upon Postum and have never been without it since.

"We have seven children. Our baby now eighteen months old would not take milk, so we tried Postum and found she liked it and it agreed with her perfectly. She is today, and has been, one of the healthiest babies in the State.

"I use about two-thirds Postum and one-third milk and a teaspoon of sugar, and put it into her bottle. If you could have seen her eyes sparkle and hear her say "good" today when I gave it to her, you would believe me that she likes it.

"If I was matron of an infants' home, every child would be raised on Postum. Many of my friends say, 'You are looking so well!' I reply, 'I am well: I drink Postum. I have no more trouble with constipation, and know that I owe my good health to God and Postum.'

"I am writing this letter because I want to tell you how much good Postum has done us, but if you knew how I shrink from publicity, you would not publish this letter, at least not over my name."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BOATS VS. BOXCARS

J. J. HILL'S STATEMENTS ON WATERWAYS IMPROVEMENT ARE COMBATED.

THE TWIN CITY MAYORS TALK

Six-Foot Channel Predicted by Engineer Within 8 to 12 Years.—Speakers of Note at Gathering of Mississippi Improvers.

St. Paul. — Officers, delegates and guests attending the ninth annual convention of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association gathered about the banquet board at the Commercial club. Oratory, wit, humor and sound logic flowed for five hours in a deepened channel without striking an obstruction.

It was the first and only social event of the convention. F. J. Waterous, toastmaster, rose to the occasion like a boat on a wave in assuming charge of the program following the banquet. Two hundred delegates and distinguished citizens greeted his preliminary remarks with applause.

At the speaker's table were the officers and leaders of the deep channel propaganda. Archbishop John Ireland, Senator Moses E. Clapp, Mayor James C. Haynes, Mayor Herbert Keller, Eli S. Warner, president of the St. Paul Commercial club; H. A. Tuttle, president of the Minneapolis Commercial club; Congressman F. W. Stevens, Congressman Halvor Steenerson, and many others.

Eli S. Warner declared he would live to see the day when there would not alone be a deep water channel to the Twin Cities but a channel connecting the Mississippi and the head of the lakes.

Mayor Keller Talks.

"When I was a school boy," ruminated Mayor Keller, the boy executive of St. Paul, "I learned in my books that St. Paul was the head of navigation. That is true today, it will be true when the deep channel is completed and it will continue to be the head of navigation—until the Mississippi is connected with Lake Superior and then there will be no head of navigation."

The inference was that Minneapolis might be extended the courtesy of shipping its commerce to St. Paul by rail to be thence transported by boat to deep water and that St. Paul would condescend to give it wharf space pending transfer. He proceeded to elaborate on the new depot plans, declaring the straighening of the river at Sibley street would give space for it, and would provide 50 acres of land for wharfs, warehouses and railroad terminals.

Mayor Haynes was delightfully facetious in his response, also kindly and considerate to St. Paul, almost apologizing for placing Minneapolis on the deep channelled Father of Waters map.

"When we get our dam," said he, "which we shall get by the grace of you gentlemen and the government at Washington, we shall have a nine-foot channel at Minneapolis, making the head of navigation, not St. Paul, not Minneapolis, but the Twin Cities.

Archbishop Ireland waxed eloquent and was interrupted by repeated applause as his eloquence poured fourth like water flowing over a dam.

"The Mississippi is a river that for centuries has enthralled scholars and poets," he exclaimed. "Finding its source in the crystal lakes of northern Minnesota, flowing through the fairest land that earth ever knew, 2,000 miles long, its fame has for centuries spread throughout the world. When De Soto saw it he marveled, its fame spread beyond the Pyrenees to France and thence came Hennepin, Radisson and those missionaries. Hennepin saw the site of St. Paul, saluted St. Anthony's falls and knew it would never do to return to Europe without visiting the site of Minneapolis, so he saw that, too.

"Europe envies our river, not a nation but covets it. In '61 an effort was made to divide this nation and one of the happiest results of that war is that the Mississippi river is left in one country so that it can be improved.

"Seventy years ago this city was but a hamlet. Eighty thousand square miles of land in Minnesota, capable of supporting 12,000,000 people and with only 2,000,000 people here! The soil has scarcely been touched by the plow. This nation is but started in its development; we need railroads and we need rivers and we need lakes and we ned everything that will bring this nation to its manifest destiny.

BLINDPIGGERS CAUGHT.

White Earth.—The agency under the direction of J. R. Howard, United States Indian agent, succeeded in rounding up two blind piggers who have been doing a lucrative business among the Indians at Ebro and along the northern boundary of the reservation during the past summer.

The prisoners are in the agency jail and will be turned over to the charge of deputy United States marshal, who is expected here soon.

PROF. GREEN DIES OF APOPLEXY.

Head of University Department of Forestry Stricken.

Minneapolis.—Working to the last moment with his students, Prof. Samuel B. Green, head of the State College of Forestry, in conection with the state university, died of apoplexy at Itasca Park.

Death was entirely unexpected and came when the professor was engaged in the work to which his entire life had been given. He was directing the summer school of forestry at Itasca Park.

In the morning, accompanied by his students, Prof. Green went into the woods to give the students practical work in forestry and in experiments. His students, shocked and grieved inexpressibly, bore the body back to town.

Prof. Green's health apparently had been good and there was no premonition of the sudden death that was to come to him.

Long Known as Expert.

The professor has long been a worker in the university, known as a crop and forestry expert, and prominent in all work connected with the agricultural and forestry work of the university. He won national fame as an authority on horticulture.

He had just been placed at the head of the college of forestry, recently established by the regents. Governor Eberhart also had interested him in his efforts to reorganize the forestry service of the state. Had he lived the state would have made extensive use of his services.

Esteem Expressed for Prof. Green.

An appreciation of the late Samuel B. Green as a man and an educator has been prepared and signed by 70 members of the faculty of the University of Minnesota. Attention is called to Professor Green's connection of 22 years with the department of horticulture and forestry and the progress he made in it.

CARS CRUSH AUTOMOBILE.

Driver Has Narrow Escape From Death When Machine Crumbles.

Minneapolis.—Almost up to his neck in a writhing mass of cracking, crushing, bending wreckage, Louis J. Newmann, 19 years old, 924 Goodrich avenue, St. Paul, miraculously escaped death or injury when his automobile was caught between two street cars coming in opposite directions and literally crumbled to pieces.

The accident occurred at Forty-seventh street and Nicollet avenue. Newman escaped being seriously hurt by standing high on the front seat while the large machine was rolled and flattened out beneath him. He received only a slight cut on the chin.

Newman, driving a large car, attempted to pass to the left of a outbound Washburn Park and Columbia Heights car which was going in the same direction. It was necessary to cross one track and to the other, on which an inbound car was approaching. Newman had almost succeeded in passing ahead of the first car and "sneaking" between the two when the crash came.

WATCHMAN PREVENTS WRECK.

Catches Men Tampering with Switch Near Red Wing.

Red Wing.—An attempt was made to wreck the east-bound Pioneer Limited train on the Milwaukee road about one mile east of town.

The train leaves Red Wing at 10 o'clock, and a few minutes before that time Wayne Hewitt, night watchman at a sawmill, discovered two men tampering with the switch near the mill. When he interferred the men showed fight, one of them using a knife. Hewitt's clothing was slashed in several places, but he was uninjured.

The would-be wreckers made their escape. An investigation of the switch showed that the lock had ben filed off and the switch turned. The signal light had also been bent so as to show a clear track.

Had Hewitt not made this discovery the train would have been derailed and wrecked.

ARE AFTER INTEREST MONEY.

Indians Gather at Bena and Discuss Plans.

Bemidji.—That the Indians of the White Oak, Leech Lake and Cass Lake bands intend to make a determined effort to secure from the government the sum of money due them as interest on various funds is indicated by recent acts of the Indians who have been holding counsels and talking over plans for inducing the government to pay out of the United States treasury the money which is being held back, as the Indians claim, for no good reason.

A council of the White Oak and other Indians was held at Bena last week, and 200 members of the tribes were in attendance.

A well authenticated statement is to the effect that this so-called "interest money" amounts to nearly $1,000,000, and that no use is being made of this fund, that it is simply lying idle in the United States treasury at Washington.

LIVERY BURNS AT ALBERT LEA.

Barn and Contents Are Destroyed—Loss Will Be Heavy.

Albert Lea, Minnesota.—Gustavson's big livery and hack barn, a two-story and basement brick building, was burned, the fire starting in the hay loft. The first floor and walls remain standing, but the latter are badly damaged by heat. The loss will be heavy, but is covered by insurance. Origin of the fire is unknown.

LUCK IS CHIEF ELEMENT IN WINNING, SAYS STAHL

BOSTON AMERICANS' FIRST SACKER PLACES TEAM WORK SECOND AND HITTING THIRD THIRD IN THE LIST.

By "JAKE" STAHL.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

There are so many elements that contribute to winning or losing baseball games that it is hard to decide which is the most important. I believe luck is first, team work second, hitting third, and fielding just ahead of base running. Few persons understand how much the game is affected by luck. It makes and breaks ball clubs every season, and sometimes it seems as if luck alone decides pennant races. But if you come to study the matter more deeply you will discover that the thing we call "luck" keeps pursuing certain teams, and ruining others, and if any one begins to seek why this is true he discovers that "luck" is only another name for gameness, determination, and hustling ability. The team or the player that persistently hustles, that runs out every ball at top speed, that tries for every ball that is hit as hard as it is possible to try, soon becomes "lucky" —for the player who does that is there ready to take advantage of "luck."

One sometimes wonders why, after the middle of the season, some clubs are so easy to defeat and some so hard. It is luck again in another form. The one club has been beaten until it is discouraged and listless in its work, half hearted in everything, while the other is full of confidence, inspired with hope, out after everything and every man is on his toes every minute, and it beats better ball clubs through sheer hustle and confidence.

These things are facts. There are some clubs that are dangerous no matter how many games they have lost, and others that are done and out of a race as soon as the "luck" breaks against them for a short time. A young ball player who wants to know how to win can find the secret of it in these statements, and any veteran ball player will vouch for their truth.

The first thing a young player ought to do is to see that his condition is perfect, and he must keep it that way and train himself so he can last through an entire season. Then he ought to begin studying the game, watching every other player's records and learning all about them. He ought to watch his own men, and the opposing team, studying how they make plays and deciding for himself which is the better way. If he does those things and practises steadily he will become a better ball player and last longer in the business than scores of men who are his physical superiors at the game.

"Jake" Stahl.

Another bit of advice for a young player: There is a complaint that the old players do not give the young ones a fair chance. This is not true. If the young player does not get his chance it is his own fault. A young player just starting with any club must watch his private behavior as closely as his playing. A "fresh" ball player, or a "swelled head," or one who does not attend to business soon finds that he is not popular and begins to complain that he does not get his chance. A player who joins a club, watches and listens, sticks up for his own rights and does not trample on the rights of others, always is welcome. A player in the modern game is judged almost as much by his conduct as by his playing. The greatest mistake a young player can make is to think that because he makes a successful start his success is assured and to "swell" and cease to pay close attention to business. They ought to learn that baseball is more than a sport and realise that it is the most sportsmanlike of all sports.

Portsmouth, Va., Forfeits Franchise.

The Virginia league has taken charge of the Portsmouth team, alleging that former owners by their actions forfeited their franchise. There was no break in the conditions of the body, leaving the league intact. The players were paid off by the league. William Hannan, Jr., of Norfolk and Jack Grim are both seeking the franchise, with Grim apparently in the lead.

Good Jokes

TOUGH JOB.

The old major had been on an extended trip "up noff." Now he was back in th general store of the village telling of his travels.

"And Niagara Falls, suh!" he began vividly. "What could be a grander sight? To think of the vast, inconceivable power in those millions of tons of water that dash over the rocks! And then to think that those falls are harnessed by mere man!"

The major paused for breath and the old colored man, who had just come in with a pail of eggs, looked interested.

"Majah!"

"Yeas, Sam?"

"Who was de gen'man det harnessed dem deh falls?"

"Why—er—Sam, I can't just remember his name. But why are you so anxious to know?"

"Ah was just thinkin' majah."

"Thinking of what, old man?"

"Thinkin' what Ah'd give to see det gen'man try en harness dat ol', ol' mule Ah bought f'um de bankrupt circus last spring. Tee-hee!"

His Views on Suffrage.

When the female canvasser asked the old farmer to sign a petition in favor of a woman's movement he eyed the document for a while with suspicion. "No, I'm again' it," was reply, with the emphasis of a man who had had some domestic infelicity. "A woman who's allus a-movin' is allus a-gettin' in trouble. If you've got anything to keep her quiet I'll sign it."

No Kick There.

The new arrival had just written his name and address in the hotel register.

"From Ypsilanti, eh?" said the clerk; "that's the town, isn't it, where —"

"No, sir," interrupted the other, with a frown; "we're perfectly satisfied with the name of our city. You're thinking of Oshkosh."

Disposing of Hash.

Yeast—I see that all the food served to a guest at a Japanese dinner and not consumed by him at the time is taken to his home by the servants of his host.

Crimsonbeak—The hosts over there are certainly persistent. They seem to get rid of their hash in some way!—Yonkers Statesman.

IN SOUTH AMERICAN WATERS.

GEORGE BAKER

Passenger—I say, captain, what would happen if the ship should hit a coral reef?

Captain—It would most likely shiver its timbers.

Summer.

Ashes to ashes,
Dust to dust,
We'll now dig up
For the ice trust.

Not Her Way.

Elderly Relative—Lucy, you surely don't think of marrying Geoffrey to reform him!

Miss Lucy—Gracious, no, auntie! I'm trying to reform Geoffrey in order to marry him, and I'll either succeed in doing it or I'll break his neck!

In the Public Eye.

"Here is a brochure entitled 'What St. Louis Is Doing.'"

"Pittsburg doesn't need any advertising like that."

"No."

"Everybody knows what Pittsburg is doing."

The Eternal Feminine.

She—Here is a story about a German scientist who says a woman can live to be 600,000 years old.

He—Good gracious! Imagine a woman 600,000 years old who wouldn't admit she was more than 230,000!"

Three Balls.

Stubb—The best umbrellas to put up quickly are those with the patent steel spring.

Penn—H'm! I have found those with a gold handle the most convenient to "put up."

A Blunder.

"A Detroit minister says that hell is full of peek-a-boo waists."

"A queer statement for a minister to make when he is trying to get men to go to heaven."

Now They're Fussy.

"A St. Louis girl wore men's clothing in order to escape suitors. I would never do that!"

"You would never need to, dear."

Hard to Touch.

"This is paradoxical."

"What is?"

"Why, the closer a man is the harder it is to touch him."

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

Oh, the primmest little maid,
Just the most precise of misses;
Never thought of love, she said,
Took no sort of stock in kisses.

Quite immune to Cupid's darts,
Laughed at hosts of suitors sighing,
When they told of aching hearts
All such symptoms still decrying.

But all this was long ago—
Well, I should say, 'twas last summer;
You read the account, I know,
In the papers—'twas a hummer.

How she managed to elope
With a curly-headed actor.
In this stunt of hers, I hope,
Common sense was not a factor.

DOWN, NOT UP.

GEORGE BAKER

Henderson—Does your wife ever call you up at your office?

Henpeck—No; she waits until I get home and then she calls me down.

The Foxy Landlady.

"I think I'll change my boarding house," grumbled the comedian boarder.

"I am surprised," said the sweet singer. "Why, I thought you told me your landlady was right up to date?"

"Yes, too much so. Since she has been reading the Fletcher theory she advises all her boarders to chew each mouthful 32 times. She knows they'll soon get tired and won't eat as much."

"H'm! She's rather shrewd."

"Yes, and that's not all. She read that sour milk prolongs life and now she has started the sour-milk fad because sour milk costs only four cents a quart."

Ingenuity.

Rays—How does Splitter expect to get his divorce?

Hays—By proving the illegality of his marriage.

Rays—How will he prove that?

Hays—First, by showing all marriages are lotteries, and then calling attention to the fact that the Supreme court has ruled that all lotteries are illegal.

Nothing Conclusive.

Ida—Do you suppose that Mr. Worther really has serious intentions regarding Doty?

Clara—He must have; he's praising her all the time—says she's worth her weight in gold.

Ida—Oh, there's nothing conclusive about that; Doty could be weighed on a pair of postal scales.

A Born Diplomat.

His Wife—John, yesterday was my birthday and you never even thought to bring me a box of candy.

Her Husband—I'm sorry, my dear, but there isn't a thing about your appearance to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago.

The Retort Courteous.

A young woman had fallen upon the ice-covered pavement and a man stepped forward to offer his services.

"Allow me—" he began, but his feet slipped and he fell flat upon his back.

"Certainly," responded the young woman, gravely.—Lippincott's.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

Tim—I see dat Joe Simpson's goil's gone back on him.

Tom—Huh! dat's easy. Der feller she's goin' wid now, his mudder keeps er candy store.

Back to the Soil.

"Have you joined the back-to-the-soil movement?"

"You bet; I'm tired of artificial flies and wooden minnows, and I'm going to dig some good old worms for bait."

The Fearless One.

"With all your wealth are you not afraid of the proletariat?" asked the delver in sociological problems.

"No, I ain't," snapped Mrs. Newrich. "We boil all our drinkin' water."

HE'D GET THE APPLE.

Eddie—Say, mom, give Jessie an apple.

Mamma—Then you'll want one, too.

Eddie—No. Just give it to Jessie. We are going to play Adam and Eve, and she is going to tempt me.

SOFT, WHITE HANDS

May Be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Autoing and Optics.

"Is not auto driving terribly hard on the eyes?" we asked.

"Well, I guess not," replied the chauffeur, withering us with scorn. "Why, before I got to runnin' a car I was thinkin' o' gettin' specks, my eyesight was that poor I couldn't see the contribution box in church until it was so near past me it was too late to dig for any money. But I hadn't been runnin' that wagon two days till I could see a policeman's little finger stickin' out from behind a tree four miles away. I could even see which way a copper's eyeballs were turned if he was standin' in the shade three miles off. Hard on the eyes! Well, not much! It's the best medicine for weak eyes that was ever invented, don't you forget it."

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca-Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

Didn't Care for Expenses.

They were seated at the breakfast table.

"John, dear," said the young wife, "this is my birthday."

"I'm glad you mentioned it, darling," rejoined her husband. "I'll buy you a present the first thing when I get downtown."

"Well," she said, "I hope you won't get any cheap 98-cent affair."

"Of course I won't," he replied. "Why, I would be ashamed to present you with anything that cost less than a dollar."

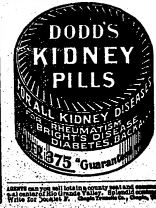
Some women are beautiful when they are angry, but generally they are mean and ugly at such times.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels and cure constipation.

Many of us have cause to be thankful for what we don't get.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Man cannot be happy when idle, unless resting from previous labor.



AGENTS can you sell lots in a county seat and commercial center of Rio Grande Valley. Splendid [illegible] Write for booklet F. [illegible]

THE SUNBEAM,

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

It now has the appearance that County Attorney Michelet has assumed editorial management of the Eleven Towns.

The farmers of the eleven towns are not complaining about light crops, after reading of the total failures in other localities.

Remember that hay will be hay this winter, with none to sell and plenty of buyers. Make hay while the sun shines.

Thief River Falls is to hold its annual county fair on August 3, 4, and 5. It promises to be a hummer, this year.

The Thief River Falls News says that this county fair will be the last one held in Red Lake County. Better not resolve to cut your hair, John, until after the county is divided.

Candidates for county office are a rather scarse article, this year; although we hear that Charles Fellman, of St. Hilaire, is likely to become a candidate for sheriff of Red Lake County.

Ira C. Richardson, of Thief River Falls, has filed for the Republican nomination for Judge of Probate of Red Lake County. Mr. Richardson has given very good satisfaction as probate judge sirce his appointment to fill the vacancy, caused by the death of S. A. Swanson and will undoubtly be nominated and elected for another term.

State Librarian John King is trying to run the whole administration of Govenor Eberhart, but maybe the govenor will try to get along without him; as he is needed up in Red Lake County and there are plenty of good republicans, who can take care of the job King has down there. Better come up to Red Lake Falls John, and roast the govenor to a frazzle in "The Gazette."

The Thief River Falls papers gave a great boom on profitable farming in Red Lake County last week, using C. A. Lindquist as an example of how quick a farmer can get rich in Red Lake Co. This ought to encourage emigration, as they certainly set forth the possiblities for a common farmer to get rich quick in a very forcible manner; but they do not gain any votes by that kind of mud throwing for their county division deal.

It is tiresome to bear people making the statement that Halvor Steenerson is not doing anything in Congress. This statement sounds rather coarse when it is made by a homesteader of the eleven towns, who has never made but one payment on his land and who doesn't have to pay any more until his seven years are out. Now, dear sir, let us tell you that if it was not for the fight that Halvor Steenerson has been making for you, there would not be a dollar due from you to the government on the land you bought six years ago. We don't know whether you appreciate this, but they are facts, and his efforts for you, to try to help you to make a home entitles him to your vote and support for his renominati on and election.

A Timely Letter,

Red Lake Falls Gazette:—

The Gazette has received the following letter which is an interesting contribution to the literature of the county division campaign:

Brooks, Minn., July 11, 1910.

Editor Gazette:—

For the benefit of the county divisionists of Thief River Falls and the people of Red Lake county in general, I wish to them an example of the difference in taxes between little Scott county, which they alluded to in their papers, and Red Lake county. I lived in Scott county for fifty years, owned 156 acres of land in one of the full townships of the county, 60 acres of which were under plow. Ten acres were assessed as swamp and the remainder was meadow and timber pasture. On the buildings I conld not get over $1000 insurance, and for the last ten years I have paid $40 to $42 per year real estate taxes. There is no ditch tax or court house tax, as the court house has been built forty years and would be a disgrace to the Fiji Islands, but they have to get along with it, for the taxes are already too high. There are not any large streams to be briged in the county and not any more poor to be taken care of than in any other county of its size, and its affairs are run as economically as possible.

Now I own 250 acres in Red Lake county which I am told is the best in the county. There are 100 acres under the plow. I have $1000 insurance on my buildings and have paid this year's taxes which were $63.10.

Now I think this example ought to prove to any fair minded man that small counties are an expensive luxury especially where there is so much idle land.

Hoping your readers will think it over seriousily before election, I remain,

Yours truly,

THOS. F. CONNORS.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one-half mile south of the High landing creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this offiice.

Where It Counted.

Patient (to physician)—All my money can't give me health.

"No, but it gives your physician confidence."

Too Sudden For Him.

"If you had no idea when our marriage was to occur, why did you propose to me?"

"To tell you the truth, I had no idea you would accept me."

A Victim of Leprosy.

"On my travels in Venezuela," said a New York man, "I stayed in a hotel with a young man in whose family there was the taint of leprosy, though he apparently did not have it. One night sitting at dinner he became angry at a waiter and brought his hand down on the table with full force. He instantly realized that he did not feel the blow and sat looking at his hand, his face whitening with horror. 'Give me your knife, Bob,' he said to his chum. He grabbed the pocketknife in a frenzy and stabbed the side of his hand with vicious cuts from finger tip to wrist. You may not know that leprosy appears in the side of the hand, numbness being a sign. The man did not feel the cuts. He arose from the table, knocking over his chair, rushed out into the courtyard of the hotel, and we heard the quick tang of a revolver shot, telling us how he had conquered the leper's curse by ending his life."—New York Times.

HORSE SWAPPING

In the Good Old Days It Was Sport, Not Commercialism.

A MAN TOOK A CHANCE THEN.

He Didn't Ask For a Written Guarantee That the Animal Was Sound, and If He Got Stuck He Bided His Time to Pass Along the Prize.

"I have been reading that David Harum story," said the ancient liveryman when his cronies were comfortably seated in his little office. "A friend told me that story was the last word on horse trading, but the man who wrote it didn't understand the spirit of the game at all. David Harum would have been skinned out of his teeth if he had blown into any western town in the palmy days of horse trading twenty-five or thirty years ago.

"I tell you, my friends, all the dead game sports are asleep with their fathers. Nobody is willing to take a chance nowadays. If a man buys a cigar he wants a bill of sale with it. The other day a cheap skate pestered me a whole afternoon talking about buying a horse. He tried out all the nags in the barn and finally decided that the glass eyed bay would suit him. And he actually wanted a written guarantee that the horse was sound! A written guarantee! No, gentlemen, I am not joking. That baldheaded travesty on a man actually asked for such a document. I regarded it as an insult, and after I had rebuked him they had to pour four buckets of water over him before he recovered.

"In the good old days horse trading was a game, not a commercial transaction. If a man wasn't willing to take the chances when he went trading he was advised to try some other line of business. Many and many a time I had the harpoon administered to me. One day Major Charlie Slaughter drove to my barn.

"'I have quite a neat package of horseflesh here,' said the major, 'and I have a sort of presentiment that he can travel a few lines when the wind is blowing in the right direction.'

"His horse was a handsome roan, a regular peacock for style, with his head away up in the air so you'd need a stepladder to see if he had a star on his forehead. And the way he hit the road was a sin. Talk about gaited horses! That roan handled his legs as though he had taken sparring lessons. Now, my weak point in the horse business is that when I want a certain nag the worst way I can't conceal the fact. I just can't sleep or eat my victuals until that horse is in my barn with a new halter on him. The major was wise to my weakness.

"'It's no use, Jake,' says the major. 'This hoss isn't on my swapping list. Every roan hair on him just suits me, and I'd be a chump to let him go'

"Well, of course I got the roan all right. The major was just bluffing. And I gave him the biggest trade you ever heard of—gave him a matched team and several bills for that gangling roan. And when I took the roan to the water trough for a drink I found that he couldn't lower his head. He had to carry it about ten feet in the air all the time, owing to some injury in his neck. He had to eat his flaked rice off a shelf and drink from a garden hose, and a man needed an aeroplane to put a bridle on him.

"Did I raise a fuss with the major? What sort of skate do you take me for? Next time I met him I told him I liked the roan better than any horse I ever saw. 'He isn't always rooting in the ground like a pig,' said I, 'and if you had told me about his patent dirigible neck I'd have given you $10 more.' We were sports in those days.

"One time the veterinary surgeon told me about a fine trotting horse in a town some distance away which had been deprived of its tail by a surgical operation. I went and looked at the horse. He was a perfect beauty and could trot like an avalanche. But he had just a stump of a tail, and the owner was ashamed to drive him, so I bought the critter for a song. I went to a lot of trouble having a tail made for him. It was a beautiful, flowing tail, a credit to the hairdresser's art. It was fixed to slip over the horse's stub tail and was then fastened to the crupper of the harness, and a man needed good eyes to see that it wasn't the real thing.

"The major had poor eyes, and when I took him for a drive behind that black trotter he simply had to be tied down to the seat he was so excited. He said he'd always wanted a horse with a tail like that. He had my own weakness. He couldn't pretend indifference when he wanted a thing the worst way, and he wanted that horse so bad that his hair was falling out. After a great deal of deliberation I issued my ultimatum.

"'I'll give you the horse, harness and buggy just as they stand,' said I, 'for your sorrel three-year-olds and $50.' Either of the sorrels was worth a herd of horses like the black.

"'It's a trade,' cried the major.

"Next morning the major came around to my barn all smiles. 'Ever since I was a child and quit playing with a rattle,' says he, 'I have wanted a horse with a detachable tail—a tail that a man could take off and use as chin whiskers at a masked ball. I just called to pay you another 50 cents, so that when I meet you after this you can't say I took advantage of you in our trade yesterday.'

"Oh, there were real sports in those days."—Walt Mason in Chicago News.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17. 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 20, 1904, made Homested Entry No. 485, Serial No. 0480, for N. W. ¼ Section 29 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make Final Commutation Proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafdal, Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 8, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that John Wzlontek, of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 567, Serial No. 04211, for N. E. ¼, Section 12, Township 153 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B. Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Olaf B. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn., and John Radnecki, of Radney, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 12th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestby, of Anstad, Minn., who, on June 7th, 1909, made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial No. 04810, for W. ½ S. W. ¼, Sec. 2 & N. ½ S. E. ¼ Sec. 3 Twp. 154 N, Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 22nd day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lund, Casper Lund, Ole E. Wroeth, and George Wold, all of Anstad, Minn.

Arthur P. Toupin,
Register.

His Question.

Edgar, aged six, was recently sent to school for the first time, and upon his return home he asked. "Papa, who taught Adam the alphabet?"

Up to the Doctor.

"Honesty pays in the long run."

"But my doctor tells me I'm short winded."

McCALL PATTERNS 10 AND 15 NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50 A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for free sample copy.

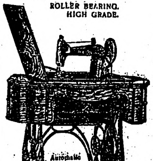
WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 233 to 249 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

The "Redgeton"

SEWING MACHINE.

ROLLER BEARING.
HIGH GRADE.



Automatic Lift.

Save Money by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

National Sewing Machine Co.
BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. Winton,
Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

A fool's heart is in his tongue, but a wise man's tongue is in his heart.—Quarles.

Easily Convinced.

Would Be Contributor (at editor's desk)—Here's a joke, Mr. Editor, that I'll guarantee was never in print before. Editor (after reading it)—Don't doubt your word in the least, sir.—London Tit-Bits.

The Outlet.

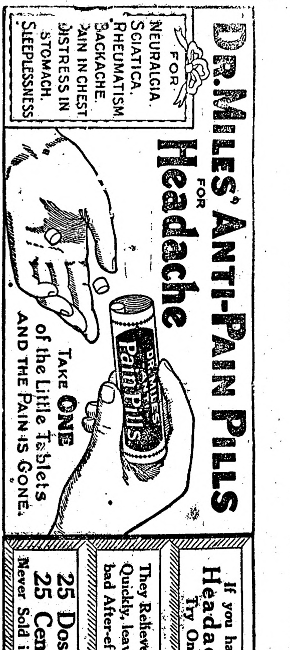
Physiology Teacher—Clarence, you may explain how we hear things. Clarence—Pa tells 'em to ma as a secret, and ma gives 'em away at the bridge club.—Cleveland Leader.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some Inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.



DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
FOR NEURALGIA.
SCIATICA.
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS
DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents
Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

Rev. E. A. Mostue made this office a pleasant call on Sunday afternoon.

Edward Singer, of Rhoda, was transacting business in Highlanding, last Monday.

They now have the telephone service, at Malone, connected with all long distance lines.

Dakota farmers are contracting for hay to be delivered at Thief River Falls at the rate of $15.00 per ton.

Local news are rather scarse this week, as everybody is busy haying; including both the editor and printer.

The government inspector of manufacturing enterprises was looking over our establishment, yesterday.

The steamer, Lily, passed up the river, last night with a very light load because of low water.

C. L. Clark and Walt McAndress will about finish haying this week. They have a good many loads of hay in stack.

Ye editor expects to make a trip to Crookston, on Monday, to attend the meeting of third and fourth class post masters.

The farmers on this side of Red Lake River are beginning to get up a number of long stacks of hay.

Roads are in fine condition, now and the swamps are dry on the edges, so that they can easily be driven around.

We made a call at the home of Mrs. E. Peterson on Sunday and she gave her subsciption to THE SUNBEAM a jog ahead for another year.

Anton Ellingson left for his home at Erskine on last Sunday, after spending two weeks here in getting the hay on his farm, cut and stacked.

The editor took a drive thru the town of Deer Park on Sunday and noted some very fair crops for this year and some that were not so good.

We ask the indulgence of our readers for the small amount of local news this week as it is rather up hill business, running a newspaper and farming at the same time, especially in haying season.

The Red Lake River is the lowest that it has been in six years and the logs of the drive are lying on an average of about three to the rod on both banks of the river.

Owing to the small salary, there is likely to be only a small attendance at the post master's convention at Crookston. William G. Hunt, P. M., had to borrow some money from W. G. Hunt, editor, to pay expenses.

We made a social call at the Malone post office on Sunday and noted that Gunde Anstad had a very good stock of goods for a country store. He informed us that he was doing a very good business for this year.

We passed by the farm of and made a call on Alfred Anderson on last Sunday and he informed us that he was busy haying in the big swamps this year on land that they had been unable to cut before, We are a little afraid that Alfred had forgotten that it was Sunday, as he was busy raking hay; while the sun shines.

Annual School Meeting.

At the annual school meeting of district No. 37 held in the Highlanding school house on Saturday evening last, Walter McAndress was elected Treasurer for the term of three years and T. S. Jacobson was elected Director for two years. The usual taxes were voted and it was voted to have eight months' school with a first grade teacher.

The District was utterly disgusted with their attempt to save money last year by employing a second grade teacher, as the scholars of the district have not advanced any this last year. The money spent for that kind of school had better be kept in the peoples' pockets.

THE "THIRD DEGREE."

Ethics of the Process as Defined by Inspector Byrnes.

"The 'third degree,'" said Inspector Byrnes, the former chief of detectives, "should be a psychic rather than a physical process. It is not remorse brought about by continual thought upon the heinousness of his crime that drives a guilty man to confession. It is the nervous strain involved in a long effort to maintain his pretense of innocence, while he is in constant fear that the police are in possession of evidence that may prove his guilt. Something like a parallel case would be that of a prizefighter who should surmise that his antagonist was playing with him in the ring while capable of sending in a knockout blow at any time he felt so inclined. Apprehension that he was dealing with conditions of the nature of which he was unaware would eventually weaken the man in that case. Tell a suspected man who is guilty that you have evidence of his guilt and that he will get nothing to eat or will not be permited to sleep until he confesses, and unless he is a particularly stupid fellow he will know that you have no proof against him and are only trying to get it. For instance, show him ostentatiously the weapon with which he may have killed a man and tell him that you know all about the crime and he would better confess it. He will say to himself, 'They haven't got sufficient evidence to convict me and are trying to make me furnish it, for if they had the evidence they wouldn't care whether I confessed or not,' and thus he will be encouraged to hold out. Also, if he does confess under duress, he makes a false confession, which he knows it will be impossible to corroborate.

"Now, a guilty man in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is not sure that he has covered every trace of his crime, and he may readily be put into the state of mind of the man in Poe's story of 'The Telltale Heart,' wherein he can't help believing that proof of his guilt has been discovered and that his cross examiners are mocking him by pretending not to be aware of it. Let the guilty man catch sight of an implement with which his crime is associated in the possession of the police, which he believes has been unintentionally left where he sees it, and it throws him into a panic, because he does not know how they came by the weapon nor what else they may have discovered demonstrating his guilt in getting hold of it. Perhaps he has concocted a story in his mind which the discovery of this weapon renders implausible, and he mentally puts together and rejects one sequence of lies after another, wondering whether it is safe to take chances on this bit of information or that being not in the possession of the police. Then he is overwhelmed every few moments by the thought that everything is known and all his efforts are useless. The guilty man in this condition is no longer normal, and his collapse is only a matter of time." — Frank Marshall White in Harper's Weekly.

He Had Reformed.

A young man who was an enthusiastic lover of nature went to the seaside for a holiday and, approaching a typical fisherman, said:

"Ah, my friend, how well you must know the face of nature and know it in its many moods! Have you ever seen the sun sinking in such a glare of glory that it swallows up the horizon with fire? Have you not seen the mist gliding down the shrinking hillside like a specter?"

And, very excited and throwing out his arms, he continued:

"Have you never seen, my man, the moon struggling to shake off the ragged, rugged storm cloud?"

The fisherman replied, "No, sir; I have not since I signed the pledge."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Little Ambiguous.

The Ingrahams were entertaining two friends at dinner. After Mr. Ingraham had helped them to roast beef he happened to glance at the other end of the table, where his wife sat, and observed, to his horror, that the sugar bowl was the old one, with both handles broken off, that usually graced the dining table on wash days.

In vain he endeavored by mysterious nods and winks to direct Mrs. Ingraham's attention to it. She either did not see or would not see the mutilated piece of queensware, and his patience gave way at last.

"Cornelia," he said, with some sharpness, "do you think we ought to use a sugar bowl when we have company without ears on?"—Youth's Companion.

In the hands of many wealth is like a harp in the hoofs of an ass.—Martin Luther.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS,

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2. 50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

THE CLIMBERS.

What Social Eminence Costs the Commoner in England.

My father was a laborer, and I am a lord.

When education was reserved for the rich they do not seem to have availed themselves greatly of the advantage, for many of the important discoveries, inventions and improvements we owe to the sons of the poor, and few of the celebrated writers, musicians or artists were sons of the rich.

The education I received at the public expense enabled me to obtain employment which afforded opportunities for advancement, and eventually I amassed a vast fortune.

"Society" has its scouts. They are the connecting links between the unimportant rich and the impecunious "great."

The wife of a fashionable artist sought our acquaintance. My portrait, which her husband painted, cost 1,000 guineas, but at their house we met the peeress to whose not disinterested negotiations I owe my knighthood.

That step up the social ladder cost some £20,000.

A philanthropic duchess came forward next to welcome us on the way. Her public benefactions and her private bills relieved me of a further large amount, but to compensate for this we were introduced to "society." I was elected to several clubs, and vouchers for the "royal inclosure" were accorded to us.

An impecunious but important politician later procured for me a baronetcy—for a consideration, part of which was for the purposes of the government and part he retained for himself. He is an inveterate opponent of corruption in municipal corporations.

There appears to be no inclination to interfere with free trade in titles, for subsequently I was offered, and I accepted, a peerage in return for a substantial contribution to the funds of the party.

Ability, industry and enterprise made me rich. Bribery has made me respected.

Without fees to the fashionable I should be still but a local celebrity, severely ignored by the neighboring magnates. Directly and indirectly it has cost me some £200,000 to attain social respectability.—London Truth.

ATTACKED BY SHARKS.

A Swimmer's Plucky Encounter With Two Big Man Eaters.

John T. Clark, a well known swimmer, in 1882 had a narrow escape from serving as a meal for two hungry sharks while giving an exhibition at Pensacola, Fla. He had agreed to be sewed up in a big sack, heavily weighted with sand, and be thrown into the bay near the navy yard, from which bag he was to escape by cutting his way out with a knife and swimming ashore.

At an appointed time a flatboat took him out some distance from shore, and after being tied up in the sack he was thrown overboard. He had hardly got more than thirty feet below the surface when something bumped against the sack, and almost instantly the idea flashed through his mind that it was a shark. Before he could do anything there was a bump from the other side of the bag. In a moment or two he had cut his way out and was rising to the surface, still clutching the knife in his hand. Once something cold grazed his leg as he was rising.

On reaching the surface he was greeted with cheers, but noted with dismay that there were no boats near. He started to swim toward the nearest one when the water parted a few feet to one side and he could make out the long black fin of a shark. The monster headed at once for him, and as he was about to dive to escape its clutch another shark dashed in.

As the first shark turned over on its side in order to bite Clark dived below the surface, then up under the shark, and drove the knife time after time into its vitals, and it sank to the bottom. As he came to the surface gasping for breath a yawlboat manned by excited sailors from the navy yard ran alongside, and he was pulled aboard just in time to escape the second shark.—Detroit Free Press.

Suspicious.

"Let me show you 'Love Letters of Wise Men,'" said the clerk in the book emporium.

"Are they signed?" asked the cautious bookworm.

"Yes, indeed, every one of them."

"Then they must be forgeries. Wise men never sign their names to love letters."—Chicago News.

THE MERCHANTS

State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.—— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,

THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Folkedahl,

Highlanding ....Minn

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C.W.John son, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examine this fine horse.

C W Johnson, Owner.

THE PEANUT.

It Starts Growing In the Open, but Finishes Under Ground.

Most people of the north suppose that peanuts grow, like potatoes, on the roots of the vine. Others with equal confidence state that they hang from the branches like pea pods. Both are right, and both are wrong. The peanut starts in the air and sunlight above ground in the shape of a flower growing at the end of a long tube. After the fall of blossoms this tube, or peduncle, elongates and bends downward, pushing itself inches into the ground. If for any reason it cannot do this it dies in a few hours. But if it succeeds in burying itself to its own satisfaction the ovary at the base of the peduncle slowly enlarges and forms the familiar pod, which is therefore dug out of the ground.

Scattered over the roots of the plant, however, are numerous warts or tubercles, in which, by the aid of a good microscope, can be seen myriads of minute organisms. These bacteria-like bodies, though they get their living from the plant, contribute materially to its supporting by collecting nitrogen from the air and holding it in storage, so to speak, supplying it to the plant as need requires. These wonderful little storehouses often contain, by analysis, a greater supply of this indespensable fertilizer than the surrounding soil.

The native country of the peanut has long been a matter of dispute, but the department of agriculture states that the weight of evidence seems to be in favor of Brazil. Thus the peanut is added to the four other plants of great importance that America has given to the world—namely, cotton, Indian corn, tobacco and the potato.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

USE FEET AS HANDS.

A Custom Somewhat Common Among the Yellow Races.

A French savant, M. Lannelongue, in a communication to the Paris Academy of Sciences maintains that among the yellow races, the Chinese, the Japanese and the Malays, the foot is used as an organ of prehension, like the hand, to a far greater extent than is generally supposed. He says that while in Tokyo he saw a young man sitting in a theater box grasping the rail with his feet just as though they were hands, ever and anon using his right foot to scratch his left thigh. The fact that the Japanese usually sit on their heels at meals and in the house develops extreme suppleness and mobility in the feet and toes, and the prehensile function is still further encouraged by the fact that the Japanese who adhere to the ancient customs wear forked stockings and dispense with the inflexible and constraining European shoe.

Chinese postmen navigate their boats lying down, steering with their hands and rowing with their feet. The oar is held between the big toe and the others. The natives frequently use their feet to collect and to pick up small objects lying on the ground, and sometimes even eat a mice with their toes. M. Lannelongue adds that the yellow races, who are able to use their feet somewhat as the elephant uses his trunk or the monkey his tail, enjoy a very considerable advantage in the everlasting struggle for existence over the less fortunate Caucasians, who are able to employ their feet only for locomotion purposes.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Rebuked.

Hoffman, the German physicist, arrived in Glasgow late one Saturday night and on Sunday morning went to call on Lord Kelvin. The doorbell was answered by a woman servant, whom Hoffman asked if Sir William was at home.

The servant answered, "Sir, he most certainly is not."

Hoffman then asked, "Could you tell me where I could find him?"

"Sir," she answered, "you will find him at church, where you ought to be!"

She Did Hate Smoking.

Henry M. Stanley once had an experience which shows how a hatred of tobacco is apt to swamp the finer feelings. In 1883, when staying at Brooklyn, N. Y., he notes in his diary: "Boarding with Judge X. Judge drunk. Tried to kill his wife with hatchet. Attempted three times. I held him down all night. Next morning, exhausted, lighted cigar in parlor. Wife came down and insulted and raved at me for smoking in her house."

For a Rainy Day.

"In your pursuit of pleasure," said the serious citizen, "you should not neglect to lay something by for a rainy day."

"Of course," replied the light hearted man. "Nearly every member of our fishing club brings along a pack of cards."—Washington Star.

Around the Bend

By ALICE CAMERON

Ralph Hurlbut leaned back in unaccustomed idleness and let the canoe float down stream. The sense of having nothing to do, nothing to worry about, on this glorious June morning, filled him with a dreamy content.

He was on the first vacation he had taken since college days. The last few years had been strenuous ones for the keen young business man. Mind and body had been worked hard.

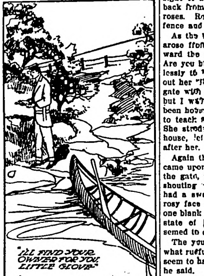
As the canoe swept down stream, Ralph Hurlbut was conscious of an exhilarating excitement. His imagination pictured a dozen adventures, but one image persisted, and at last drove the others away. Ralph's youth was asserting itself. He hoped he might find Her sitting on the bank or walking beneath the willows; a dream girl with the gray eyes and the sweet mouth of the woman he could love.

As he neared the turn in the stream, his odd imagining became almost real to him. It possessed his mind wholly. He could even see the gown she would wear; blue, soft, with perhaps some white fluffy stuff on it like clouds on a June sky. He gazed with a boyish eagerness toward the bend that hid her.

A few more vigorous strokes and the canoe swung dizzily around the curve and glided into the unknown part of the stream. The trees were fewer here. There were flowers near the banks. He gazed quickly about. No one was in sight. All was peaceful and quite deserted.

A deep disappointment came over him, a feeling stronger than the cause seemed to warrant. He tried to laugh it off. "Here I am mooning like an idiot!" he exclaimed, disgustedly. "I imagine a thing and then complain because it is not real." But the disappointment and the eager longing persisted.

He steadied the canoe and looked around once more. A white patch on the left bank attracted his attention. He could not see what it was, and in pursuit, idly paddled to the shore. He drew his canoe up on the bank and picked up the object. It was a little white silk glove, long and small in hand, the fingers still curled naturally as if rosy living fingers were within them. He smoothed it out on his palm. The tips were soiled a trifle.



"I'LL FIND YOUR OWNER FOR YOU, LITTLE GLOVE"

Ralph smiled down at the dainty thing.

"I'll find your owner for you, little glove," he said, putting it into his pocket.

Far up the road, to his left, he caught sight of a moving patch of blue—a blue dress, a white hat! Immediately he ran up the bank and started along the road.

Before he could reach her, the wearer of the blue dress turned into a narrow path leading to the only house in sight. When Ralph arrived at the path he could see her knocking at a side door. Her back was turned to him as she pounded vigorously. Ralph waited, walking slowly up and down. The blue dress evidently had a determined owner. Ralph thought she would never cease knocking. He had his first misgiving when she shook the door. Finally, when she began to kick strenuously at the panels, he began to see that Fate had, perhaps, been misleading him.

At this moment the woman made up her mind that no one was at home. She turned away and came down the path toward Ralph, walking with impatient strides. A basket hung on her arm.

She looked about fifty years old, extremely gaunt and remarkably badtempered. One glance, and the fact that he had followed this person in a romantic mood, carrying her glove over his heart, moved Ralph to a fit of laughter. While she walked toward him, staring angrily, he rocked to and fro in paroxysms of mirth. The woman came almost up to him, and was about to say something in no gentle tone—to judge by her expression—when she suddenly tripped on a stone, and catching at Ralph for support, let her heavy basket fall at his feet. His coat was torn with a long rending sound and the woman sat down heavily in a crumpled heap. The cream in a glass bottle in the basket splashed lightly over Ralph, and eggs covered his shoes with a yellow coating. As he noted each new phase of the catastrophe he burst into another roar of laughter. His companion sat in the road and regarded him stonily. Finally, Ralph saw that her face was growing very pale, and at the idea that she might really be hurt, his laughter subsided. He gently tried to help her up She struck at him awkwardly, her eyes flashing, but said nothing. Ralph was really alarmed for by this time her face was very white. "Are you hurt, madam?" he asked, anxiously. No answer. He began to talk, hoping that she would break her angry silence.

"I hope you will forgive me for laughing. You see I thought you were—er, some one else. And I was so surprised I could not help laughing. Tell me whether you are hurt. Let me help you." His face looked so handsome and so appealing that the stony expression of the woman softened a trifle.

"Well, the least you can do is to help me home," she said, gruffly. "I'm all shook up." She evidently blamed him for her fall. He raised her, and she leaned on him, grunting and groaning.

They walked on. She said nothing. Finally he began to be unpleasantly aware of her weight. His arm seemed almost paralyzed and drops of perspiration came out on his forehead. He stood still a moment in the road. "Would you mind changing to the other side? I could support you with my right arm. This one is getting a little tired." The long lips set into a grim line. "Can't," responded the woman "My other arm's hurt too bad." He wondered vaguely how her arm could possibly be hurt, but said nothing. The woman urged him on, it seemed to Ralph interminably.

She did not speak except to urge him to walk faster. Finally, they made one last turn and came within sight of a small gray house set well back from the road in a garden of roses. Red ramblers climbed over fence and porch.

As the two drew near, a young girl arose from the steps and hurried toward the gate. " Oh! are you hurt? Are you hurt?" she exclaimed, breathlessly to the woman. The latter put out her "injured" arm and opened the gate with a bang. "No! I fell down but I wasn't hurt a mite. Would ha' been home an hour ago only I wanted to teach some smart fools a lesson She strode up the walk and into the house, letting the screen door slam after her.

Again the helpless fit of laughter came upon Ralph. He leaned against the gate, rubbing his numb arm and shouting with mirth. This time he had a sweet echo, and looked into a rosy face dimpled with fun, for after one blank moment, and a glance at the state of his attire, the girl had semed to divine all, in a flash.

The young man looked down somewhat ruefully at his coat and shoes. "I seem to have received the worst of it," he said.

The girl looked up with a trace of shyness. "You could come in and clean up. Do not mind her, she's peculiar, but—"

He broke in with a question. "Any relation?" he asked. What if she should be the mother!

"No! Oh, no! We are boarding here—my mother and I. Mrs. Thurston takes boarders every summer."

She started toward the house, and Ralph followed. Mrs. Thurston met them at the door. She led the young man to a room, supplied him with water and clean towels in grim silence. But as she was leaving she paused. "Gimme that coat." Ralph handed it to her, and she disappeared.

Presently she brought back the coat. The long rip was neatly mended "Guess this'll do till you can see a tailor. Dinner ready in half an hour."

That dinner was a memorable event. It was a well-cooked meal, served in the long bay windows where the ramblers climbed in over the sill. Mrs. Thurston lost some of her grimness, and even smiled once or twice. Mrs Farrand, the girl's mother, was very gracious.

And the girl herself? She sat by the open window, not in the blue dress he had pictured, but in snowy white. In her eyes were the lights and shadows the expressions he had seen in the eyes of the Dream Girl around the bend in the stream. His wonderful vacation had, indeed begun.

Afterward, he saw her alone for a moment on the porch. The glove lay in his pocket. He was afraid to ask her about it. Suppose it should not be hers. He drew it out slowly. The light from the window shone upon it. The girl reached up and took it from his hand.

"Why, you found my glove!" she exclaimed in surprise.

"It is yours, then?"

"Yes. I'm so glad! It is not very pleasant for one not to have a mate."

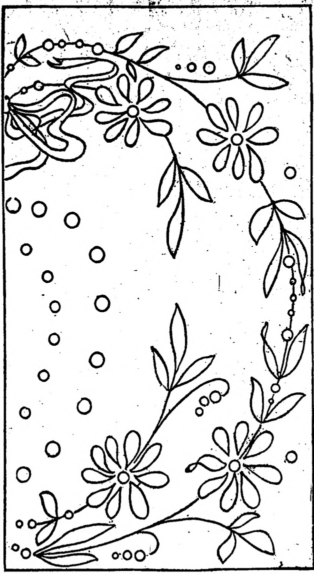
He looked down at her.

"Im finding that out, too," he murmured.

He moved a step nearer.

"Good night." He pressed the little soft hand in both his own for a moment. "I'll see you tomorrow morning," he said. "I've arranged with Mrs Thurston to come here to board."

Decorative Idea



NOWADAYS, when the metal bed is the rule in almost all well ordered homes, there is a constant cry among the home decorators for ideas as to its suitable covering.

Many women, handy with the embroidery needle, are buying a square of the widest, heaviest white sheeting. This is cut out at the two lower corners, so that the bottom of the cover will hang free across the foot of the bed below the mattress. A wide border is hemstitched all around the edges of the cover, and the center is embroidered as elaborately or as simply as one desires. A monogram is often used, and when it combines three initials is most striking.

When a set design is used for the center the initials can be put in one corner in three separate letters, each about four inches in size.

The design given may be placed as an inclosing form around the monogram in the center of the spread, or several of the motifs may be used, with the initials in one corner. The work may be all white, or, in accordance with the fashion for a touch of color, may be done in a dainty shade on white, with a wide border of the same shade used to decorate the edge of spread.

One-half of the design is given, to be transferred to the material by means of carbon paper and embroidered in satin stitch and kensington outline stitch. Omit the dots in the center if the motif is used with the monogram.

DON'T NEGLECT THE EYEBROW

Attention Bestowed Is Well Repaid by Improvement Made in Appearance.

The most neglected feature of the face is the eyebrows. Yet, perhaps, more of one's expression depends upon them than on any other feature.

Do not omit a day without drawing the eyebrows gently between thumb and fingers from the bridge of the nose outward. Do this several times.

If the eyebrows are thin and scant, cultivate them with the same care given to the hair. Rubbing with vaseline at night and washing it off with hot and then cold water in the morning will induce growth.

What is more disgusting than scaly eyebrows or signs of dandruff? Yet who has not seen these conditions on apparently well groomed women? Fight it as one would any other germ. Tonics used for the scalps can be carefully applied to the eyebrows with a clean camel's hair paint brush. Afterwards massage well.

The ideal eyebrow is thinly pencilled and arched. Almost any one can do some training along these lines with promise of success.

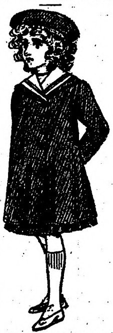
Shaggy brows and stray hair can be removed with forceps and kept down in this way. When the growth is abnormally heavy—always a bad defect in a woman—having part of the hairs removed by electrolysis is helpful.

Tailor-mades of silk and satin are seen more and more as the season advances.

Chiffon embroidered with chenille for a gauzy evening wrap is quite effective.

The new cotton crepes have a very deep crinkle, and are just as prominent as ever.

COAT FOR SMALL GIRL



This little coat would be exceedingly useful for slipping over cotton frocks; it is made in rough faced serge, and is worn with a white sailor collar edged with braid.

The hat is a man-o'-war shape in white serge.

Materials required: 2 yards serge 46 inches wide, 10 buttons.

The bow of tulle has disappeared. In its place one uses a long bar to fasten the collar.

In place of the side frill at wrists, one finds plain bands serving similar purpose

---

Will "Cy" Young Quit?

Rumors are persistent that Cy Young is about done for as a pitcher. But he has a fortune. So what does he care? He is the grand old man of baseball. When Young quits Deacon Phillippi of the Pirates will be about the oldest of the old guard left in the majors—if Deacon lasts until Cy drops out of the game.

The way of the transgressor is hard, of course. It is so thoroughly and persistently traveled.—Puck.

Jersey Real Estate.

"Monte Cristo" was playing to a crowded house in a New York theater. In a box sat a man who had looked on the wine when it was red. When Monte mounted the rock in the sea and exclaimed, "The world is mine!" the man in the box shouted: "What'll you take for Hoboken?"

He Won't Like It There.

The man who isn't satisfied with good health and a steady job will find heaven a disappointing place.

The DAIRY

CAUSE OF TEST VARIATIONS

Errors Are Often Made, Especially in Taking Samples, Thus Creating Much Dissatisfaction.

Variation in tests has caused much dissatisfaction in the selling of cream. When the cream is from the same cows, which have been fed the same ration and milked by the same man, and when the same separator is used, the farmer naturally thinks the per cent. of fat in the cream should remain the same.

Errors are often made in making tests, especially in taking the sample, but variations constantly occur that are due to other causes. The most common causes of these variations, as pointed out in a circular by Prof. C. H. Eckles of the Missouri Agricultural Experiment station, Columbia, Mo., are as follows:

1. Variations in the speed of the separator.
2. Variation in temperature of milk separated.
3. Rate the milk flows into the machine.
4. Amount of water or skim milk used in flushing out the bowl.
5. Change in the richness of the milk separated.
6. Adjustment of the cream screw.

Change in the speed of the separator is the most common cause of variation. The greater the speed of the separator, the smaller the amount of cream and the higher the per cent. of fat.

Again, the temperature of the milk separated varies on the farm from day to day. If cream tests 30 per cent. when the milk is separated at 90 degrees, it may test as high as 40 per cent. when separated at 70 degrees. Under average conditions on the farm, however, the variation in fat due to change of temperature will not amount to more than three to four per cent.

A third cause of variation is found in the rate at which the milk flows into the machine. If less than the regular quantity flows into the bowl, the tendency is to increase the per cent. of fat in the cream.

The richness of the milk separated affects the richness but not the quantity of cream. The richness of a cow's milk depends on inheritance and cannot be changed permanently by feed.

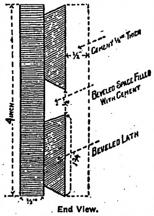
Small variations are likely to occur from the other causes suggested. By the use of an ordinary Babcock testing machine and by measuring the sample of cream into the test bottle with the same pipette as is used for measuring milk, any farmer can make a test of his cream that will satisfy him as to the accuracy of the test he receives from the cream buyer.

BUILDING AN OCTAGON SILO

Detailed Instructions and Illustration for Erecting Tank That Will Last for Many Years.

We should consider it a mistake to build an octagon silo when it is easier and better to build a round one. The octagon silo has no advantages over the round.

If it is desirable to build the octagon structure as suggested, says Hoard's Dairyman, in reply to a query, we should advise setting 2 by 4's on a circular foundation which extends at least six feet into the ground and two feet above. Place the 2 by 4's 16 inches apart, sheet on the inside with good matched lumber, then put on silo paper and cover with matched lumber. The outside of the 2 by 4's can be covered with paper and sheeting. This will make a very serviceable silo and one that will last for many years.



End View.

To us the better plan would be to line the inside of the silo with a coating of cement. Instead of putting on the second lining of sheeting and paper, bevel lath may be used, and then cover with cement, making the coating about one inch or one and one-half inches thick. The accompanying illustration shows the half-inch board which is nailed to the 2 by 4's, and they may be any width; the beveled laths and how the cement is put over them

Keep Milk Fresh and Pure.

It is not necessary that the milk for family consumption shall be of the certified kind, but be mighty certain that it is clean, fresh and pure. Even a doctor cannot correct your mistakes.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HERZOG, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

Sickly Smile

Wipe it off your otherwise good looking face—put on that good health smile that CASCARETS will give you—as a result from the cure of Constipation—or a torpid liver. It's so easy—do it—you'll see. 915

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use } Thompson's Eye Water

Old Advice.

Manager—You never get this scene right. Your business with the sweet peas is all wrong and you forget when you are to speak—you get your lines all mixed up.

Actress—All right, sir, I'll be more attentive and fix the sweet peas and try to get my lines in the right place.

Manager—Your course is very simple. Just mind your peas and cues.—Baltimore American.

How She Conciliated Them.

Filmer—How did it happen that these five men who were so angry with the woman in the nickelodeon for not taking off her hat became so friendly with her afterward?

Screeners—It was raining like fury when the show was over and she invited them to take shelter with her under her hat.

Not an Objection.

"I think he'd like to join your club, but his wife wouldn't hear of it."

"She wouldn't hear of it? Why, I know of half a dozen men who would join our club if their wives couldn't hear of it."

A Mean Man.

"Is your wife going to Europe this summer?"

"No. I've bribed a fortune teller to warn her to watch for a slim blonde woman who is coming into my life."

Protected.

Stella—Are you afraid of cows?

Bella—Not with my hatpins.—New York Sun.

A Dream of Ease—

Post Toasties

NO COOKING!

An economical hot weather luxury—food that pleases and satisfies at any meal. So good you'll want more.

Served right from the package with cream or milk. Especially pleasing with fresh berries,

"The Memory Lingers"

Pkgs. 10c and 15c
Sold by Grocers

Postum Cereal Co., Limited
Battle Creek, Mich.

WHERE GREAT SECRETS ARE LOCKED UP

by EDWARD B. CLARK

Copyright by W. A. Patterson

THE state, war and navy building which houses, as its name suggests, the three great departments of the government, is at once the most interesting and the least interesting to visitors of all Washington's great public structures. There are secrets in hundreds locked up in the breasts of the officials of the three departments, and in written, printed and photographic form, locked up in the office vaults.

In a sense the building is the least interesting because the outward manifestation of matters of public moment is not in the least showy. It is the most interesting from the curiosity point of view because all visitors find themselves speculating as to what great state and war matters are concerning the officials whose lips are sealed, and whose actions often betray unconsciously the fact that they are burden bearers of mystery.

It was not long ago that the name of Jefferson Davis, at one time secretary of war, and afterward president of the Confederacy was recut into the acqueduct bridge which was planned at the time that he was secretary of war. Years ago the name was chiseled out because of the pitch of feeling that existed in the north against Davis' action in advocating secession and in heading the Confederacy of the southern states. Feeling died away and lately the name was restored for the sake of historic accuracy and also to mark the coming of an era of good feeling.

On the wall of the room outside the private office of Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson, are at least 30 portraits of former secretaries and among them is the picture of Jefferson Davis, the chieftain of the Confederacy. The painting has hung there unchallenged for many years, and it will remain there, barring the accident of fire, for all time to come. It is by far the best painting in the room as a work of art, and persons who do not recognize the features of Davis ask almost instantly who it is, for it is such a striking bit of the painter's craftsmanship that it stands out from the other portraits, not all of which are meritorious as likenesses or as evidences of genius in the artist.

STATE, WAR AND NAVY BUILDING

PHILANDER C. KNOX SEC'Y OF STATE

Copyright by Waldon Fawcett

JACOB M. DICKINSON SEC'Y OF WAR

Copyright 1909 by Moffett Studio

GEORGE VON L. MEYER SEC'Y OF THE NAVY

Copyright by Waldon Fawcett

In the president's new office room in the White House, one that is included in the new part of the office building, there are today two pictures only, one of them that of his father and the other that of Theodore Roosevelt. One is at the left and the other at the right, and they both overlook the scene of the president's official activities. Some people have said that there are strained relations between President Taft and former President Roosevelt. There are those who believe that proof of this will come only when the portrait of Mr. Taft's predecessor is superseded by the portrait of some other man.

In the building which houses the state, war and navy departments is housed the general staff of the army, of which Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood is the chief. The country has perhaps only a vague idea of the duties which the officials of the general staff perform. When the Spanish-American war began it was found that the United States because of the long period of peace and because of the belief that war was unlikely, was in a state badly prepared to enter on conflict. The army was fairly well equipped, but the National Guard regiments were in a bad state of preparation.

When the war was over immediate steps were taken to prevent any like condition of affairs in the future, and under the inspiration of the then secretary of war, Elihu Root, and of Colonel William H. Carter, now brigadier general and assistant chief of staff, the formation of a body of officers whose duty it was to be to make in time of peace preparation for war, was begun. The general staff of the United States army was the result, and today it is a most efficient body. If war were to be declared tomorrow against any nation of the earth, it would be found that the United States as far as limitations of its armed forces would permit, would be ready to make the most of what it has in the way of arms and men.

Of the secrets which are held in the state, war and navy building the most important are those which have to do with preparations for possible conflict with every nation on earth. These secrets are in the keeping of officers of the twin services, the army and navy, and while they are different in their nature, they both have to do with means for offensive and defensive operations in the unlikely case that this country one day may be forced into the position of a combatant.

The course that is followed by the United States government in making plans to conduct a war in case war comes is the course followed by every great country of the world, and so no nation can take offense because it is known that the United States outlines plans to meet another country on the field, or on the high seas of conflict. War games are played yearly in the army and navy "closets" of all the great countries of the world, and while they are called games, they have a certain grimness about them that is not at all playful.

War with Great Britain is the remotest kind of possibility, and yet a board of naval officers and a board of army officers have prepared plans which will be put into service, unless the lapse of time renders them useless, in case such a conflict shall occur. The same statement holds true of preparations for possible trouble with France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Japan, Russia and all the other great countries, and with countries of less degree of strength, importance and population.

Comparatively recently when it became known that it would be necessary to reoccupy Cuba, the order for reoccupation came suddenly. While no one knew it definitely, every preparation for just such a contingency had been made by the army board, and as soon as the order was issued, transports were ready and certain troops were designated for foreign service, and they were sent at once "to the front" properly equipped and with every arrangement made for their travel and their subsistence and with every plan made for their course of procedure when in the island.

Some time ago when it seemed likely that because of the activities of President Castro of Venezuela, this country might have difficulty with the South American republic, a republic in little more than in name, it would have been possible to have invaded Venezuela with an armed force and to have done it without much preliminary preparation. Every inch of the Venezuela country likely to be traversed by an invading army was known to the American authorities. The roads were known, and every point of vantage and disadvantage was known. It had been said that it would have been practically impossible for a foreign force to reach Castro in his fastness, but the situation and all its difficulties was understood, and it was the belief of the war game students in the great Washington building which stands opposite the White House, that Castro could be brought to terms quickly, even though it must be done by a comparatively small force sent from a great distance.

While the members of the general staff of the army make preparations for all demands that may be made on the service in case war should come, it is what is known as the war college which works out the actual problems of warfare. Officers are detailed as students at the war college and while various kinds of work are set for them to do, the most important is that of engaging in a war game inside the four walls of the room, a game which one day may have for the scene of its action, territory thousands of miles in extent. One of the last plays which occupied the attention of the army officers was one which assumed the possibility that the Japanese were intending to land on the Pacific coast. Over at Newport, Rhode Island, the naval war college had worked out the problem which would confront the navy if the Japanese fleet had succeeded in reaching the Pacific coast. Of course there were two answers to the problem and one involved the defeat and the scattering of the Japanese ships. The army officers gave consideration only to the condition which would arise if the Japanese navy had overmatched ours, and the Japanese had succeeded in landing a great army on the Pacific coast.

In working out these war games, officers are detailed to represent the enemy and others to represent the forces of this country. The "moves" in the game are watched and umpires decide which has the better of the matter. When the game has been finished the various moves, if they are deemed to be successful from the viewpoint of America, become a part of the plans which are recommended for adoption in case the war game becomes a dire reality.

In the war and navy building there are naval secrets. Once on a time a magazine contained an article which said in effect there had been great mistakes in the building of our battleships and cruisers. The article met with some approval and some disapproval at the hands of the naval experts. One statement in it was to the effect that when our battleships were not heavily laden the heavy armor plate was above water and that consequently a part of the hull, the most vulnerable part made a fair and unprotected target for the enemy's guns.

In making the comparison, the writer of the article said that one of the great British warships, the one most recently launched and considered the most formidable, was protected by her heavy armorplate no matter whether she was heavy laden or light laden. It was stated that this dreadnaught's heavy armorplate extended below the water line at all times and the intimation was that the statement could not be disproved.

As soon as this article appeared inquiry was made at the navy department concerning the truth of the story that our ships were unprotected at certain times by their heavy armorplate and that the reverse was true of one of the British dreadnaughts.

From a dark recess in a vault there was brought forth a photograph which had been secured of the British ship which had been used for the comparison. The photograph took all the strength out of the written statement.

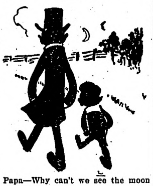
It is probable that in all the navy departments of the world there are photographs of the warships of other nations. These are not hard to obtain for they are on sale everywhere, but there are photographs taken under certain conditions which are not supposed to be in common circulation. Some of these photographs show ships at a disadvantage, and they are of service to the naval authorities of countries which one day may engage in warfare. It is probable that a good supply of photographs of this kind taken of foreign vessels is in the possession of the United States authorities.

The state, war and navy building has its secrets, and while the show places in the structure are not many, there is a sense of interest and mystery which appeals to the visitors when they wander through the corridors. nI time of war this building is the scene of the greatest activity, for the three departments which it houses are those which have to do with warfare in its very essence. The state department in perilous times has a work no less important than the work which falls to the lot of the army and navy.

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and
Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

HE LIVED IN THE CITY.



Papa—Why can't we see the moon in the daytime?

Jimmie—'Cause they don't light it up until after dark.

A TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY.

Lebanon, Ind., Man Gives Vivid Description of His Suffering.

John T. Anderson, 613 W. Main St., Lebanon, Ind., says: "I was taken suddenly with agonizing pains through my kidneys, followed by a stoppage of the urine. I was soon in such agony I could not lie in bed and for weeks sat in a chair propped up by pillows. The urine was mostly blood and had to be drawn with a catheter. My limbs were swollen to twice their normal size. The doctor finally said he could do no more and my family gave up hope. It was at this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved until well. I gained twenty-eight pounds and have had no trouble since."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Awfully Busy.

Jim—A stitch in time saves nine.

Tom—Who said that?

Jim—Gee! Ain't you read your Bible?

Tom—Nope; I ain't even had time to read the sporting page this morning yet.—Cleveland Leader.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.
PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC
Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.
A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.
THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Your Salary Guaranteed Here is an exceptional opportunity for you to earn a liberal weekly income. Furthermore, you can establish a permanent, profitable business, or a well-paying "side-line" by working on our special plan. Our work is simple and remunerative, and requires no capital or previous experience. Remember, your salary is guaranteed—and is entirely apart from the liberal cash commissions and other bonuses. Some of our representatives have incomes ranging from $1,500.00 to $10,000.00 yearly. We need a representative in your town at once. Then insure yourself the big returns you can secure from this great unworked field by mailing this ad—NOW—to COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, Room D, 1789 Broadway, New York City

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT IT. It's a county seat in center of Rio Grande Valley and irrigation; railroad, canals, court house, bank, school, brick business houses. People needed to build its great resources, rich enough to make you rich. Write for booklet F, quick. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 30-1910.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical, forest plants. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MSB Minnesota School of Business
Thousands of Satisfied Former Students
"THE SCHOOL THAT HAS MADE GOOD FOR THIRTY YEARS"
Its superior training gives young people access to the best office positions, and insures constant advancement. FREE CATALOG.
54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

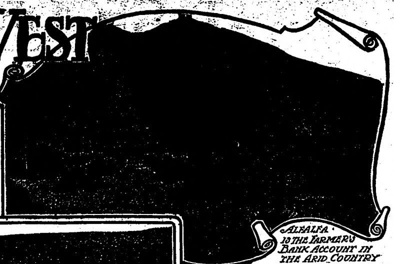
MICA AXLE GREASE
is the turning-point to economy in wear and tear of wagons. Try a box. Every dealer, everywhere
STANDARD OIL CO. (Incorporated)

The SPIRIT of the WEST

Wonderful Development Since Dawn of Irrigation

By C. J. BLANCHARD

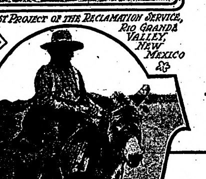
U. S. Reclamation Service



ALFALFA IS THE FARMER'S BANK ACCOUNT IN THE ARID COUNTRY

GREATEST PROJECT OF THE RECLAMATION SERVICE, RIO GRANDE VALLEY, NEW MEXICO

LOOKING DOWN INTO TIETON CANYON, YAKIMA PROJECT, WASHINGTON



A FAMILIAR TYPE: THE OPTIMISTIC PROSPECTOR

HIGHEST DAM IN THE WORLD, THE SHOSHONE DAM, WYOMING

THE spirit of the west is optimism and progress. It is the spirit that fired the hearts of our forefathers who erected in the primeval forests of New England the superstructure of the greatest nation on earth. It is the optimism and faith which imbued their descendants who carved an agricultural empire of unparalleled richness from the Mississippi valley.

Once a wilderness so unpromising that it evoked derision in the halls of congress, the west has become today the land of fortune and opportunity. In this land of boundless distances the altitude is stimulating, the air is a tonic, giving health to the infirm and courage to those who have failed elsewhere. Its constant sunshine encourages optimism and cheerfulness. The glories of its opal-tinted dawns, the indescribable beauty of its sunsets and the nameless witchery of its twilight softly melting into night are the work of a divine painter.

There is a mental and spiritual uplift in its mountains, whose summits are in regions of perpetual snow. Its sapphire lakes, excelling in beauty those of Switzerland, open up a wondrous field of interest and pleasure to the sightseer and those in search of rest and recreation. The monarchs of its forests cast their shadows on the earth before the coming of the gentle Nazarene.

Its canons, sculptured during uncounted centuries by wind and wave, are unrivaled in their wonderful and varied coloring and in their awe-inspiring depths. Its deserts, in vastness of area, in potential wealth of soil and climate, and in rivers of constant supply, are sleeping empires awaiting exploitation and development. Here nature offers to every man his birthright—a wide sky, the sunshine, the wind, and a sure reward for intelligent effort. Here things are writ in characters too vast for human pen.

The late Gov. John A. Johnson well said the west symbolizes "homes for the homeless, food for the hungry, work for the unemployed, land for the landless, gold for the penniless, freedom for the enslaved, adventure for the restless, dangers for the brave, an unknown world to conquer, and room for all."

Irrigation has wrought its miracle and 13,000,000 acres reclaimed are annually producing harvests valued at more than $250,000,000 and supporting in homes of their own more than 300,000 families. The wealth of that portion of the country which great statesmen in Webster's day were wont to declare worthless is greater now than that of the entire nation in 1860.

In the swift march of national events during the past decade, the development of the west has focused the attention of the world. It furnishes one of the most inspiring pages in the annals of our commonwealth. It is a story of progress and human achievement—a battle with nature in her sternest and most forbidding aspect.

Future writers will record the irrigation movement as an epoch in our history the far-reaching influence of which overshadowed in importance any other progressive movement since the opening to settlement of the Mississippi valley. The reclamation of vast areas of our arid and semi-arid regions, which is being promoted by the federal government and by large corporations working in conjunction with several states, is of profound economic importance to the nation.

The additional opportunities thus created for home makers are already serving to check the undesirable efflux of the country people to the city. Millions of acres of desert, unleached by rain and storing in its bosom the fertility gathered there by centuries of washings from hills and mountains, are being quickened by life-giving water.

Cities, populous and great, have sprung up; rural communities, attractive and prosperous, broad vistas of fertile fields and blossoming orchards whose yields are prolific beyond comparison, replace the wastes of sand and sage brush.

Economic forces are at work today in the country, and particularly in the arid west, which are gradually but surely shaping our agricultural development along new lines. In many parts of the irrigated country agriculture now occupies a position of greater dignity among the vocations than ever before. Its place among the scientific professions is now recognized and it is calling more strongly every day for the best talent and brains the nation affords.

The reclamation service began its work in 1902 on the passage of the reclamation act. The first contract was let in September of the next year and, on June 17, 1905, an important project in Nevada was formally opened.

Progress has been rapid and the activities of the bureau have been extended to 26 or more projects, which to date have involved the expenditure of $60,000,000. In the seven and one-half years of its work the service has built 4,215 miles of canal. Placed end to end, these canals would reach from Washington to San Francisco and back to New Orleans. Several of these canals carry whole rivers.

It has excavated 17 miles of tunnels.

Before the end of the year it will have completed four of the highest dams in the world. Its excavations of rock and earth amount to the enormous total of 60,000,000 cubic yards.

Its roads have a total length of 417 miles; telephones, 1,127 miles; levees, 70 miles.

It has purchased 915,751 barrels of cement and has manufactured in its own mill 340,000 barrels. As a result of its work water is available for 750,000 acres on 13,000 farms.

The gross value of crops produced on the lands irrigated by the government projects in 1910 was $14,038,000. As a result of the work of the government it is estimated that land values have increased more than $105,800,000.

The reclamation service is entering 1910 with money and plans for completing most of its larger and unfinished masonry structures and with about three-quarters of a million of acres of arid land under irrigation.

It will finish this year the great Roosevelt dam in Arizona, one of the most massive in the world. It has completed the Shoshone dam, in northern Wyoming, the highest structure of its kind ever built; the Pathfinder dam, in southern Wyoming, and the Laguna dam, in Arizona. It will for the first time utilize the Gunnison tunnel, whose completion was celebrated by President Taft last summer.

The funds available for construction are somewhat less than in previous years, and the organization, which is very elastic, has been cut down to fit reduced expenditures. About fifty skilled men—engineers, experts and technical assistants—have either sought private employment, have been transferred to other bureaus of the government or put on furlough, in order to keep the overhead charges consistent with the expenditures.

Reviewing the history of the reclamation service as a whole, its maximum activity and expenditures were in the year 1907. In 1902 the expenditures were less than $100,000, and in 1903 less than $1,000,000. In 1904 they were $2,500,000; in 1905, $5,000,000; in 1906, a little less than $10,000,000; in 1907, nearly $14,000,000. Then the expenditures decreased to $10,000,000 in 1908, to about $9,000,000 in 1909, and in 1910 they will be a little under $8,000,000. It is expected that in 1911 they will shrink to about $7,000,000, which sum will probably continue to be available during after years, assuming that the water-right charges are paid as they fall due.

This is the most critical period in the history of national irrigation since the passage of the reclamation act, in 1902. By public notices of the secretary of the interior, issued last year, hundreds of water-right installments, involving approximately $1,000,000, became due on April 1, 1910. That date is a memorable one, not only to the settlers, whose entries are liable to cancellation for failure to make the payments due, but also to the reclamation service, which is concerned in securing the return of its investment in the engineering works. It is also a matter of interest to citizens of the number of sections containing feasible projects, the construction of which cannot be undertaken without additional funds. As the repayments are made through the local land offices and not directly to the service, some time must elapse before the actual amounts collected are known. On a number of the projects, like Sun River, Shoshone and Huntley, the settlers have already made their initial payments and will not be delinquent on the second installment until April, 1911, which enables them to market two crops between payments. On several other projects, such as the Minidoka, Klamath, Lower Yellowstone, Belle Fourche, Carlsbad, Truckee-Carson, North Platte and others, the first settlers have had the use of water for two crops, and it is probable that a majority will be able to meet their obligations without difficulty.

Detailed reports from various sources on each of the projects have been received at Washington. The conditions as a whole are described as favorable for a large return to the reclamation fund. On several of the projects there will be no delinquents. On a number of projects the engineering work is not fully completed, but water is ready for large areas and is being supplied on a rental basis pending the announcement of the actual cost of water right. The reclamation service has derived considerable revenue from these sources and at the same time the farmers have been enabled to increase the areas in cultivation. The following financial statement is interesting as showing the status of the reclamation fund and the amounts which thus far have been credited to it through the operations of the reclamation service:

Total moneys received and transferred to the reclamation fund from sales of public lands under reclamation act to February 28, 1910, $58,342,617.02. Approximately $4,500,000 are still in the treasury of the United States, but not yet available.

Moneys received under operations of reclamation act from all sources in cash and credits, for work done, $2,879,475.04, divided as follows: Town-lot sales, $103,673.91; miscellaneous sales, water rentals, etc., $1,694,844.77; collections on water rights, $814,145.34. This does not include any of the moneys collected for the water rights which were due and payable April 1, 1910.

Among the several large projects, one of especial interest is located in northern Wyoming. When the springtime showers and sunshine fall upon the snowy peaks of the lofty mountains on the eastern rim of Yellowstone park a thousand streams will rush downward to fill to brimming the swift-flowing Shoshone river. An important physical change will occur at that time. The flood that once, unchecked and uncontrolled, swept madly through the rock-walled gorge will beat itself to stillness against a massive wall of concrete with which man has blocked the canon. A beautiful lake, 100 feet deep and covering ten square miles, will appear.

In this wonderful gash in the mountains, with perpendicular walls a thousand feet high, the government has erected the highest dam in the world. It is a wedge of concrete 328 feet from base to top. Its height can only be appreciated when compared with that of some well-known structure. New York's famous Flatiron building would not reach within 47 feet of the top of the dam, and the tip-top of the dome of the United States capitol would fall short 21 feet of the parapet.

In the summer, when the crops are thirsty, the big gates will be opened and the pent-up floods will be released into the river below. Another dam, a low structure of concrete, will divert the waters through a tunnel 3¼ miles long into a canal which for 40 miles passes along the upper edge of a broad and fertile valley containing 150,000 acres.

Two years ago it was a desolate waste. Today it contains more than 200 farm houses and three thriving towns. Ten thousand acres produced crops last year on this project. With 16 farm houses along each mile of the main highways, the valley already has a suburban appearance.

More than 250 farm units of 40 to 80 acres each are now available to entry and offer exceptional opportunities for men of moderate means to secure homes in a prosperous and growing country.

Close to the Black Hills, in South Dakota, lies the beautiful valley of Belle Fourche, containing 100,000 acres of grass-covered prairie. Many miles of canals have been laid across its level surface, and what was only a short time ago the finest free cattle range in this country is rapidly becoming a compactly settled agricultural community.

An impressive engineering feature of this project is the Owl Creek dam, one of the longest and highest earthen embankments in the world. This structure, now nearing completion, is 6,200 feet long, has a maximum height of 115 feet and contains 1,600,000 cubic yards of material.

The Roosevelt dam, which is about completed as you read the story today, is in many respects the most remarkable structure of its kind in the world. Its towering height, 280 feet, its length on top, 1,080 feet, the inspiring scenery in which it is located and the enormous capacity of the reservoir created by it combine to make it one of the most stupendous engineering works of modern times.

Conceive, if you can, two valleys—one 12 miles, the other 15 miles in length, and each from one to three miles wide—transformed into a lake 200 feet deep in places and containing enough water to cover Delaware a foot deep.

The Salt River reservoir, when full, has a capacity sufficient to fill a canal 300 feet wide and 19 feet deep extending from Chicago to San Francisco.

My one regret is that the space allotted me is too little to permit me to describe the charms and advantages of other projects of the government. I should like to tell you of the opportunities on the Klamath project, located in southern Oregon, in a region of unrivaled scenic beauty; of the wonderful progress made in the Boise valley, in Idaho, and the promise of even greater advance as the work of the government nears completion; of the Orland project, in the Sacramento valley, the land of fruits and flowers; of the Rio Grande valley, where there will one day be erected the most stupendous dam in the west—a region in which irrigation began before the Spanish invasion, which will become fruitful and prosperous.

The beacon of hope shines brightly in the west. It beckons the landless man to the manless land.

CHANGING THE FLAG

Admission of New States Causes Rearrangement of Stars.

Change Not to Be Made Before July 4, 1911—Present Style Fixed When Oklahoma Came In.

Washington.—With the admission of Arizona and New Mexico into the Union of states two more stars must be added to the union or blue field of the national flag. Under the law the change will not be made before July 4, 1911, even should actual statehood be accomplished before that date.

The law governing the subject is contained in the act of congress approved April 4, 1818, and embodied in section 1792, Revised Statutes. That act provides as follows:

"On the admission of a new state into the Union one star shall be added to the union of the flag, and such addition shall take effect on the 4th day of July then next succeeding such admission."

Since July 4, 1906, the official arrangement of the stars in the blue field has been such as to permit the addition of more stars without destroying the symmetry of the design. In none of the acts of congress relating to the flag has the manner of arranging the stars been prescribed, and before the date named there was a lack of uniformity in the matter.

Many flags in private use may be seen with the stars arranged in various ways. The early custom was to insert the stars in parallel rows across the blue field.

That custom, it is believed, has been observed in the navy, at least, since 1818.

After July 4, 1896, when Utah was admitted to the Union, the 45 stars in the flag were arranged in six rows, the first, third and fifth rows having eight stars, and the second fourth and sixth rows seven stars, as follows:

* * * * * * * *
 * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
 * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
 * * * * * * *

The arrangement of the stars to meet the case of Oklahoma was made in the summer of 1907 by a joint board of army and navy officers, of which Admiral Dewey was the chairman by virtue of his rank. The decision of that board, afterward approved by the secretaries of war and navy and the president, in turn, was that the forty-sixth, or Oklahoma star, be placed at the lower right-hand corner of the blue field of the flag.

After full consideration of the subject the board approved an arrangement having eight stars in the first, third, fourth and sixth rows, and seven stars in the second and fifth rows. The flag was changed accordingly, July 4, 1908, in recognition of the admission of Oklahoma. It will so remain until changed to recognize the two new states of the Union.

The existing arrangement follows:

* * * * * * * *
 * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
 * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *

When the joint board rearranged the stars, in 1908, to meet the case of Oklahoma it did so with full consideration of possible future changes involved in the eventual admission of additional states, with special reference to the cases of Arizona and New Mexico. Therefore the admission of two more states will call for no radical rearrangement of the stars, but simply the addition of two stars in that many of the six rows which are ready for them.

The new field as officially prepared will look probably as follows:

* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *
* * * * * * * *

MULTIPLY SILVER AND GOLD

Pennsylvania Doctor Makes Emphatic Denial of Discoveries Attributed to Him.

Scranton, Pa.—According to the story printed the other day, Dr. Frederick W. Lange of this city has discovered a process whereby silver and gold can be multiplied a hundred-fold. But the doctor comes to the front with a denial just as emphatic as his alleged claims.

"It's all rot," he declared angrily, "and people will think I am daffy. Do I look or act like a man that's unbalanced? What I have done and the only thing I claimed I have done, is to take a silver matrix and by adding fluxes I have been able to produce 100 per cent. more of the chlorides and nitrates of silver than have ever been produced before. I have had the products of my work assayed at the United States mint and the reports all say it was pure silver. The latest report came from Professor Wallace of the University of Pennsylvania, his analysis showing 85 per cent. pure silver and 15 per cent moisture.

"The discovery I have made," continued Doctor Lange, "is gigantic. I cannot even estimate the value of its commercially, as applied to the arts of photography and electricity and the plating industry."

Historical Society

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1910. NO. 18.

MINN. PROSPEROUS

COMMONWEALTH FINDS ITSELF IN POSSESSION OF VAST SUMS OF MONEY.

PROCEEDS OF RECENT JUDGMENT

Hoard May Wipe Out Taxes for 1911 and Become a Christmas Gift.—Governor Said to Be Seeking Legal Authority.

St. Paul. — Minnesota's taxes abrogated for the year 1911. No state taxes paid, the state running itself through collections coming in from various sources and through the unusual collections made during the year.

This is an unheard of thing, something that probably has never occurred in the history of this or any other state, but it is exactly what is going to happen in Minnesota, if recommendations which Governor A. O. Eberhart, following suggestions made by Attorney General George T. Simpson and other state officers, are reported to be considering, are followed.

At present the treasury of the state of Minnesota is groaning under the burden of a surplus which has never been duplicated. On Oct. 1 there will be nearly $4,000,000 in the state treasury. Oct. 1, 1909, there was approximately $2,000,000 in the treasury, or about half the amount that will be in the state's strong box on the corresponding date this year. There is, or will be, a surplus of $1,700,000 in the state treasury.

The unusual amount of money in the state's cash box has come about through the successful settlement of cases which have netted the state large sums of money. The largest of these items came from the settlement of the lumber cases, the gross earnings tax cases, the Kennedy inheritance tax cases and others.

Not only have large sums of money come into the treasury, but they will result in constantly augmenting streams of gold in the direction of the state's coffers, so that Minnesota bids fair to become a state unique in the history of taxation—a state that may find it not necessary to tax its people one cent for the general maintenance of state governments.

As this money has been piling up in the state treasury the officers of the state have been wondering what to do with it. It is understood there have been secret conferences extending over a month. The governor's office has been in secret consultation with the office of the attorney general, the attorney general has been in consultation with the state auditor and the state auditor has in turn consulted with the others.

"Melon" Won't Be Cut.

What the exact results of these conferences have been and just how far they have gone in settling the future financial policy of the state is not known. The matter has been guarded jealously with the probable intention of giving the conclusions to the state all in one finding and the definite conclusions may not have been reached.

But this much can be stated, the governor's inquiry has resulted in an approval of the part of the attorney general of the program of abrogating the state's taxes and it is probable that a cool million or more, possibly the entire taxation sum, will be lopped off the roll for the year beginning Oct. 1.

Matters of policy for the future are involved. Surpluses are dangerous things. They tempt to the cutting of melons, of useless expenditures in the way of improvements, new buildings, state institutions, etc. The application of money to the running expenses of the state which are paid out of the general revenue fund, would find an immediate use for the cash.

The program is so revolutionary that the absolute legality of the act may be questioned, but it is understood from seemingly credible sources that Attorney General Simpson believes it can be done, that other lawyers are of the same opinion and that it will be done to the extent of applying the surplus of over one million dollars to the general expense fund of the state, leaving only something like $200,000 to be raised by general taxation purposes.

BUYCK TOWN CLERK ACCUSED.

Duluth.—B. B. Bfosvik, town clerk of Buyck, has been arrested on a charge of forgery, the warrant having been sworn out by W. J. Stevenson, special counsel of the board of county commissioners. The alleged irregularities were discovered by County Examiner Wasgatt.

But one count has been entered against him, but it is declared on reliable authority, that the investigation which has been under way for some time will open a pit of corruption exceeding anything in the history of St. Louis county.

NO LIQUOR NEAR RESERVATION.

Will Abolish all the Saloons on Ceded Indian Lands.

Washington, D. C. — Prohibition will be extended by the national government on ceded Indian lands in Minnesota. The bureau of Indian affairs has decided to enforce its anti-liquor regulations on a larger area of these lands than previously has been attempted.

All the lands within and adjacent to the White Earth and Leech Lake reservations will be embraced within the prohibited territory. Some places within this area previously have been permitted to maintain saloons, but these will now be abolished and the ban on the introduction of intoxicating liquors will be applied to the following counties: Becker, Cass, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen and Norman; southwestern portion of Beltrami, Itasca and Polk; southern portions of Clearwater and Red Lake; those parts of Crow Wing and Wadena lying north of the Mississippi and the northern portion of Otter Tail.

This action was taken by the Indian bureau in order to protect the red men adequately against whisky and also to enforce, so far as its appropriation will permit, the provisions of the treaties by which the lands were ceded. These conventions prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the whole northern part of the state, except by consent of congress or the president, and if carried out strictly according to their letter, it is said, would embrace even Minneapolis and Duluth. There is no present likelihood, however, of the Indian bureau invading these two cities with its temperance crusade.

BIG FIRE AT HAZEL RUN.

Blaze Which Wipes Out Principal Business District Costs $35,000.

Hanley Falls.—A $35,000 blaze wiped out the principal business buildings in Hazel Run, a village near Hanley Falls in Yellow Medicine county. The Jertson building, owned by J. H. Jertson, of Hazel Run, constructed partially of concrete, two stories in height, and containing the Hazel Run Mercantile Company's store, the Farmers' store and the furniture of three families occupying flats in the second story; and a frame building containing the store and residence of Ole Wilson and two vacant store rooms were both burned to the ground.

The fire originated in a defective gas plant in the basement of the Jertson building. No one was injured, the families occupying the buildings escaping before the flames had much headway.

The town is without fire protection, and after the flames had burst through the first floor of the Jertson building efforts to save the buildings were futile.

The value of the Jertson building was estimated at $12,000. The Hazel Run Mercantile Company's stock was valued at $15,000. The stock of the Farmers' store was valued at about $10,000. Other losses are as yet unestimated, but it is believed that the total will be about $35,000.

The insurance is unknown.

MINN. POSTMASTERS ORGANIZE.

Third and Fouth Class Men Form Rochester District League.

Rochester.—About 30 postmasters of the third and fourth class met in this city and organized the Rochester District League of Postmasters.

W. S. Bartholomew, state president, of Avon, was in charge of the opening of the session.

C. E. Callaghan and O. J. Simmons, postmasters of Rochester and Austin, respectively, addressed the gathering on "Bettering Postal Conditions." W. O. Bock, national vice president of the League, of New Albine, Iowa, spoke on the parcels post.

A permanent organization was perfected with B. A. Shaver of Kasson, president, and D. E. White of Claremont, secretary and treasurer.

A vice president from each of the eight counties in the district was elected.

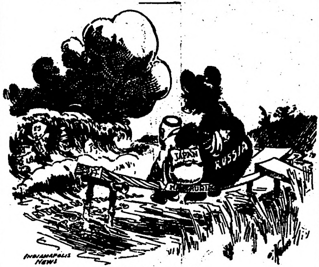
Rochester was selected as the regular place of meeting and the next gathering will be held in June or July of next year.

DR. ALEXANDER STONE DEAD.

St. Paul. — Doctor Alexander J. Stone, one of the most prominent surgeons in the Northwest, died at the Aberdeen hotel. Bronchial and lung troubles is given as the cause of death.

Dr. Stone was one of the best known medical men in the Northwest. He has been a resident of the Twin Cities for over 40 years and was surgeon-general of the state of Minnesota under the governorships of Lind, Van Sant, Johnson and Eberhart. He was a prominent officer in both state and national medical societies. He held a professorship at the state university of obstretics and women's diseases up to a year ago when his health failed him and he was forced to resign. He was a member of the Masons, Elks and Knights of Pythias.

WHAT ARE THE WILD WAVES SAYING?



"ME AND JACK."

EX-PRIME MINISTER IS SHOT

SENOR MAURA IS WOUNDED AT BARCELONA, SPAIN.

Statesman Steps From Train and Assailant Fires Three Bullets at Him.

Barcelona, Spain.—Senor Antonio Maura, erstwhile prime minister, was shot at the Francia station here last night. Upon alighting from the train from Madrid a man fired three shots at the statesman, one wounding him in the leg. The man was arrested.

Senor Maura came here to take the steamer Miramar to Palma, in the Balearic island, with his family, to spend the summer. The announcement of Senor Maura's approaching arrival created excitement among the radical elements when it was made.

TAFT SPEAKS AT BAR HARBOR

President Addresses Townspeople in Drizzling Rain on Philosophy of Summer Vacation.

Bar Harbor, Me.—President Taft forsook his golf game at the Kelso Valley links at the twelfth hole, rode over to the village green here and made a speech to the townsfolks.

A crowd of several thousand greeted the president, who was in his jolliest mood. The president entered into the full spirit of his strenuous vacation and in yachting trousers, blue coat and white yachting hat he beamed broadly upon the crowd that cheered him in the drizzle of rain that fell while he spoke.

Mr. Taft devoted himself largely to the philosophy of summer vacation in his address. The American people, he said, are learning the value of rest. The president advocated vacations of two or three weeks a year and the crowd which had just come from work in the shops applauded vigorously.

Immediately after the conclusion of his speech the president and his party entered coaches and were driven over to the villa of Mrs. Mark Hanna in Deal Harbor, where they were entertained at lunch. In the evening the party were dinner guests of Charlemagne Tower, former ambassador to Germany, at his place at North East Harbor.

$80,000 IN BONDS STOLEN

American Agency of Russo-China Bank at New York Report Theft of Securities.

New York.—Bonds and other securities, the market value of which is estimated to be about $80,000, were officially reported as having been stolen from the American agency of the Russo-China bank. The par value of the securities is $66,000.

Profound mystery and secrecy were maintained by everybody supposed to be in a position to have information as to the theft.

FIVE DIE IN A HOTEL FIRE

Rescuers Recover One Body from the Ruins—Four Are Still Missing.

Hoquiam, Wash.—It is now believed five persons perished in the fire which destroyed the Hotel Hoquiam. The body of C. E. Junnet, a lineman, was taken from the ruins. There are two other known dead and two missing.

Accused of Slaying Sister.

Wayne, Neb.—William Flege was arrested Wednesday on a charge of murdering his sister, Miss Louise Flege. William Eichencamp, aged eighteen, a hired hand on the Flege farm, is also under arrrest. He told the sheriff that Flege wished to marry Miss Ida Hendricks, who lives on an adjoining farm.

STRIKERS O. K. ARBITRATION

Grand Trunk Conductors and Trainmen Accept Canadian Government's Suggestion of Mediation.

Montreal, Que. — Vice-President James Murdoch, representing the general committee of the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont conductors and trainmen, in a telegraphic message to Ottawa Friday, accepted Minister of Labor King's suggestion for arbitration of the Grand Trunk wage dispute by a board to be named by the government mutually satisfactory to both parties involved.

An official statement issued by the company says:

"The situation continues to improve. Every scheduled passenger train on this division is now in operation. Way freight left Montreal Friday for the west and a fast freight for the south. Way freight left Portland and another left Gorham, N. H."

As the result of an outbreak on the arrival of a Grand Trunk train from Toronto Friday, John McMann, its acting conductor, and M. Donovan, brakeman, are in a critical condition. As the men left their train they were set upon by a hundred or more persons and severely beaten. The injured men were carried into a hotel, which was shortly afterward bombarded by stones and considerably damaged.

Lansing, Mich.—Acting Superintendent Ehrke of the Grand Trunk appealed to the street railway commission Friday for state protection of railroad property during the strike, claiming that railroad property is being destroyed in some places, train service interrupted and strikebreakers threatened. Chairman Glasgow referred him to Governor Warner. The latter is at present in the upper peninsula.

NEGRO IS BURNED AT STAKE

Belton (Tex.) Mob Revenges Death of an Officer—Two Have Narrow Escape.

Belton, Tex.—Henry Gentry, a negro, eighteen years old, paid the penalty of his crime—murder and intended assault—at the stake. Two others, a brother and a companion, charged with implication, missed a like fate only through the pleadings of Sheriff Burke and several citizens.

Gentry attempted to force an entrance into the home of Mrs. Lamb, a widow, but was frightened away with a shot by the woman's daughter. Several hours later, while Gentry was being hunted by a posse headed by Constable James Mitchell, Gentry, firing from ambush, killed the leader.

The posse surrounded the fugitive. Gentry made a dash for liberty and was shot and crippled. He was dragged behind an automobile to Belton, where several thousand men and boys waited.

CAIRO CITIZENS NOT GUILTY

Twelve Men Charged With Aiding in Negro Lynching Are Acquitted by Jury.

Cairo, Ill.—Verdicts of not guilty were returned in the cases of 12 Cairo citizens, charged in indictments with having been leaders of the mob which stormed the Alexander county jail and lynched the negro, John Pratt, the night of February 15 last. The jury was out two hours. The court had previously ordered a verdict of not guilty for W. C. Charles, while a request for a similar verdict for George B. Walker had been made by the state's attorneys.

Freed to Help Harvest Crop.

Georgetown, Ky.—A novel method to save the wheat crop of Scott county was resorted to when a number of farmers appeared before the county judge and paid the fines of ten prisoners in the jail in order to get help to harvest the crop.

HELD IN RAWN CASE

POLICE AND CORONER QUESTION CHAUFFEUR OF LATE RAIL OFFICIAL.

WILL INVESTIGATE HIS ALIBI

Former Employe Is Declared to Have Made Threats Against Life of Employer, But Makes Denial—Wife Makes Statement.

Chicago.—The culmination of the efforts to prove that Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon railroad, died Wednesday morning at the hand of another person than himself, came in the arrest Friday of Ernest Stevens, a negro chauffeur, formerly employed by the railroad man.

The young negro came through a four-hour third degree ordeal at the hands of Coroner Hoffman, Deputy Police Chief Schuettler and a half dozen detectives with a story that was practically unshaken. Although he was held that his statement might be verified, the authorities were about ready to admit that he had no part in the tragedy at Winnetka.

The arrest of young Stevens came about through a report made to the coroner by H. P. Cullen, a collector, who reported to Coroner Hoffman that the negro had made threats against Mr. Rawn last May.

Cullen told the coroner that he had learned that Stevens had been discharged as the Rawn chauffeur for joy riding. He threw this up to Stevens when the chauffeur was unable to pay a bill for a diamond ring. He declared that Stevens said in referring to Mr. Rawn:

"D— that white man; I'll get him yet."

Stevens denied this time and again during his examination. He expressed great admiration for his former employer. He said that he had been discharged only because Mr. Rawn had sold his car. He dared the authorities to telephone to Ralph G. Coburn, Mr. Rawn's son-in-law, if they did not believe him.

Coroner Hoffman took the negro at his word and reached Mr. Coburn at Winnetka and Mr. Coburn said the negro was telling the truth. He had been an excellent chauffeur, except for the fault that he was often late in keeping appointments. Mr. Coburn would not believe that Stevens bore Mr. Rawn any malice.

Stevens furnished the police with a detailed account of his movements Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. He was nowhere near Winnetka. The police are verifying his statements and if Stevens has told the truth he will be freed.

With the chauffeur suspect out of the way the theory that Mr. Rawn took his own life because he could no longer stand the strain of worrying over prospective disclosures of Illinois Central graft stands almost alone.

Even members of his family are beginning to doubt their first belief that a burglar fired the shot. They admitted the possibility that he had tripped on his night gown while coming downstairs and shot himself by accident.

Mrs. Rawn, the railroader's widow, although too prostrated to attend the funeral, roused herself by sheer force of will to dictate a statement detailing the events of Wednesday morning as nearly as she could remember them.

Mrs. Rawn was sure of only one shot. She was not certain that she heard a scuffle. The noise which made her scream might have been the fall of her husband's body, for all she knows.

GOV. CARROLL IS INDICTED

Grand Jury Returns Bill Charging Iowa's Chief Executive With Criminal Libel.

Des Moines.—Gov. B. F. Carroll was indicted Wednesday by the Polk county grand jury here on the charge of criminal libel preferred against him by John Cownie, former member of the state board of control, whom the governor forced to resign under charges of misconduct preferred in affidavits by girl inmates of the Girls' Reform school at Mitchellville.

After his resignation Cownie declared he was forced to resign without justifiable cause and Governor Carroll issued a published statement in which he set forth the claim that Cownie had sold diseased cattle belonging to the state and had conducted himself unbecomingly among the girls at Mitchellville.

The governor was released on his own recognizance and will demand an immediate trial. His effort will be to prove the truth of his statements and show justification for publishing them. Under the Iowa statute the penalty upon conviction is imprisonment in the penitentiary not to exceed one year or a fine not to exceed $1,000.

GEN. WOOD PRAISES HEROES

COMMENDS OFFICERS WHO AVERTED SECOND EXPLOSION.

Lieut. Hawes Fights Fire With Bare Hands and Stops Further Disaster.

Washington.—Stories of valor and sacrifice in time of suffering and confusion were detailed to General Wood, chief of staff of the army, and other officials of the war department upon the return to Washington of officers who witnessed the explosion of the big gun in the first minute of battle practise at Fortress Monroe which resulted in eleven deaths.

These personal reports were augmented by further telegraphic reports from Lieut. Col. C. P. Townsley of the coast artillery corps, commandant of the fort.

Lieutenant Hawes is praised by the commandant for having extinguished with his bare hands burning material that threatened to ignite the second charge, which was on its way to the emplacement.

Conspicuous in the group of those whose heroic conduct attracted attention was Lieutenant Van Deusen, who suffered a broken leg from the body of one of his men being hurled against him. His body also was burned by gas. He was the timekeeper during the target practise.

Following the receipt of the reports General Wood sent a telegram to Fortress Monroe expressing his sympathy for the bereaved and suffering, and his appreciation of the "excellent conduct" of the officers and enlisted men.

The war department has begun a rigid investigation to determine the cause and fix the responsibility for the explosion of the gun.

700 HEMMED IN BY FLAMES

Towns of Bloomville and Heinemann, Wis., Menaced by Forest Fires—Railroad Tracks Burned.

Merrill, Wis.—Seven hundred persons of Bloomville and Heinemann were hemmed in Thursday by forest fires at the former town with seemingly no means of escape.

The fires have destroyed the railroad tracks for some distance between Bloomville and Merrill, making it impossible for the inhabitants of the doomed village to seek refuge in that direction.

The situation at Bloomville is critical. The 400 homeless of Heinemann fled to that village only to be confronted by a similar peril.

Gleason, north of Bloomville, is isolated by the fire, and it has been impossible to get word from the village for many hours. This leaves Bloomville with its 550 persons cut off on every side. With the population nearly tripled, the question of feeding the people is a serious one. Reports from Bloomville tell of the flight of scores of people, some going on foot and others in wagons. The loss in buildings is over $200,000.

Several farmers' families have not been accounted for. Fields which were about to be thrashed and live stock and buildings were abandoned.

AIRSHIP HIT BY LIGHTNING

Spectacular Exhibition Is Witnessed Near Barcelona as Flyer Ehrmann Miraculously Escapes.

Barcelona.—While he was making a cross-country flight, Aviator Ehrmann's aeroplane was struck by lightning and fell blazing to the ground. The aviator escaped uninjured, which is regarded as almost miraculous.

There has never been a more startling aerial exhibition than that which Ehrmann unwillingly afforded, and those who witnessed it could hardly believe their eyes when the airman emerged from the singed framework none the worse for his experience.

He was sailing along at a moderate height when he got in the path of a skybolt. Instantly the aeroplane was enveloped in flames, its canvas wings shriveled up, and clinging to the skeleton of his craft Ehrmann came down with a thud.

WOMAN AVIATOR IS COMING

Mme. Mathilde Frank Expects to Enter in Race From Chicago to New York.

New York.—A French woman, one of the four or five women who have done serious work in aviation, has indicated her intention of coming to America shortly for the purpose of attempting a flight from Chicago to New York for the prize recently offered. She is Mme. Mathilde Frank, the French wife of a British journalist.

Mme. Frank has made several excellent flights recently. She flew fourteen miles at Mourmelons without stopping, establishing a record as a woman aviator. She is at present preparing for a flight across the English channel from Calais to Dover.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

The government has started to make an active campaign against newspaper publishers who mail to delinquent subscribers. Two Iowa editors are in trouble, and one of them has been summoned to Washington. Subscribers to all papers should keep their subscriptions paid up and not compel the editors to run the risk of getting in trouble with Uncle Sam.--Norman County Index.

Have Cut Their Bridges.

The democrats have just one chance to win or to make a creditable showing in the coming campaign in this state. That chance is bound up in John Lind and county option, and these are one and inseparable, as Mr. Lind will not have it otherwise.

The party leaders know this, have accepted it as a fact, and have cut their bridges behind them. They have left the party no other candidate, and have so fastened the issue upon it, that it cannot be shaken off in any event.

That is the plain statement of a condition. But the leaders are finding some dificulty in carrying out their program. Mr. Lind will be accepted and welcomed by the party as its candidate, but there is widespread opposition to anythiny approaching a county option platform.

Local leaders are flocking to St. Paul in protest. In one way they are welcome, as their coming emphasizes the proposed attitude of the state leaders of the state leaders. But there will be a lively fight over the platform. as well as a bitter one. We are not a democratic prophet, yet all signs point to the nomination of Lind.

Then will come the platform, with Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis counties standing pat back of him for his hobby. There will be enough more to carry out the program, and so long as there is unanimity on the candidate, it is figured that the party can afford a bolt on the platform. Anyway. this is recognized as inevitable.

Lind will accept because of the issue. He will sacrifice himself, according to his keynote statement, not for the office, but for the principle. But, save for him, to whom will be accorded sincerity, this whole program is one of sheer expediency.

The leaders would have accepted with equal eagerness, and more satisfaction, the other side. For three campaigns they have accepted both sides,and now take the one so wholly undemocratic as to convict them of entire insincerity.

Nothing conceivable is more undemocratic than legislation restricting personal liberty. In the last legislature the democratic vote was with one exception. solidly against county option. Ordinarily restrictive temperance laws are as a red flag to a bull with democrats.

Every item of saloon and liquor legislation now in the Minnesota statute books was put there by republicans against the opposition of the democrats. The freedom of the individual is fundamental democracy, but it happens that John Lind is not fundamentally a democrat.

So it is that the party is to be made to accept as its leader a man not at heart a democrat, with an issue absolutely hostile to democracy, as the joint expedient for retaining their offices for those who are salary hungry.

It is a peculiar condition and one which may wipe out the last remnant of party lines, the democrats deliberately sacraficing most of the democratic vote for the bare and desperate hope of winning a larger republican vote by virtue of some words printed on a political banner.—Duluth News-Tribune.

Congressman Steenerson.

In the National Magazine for Auugst under the heading, "Flashlights of Public Men" by Clarence Edward Curtis, appears the following article on Halvor Steenerson:

Once upon a time William Howard Taft at Barnesville, Minnesota, told his audience that he "was glad to stand up by your tall Congressmen and congratulate you on having such a representative. He does you honor in Washington, and looks after your interests, as I can assure you." He referred to Halvor Steenerson, and expressed a truth to the Congressman's constituency that is common knowledge throughout Washington.

Mr. Steenerson has qualities that cannot fail to command success—he is first of all a tireless worker; but even more than this he is resourceful. When the War Department decided against establishing a reservoir at Red Lake in his district, after Mr. Steenerson had succeeded in incorporating a provision (subject to the approval of the Department), in the Rivers and Harbors Bill, the Congressman simply took another hitch on the proposition, lined up the Senators and Representatives from Minnesota and North Dakota, and marched his colleagues forward in solid array in support of a measure to embrace all the head-waters of the Red River of the North in a comprehensive general plan to establish a system of reservoirs that will regulate the stream-flow in the interest of navigation and commerce, and prevent the disastrous floods that in recent years have destroyed millions of dollars in property. The indications are that this latest move of Mr. Steenerson's is going to meet with success.

Mr. Steenerson was the pioneer in the advocacy of federal aid for the drainage of swamp lands. In January, 1906, he introduced bills; first appropriating the proceeds of public land sales in the state of Minnesota to form a permanent fund for the reclamation of swamp lands, and second, to provide for a drainage survey of all ceded Indian lands in Minnesota. The last named bill became a part of the Indian appropriation law of 1906, and carried $10.000 and was continued in two subsequent years, so that in 1909 the drainage survey was completed. This work was very thorough, costing about $30,000, and is the foundation upon which the present extensive drainage works are based. Although Congress might reasonably decline to appropriate money to reclaim lands already given away to the state it was urged by Mr. Steenerson that the swamp land grant did not apply to the ceded Indian lands in Minnesota, which were held in trust subject to entry at a price of four dollars, and some at $1.25 per acre, and as a result Congress, in 1908, passed the so-called Volstead bill which provides that unsold Indian lands and untaken public lands shall be subject to drainage assessment the same as if the propeaty of a private person, with the proviso that purchasers at the tax sale of these lands must pay in addition to drainage assessment the amount due the Indians.

This has proven a very important law for it enables the people themselves to reclaim all lands worth reclaiming. Over one thousand miles of drainage ditches under the new law are now in course of construction, and these will convert hundreds of thousands of acres of hitherto worthless and useless lands into cultivated farms and thousands of farm homes.

As Chairman of the Committee on the Militia, Congressman Steenerson has had charge of many matters of broad national legislation, and has been the author of a number of bills for the benefit of the militia. The Steenerson-Dick law was cited in the Republican national platform as one of the splendid accomplishments of the party. He favored the reform of the rules so as to take from the speaker the power to appoint the standing committees, and voted with the Insurgents in the late crisis in the House when the Speaker was removed from the powerful Committee on Rules, and in all important general legislation such as the tariff and the regulation of railroads has been classed with progressive Republicans or Insurgents.

There are many reasons why men go to Congress—but the men who make their work a business after reaching Washington are the ones who ultimately succeed. In the case of the Minnesota Representative, he devotes 365 days a year to his district. He has been a powerful opponent of ship subsidies, not because of hostility to the upbuilding of the merchant marine, but because it was not the right way to accomplish that end, and because it involved the taking of millions out of the postal receipts at a time when the Department was trying in every way to economize to reduce the deficit, and because he wants every available dollar of postal receipts spent for extending and improving rural delivery service and better postal facilities to the people throughout the country. Although the older sections of the district are now pretty well covered by the rural service, it is his ambition to see the newer sections developed and occupied by settlers, so as to justify the extension of the rural service to every farm home.

Halvor Steenerson can certainly be counted as a successful Congressman, and whenever he wants anything in particular for his district he will get it sooner or later. If one plan doesn't work he invents a new system of approach, and with presistent determination keeps on the move until he lands what he goes after. His people at home have learned the force of such methods, and that is why they return him to Congress year after year.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one-half mile south of the Highlanding creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office.

TWAIN'S FIRST LECTURE.

Bret Harte Headed the Claque, but the Audience Swamped Them.

Mr. Clemens prepared a lecture for his San Francisco audience, giving a most extravagant account of what he had seen among the south sea islands. When Bret Harte and some other of his friends were told of his platform intention they agreed to go in a body to the old Mechanics' hall, where Twain was to deliver himself, and form a big claque that would insure the success of the affair.

Mark wrote his own handbills, which set the town agog with anticipation. One particularly inviting phrase printed at the bottom of the announcement was, "The trouble will begin at 8 p. m."

The hall was crowded, and the claque was uproarious when Clemens appeared upon the platform. The lecture was delivered with manifest effort in a slow, deliberate, drawling manner, and the lecturer paid no heed whatever to the inconsiderate demands of "Faster, faster! We can't stay here all night!" and other urgent calls.

Although Harte tried to steer the claquers, they insisted upon applauding and laughing in the wrong places, which may or may not have been intended as a joke on Twain, but at last the audience, which began to catch on to the unique style of the man and to appreciate his quaintly whimsical utterances, overwhelmed the claque and had things its own way.

An old timer who attended the lecture says of the effect of Twain upon his first audience: "His slow drawl, the anxious and perturbed expression of his visage, the apparently painful effort with which he framed his sentences and, above all, the surprise that spread over his face when the audience roared with delight or rapturously applauded the finer passages were unlike anything of the kind they had ever known. The lecture was a great success." — Bailey Millard in Hampton's Magazine.

GATHERING PRUNES.

The Fruit Is Never Picked, but Is Allowed to Fall to the Ground.

A peculiarity of prunes is that they are never picked from the trees, but are allowed to fall to the ground. The reason is that a prune must be dead ripe, with all its sugar developed, or it will not cure properly. Therefore the ground under the trees is carefully prepared and leveled to make a soft, smooth bed for the falling fruit. Gathering the fallen prunes is a staple industry in August and September. Boys and girls and often entire families are employed in it, camping in the orchards.

Being gathered, the prunes are rolled down troughs full of tiny needles that prick their skins. They are then dipped in a hot solution containing lye, which cleanses them, and rinsed in cold water. Next they are put in broad, shallow wooden trays and laid in the sun for two or three weeks. This sun drying practically converts them into the staple prunes of commerce and of boarding house jokes. At the packing house they are assorted as to size by a machine which shakes them over a huge sieve. The farther the prune travels over the sieve the larger the holes, and when it comes to a hole a little bigger than itself it drops through into the proper bin. It is then run through a vat containing hot water and finally rolls down a chute into a wooden packing box—the same box that you see at the grocer's. When the prunes pour from the chute, however, there is a removable frame about three inches high on top of the box. Box and frame go under a press, which promptly stamps down the contents so that they are no bigger than the top of the box. The frame is lifted off, the cover is nailed on the box, and the prunes are ready to ship.—Will Payne in Saturday Evening Post.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam June 17, 1910.

Department of the Interior U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. June 11th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Witalis Johnson, of Kratka, Minn. who on June 20, 1904. made Homested Entry No. 435, Serial No: 0480; for N. W. ¼ Section 20 Township 153 N. Range 41 W. Fifth Principal Meridian. has filed notice of intention. to make Final Commutation Proof. to establish claim to the land above described. before J. M. Bishop Municipal Judge for the City of Thief River Falls Minn. at Thief River Falls Minnesota, on the 1st. day of August 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Oscar J. Peterson, of Hazel, Minn. Ole Hafdal. Nils D. Jacobson, and Peter Peterson, of Kratka, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 8, 1910:

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that John Wzientek. of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904. made Homestead Entry No. 567. Serial No. 04211, for N. E. ¼. Section 12, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B. Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Ole B. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn., and John Radnecki, of Radney, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN.
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 1910

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 12th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestby. of Anstad, Minn., who on June 7th. 1909. made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial No. 04810; for W. ½ S. W. ¼. Sec. 2 & N. ½ S. E. ¼. Sec. 3 Twp. 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th. Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Mohelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 22nd day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lunt, Casper Lund, Ole E. Wirth, and George Wold, all of Anstad, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin.
Register.

McCALL PATTERNS 10 AND 15 NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 236 to 246 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

The Literary Squire.

Traveling Inspector (cross questioning the terrified class)—And now, boy, who wrote "Hamlet?"

Timid Boy—P-p-please, sir, it wasn't me.

Traveling Inspector (the same evening to his host, the squire of the village)—Most amusing thing happened today. I was questioning the class and asked a boy, "Who wrote 'Hamlet?' and he answered tearfully, "P-p-please, sir, it wasn't me."

Squire (after loud and prolonged laughter)—Ha, ha! That's good, and I suppose the little devil had done it all the time.--London Answers.

Knocked Into a Cocked Hat.

The expression "knocked into a cocked hat" is familiar to every one, but perhaps its origin is not so generally known. Cocked hat was a variety of the game of bowls in which only three pins were used, set up at the angles of a triangle. When in bowling tenpins all were knocked down except the three at the corners the set was said to be "knocked into a cocked hat," whence the popular expression for depriving anything of its main body character or purpose.

Perfect Happiness.

"Do you really believe there is such a thing in this world as perfect happiness?"

"Of course, but some other fellow always has it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Distinguishing Mark.

"How do you distinguish the waiters from the guests in this cafe? Both wear full dress."

"Yes, but the waiters keep sober."—Cleveland Leader.

The Jokes on the Men.

Mrs. A.—Do you ever read the jokes in the newspapers? Mrs. B.—Only the jokes on the men—the marriage notices, you know.—Boston Transcript.

His Condition.

Father—Now, Tommy, promise me that you will always count a hundred before you hit another boy. Tommy—Yes, I will if there's any one around to hold the other boy while I count.—Harper's Bazar.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Windows and Doors. Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail,

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 9.30 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 1.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

When the sea is smooth we have many good sailors.

The High Water Mark.

Mrs. Robinson—And were you up the Rhine? Mrs. De Jones (just returned from a continental trip)—I should think so, right to the very top. What a splendid view there is from the summit!—New York World.

An Unwelcome Discovery.

Post—I discovered today that Parker and I have a common ancestor. Mrs. Post (a Colonial Dame)—For goodness' sake don't tell any one!—Brooklyn Life.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly, Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

FOR NEURALGIA.
SCIATICA.
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST.
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache

DR. MILES' Anti-Pain Pills

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

If you have Headache Try One.

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith; and get them shod right.

The Dan Patch boat will leave Highlanding regularly on Friday mornings.

C. L. Clark left, last Sunday, for Passoup Island, where he will spend a week.

Oscar Lillo gave a party on last Saturday evening. All who attended had a pleasant time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wichterman drove out from Plummer to take a telegram to Rev. E. A. Mostue, yesterday.

T. S. Jacobson made a business trip to Thief River Falls, last Friday. He hauled a load of butter for the association.

Foreman Crowe, of the Thief River Falls Lumber Co., was at Highlanding Thursday, transacting business.

Harvesting has now began! Several farmers north of Highlanding have commenced cutting barley.

The haying season is now well advanced and most of the farmers are nearly through. Many tons of hay have been cut in the swamps this year.

There will be a grand harvest ball at the Kolski Hall in Deer Park on Saturday eve, August 6th. All are invited to come and have a good time.

The Plummer Pioneer has a new editor, S. H. Hess who was our printer's scientific teacher, last year. If he makes as good an editor as he is teacher he will be a dandy.

W. G. Hunt left for an extensive trip last Sunday, enroute for Crookston to attend the convention of post masters the 20th. He will visit Plummer, Red Lake Falls and other places on business.

The indications are that there will be plenty of ducks, this fall. The printer counted over twenty five while passing a small lake, south of Sunbeam, last Sunday, and every once in a while a flock is seen on the river.

The printer and printer's devil have had full sway over THE SUNBEAM, this week. If you see anything you don't like or any mistakes blame the printer's devil; but if you see something that you do like (it doesn't matter how little) praise the printer.

The Red Lake River is now the lowest that it has been for years and it is nearly impossible for boats to navigate. During the past two weeks we have only seen two and formerly six, some times eight, passed here each week. The creamery association has to haul their butter by team to Thief River Falls.

We have many communications from the farmers on the county division question on file in our office, but unable to publish any of them this week. We will soon print the best ones. Write us subscribers in the eleven towns, expressing your views on this matter. We will not publish your name, unless requested to do so, but all letters must be signed or they will not be published.

We have been away the greater part of this week and are not in a position to answer our friend from Erie regarding the law of the division of the property of the county, this week, but will fully explain it later. We did not intend to take an active interest in the county division fight, but shall publish facts without fear or prejudice so the farmers can fully understand it. W.G.H.

Postmasters Convention.

The people of Crookston showed the postmasters of Northern Minnesota that they were loyal entertainers at the postmasters' meeting this week. Mayor McKinnon tendered the keys of the city to the visitors and there was not a post master present who did not consider himself at home and who did not return home loaded with praise for the "Hub" of Northern Minnesota.

Post Master Elias Steenerson, of Crookston, struck a popular chord when he explained his damage suit that had been commenced against him by a rural mail carrier. There was not a post master present who did not highly commend Judge Watts for his decision on the case.

Have Not Time To Answer.

The numerous articles in the Eleven Towns roasting Hunt and THE SUNBEAM we have not time to answer; but we will say that Wm. G. Hunt did not appear in Crookston as a representative of the post masters and citizens of Eastern Red Lake County in a beastly state of intoxication as did John T. Lattimore, "deputy" post master at Erie and prospective county attorney of the new Pennington County. We are willing to submit the case without farther argument.

We noted by the Crookston Times that he was charged up as a visitor from Eastern Marshall County, which was very unfortunate for Marshall County and very fortunate for Red Lake Co. We guess by the time that John met the reporter he had reached the stage that he did not know whether he lived on the earth, on Mars or in the moon.

An Early Wall Paper.

On preparing a room in Bradbourne Hall, Derbyshire, in 1882, I found, partly covered by an old oak cupboard, considerable remains of quite early eighteenth century wall paper, of pale green tint, with a flowing pattern in darker color on it. This paper was made in squares of about twenty inches, and I was able to rescue two or more complete pieces. It had been printed on rather thick paper from woodcut blocks, and each square was nailed up with coarse iron tacks about one and a half inches apart, each tack being run through squares or washers of brown leather, so that both tack heads and washers showed all around each square of paper. It is possible that this wall paper was of late seventeenth century date. Bradbourne Hall, in the lower peak, is a picturesque house, almost unaltered, of the time of James I., having been then fashioned from the canonical house of the Augustins of Dunstable. It was just the place—"far from the madding crowd"—where curious details of domestic decorations would survive.—London Notes and Queries.

The Cynic's Point of View.

Of course we all like to know that our enemies are vulnerable, but it is only the cynical elect who can appreciate with fine epicurean fastidiousness the glorious revelation that their friends are human after all. And it is not only the weakness of those near and dear to us, but their misfortunes and annoyances, which give a thrill of illicit joy to those honest contortionists who can look in their own hearts. I once heard a young mother say that there was only one thing which gave her greater pleasure than hearing that the children of her friends were sick, and that was to hear that they were bad. No one but a brom-idiot (to borrow the excellent root with which Mr. Gelett Burgess has enriched us) would think of condemning this young woman for being malicious or unkind. Misery is not the only human quality that loves company. Some of her distant relatives—Anxiety, Discouragement, Annoyance—are equally sociable.—Atlantic.

The Forbidden City.

Peking has been a city for something like 3000 years, first as the capital of a small state, then destroyed, again rebuilt, and finally molded into the form in which we now know it, with its Chinese, Tartar, Imperial and Forbidden cities, each with its inclosing wall. Nobody has ever yet attempted to tell the full tale of its intrigues, its cabals, plots and counterplots. Few know anything about them. No one person knows them all. If only the bricks that form the walls could find a tongue, if only the pavilions on the Coal Hill could produce the sights and sounds that have fallen to their lot to see and hear, there would doubtless be a tale to tell which might vie in interest and dramatic force with anything that ancient Rome or Babylon has given the world through the [illegible] [illegible] history.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods

At the Right Prices

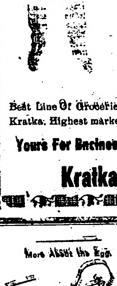
Clothing.



WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

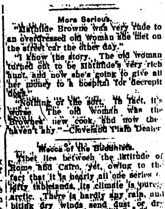
We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business. SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

More About the Egg.



"We use the egg at certain seasons as the symbol of immortality," explained the lecturer.

"The balance of the time it is in cold storage!" shouted one of his audience.

More Serious.

"Mathilde Browne was very rude to an overdressed old woman she met on the street car the other day."

"I know the story. The old woman turned out to be Mathilde's very rich aunt, and now she's going to give all her money to a hospital for decrepit dogs."

"Nothing of the sort. In fact, it's worse. The old woman was the Brownes' new cook, and now they haven't any."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mecca of the Buddhists.

Tibet lies between the latitude of Rome and Cairo, yet, owing to the fact that it is nearly all one series of lofty tablelands, its climate is purely arctic. There is hardly any rain, and biting dry winds send dust or dry snowstorms forever raging across its inhospitable uplands.

Lassa, its capital, is the Mecca of the Buddhist world, and pious Buddhists gain much merit by making the pilgrimage.

Expurgating It.

"Elfleda, what did your father say when he heard that I had been here calling on you?"

"He said you were a numskull, a mollycoddle and a [illegible]."

"Is that all?"

"That's all, Tiny—except the adjectives."—Chicago Tribune.

Napoleon and Waterloo.

There is nothing in the result of the Waterloo campaign to show any decline in Napoleon's powers of mind. The plan of the campaign as laid down by the emperor was a most brilliant one, and had it not rained on the night of the 17th of June Napoleon would in all likelihood have kept his throne. Had it not rained and made the land miry he would have had his artillery in position four hours before he actually did, and Wellington would have been disposed of long before Blucher's arrival. Even as it was, the Iron Duke was pretty well used up when the Prussian came up on his left. Napoleon's genius never shone more brilliantly than it did in his last campaign. He was defeated by the elements and by the unaccountable stupidity of some of his lieutenants.—New York American.

Assyrian Seals.

The ancient Assyrians nearly 6,000 years ago put in moist clay their seals, engraved in intaglio upon precious stones, on chests and doors, in order to prevent their being opened. There were no locks or keys in those days. If they wished to send a private letter they would often seal it with a hippogriff, which fabulous winged horse was regarded as the emblem of secrecy. Centuries later the Greeks and Romans adopted similar devices for the same purpose.

He Whistled.

Old Lady (to grocer's boy)—Don't you know that it is very rude to whistle when dealing with a lady?

Boy—That's what the guv'nor told me to do, mum.

"Told you to whistle?"

"Yes'm. He said if we ever sold you anything we'd have to whistle for the money."

He Countered.

"The position is yours, sir, if you will deposit $1,000 as security."

"I accept your offer, sir, if you will deposit $1,000 as a security for my salary."—Exchange.

To Live Long.

If you wish to be a Methuselah you will have to quit doing all the things that make it worth while not to be one.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE MERCHANTS

State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS, MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds, Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.

J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,

THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W.G.Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it,

Hover O. Folkedahl,

Highlanding ...Minn

"AIGLON"

A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties owning brood mares are requested to call and examine this fine horse.

C. W. Johnson, Owner.

Mythical Horses.

Pegasus ("born near the source of the ocean") was the winged horse of Apollo and the Muses. Bellerophon rode this animal when he charged the Chimera.

Sleipnir ("the black horse of Odin") had eight legs and could carry his master on sea as well as land. This animal is believed to typify the wind, which blows from eight different points.

Al Borak ("the lightning") was the horse commissioned by Gabriel to carry Mohammed to the seventh heaven. He had a human face and the wings of an eagle. Every step he took was equal to the farthest range of human vision.

According to Thessalian legend, the first horse was miraculously brought forth by Neptune striking a rock with his trident.

A Japanese Anthem.

The majority of national anthems are not conspicuous for beauty, either of words or music. The only one composed by a musician of the very first rank is the Austrian anthem, for which Haydn is responsible. And in no country has the composition of a really great poet been adopted except in Norway, where Bjornson's stirring lines beginning "Yes, we love this country," serve as the national anthem. The Japanese have a daintily worded anthem which Captain Brinkley translates as follows:

Until this grain of sand,
Tossed by each wavelet's freak,
Grows to a cloud girt peak,
Towering above the land;
Until the dewy flake
Feeding this blossom's gold
Swell to a mighty lake—
Age upon age untold,
Joy to joy manifold
Add [illegible] our sovereign's sake.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY,
Judges.

The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

THE GRAND PRIZE

(the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

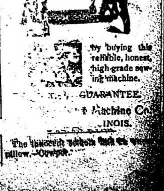
GET THE LATEST AND BEST

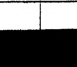
You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., PUBLISHERS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The "Redgeion"

SEWING MACHINE.
ROLLER BEARING.
HIGH GRADE.





By buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

GUARANTEE.

Machine Co.

INOIS.

The innocent [illegible] [illegible] pillow.—Cowper.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible—they not only give relief—they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

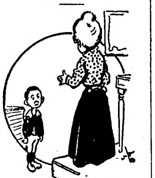
SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT IT. It's a county seat in center of Rio Grande Valley and irrigation; railroad, canals, court house, bank, school, brick business houses. People needed to build its great resources, rich enough to make you rich. Write for booklet F, quick. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

EASY TO ANSWER.



The Teacher—Who was it that climbed slowly up the ladder of success, carrying his burden with him as he went; who, when he reached the top gazed upon those far beneath him, and—

The Scholar (aged 8)—I know, ma'am. It was Pat O'Rourke, president of the Hodcarriers union.

Tit for Tat.

Being of a literary turn and having plenty of leisure, both Mr. and Mrs. Gluppins contributed special articles occasionally to two different newspapers in the town where they resided. One day Mr. Gluppins picked up a manuscript his wife had just finished, and proceeded to look it over.

"That's very good, Bertha," he said, after completing his inspection, "but I see you use the phrase, 'well-known fact.' I wouldn't do that."

"Why not?" she asked.

"Well, if a thing is well-known, why mention it?"

His wife said nothing in rejoinder at the time, but a few days later, while reading one of his articles in print, she found something to criticize.

"Horace," she said, "I am surprised to see you using the phrase, 'self-evident.'"

"What's the matter with that?"

"Why, if a thing is self-evident, what is the use of calling attention to it?"

Horace looked at her sharply over his glasses, but made no verbal response.—Youth's Companion.

Advice.

"Father," queried Bob, just home from college, "you've worked for me pretty hard nearly all my life, haven't you?"

"Quite right, quite right, son," mused father, retrospectively.

"Just so," returned Bob, briskly. "Now, you had better get busy and work for yourself a bit—eh, dad?"—Life.

A Dreamer.

"You say your boy Josh is a dreamer?" said the literary lady. "Does he write poetry or romances?"

"Oh," replied Farmer Corntossel, "he don't write anything. But he jes' natcherally refuses to get up till 9 o'clock."

Plenty of Material.

"Son," said the press humorist, "you have inherited some of my humor."

"Not enough to make a living with, dad."

"Never mind. I'm going to leave you all of my jokes."

Preachers have been telling the people that they are mean and selfish so often that they all believe it and practise it.

There's vitality, snap and "go"
In a breakfast of

Grape-Nuts

and cream.

Why?
Because nature stores up
In wheat and barley
The Potassium Phosphate
In such form as to
Nourish brain and nerves.
The food expert who originated

Grape-Nuts

Retained this valuable
Element in the food.
"There's a Reason"
Read the famous little book,
"The Road to Wellville,"
Found in Packages.

POSTUM CEREAL COMPANY, Limited,
Battle Creek, Michigan.

WINS THROUGH GRIT

Former Dock Hand Going to United States Senate.

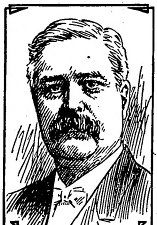
Napoleon Bonaparte Broward of Florida Who Has Been a Roustabout, Sailor, Filibuster and Governor, a Fighter.

Jacksonville, Fla.—One of the most picturesque figures in the southland and a man the story of whose life reads like a novel is Napoleon Bonaparte Broward, ex-governor of Florida, who recently defeated United States Senator Taliaferro in the senatorial primaries held in Florida.

Mr. Broward's is a brilliant example of achievement rarely equaled even in this day of self-made men. He was born in abject poverty, his parents being ignorant "Florida crackers," and his schooling was practically nil, yet he rose to the highest office in the commonwealth and now he is about to enter the United States senate. He is a big man, mentally and physically, and his honesty and integrity have never been questioned. He won success in politics, as he did in civil life, by sheer bulldog courage and pertinacity and by keeping his word. He stands six feet in height, weighs more than 200 pounds and is a born fighter.

Ex-Governor Broward first attracted political notice by his project to reclaim the Everglades of Florida and making them into farming lands. It was this issue which carried him into the office of governor. He has, too, demonstrated that his scheme is feasible by converting a part of the Everglades into productive farms, and this made him immensely popular.

The father of the future senator lived in a log house on the St. John's river and eked out a bare living for his wife and children. Broward's parents died when he was in his early teens. When he was under 20 he shipped on a lumber-laden schooner bound for Boston. There he was paid off and landed in the dead of winter. He had never seen a snowstorm before, he was thinly clad and suffered terribly from the cold. An attack of whooping cough laid him up and took all his money. Nevertheless as soon as he could crawl out he shipped on one of the winter fishing fleet bound for the Grand Banks. He endured hardships without complaining, did his work with a smile, and thus won the friendship of the men of the sea. Following his work on the Banks he worked his way back to Florida as a sailor. Next we see him as a roustabout on a steamer on the St. John's river. He saved his money, bought a part interest in a steamboat and struck out for himself. His splendid fighting abilities were winning him notice, the while his kindly disposition was winning him friends. He was elected sheriff of Duval county, a position he held nine years, and in which he made a record which attracted attention to him from all parts of the state.



Napoleon B. Broward.

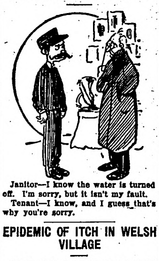
The exploit which made Broward famous throughout the United States and Cuba was his ability as a blockade runner to Cuba, during the time the insurgents were fighting the Spaniards there before the Spanish-American war. In company with his brother and a third partner Broward built a stout, seagoing tug for salvage and wrecking work off the Florida coast. He was approached by Cuban agents and asked to run guns and munitions into Cuba. The work was hazardous in the extreme, but the pay was commensurate with the risk and Broward became a filibuster. In all he made eight trips from the Florida keys to Cuba and his perilous adventures and narrow escapes would make a novel in themselves. He was chased by Spanish gunboats, fought with several of them and escaped capture and death by a hair's breadth scores of times.

This Baby a "Strong Man."

Pembroke Center, Mass.—This town has a marvel in babyhood in Thomas H. Bates, Jr., aged ten months and weighs 28 pounds. Young Bates has shown phenomenal strength. He delights in trapeze, swinging numberless times in succession. His biggest weight feat is lifting two flatirons weighing 19 pounds. With the assistance of an iron through which the flatirons are hung on young Bates performs this feat, a wonderful achievement for his age.

Your best friends "talk about you" [illegible] don't expect anything else

THE REASON.



Janitor—I know the water is turned off. I'm sorry, but it isn't my fault.

Tenant—I know, and I guess that's why you're sorry.

EPIDEMIC OF ITCH IN WELSH VILLAGE

"In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse, as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

"I may add that my three brothers, three sisters, myself and all our families have been users of the Cuticura Remedies for fifteen years. Thomas Hugh, 1650 West Huron St., Chicago, Ill., June 29, 1909."

Immense Saving Possible.

In a preliminary bulletin on the cost of maintaining a tuberculosis sanatorium, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis announces that the average cost per patient per day in thirty semi-charitable sanatoria scattered in all parts of the United States is $1.669. These institutions represent an annual expenditure of over $1,300,000 and over 815,000 days of treatment given each year. The bulletin, which is part of an extensive study the National association is making for its bureau of information, points out that the country could save annually at least $150,000,000 if the indigent consumptives were properly segregated.

More Serious.

"Mathilde Browne was very rude to an overdressed old woman she met on the street the other day."

"I know the story. The old woman turned out to be Mathilde's very rich aunt, and now she's going to give all her money to a hospital for decrepit dogs."

"Nothing of the sort. In fact, it's worse. The old woman was the Brownes' new cook—and now they haven't any."

The Home of the Cod.

There is just one other great cod bank in the world besides those off Newfoundland. It lies off Cape Agulhas, which is the southern tip of Africa, and south of the Cape of Good Hope. The Agulhas plateau is said to be almost a duplicate in size and richness of the north cod banks. But this is too far off, so there is little promise of its appeasing the hungry appetite of the world for cod.

Caught Too Quick.

"I pleads guilty ter stealin' dem melons, jedge," said the prisoner, "but I wants de mercy er de court."

"On what grounds?" asked the judge.

"On dese grounds," replied the prisoner: "I stole de melons, but de sheriff didn't give me a chance to eat 'em!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Enough Provocation.

Patience—Does she know any songs without words?

Patrice—No, whenever she sings it's certain to bring on words.

For Breakfast—

Post Toasties

with cream or milk

The smile that follows will last all day—

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers.

Pkgs. 10c and 15c

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

BYRNE SAYS BASEBALL IS A POOR PROFESSION FOR YOUTH TO CHOOSE

By BOBBY BYRNE.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

You ask me to tell how I happened to get into baseball as a profession in order to help young and aspiring players. If they asked me I would tell them everything I could to keep them from starting. Not that I knock the profession; but I think it is a poor one to choose, not because of the life itself, but because of its temptations and hardships, and, worse than that, the small chances of being really successful.

If I had it to do over aagin I do not think I ever would become a professional ball player, in spite of the fact that I love the game and love to play it. I think a young fellow would do better to devote himself to some other line than to take the chances of success in the national game, for even when he wins he loses.

I wanted to be a ball player and was educated at the game in a good school, on the lots around St. Louis. I think that ball players develop faster when they are in the neighborhood of some major league team. One or two of the players on a "prairie" team are at every game the big leagues play. They see how the game is played, and being at that age as imitative as monkeys, they work the same things on their own teams and teach all the other boys. I have noticed that when any city has a pennant winning club the quality of baseball played by the boys and the amateurs in that vicinity is much improved.

The first regular team I made was the Arcades at Springfield, Mo., which was quite a team, merely because we had one fellow who knew the game well and could teach us. It is easier to teach boys than to teach men, as they will obey without a question if they think the leader knows what he is doing. I picked up the game rapidly. The hardest thing I had to learn was when to throw. I think I must have thrown away half the games we played before I learned not to throw when there was no chance to get the runner. I think that is one of the first things a young player should learn; to look before he throws and only throw when he has a chance to make a play. The next thing, it seems to me, is to learn to handle one's feet and to keep in the game all the time, and be in position to move when the ball is hit or before.

I played around in the Trolley league at St. Louis, and then took a chance and went to Shreveport, La., where I made good right off the reel. I started well, but got to thinking that the old heads down there were not as good as the "kids" in the Trolley league, until they began to show me things I never had heard about. Luckily I had sense enough to see they were right and I followed them. The first thing I knew I was back in the big league at St. Louis. The biggest thing I had learned was that, no matter how far a fellow gets up in the business, there still is a lot he does not know, and by dint of watching and learning I held on, and still am learning and willing to learn. When I know it all I'll quit, or be released.

Bobby Byrne.

Jennings After Star Twirlers.

Hughie Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers, needs good pitchers badly. He is said to have made offers for Walter Johnson of the Nationals and Frank Smith of the Chicago White Sox. If these reports are true Hughie certainly isn't modest in his wishes. Comiskey might trade Smith for Ty Cobb and Tom Noyes might let Johnson go for a barrel or two of coin. 'Tis said Detroit offered Washington $30,000 for the battery, Johnson and Street. President Navin says it isn't true. Maybe that settles it and maybe it doesn't. Catcher Beckendorf of Detroit has been sold to Washington.

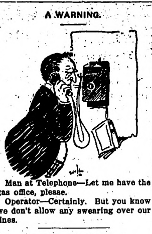
Ray Looks Like a Star.

Guess that new pitcher for the St. Louis Browns must be a little Ray of sunshine. Any lad fresh from the bush who can stack against the Tigers and beat them twice in one series does not need to work very hard the rest of the year. Took a barrel of nerve and lots of the real goods to turn the trick against the demons, Cobb, Crawford & Co. (Limited).

Ousted for First Time.

When Josh Devore was banished for his part in the chastising of the gallant Brooklyn rooters who abused Devlin some days ago, it was the first time in his career he was put out of a game.

A WARNING.



Man at Telephone—Let me have the gas office, please.

Operator—Certainly. But you know we don't allow any swearing over our lines.

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

A Knowing Girl.

When young Lord Stanleigh came to visit an American family, the mistress told the servants that in addressing him they should always say "Your Grace." When the young gentleman one morning met one of the pretty house servants in the hallway and told her that she was so attractive looking he thought he would kiss her, she demurely replied, clasping her hands on her bosom and looking up into his face with a beatific expression, "O Lord, for this blessing we are about to receive, we thank thee."—Lippincott's.

Silenced the Critic.

Charles Sumner, when in London, gave a ready reply. At a dinner given in his honor, he spoke of "the ashes" of some dead hero. "Ashes! What American English!" rudely broke in an Englishman; "d'ist you mean, Mr. Sumner. We don't burn our dead in this country." "Yet," instantly replied Mr. Sumner, with a courteous smile, "your poet Gray tells us that 'Even in our ashes live their wonted fires.'" The American was not criticized again that evening.

Comparing Notes.

Mrs. Newly—My little Robbie is remarkably strong; he is only four years old, but he can raise his high chair with one hand!

Mr. Spoodler—Oh, that's nothing; in the apartment house where I try to do my sleeping there's a baby that's only four months old, and that child can raise the roof with no hand at all.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

She's a Free Lance.

"Would you have a pickpocket arrested if you detected one in the act of going through your pockets?"

"With one exception."

"What's that?"

"Not if it was my wife."

If You Are a Trifle Sensitive

About the size of your shoes, many people wear smaller shoes by using Allen's Foot-Ease, the Antiseptic Powder to shake into the shoes. It cures Tired, Swollen, Aching Feet and gives rest and comfort. Just the thing for breaking in new shoes. Sold everywhere, 25c. Sample sent FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

There can be no true rest without work, and the full delight of a holiday cannot be known except by the man who has earned it.—Hugh Black.

Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes.

Relieved By Murine Eye Remedy. Try Murine For Your Eye Troubles. You Will Like Murine. It Soothes. 50c at Your Druggists. Write For Eye Books. Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

A crazy person thinks every one else is insane, and love is blind because it imagines everybody else is.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Formerly the people burned witches. Now they roast politicians.

How He Kept the Law.

"I noticed," said the friend-who-could-be-trusted, after a trip through the factory where preserves are made, "that a white powder is first put in the cans, and that the preserves are then put in the white powder."

"Yes," explained the proprietor to the friend-who-could-be-trusted, "that white powder is a preservative. You see we are compelled to put the preserves in a preservative because an idiotic requirement of the government makes it unlawful for us to put a preservative in the preserves."

Why He Believes Her.

Evangeline—Rachel never can tell anything without exaggerating it.

John—That's why I believe her when she tells her age.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take. Do not gripe.

The fellow who buries the hatchet may still have a knife up his sleeve.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. Ford, 2207 W. Franklin St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

Busted

Many a man goes broke—in Health—then wealth. Blames his mind—says it don't work right; but all the time it's his bowels. They don't work—liver dead and the whole system gets clogged with poison. Nothing kills good, clean-cut brain action like constipation. CASCARETS will relieve and cure. Try it now. 916

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE
PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK)
C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES
SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC.
AT DRUGGISTS TRIAL BOX BY MAIL 50c
PLANTEN, 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.

Your Salary Guaranteed Here is an exceptional opportunity for you to earn a liberal weekly income. Furthermore, you can establish a permanent, profitable business, or a well-paying "side-line" by working on our special plan. Our work is simple and remunerative, and requires no capital or previous experience. Remember, your salary is guaranteed—and is entirely apart from the liberal cash commissions and other bonuses. Some of our representatives have incomes ranging from $1,500.00 to $10,000.00 yearly. We need a representative in your town at once. Then insure yourself the big returns you can secure from this great unworked field by mailing this ad—NOW—to COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, Room 5D, 1789 Broadway, New York City

A vacation necessity—the
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

AGENTS can you sell lots in a county seat and commercial center of Rio Grande Valley. Splendid contract. Write for booklet F. Chapin Townsite Co., Chapin, Tex.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 31–1910.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Prest., Buffalo, N. Y.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION
Makes Weak Women Strong,
Sick Women Well.

Historical Society

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

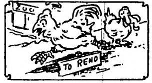
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 5, 1910. NO. 19.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Scandal Wrecks Romance of the Zoo



NEW YORK.—The fowl house of the Central park zoo was scandalized one day recently when some sharp eyed tattlers noticed the simultaneous disappearance of Clara, one of the young wild gray geese recently given to the zoo, and Brigham Young, the little Black Spanish game rooster whose wild ways have deprived him of the countenance of the best classes in the fowl house.

It came out that Brigham Young and Clara were out in the park together. Chief Keeper Snyder, who went on their trail as soon as he heard about their disappearance, got wind of them near the alligator pool. A black wing feather by the eagle cages also showed that B. Young had been there. He had lost the feather trying to converse with a South American condor.

Then he went on up the path, walking in a manner that said that he thought himself a pretty fine fellow.

It was about here that the little gray goose felt such a thrill of freedom and life that she quacked in her coarse, uncultured voice, and abruptly left the earth for a flight in the air.

B. Young tried to do that, too, but he fell back to the ground in a most undignified manner. When the gray goose came back after a circle of the neighborhood, he expressed to her, no doubt, his grave disapproval of undue boisterousness in a young woman considerably beyond the kindergarten age.

At any rate a coolness sprang up here between the couple. They went on down the mall until they came to the pool of water equipped with the fountain mechanism that spouts up many minute streams of water from the surface of the pool. B. Young started to walk slowly around the low curbing of the pool, but Clara, the poor, simple thing, jumped right in and, swimming out until she came underneath the showering streams, began quacking as loudly as she could, flapping her wings in a quick, excited way.

B. Young does not worship the convention. But even he stood stock still and glared at Clara. She caught his eye, but did not seem to be in the least ashamed. Whereupon he turned away, acting as if he didn't know the young thing cutting up in the pool.

Chief Keeper Snyder came down the mall on the trail. On the way back to the fowl house, Clara and B. Young refused to notice each other.

"A simple case of incompatability," said Snyder, "but, fortunately it was discovered early. We would prefer to say nothing more just at present." However, B. Young plans a visit to Reno, Nev., where divorces are so easily obtained.

Chicago Woman Maid for Her Hostess

ST. LOUIS.—While a score of invitations were on their way from Mrs. James Howe's beautiful Swiss chalet in Webster Groves, a suburb of St. Louis, to attend a five hundred club party and luncheon recently, Mrs. Howe's serving maid announced her resignation, to take effect immediately.

The dire news reached the hostess as she was dressing to receive her guests. "What's the matter?" called Mrs. C. Gregory Fleckenstein, Mrs. Howe's guest, from the room where she was putting on her white lingerie gown. Mrs. Howe told her. Mrs. Fleckenstein, whose home is in Chicago, was to be the guest of honor at the club party. But this had not been announced. Nor was she acquainted with those whom she was to meet.

"Let me be serving maid," she said promptly. "I think I can do almost as well as a real one. Where is my costume?" She hurried downstairs and returned in a dainty white dress and checked serving apron.

"What a charming maid you have," was almost the first remark of the first club member who appeared.

"She's French," replied Mrs. Howe, "and she can't speak a word of English. For that reason I'm afraid I will not be able to keep her. It's a pity, for she's so neat."

"I'll be glad to take her, if you aren't going to keep her," said the next guest.

As the card play began the "maid" retired, and a few minutes later the guest of honor, Mrs. Fleckenstein, entered the room in her party gown. There was a gasp of admiring surprise as the "maid" of a few moments before was recognized.

Stevenson's Grandson Finds Treasure

SAN FRANCISCO.—When little Louis Osborne, the eight-year-old son of Lloyd Osborne, novelist and stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson, armed himself with his midget shovel and went out on a sand hill near his home here to dig a few days ago he had visions of finding treasure. This is not an unusual thing for the lad, for he has not heard his father's illustrious stepfather talked about without getting some spirit of adventure of the author of "Treasure Island" fixed in his mind.

So while Louis dug he hummed "Sixteen Men on a Dead Man's Chest, Yo Ho! Ho! and a Bottle of Rum."

The lad stopped digging because his shovel had encountered an obstruction. Tested carefully the thing that resisted proved to be metal. Then Louis dug more furiously than ever.

In a few moments he unearthed a metal box. And, sure enough, it contained treasure. Opening it hastily, the boy found 2,600 shares of valuable stock, deeds to city property, other valuable papers and several empty ring boxes.

Of course, the boy did not realize the value of the property, but he knew the papers must be worth a great deal or they would not have been placed in such a secure box. So he hastily carried his find to his mother, who turned the property over to the police.

Praises Traits of His Dog in Rhyme

CHICAGO.—The muse of poesy was invoked recently by Isadore Herman on behalf of his dog Rover, who had gotten into trouble through carelessly inserting his teeth in the leg of little Israel Stern, son of Eli Stern, a neighbor.

Stern, on behalf of little Israel, filed suit in the municipal court against Herman, asking $1,000 damages for the punctures which Rover inflicted on his son's leg. Herman, in response to Stern's complaint, came back with the following petition to the court:

"Defendant denies that said dog is or was of a savage disposition or a vicious temper, not even in dog days, but, on the contrary, defendant avers that said Rover has always borne a good reputation among his neighbors, pals and associates in the community in which he resides for being a peaceful, quiet and law-abiding canine, always kind to his friends and faithful to his master. The defendant further avers that the dog is a great home body and is always at home at night."

The following lines in the bill express the attachment the defendant feels toward his dog Rover:

I like to see a little dog
 Ad pat him on the head.
So prettily he wags his tail
 Whenever he is fed.
Some little dogs are very good
 And some are useful, too.
And do you know that they will mind
 What they are bid to do?

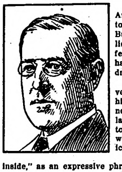
"The defendant therefore prays," continues the bill, "that this honorable court will spare both dog and defendant from any decree which would in any way interfere with the long relationship heretofore existing between the defendant and his dog Rover."

How About It?

I fear I really am, alas,
 A trifle green.
In making hay, do they run grass
 Through a machine?

WHO'S WHO—AND WHY

DR. WILSON FOR GOVERNOR



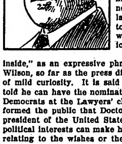
That the scholar in politics is to be a factor in American public life has been prophesied, and to some degree exemplified, for several years. But for the first time in the history of the republic the head of a leading university has been offered the nomination for governor of a state and has signified his willingness to become the candidate.

Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, is both a scholar and a politician, in the higher sense of the latter word. He knows life not only from books, but he has been a practising lawyer, and in various ways has come more into touch with the great public of working men and women, probably, than any other head of an American institution of learning.

To the observer of politics who is not "on the inside," as an expressive phrase puts it, the proposed nomination of Doctor Wilson, so far as the press dispatches have reported it, may be a provocative of mild curiosity. It is said in the dispatches that Doctor Wilson has been told he can have the nomination, by "a dozen or more prominent New Jersey Democrats at the Lawyers' club in Manhattan." A previous dispatch has informed the public that Doctor Wilson is to be the Democratic candidate for president of the United States in 1912, "if a combination of Wall street and political interests can make him so." In both announcements there is nothing relating to the wishes or the feelings of the great common people who are supposed to compose the Democratic party. Yet the selection of President Wilson very possibly may meet the enthusiastic approval of the voters of the Democratic party, when the question of fitness is considered.

President Wilson's strongest interests, it is said by those who know him well, are in government and politics. This, perhaps, is natural to him as a Virginian, for that commonwealth has been the mother of statesmen since the foundation of the republic. In college debates and essays he showed his bent early. He learned early also the value of being a good public speaker, and assiduously practised until he became a ready debater and an accomplished orator. Later he learned to speak with grace and fluency on post-prandial occasions.

IS FATHER OF AVIATION



The real father of aviation is Octave Chanute, an engineer of distinction, who is now in Paris, after having submitted to a serious operation. He has had an interesting career. Born in Paris in 1832, he came to this country with his father in 1839 and studied engineering. His first and the most important appointment that he ever received was that of chief engineer of the Elevated Railroad Company of New York, founded in 1865.

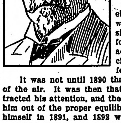
Mr. Chanute drew up the plans of the famous elevateds up Third, Sixth and Ninth avenues, which, at their opening to traffic in 1875, were considered marvels of engineering skill, and which, for the last 35 years, have been of incalculable advantage to the uptown population of New York city. This vast enterprise took up all his time for ten years.

It was not until 1890 that his thoughts were directed toward navigation of the air. It was then that the experiments of Lilienthal and Vercher attracted his attention, and the monoplane gliders which they used appeared to him out of the proper equilibrium. He thereupon set to work experimenting, himself in 1891, and 1892 with his son.

Thus at the age of sixty, in company with his son, he began to practise flying without a motor. Later on, of course, it was realized that light motors were absolutely necessary.

Chanute, who was then well advanced in years—he is now 78—tired of the experimental work and turned over his apparatus to the Wright brothers. They followed along the lines he had laid down and he kept in touch with their work constantly. It was to his early experiments and afterwards through his advice that they succeeded in making a flying machine—the first which ever made a free flight with a passenger.

BRAZIL'S PRESIDENT HERE

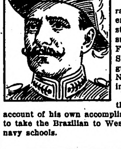


The visit of President-Elect Hermes Fonesca of Brazil to this country affords an opportunity, according to American diplomats, for solidifying the friendly relations now existing between the two countries.

The program for his entertainment, as arranged by Chargo d'Affaires Silva of the Brazilian embassy in Washington and representatives of the state department, included a visit to Beverly, the summer home of President Taft and to Valley Forge, Pa., the summer home of Secretary of State Knox. Receptions in honor of the distinguished visitor were placed on the program for New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Washington and Pittsburg.

It was the desire of the nation's guest to study the enterprises of these and other big cities. On account of his own accomplishments in military organization it was planned to take the Brazilian to West Point and Annapolis to inspect the army and navy schools.

MAJ. CARSON GOES ABROAD

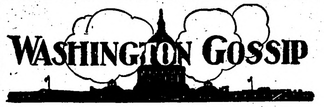


Maj. John M. Carson, chief of the bureau of manufactures of the department of commerce and labor, who has been selected to go abroad to look into the general trade conditions and opportunities for American manufactures, up to the time of his appointment as chief of the bureau of manufactures in 1902 by President Roosevelt, was one of the ablest newspaper men of the Washington contingent and chief of the Washington bureau, created after the consolidation of the Philadelphia Times and the Philadelphia Ledger.

He was the first president and one of the founders of the Gridiron club and again its president in 1905. He is also a member of the Army and Navy club and the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He began his newspaper career as a "devil" in a printing office in his teens and afterward became a compositor. Later he served as a newspaper reporter.

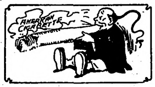
From May, 1861, until June, 1864, he was an officer of the Twenty-seventh Pennsylvania regiment. After the war he resumed newspaper work in Philadelphia until 1873, when he became night editor of the National Republican, in this city. In 1874 he established a connection with the New York Times and the Philadelphia Ledger as their correspondent in Washington.

In 1877 he became chief of the Philadelphia Times bureau, and remained in that position until 1882, when he again became the manager of the Philadelphia Ledger bureau, which position he held until the consolidation of the two papers in 1902, when he became chief of the Washington bureau.



WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Chinese Take to Smoking Cigarettes



WASHINGTON. — America has taught the people of the Chinese empire to smoke cigarettes. In a report to this government on foreign trade by Consul General Charles Denby of Vienna, in which he described the class of foreign markets which may be created by American enterprise, and then supplied the consul general says:

"One of the most conspicuous examples of such a market is the demand for cigarettes in China. Ten years ago the cigarette was an article used in China by a small number of people, chiefly foreigners. The field attracted the attention of a group of American manufacturers who examined into it and decided to introduce the cigarette to the Chinese people by American methods. The result is that now the cigarette is popular throughout the empire."

The international opium conference to be held at The Hague next fall will have a very general representation of the powers, according to the latest information reaching the state department.

In reporting to this government on opportunities in Malaysia for rubber-growing enterprises, Consul General James T. Dubois at Singapore, cited as follows an instance to show how the investing public is sometimes taken in in the exploitation of the rubber industry there:

An estate was sold to promoters for $150,000. The syndicate got an old planter who knew the estate to put a flotation value on it. He named $250,000. The promoters were not satisfied. Another expert examined and reported. His price was $350,000.

British and American gold was pouring into the country and the get-rich-quick spirit was born. Another expert was called in. He was told of the former valuations and that they were unsatisfactory. He valued the estate at $500,000.

Just at this time, rubber took a big jump in the London and New York markets and another expert was asked to report and he placed the flotation price at $750,000 and the syndicate in order to have it in round numbers made it an even $800,000 and floated it at this price.

Heads of Navy Are Annoyed By Women

NAVY DPT
LEMON

JOHN HAY had a saying that the ideal diplomatic service—if any government ever succeeds in having one—will be composed exclusively of unmarried men. Mr. Hay had no experience in naval matters, or he might have included the navy in his maxim.

There probably is no branch of the government service, the Washington Post says, where petticoat influence is so strong as in the navy. Ask any ex-secretary of the navy about it and he will tell you how the navy women in a thousand different ways, sometimes unconsciously and occasionally deliberately, annoy the navy department. He will tell you how they scheme to obtain desirable posts of duty for their husbands or sons and how they annoy the department with requests for a change of orders when their husbands are transferred from an easy job in Washington to sea duty on the Asiatic station or some other far-away tropical post. The recent row at the Boston navy yard, which culminated in the court-martial of two officers, illustrates the prominent part women play in navy circles.

Almost everybody knows of the mutual ill feeling existing between the navy women and the department. Every once in a while something happens to widen this breach. Only a few days ago Ensign Charles M. Austin, son of Representative Richard W. Austin of Tennessee, was deprived of an especially desirable berth by the navy department merely because he got married. He had been detached from the dispatch boat Dolphin at the Washington navy yard and ordered to Japan for duty as a student attache at the American embassy at Tokyo for the purpose of studying the Japanese language. On the way to his new post of duty he stopped at his former home in Tennessee and was married to a girl he had known for many years.

This was too much for the unromantic departmental authorities, who suddenly decided that a married ensign would not make as good a student of the Japanese language as a bachelor. Accordingly his orders were revoked and instead of spending his honeymoon in Tokyo he will have less interesting service at the naval training station on the Pacific coast. He will, however, have his wife.

Sad Red Men Must Ride on the Wagon

WATER WAGON

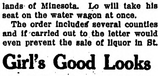
POOR Lo has suffered many privations at the hands of the national government in the process of civilizing him, but the hardest blow yet must be no more "fire water" sold on the ceded lands of Minesota. Lo will take his seat on the water wagon at once.

The order includes several counties and if carried out to the letter would even prevent the sale of liquor in St. Paul and Minneapolis, which stand on ceded lands.

Under state laws the counties embraced in the order—Becker, Cass, Clay, Hubbard, Mahnomen, Norman, Beltrami, Itasca, Polk, Clear Water, Red Lake, Crow Wing, Wadene and Ottertail—have enjoyed the license system of the state and Lo, who dearly loves his fire water, has been able to procure it without restriction. By the new order he will have to go dry.

The provisions of the treaties by which the lands were ceded prohibit the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the whole northern part of the state, except by consent of congress or the president, but up to the present time the provisions have not been enforced.

Girl's Good Looks Are a Bar to Work



AFTER losing four positions within a year just because of her beauty, Mary Todd has left Washington and will try her fortune elsewhere. Miss Todd set out to be a stenographer. Her employer got mixed up in his dictation and included phrases that could not have been part of the correspondence. As a shopgirl the floorwalkers strolled too often near her counter. As a milliner she aroused the envy and jealousy of customers.

Miss Todd has been living in Georgetown for a little more than a year. She came here from a small Pennsylvania town, well equipped to work, with money enough to wait until a reasonably good position was open to her.

"Yes," she said, half-angry and half-amused, "I have been overwhelmed with offers of marriage as well as of employment. But these offers do not appeal to me. Most men forget that I have my own sweetheart, and if I were inclined to consider a second time it seems that mine should be the privilege of inviting his attentions without having them thrust upon me.

"At first I did not take such things seriously, but since then I have known other girls who have shared the same fate, merely because they are more beautiful than their colleagues.

"I have worked in offices where there were 17 girls, and by the end of the third week I was embarrassed by repeated offers of company, pleasures and the like by various men in the office. This gave rise to some bitter passes between some of the other girls and myself.

"I hope to be married by the autumn of next year, but until then I wish to do something."

The prophet often goes astray
 And comes to woe;
But sometimes gets a chance to say:
 "I told you so."

THE SUNBEAM.
W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

COOLING AS EASY AS HEATING.

Now, when one comes to think of it, there is difficulty in understanding why humanity has always realized the need of mitigating the severity of climate that takes the form of cold, but for the most part still assumes the impossibility of doing anything to temper heat, from which we suffer almost as much, says New York Times. At less expense than that by which houses are warmed in winter they can be cooled in summer, and, while the winter heating, thanks to our strange refusal to learn the art of ventilation, involves the creation of conditions injurious to health, those which summer cooling would establish would probably be in every way beneficial to us. At any rate, the thing is perfectly practicable. Of course, if adopted, it would add to the cost of living, but it would also increase the general stock of available energy, which would mean an increase of earning power to a more than compensating degree. Not much of a refrigeration plant would be required to bring the air of a bedroom to a temperature in which sleep would be refreshing, instead of impossible or exhausting, and the wonder is that the rich and the well-to-do, at least, do not generally, instead of hardly at all, utilize a benefit which science is ready to give them for much less money than they pay for a thousand other smaller luxuries and conveniences.

The first passenger airship to be operated for regular transportation purposes has been put in commission in Germany. It is a Zeppelin dirigible and will run over a course that will include Friedrichshafen, Stuttgart, Mannheim, Cologne and Dusseldorf. At first Count Zeppelin himself, inventor of the machine which bears his name, will be at the helm. The airship has capacity for twenty passengers, for whom accommodations as luxurious as those of a Pullman palace car have been provided. As the enterprise is backed by a shipping company of undoubted standing there seems to be ample faith in the success of the enterprise and belief that aerial navigation has come to stay.

Finland, in so far as the autonomy enjoyed heretofore is concerned, has practically been wiped off the map, the Douma first and the Council of the Empire finally having enacted the law which turns over the administration of Finnish affairs to representatives of the czar. Finland was formerly a grand duchy, and, though under Russian control, had a large measure of self-government. The Finns are a sturdy, self-reliant and intelligent people and have made great progress in education and otherwise. But the policy of Russia is to centralize control at St. Petersburg, and the disposition of Finland is the latest exemplification of the existing tendency.

When farmers turn to "bulling" wheat the speculators in the grain exchanges hardly know where they are at. There seems to be something like a combined effort on the part of the big wheat-growers of the northwest to keep up prices, says Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. Delegations by trainloads are going to some of the large trading-centers like St. Paul and dealing in heavy lots. Some of these farmers are rated as millionaires, having made fortunes in grain growing, and they also seem to understand the bull and bear business. At least the professional speculators in the "wheat pit" find the tillers of the soil foemen worthy of their steel.

Before you begin to criticise aviation meets for not panning out as per promises, please kindly remember how many races for the America's cup have been boring and inconclusive drifting matches. Both aviation and yachting depend on the wind, and the wind is mighty uncertain.

A Michigan farmer who separated from his wife and then became her hired man is suing her for $500 back pay. Perhaps he could get her to settle out of court if he would agree to take $499.

Western bankers report that the farmers of Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa have spent $15,000,000 for automobiles. There must be something in that story after all.

Kidnaping is still prevalient despite the discouragements of heavy sentences. The only remedy seems to increase the penalty.

The price of cigarettes is going up, but this of course won't bother the man who always got his from the other fellow.

When airships become so thick that they shut out sunlight then, indeed, will aviation be well established.

LIND NOMINATED

BOISTEROUS CONVENTION AT MINNEAPOLIS SELECTS EX-GOVERNOR BY ACCLAMATION.

HE STILL REFUSES HONOR

Sentiment of Delegates is Overwhelmingly Against the Temperance Proposition.—Hon. Jos. W. Folk and Congressman Hammond Speak.

THE TICKET.

Governor—John Lind, Minneapolis.

Lieutenant Governor — M. C. Tifft, Long Prairie.

Secretary of State—Fred W. Johnson, New Ulm.

Treasurer—Charles F. Ladner, St. Cloud.

Auditor—T. J. Meighen, Preston.

Attorney General—J. M. Freeman, Olivia.

Clerk of the Supreme Court—Fred E. Wheaton, Minneapolis.

Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—J. C. Tracy, Rochester.

Justices of the Supreme Court—Justice T. D. O'Brien, St. Paul, and Judge A. H. Snow, Winona, for the terms beginning Jan. 1, 1911; and Justice C. L. Brown, Morris, and Judge P. E. Brown, Luverne, the Republican nominees, for the terms beginning Jan. 1, 1912.

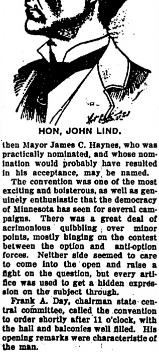
Minneapolis.—Hon. John Lind was nominated by acclimation to lead the Minnesotae democrats in the coming campaign. County option was laid firmly, and none too gently on the table.

Mr. Lind still persists in his determination to decline the nomination. In a telegram to his partner, Waldron M. Jerome, addressed with the intention of having it read before the convention, but received after the convention adjourned, John Lind asked the convention be advised he would not run, and in a reported statement, given out at Everett, Wash., Mr. Lind is again quoted as stating positively that he will do as he had said, and will decline the nomination.

After nominating a man who said he would not take the nomination, and who is still reported as persisting in that statement, the Democrats are in the position of compelling an acceptance from John Lind or of filling the vacancy caused by his declination through action of the state central committee, over which Frank A. Day is expected again to preside.

Mayor Haynes in Reserve.

If Mr. Lind persists in his refusal, then Mayor James C. Haynes, who was practically nominated, and whose nomination would probably have resulted in his acceptance, may be named.



HON. JOHN LIND.

The convention was one of the most exciting and boisterous, as well as genuinely enthusiastic that the democracy of Minnesota has seen for several campaigns. There was a great deal of acrimonious quibbling over minor points, mostly hinging on the contest between the option and anti-option forces. Neither side seemed to care to come into the open and raise a fight on the question, but every artifice was used to get a hidden expression on the subject through.

Frank A. Day, chairman state central committee, called the convention to order shortly after 11 o'clock, with the hall and balconies well filled. His opening remarks were characteristic of the man.

"This is a good old-fashioned, free-for-all, fighting Democratic convention," said Mr. Day. "A convention without a boss, without a steam roller, a slate, or prearranged committees.

"This is a convention of free and independent men, who paid 2 cents out of their own pockets for every mile they traveled—and if it hadn't been for a Democratic governor, they would have had to pay three."

Here followed a eulogy of John A. Johnson.

"Even the Republicans refuse to cheer the name of W. H. Taft.

"Republican papers are united in denouncing the iniquity of Cannon, Aldrich, Ballinger, Tawney and Wickersham.

"Adolph O. Eberhart wants to be governor so badly that he is willing to accept the honor and let somebody else run the office."

Hammond Introduced.

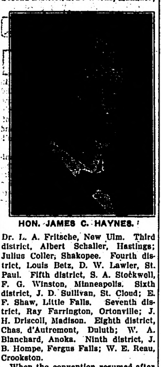
"I shall usurp power of the convention by naming as temporary chairman W. S. Hammond, Democratic congressman in the Republican 2nd district," said Mr. Day, in closing. The convention cheered enthusiastically.

Escorted to the platform by M. C. Brady, Hennepin County; Richard T. O'Connor, St. Paul, and Col. A. C. Weiss, Duluth, Congressman Hammond was enthusiastically cheered and his speech, which he read, was received with frequent applause.

Committee on Resolutions.

Following Mr. Hammond's remarks, the Committee on Resolutions was announced as follows:

At large, Martin O'Brien, Crookston; A. C. Weiss, Duluth; Fred B. Lynch, St. Paul. First district, L. L. Brown, Winona; J. T. Meighan, Albert Lea. Second District, S. D. Works, Mankato; Dr. L. A. Fritsche, New Ulm. Third district, Albert Schaller, Hastings; Julius Coller, Shakopee. Fourth district, Louis Betz, D. W. Lawler, St. Paul. Fifth district, S. A. Stockwell, F. G. Winston, Minneapolis. Sixth district, J. D. Sullivan, St. Cloud; E. F. Shaw, Little Falls. Seventh district, Ray Farrington, Ortonville; J. H. Driscoll, Madison. Eighth district, Chas. d'Autremont, Duluth; W. A. Blanchard, Anoka. Ninth district, J. B. Hompe, Fergus Falls; W. E. Reau, Crookston.



HON. JAMES C. HAYNES.

When the convention resumed after luncheon, M. J. Daly, Perham, was made permanent chairman. Organization was completed, and then Z. H. Austin introduced the resolution he had sprung on the Hennepin county convention last week, declaring Lind the foremost citizen of Minnesota, etc., but recording the convention as preferring not to insist on his nomination. Uproar greeted this, and it was blocked for the time being, at least.

County option was definitely excluded from the platform in the resolutions committee. S. A. Stockwell introduced resolutions pledging the party for fair consideration of a county option measure in the legilature but as this was rejected, he put through a substitute pledging the party to work for a constitutional amendment providing for adoption of initiative, referendum, and recall, as the most democratic way to deal with moral and economic issues. Stockwell also came within an ace of getting through a single tax plank.

Confusion in the Convention.

W. L. Comstock of Blue Earth moved that the convention proceed to nominate candidates. Chairman Daly seemed confused, and despite points of order he held the motion to be regular in every respect.

In an instant pandemonium broke loose and for an hour confusion reigned, the chairman being overwhelmed with motions and countermotions and cries for points of order. When the situation had become so involved that few in the house knew what was going on, Richard O'Connor, of St. Paul, appeared with ex-Governor Joseph W. Polk, of St. Louis, who happened to be in the city and the chair seized the opportunity to end the confusion by introducing Mr. Folk. The gentleman from Missouri spoke for thirty minutes, reviewing briefly the past and present of the party and predicting a general victory in Minnesota this fall. He ended by promising to come and stump the state during the campaign.

First Test Vote on Option.

A roll call vote was taken on the proposition to nominate the ticket before presenting the resolutions, but this was lost 544 to 501, amid great confusion. The county option fight was thrown onto the floor of the convention then by Prof. Frank W. Anderson of the State University by his attempting to introduce the Bryan resolution of the Nebraska convention as follows:

"We favor county option as the best method of dealing with the liquor question."

Mr. Anderson moved the adoption of the amendment, but a motion to refer it back to the resolutions committee was carried by an overwhelming vote, only about seventy-five delegates, rising to oppose the motion. Mr. Anderson hurried to the stage, handed his resolutions to Chairman Works and demanded a report, Chairman Works called the committee to the platform where a motion was made and unanimously carried to lay it on the table. The committee immediately reported on the death of the resolution.

The report of the resolutions committee was then adopted by a rising vote.

The Ticket Nominated.

The nomination of a candidate for governor was declared in order and on roll call of counties, Aitkin waived for St. Louis and Hon. John Jenswald of Duluth took the stage and in a ten-minute speech in which he reviewed the long connection of his candidate with the fortunes of Minnesota, he placed the name of John Lind before the convention. Four or five counties following seconded the nomination, when a motion was carried with a whoop to make it by acclamation, and in a roar of enthusiasm, even greater than that which sounded the knell of county option, Mr. Lind was named the party's leader. The rest of the ticket went through with a rush.

THE PLATFORM.

The Democratic party of Minnesota in biennial convention assembled, strong in its consciousness of faithful service rendered to the people, encouraged by an awakening public conscience which presages the return of the party to control of the federal government, solicits for its candidates the suffrages of all friends of good and popular government.

We call upon the fair-minded people of this commonwealth to rebuke sternly the base and cynical deception practised upon them, in common with all the people of the United States, by the Republican party in causing the enactment of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, in defiance of the universally made promise of that party to revise the tariff downwards. If the people will permit such political faithlessness to go unpunished our government will become utterly irresponsible. We denounce the present tariff law as a repudiation of the principles of protection, as laid down by the Republican national convention of 1908. Instead of its schedules imposing tariff taxes corresponding to the difference of the cost of production at home and abroad, hundreds of them impose a tax greater than the entire cost of production at home or abroad. There grinding taxes were raised or renewed at a time when the masses were staggering under an appaling increase in the cost of living, brought about largely by the malign influence of a long established protective tariff system. In addition to the excessive taxes levied through that system, it has corrupted the economy of the nation, encouraged and propagated graft and prolifically littered public and private extravagance and waste. We call upon the people of Minnesota to register this fall their emphatic denunciation of a system fundamentally wrong, both morally and politically, which, as they now know by grievous experience will never be reformed by its friends.

President Taft "Handed One."

We deplore the weakness and timidity of President Taft who, with his own campaign promises still fresh, but dominated by the predatory interests, weakly failed to use the tremendous forces of his high office to force a recreant congressional majority to do its solemn duty of tariff reform. No subsequent effort to fulfill party promises can atone for this supreme failure or restore public confidence.

We condemn the national administration for its initial effort to prevent the conservation of natural resources, and have nothing but contempt for its insincere efforts to appear to support conservation after public disapproval of its course was manifested. The appointment and retention of Ballinger, the attorney for the raiders of public property, as secretary of the department charged with the administration of that property, is a national scandal. The discharge of Gifford Pinchot, the faithful guardian of that property, is a national crime.

National administration by a party whose cardinal creed involves the exploitation of the common people for the benefit of the favored few is necessarily wasteful and no relief from national extravagance, oppressive taxes and ruinous cost of living can be expected until government is placed in the hands of the party of the people.

We commend the Minnesota insurgent Republican representatives in congress who futilely voted against the tariff law, but cite their defeat as irrefutable proof that no tariff good can come out of the Republican party.

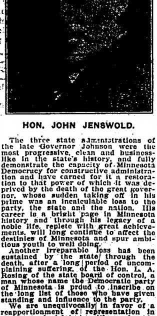
We declare that those members of the delegation who so faithfully supported Cannon and Cannonism knowingly misrepresented their constituents and should be retired from congress by the action of their own partisans, as, failing which, they will inevitably be by the people.

Congressman Hammond Indorsed.

We commend and applaud the wise, faithful, consistent, statesmanlike course of the Hon. W. S. Hammond, Minnesota's distinguished Democratic representative in congress, and declare that he has generously earned re-election.

We favor the direct election of United States senators by the people.

We favor federal income tax law.



HON. JOHN JENSWOLD.

The three state administrations of the late Governor Johnson were the most progressive, clean and business-like in the state's history, and fully demonstrate the capacity of Minnesota Democracy for constructive administration and have earned for it a restoration to that power of which it was deprived by the death of the great governor, whose sudden taking off in his prime was an incalculable loss to the party, the state and the nation. His career is a bright page in Minnesota history and through his legacy of a noble life, replete with great achievements, will long continue to affect the destinies of Minnesota and spur ambitious youth to well doing.

Another irreparable loss has been sustained by the state through the death, after a long period of uncomplaining suffering, of the Hon. L. A. Rosing of the state board of control, a man whose name the Democratic party of Minnesota is proud to inscribe on the long list of those who have given standing and influence to the party.

We are unequivocally in favor of a reapportionment of representation in the state legislature with a view to making the composition of that body a true reflection of the distribution of population.

Conservation Commended.

Conservation of natural resources for the benefit of all the people is a problem of the first importance. The state of Minnesota is in a position to accomplish much in this direction by reason of its large ownership of land, timber and minerals and we recommend as a first step in this direction the inauguration of a prudent and business-like administration of the state's publicly owned natural resources, to be brought about by a centralization and systematic organization of the various offices now charged with their direction along the lines recommended and urged by Governor Johnson upon an unwilling legislature. Closely allied to conservation of natural resources are the works of drainage and the construction of good roads. We favor a constitutional amendment by which a one (1) mill tax may be levied for the construction of roads and bridges.

We point with pride to the record made by the bureau of labor under the administration of Democratic officials, in which the rights and interests of labor have been jealously guarded.

Never before in the history of this state has such careful attention been given to every phase of the life of the working classes. The child labor law has been vigorously enforced. Factory and workshop inspection has been brought to a high standard of efficiency, and as a result hundreds of accidents which have yearly crippled as many workingmen have been prevented.

Thousands of dollars extorted from common laborers under the pretense that it was charged for interpreters' fees, has been returned to the men through the efforts of the bureau of labor.

Regarding the Working Man.

Workingmen defrauded out of their wages have been given relief and support and their wages have been collected for them.

The women wage earners have been given attention and protection such as they never had before, and many other helpful services have been rendered to the working classes by a sympathetic Democratic administration.

We pledge the working classes of Minnesota that if the Democratic party is placed in control of the government of this state, we will correct the defects in existing laws which do not now adequately protect their health, their limbs and their lives. We will strengthen the child labor law so that it can be more easily enforced, and we will enact such laws as will better protect all men and women wage earners in following their daily tasks.

We stand committed to the enactment of a Workingmen's Compensation Act that will justly and fairly compensate without delay every person injured in industry irrespective of whether he assumed the risk, contributed to negligence, or, suffered injury through the act of a fellow servant. It was the administration of the late Governor Johnson which inaugurated the movement of this kind of legislation, and we pledge our party to bring it to a successful termination, assuring both capital and labor of our desire to do each exact justice.

Vicious Legislation Deplored.

The aggressions of monopolistic and lawless wealth are fast becoming a menace to the state and nation. Fostered and encouraged by vicious legislation which gives them undue advantage, these interests depress the price to the producer, while unwarrantedly raising the cost of living to the consumer. Through them the integrity of our courts are threatened and our legislatures are debauched; the heritage of the people is filched from them to further enrich those who have already too much; they seek to control our conventions, dominate our politics and impoverish the people. The Democratic party is unalterably opposed to these interests and would take from them undeserved advantage given by law.

We are in favor of such measures as will make public education truly Democratic, practical and efficient, and offer opportunities for every boy and girl in Minnesota to receive the full measure of benefit for which the public school are established.

We strongly favor the establishment of practical and progresive courses in agriculture, manual training and domestic science in all state high and graded schools. We recognize the demand for the study of agriculture in the rural schools, and pledge our support to such measures as will raise the rural school to a higher plane of efficiency, and make it the means of training the youth for useful service and intelligent interest in profitable farming.

On Rural School Consolidation.

We favor the granting of special state aid to encourage consolidation of rural schools, thus placing them upon a broader basis, where their work may result in higher conceptions of the equality of all classes, whether agricultural, commercial, industrial, or professional.

We recognize the duty which rests upon the university and state normal schools to make added provision for training teachers for the practical work which is demanded of the public schools.

Provision should be made for closer supervision of rural schools, for an educational standard for the office of county superintendent, and a more liberal compensation for their services.

We favor the levying of a tax on state lands for the purpose of local improvements.

We hold that all questions affecting the moral, political and economic welfare of the people should be directly subject to the conscience and will of the people.

To this end we demand of the incoming state legislature, regardless of the political affiliation of its members, that it submit to the voters of this state at the next general election a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative, the referendum and the recall.

We hold that with this instrument of fundamental democracy at their command, the people can settle all questions in accordance with the will of the majority.

We pledge the nominees of this convention and the Democratic members of the state legislature to do their utmost in support of this policy.

THE KEYNOTE ADDRESS.

Mr. Hammond delivered the keynote speech of the Democratic state convention in Minneapolis today, and arraigned Taft's tariff commission in terms no less scathing than his attack on the Payne-Aldrich tariff. He paid a fine tribute to the memory of Gov. John A. Johnson, and then launched directly into the tariff. He said:

"Because of excessive rates and inequalities the demand for a revision and rearrangement of the tariff schedule has come from the entire country, and in the last election both prominent political parties in their platforms promised the people that following the election there should be a genuine revision of them. The people supposed, and had a right to suppose from the statements made by the candidates of the political parties and the platform pledges, that the excesses would be removed, the inequalities eliminated and the tariff rates substantially reduced.

Republicans' Answer.

"In March following the general election a special session of congress was called for the express purpose of carrying out these platform pledges and making a proper revision of the tariff. From the 15th of March to the 5th of August congress remained in session and labored and then presented to the people of the United States, in answer to their demand for a genuine tariff revision, and in redemption of the promises of such revision, the most unpopular legislative act of the last quarter of a century—the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. The most excessive rates were not removed. The inequalities were not eliminated. The party promises were not kept. The most vicious schedule in the bill, the woolen schedule, was not touched. The legislation itself was accomplished by trades and bargains among those who were to be beneficiaries under it. The interests of the people were ignored and the proceedings leading to the passage of the act were little more than a scramble on the part of bounty hunters to get the best of one another in the fixing of the rates. They could stand together, however, when it came to getting the best of the consumers of the country.

A Republican Law.

"This law is a Republican law. It is named the Payne-Aldrich bill, Mr. Payne being the Republican leader of the house and Mr. Aldrich the Republican leader of the United States senate. It was heartily approved by Mr. Cannon, the Republican speaker of the house of representatives. It received the sanction of Mr. Sherman, the Republican vice president of the United States, and it has been declared to be the "best tariff bill ever enacted" by Mr. Taft, the president of the United States and the leader of the Republican party.

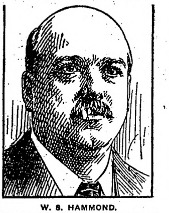
"It is true that the bill was so rank that a number of Republicans refused to vote for it. That does not make it any the less a Republican bill. It only goes to show that it required Republicans with the strongest kind of stomachs to carry it through. The Democrats and a number of the Republicans known as insurgents voted against it and individually those Republicans cannot be held responsible for the law, but the organization and the Republican party as it was then and is now constituted must be charged with the responsibility of this enactment, and must stand or fall in with the coming campaign upon the judgment of the electors upon that piece of legislation.

Tariff Commission.

"Fearing the indignation of a people aroused by the repudiation of its promises to them, the Republican organization sought to allay the rising storm of wrath by providing for the so-called tariff commission. Do not for a moment fancy that a bill was introduced to provide for this tariff commission. If that course had been taken the measure would have been subjected to the scrutiny of a committee composed of Republicans and Democrats in the house of representatives and a similar committee in the United States senate. It would have been subject to amendment also and might have been made an effective and useful law. It was not a bill. It was a clause incorporated in an appropriation bill providing a large sum of money to be spent by a number of gentlemen appointed by the president to investigate the tariff question and report to him, advising him of the result of their study and research.

Need of Information.

"After reading Mr. Taft's declaration that in his opinion the Payne-Aldrich bill is the best tariff bill ever enacted in this country, one is forced to admit that there is apparent need that he have a great deal more information about tariff questions before venturing another opinion. But $250,000 is a pretty large sum to expend for the education of the president. The so-called commission has the power to investigate, but not the power to act. It has the power to study rates, but not to change them. It has the power to discover defects, but not to remedy them. But it is said to be a step in the right direction. It is not even that. If the board would make a fair and impartial and careful investigation of the tariff rates and tariff conditions, and submit its report to the president, and through him to congress and the people, showing conditions and stating facts relevant to the matter, the information would be of value some time. But in order that credit be given such report it ought to be made clear that a fair investigation preceded it and by men unprejudiced by preconceived notions or personal interests.



W. S. HAMMOND.
Congressman from Second District of Minnesota.

Why Not Non-Partisan

"If it were intended to take a step in the right direction why not have this investigating board a non-partisan board? As the measure was introduced, a provision of the sundry civil appropriation bill, when an attempt was made to provide that the commission be non-partisan, objection was raised that such amendment was out of order, and, of course, the objection was sustained. The effect of introducing it in the way it was introduced, instead of by original bill, was to deprive the house and the senate of the opportunity of amending it so as to make the board non-partisan and thus bring about a fair and unprejudiced investigation of the tariff schedules.

"Inasmuch as there has been no revision of the tariff that will square with the promises made to the people of this country during the last campaign, and which, by their votes, the electors directed should be done, it is now the duty of congress to revise it in accordance with the mandate of the people; removing, as far as possible, the inequalities in rates and giving consideration to the consuming public by substantially cutting down the excessive charges contained in the present law. A genuine, honest, straightforward, downward revision of the tariff in the interest of the consuming many as well as the manufacturing few. If, in connection with such revision, it seems best to establish a tariff board, whether that commission or board be empowered to change rates or simply to gather information, it should be a non-partisan body, and its reports should be made to congress so that all may know the results of the investigation, and so that these results may go to the reading and thinking people of the country uncensored, unabridged and unamended, and not changed or held back because of political necessities. The establishment of such a board or commission will be a step in the right direction; but the present board, or so-called commission, was not born of an earnest desire to learn more of the intricacies of the tariff situation, but of the hope that it will answer to relieve a desperate political situation."

FAIL TO CLIMB MT. McKINLEY.

Another Party Declares Dr. Cook as Imposter.

Seward, Alaska.—The Portland, Oregonian-New York Herald Mt. McKinley expedition, headed by C. E. Rusk, of Chelah, Wash., which sailed from Seattle on the revenue cutter Tacoma, April 24, and which followed Dr. Cook's route up the Susitna and Chulitna rivers, failed to reach the summit of Mount McKinley, and is now on the way back to Seward.

The climbers ascended the peak alleged by Cook to be the summit, but it is ten miles from the topmost point of the mountain. The Rusk party was unable to see the flag which the Thomas Lloyd party is alleged to have planted on the summit last April and the members are disinclined to believe the story told by the Fairbanks expedition.

Spring The Only Time.

It is the contention of Thomas Lloyd and other Alaskan mountaineers that Mount McKinley cannot be climbed from the Cook Inlet side at any time, and that it can be ascended from the Fairbanks side only in the spring, while the snow is hard and the crevises in the great glaciers are bridged by the snow. In the summer the crevices are perilous.

The disappearance of the flag from the summit of Mount McKinley was to have been expected, they say, on account of the high wind that sweeps over the peak.

Asahel Curtis, of Seattle, a celebrated mountain climber of Seattle, had not expected any summer expedition to succeed. He says that Rusk has no superior as a mountaineer and if Rusk cannot succeed in summer no one can. Mr. Curtis believes Thomas Lloyd's story of the ascent, as do all the members of the Seattle Mountaineers' club. Lloyd is a wealthy man of high reputation and has made no effort to exploit his feat for financial gain.

Judge Geo. Baker Lake Dies.

Omaha, Neb.—Judge George Baker Lake, for many years a leading jurist in this state, died at his home here, aged 84 years.

AFTER PURE MILK

IMPORTANT DECISION RETURNED BY THE MINNEAPOLIS SUPREME COURT.

TUBERCULAR TEST HELD GOOD

Cities Are Given Unlimited Power to Regulate Their Milk Supply in the Interest of Public Health.

St. Paul. — The Minnesota State supreme court has handed down a decision sustaining the right of cities to demand pure milk.

The decision is that in the case of Ole B. Nelson, who represented the Seven Corners Milk Company, the Northeast Milk company, the North Minneapolis Milk company, the Bloomington Milk company, the Flour City Creamery company and the Star Creamery company. The case was brought by Nelson to determine whether an ordinance requiring herds supplying milk to the city creameries should be required to undergo the tuberculin test. At the trial in March an order was made declaring the ordinance valid, and an appeal was taken by Nelson to the supreme court.

Cities Given Vast Power.

The decision of the court was sweeping, declaring, in effect, that a city possesses power to adopt any means it deems expedient to safeguard its milk supply. The text of the opinion follows:

"An ordinance of the city of Minneapolis prescribing as a test of purity and wholesomeness of milk brought into the city for sale, that drawn from cows previously subjected to the tuberculin test and found free from disease, held not in conflict with the statutes of the state, and a valid police regulation. Following State vs. Nelson, 66 Minn., 166.

"The methods to be adopted to insure a supply of pure milk, and the standard by which the same shall be determined, is a legislative, and not a judicial question.

"An ordinance authorizing the summary seizure and destruction of milk not conforming to the standard fixed by law, is not violative of the constitutional rights of the citizen, nor a taking of property without due process of law.

MURDER AT WALKER.

Man Kills Another, Takes to the Woods, Found by Posse.

Walker.—Edward Lucia, a steamboat pilot on Leech lake, shot and killed James Boardwell, engineer at the Leech Lake Lumber company's new saw mill, with a 33 rifle, the shot taking effect in Boardwell's forehead, death being instantaneous.

Lucia's claim was that Boardwell and his stepson, Earl Hover, were making a white slave out of his 16-year-old daughter.

Arriving at the tent where Boardwell and the boy were together with Mrs. Boardwell, Lucia opened up on the man, firing three shots and then took to the woods back of the premises.

The village was at once aroused and men with guns at once organized themselves as a posse and commenced a search of the woods for Lucia who was found after half an hour by Robert Block, of St. Paul.

The shooting was evidently premeditated, as Lucia went to the place with a gun, and a woman heard him remark that he was going to shoot both the man and the stepson.

Lucia's daughter had been staying at the Boardwell home for some time and her father had had words with Boardwell on prior occasions regarding the girl staying there. The girl is exceedingly good looking and has a tinge of Indian blood in her veins, her mother being a half breed.

ENJOY A TRIP ON RAINY LAKE.

State Drainage Board Is Entertained by International Falls.

Fort Frances, Ontario. — Ditches which drain 65,000 acres of swamp and marsh lands were inspected by the state drainage board at an early hour Sunday morning. After the inspection the board and its guests went to International Falls where a day of entertainment was provided by the business men of that city.

A five-hour trip on Rainy Lake was part of the program. In the afternoon Governor Eberhart addressed a meeting at the opera house. A trip through the paper mills concluded the day's work.

Le Sueur. — The harvest is on and farmers say they will garner one of the greatest crops in the history of the country. The quality as well as quantity will greatly exceed that of last year, say the farmers.

MINNESOTA "DRYS" PLEASED.

Urge Indian Bureau to Remain Firm in State.

Washington, D. C. — The anti-saloon league of northwest Minnesota telegraphed its congratulations to the bureau of Indian affairs for its action in extending prohibition on the ceded Indian lands in that state adjacent to the Leech Lake and White Earth reservations.

The dispatch requested the officials to remain firm in their attitude on the subject.

ANDERSON OPPOSES TAWNEY.

First District Progessives Decide on Lanesboro Man.

Rochester.—Sidney A. Anderson, a young lawyer of Lanesboro, Fillmore county, will be the man to make the race for the Republican nomination for congressman of the First district against Congressman James A. Tawney. This is the result of the meeting of the executive committee of the First District Progressive league that met in conference upon the call of the chairman, Mr. Fraser. Seven counties in the First district were represented, about twenty-five being gathered to discuss the situation.

Various plans for conducting a hot campaign that would carry with it the principles of the progressive element of the Republican party were discussed. It was voted unanimously to ask Mr. Anderson to be the candidate and that gentleman practically gave his consent. Mr. Anderson addressed the meeting, and stated that he would not conduct a campaign on personal lines but along the lines of the progressive principles of the party. His speech was well received, and all present at the meeting voiced the opinion that they had found the Moses they have long been seeking.

A committee was appointed on resolutions and another one to draft a platform for the campaign. The meeting was an enthusiastic one and harmony prevailed throughout, the one object being to get a suitable candidate and pave the way for a clean campaign.

Among those present were: Senator H. A. Rovrud and O. N. Levang, of Lanesboro; A. C. Aaby, of Rock Dell; W. C. Mork, T. H. Kelly, H. F. Luers and E. K. Whiting, of Owatonna, Editor Nottage of the Kasson Republican; H. C. Stivers, of Dodge Center; William Richardson, Thomas Fraser, W. Fraser, Dr. F. R. Moss, of Rochester.

One of the members present at the meeting stated last night that it was the best meeting of its kind ever held, and that definite results had been accomplished. In his opinion the time was ripe for action, and if a campaign was conducted along the lines advocated by the meeting, there was no question of its success.

Another in an interview stated that it was hard to get the feeling of the public pulse, but by rubbing elbows with the voters it was evident that there was much dissatisfaction among the voters in the First district.

"We have a man now," says one, "who will carry the progressives in the district to victory at the primaries and at the polls."

MOORHEAD WANTS TO STAY WET

Argument Is That Revenue from 47 Saloons Is Principal Income.

Washington, D. C. — In response to a protest from a delegation of Minnesotans against the extension of the prohibition regulations of the bureau of Indian affairs to Moorhead, which is located on ceded Indian lands, Acting Secretary of the Interior Pierce has taken under advisement the question whether the department's recent action bringing the city within the prohibited territory shall be rescinded or modified.

The major of Moorhead, former Representative Comstock and a representative of the Brewers' association of Minnesota, asked the acting secretary to revoke the anti-liquor order in so far as it relates to Moorhead. The instructions forbid the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the territory adjacent to the White Earth and Leech Lake reservations in Minnesota in order to protect the Indians.

There are 47 saloons in Moorhead and the delegation informed Mr. Pierce that the revenue from their licenses was one of the principal sources of income of the city. The department promised to take the views of the delegation under consideration.

OIL SEIZURE WRIT DENIED.

Minnesota's Pure Food Law Is Upheld in Linseed Traffic Decision.

St. Paul, Minn. — Judge Amidon in the United tSates circuit court denied the motion for an injunction restraining the Minnesota state dairy and food commissioner from seizing blended linseed oil sold in this state by the American Linseed Oil company of Omaha. The hearing involved the question of constitutional rights, the plaintiff contending that the Minnesota statute was in violation of the United States constitution.

The court held that the company had not made a sufficient showing to warrant the court in declaring the Minnesota statute unconstitutional. Further consideration will be left for Further consideration will be left for state contended that the company sold adulterated oil in Minnesota with a view to deceiving the purchaser. The company contended that the present law was prohibitory as it permitted the sale of only technically pure oil, where there was a demand for adulterated oil from an economic standpoint, it being as useful as pure oil for many purposes.

DEBS IN HOSPITAL.

One Time Candidate for Presidency, Ill at Rochester.

Rochester, Minn. — Hon. Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader and at one time candidate for president of the United States, is in Rochester seeking medical treatment from the Mayo brothers. It is reported that his condition is serious, although the cause of his trouble cannot be learned and no one is allowed to see him. Mrs. Debs is with her husband.

DR. CRIPPEN CAUGHT

LONDON DENTIST AND TYPIST ARRESTED ABOARD THE LINER MONTROSE,

BY ENGLISH OFFICER INSP. DEW

Scotland Yard Sleuth Surprises "Rev. John Robinson" and His "Son." Both Deny the Murder.

Father Point, Quebec, Can. — Dr. Hawley Harven Crippen and Ethel Clare Le Neve, his stenographer, who fled from London, after the disappearance of Belle Elmore, the doctor's wife, were arrested here aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, at the command of Inspector Dew, of Scotland Yard.

The identification of the long sought fugitives on board the fog shrouded steamer by the English detective, who had raced across the Atlantic ahead of the Montrose, marked the culmination of one of the most sensational flights in recent criminal annals.

Accompany by two Canadian officers, he boarded the vessel and 15 minutes later both man and girl were locked in their state rooms, Crippen broken in spirit, but mentally relieved by the relaxed tension, the girl, garbed in boy's clothes, sobbing hysterically. They were no longer the "Rev. John Robinson and son," as booked from Antwerp on July 20.

After brief delay, the Montrose continued her 160 mile journey up the river towards Quebec, where jail awaited the pair.

Crippen is charged with the murder of an unknown woman, believed to have been his actress wife. The girl is held as an accessory. In charge of Inspector Dew they will be taken back to England for trial, on the Royal line steamship Royal George, leaving Quebec on Thursday next.

Shortly after 7:30 o'clock the Montrose pushed her nose through the fog and at 8:15 the pilot boat Eureka set out from shore. She carried a host of newspaper men and photographers and the more fortunate townspeople who were able to crowd aboard. But Inspector Dew was not among them. As a precaution he had embarked on the Eureka's small tender, accompanied by Chief McCarthy of the Quebec police and ex-Chief Denis of the same city.

All wore the garb of pilots and over the florid face Inspector Dew had pulled a pilot's vizored cap to hide his features from the man he sought. He did not wish Crippen to recognize him before he could approach and take advantage of the only avenue of escape—suicide.

Four sailors quickly rowed the tender alongside the Montrose and Dew and his companions stepped aboard.

Crippen was standing near the rail talking with Dr. Stuart, the ship's surgeon, and attempting to appear calm. But that he was nervous was indicated by his furtive glances and his remark to Dr. Stuart, "there are three pilots coming aboard," he said, nervously, "Isn't that unusual?"

The surgeon did not reply, but kept his eyes on the strangers who walked rapidly toward them.

"Crippen, I want you," said Inspector Dew, quietly, as he approached. The dentist recoiled involuntarily as he recognized the man who addressed him, then the blood left his face, his breath came short and fast and he gurgled incoherently.

As he was being led away to the captain's cabin, whence he was transferred later to his own state room, he said gratefully: "THANK GOD, THE SUSPENSE IS OVER, AND I AM GLAD."

Crippen's arrest accomplished, Dew hurried to Miss Le Neve's stateroom, where he found her, still dressed as "John Robinson, Jr.," on the verge of nervous breakdown.

Her appearance when confronted by the detective and told that she was under arrest was pitiable. All control that she had fought so hard to retain throughout the voyage left her. She cried out hysterically, and became so faint that restoratives were administered. Shut in her room and restored to women's dress, she was closely guarded as the vessel continued its journey for fear she would take her life or collapse utterly.

Although neither Crippen nor the pretty typist, for the love of whom the police believe he killed Belle Elmore, denied their identity, neither admitted any connection with the death of the woman.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Cattle—market, steady; beeves, $4.70@8.20; western steers, $4.75@6.60; stockers and feeders, $4.00@6.25; cows and heifers, $2.50@6.35; calves, $6.50.

Sheep—market, steady; native, $2.70@4.50; western, $2.60@4.65; yearlings, $4.50@4.80; lambs, native, $6.70@6.80.

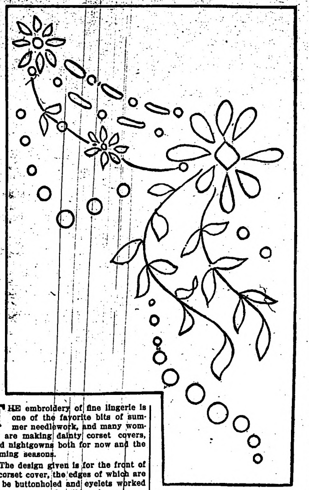
Twin City Markets.

Minneapolis, Aug. 1.—Wheat, Sept., $1.11⅝; Dec., $1.10⅝; No. 1 Northern, $1.19½; No. 2 northern, $1.16; No. 1 Durum, 91c; No. 3 corn, 63c; No. 3 white oats, 41c; barley, 64c; No. 2 rye, 74c; No. 1 flax, $2.44.

Duluth, Aug. 1.—Wheat, Sept. $1.14½; Dec., $1.11½; No. 1 northern, $1.20½.

South St. Paul, Aug. 1.—Cattle—Steers, $5.50@6.50; cows, fair, $4.00@5.50; calves, $5.00@6.00; hogs, $7.50@8.40; sheep, yearlings, $4.00@4.75; lambs, $5.50@6.50.

Embroidery



THE embroidery of fine lingerie is one of the favorite bits of summer needlework, and many women are making dainty corset covers, and nightgowns both for now and the coming seasons.

The design given is for the front of a corset cover, the edges of which are to be buttonholed and eyelets worked through which the ribbon is run.

The design might also be applied to a nightgown or chemise.

Transfer the design to the material by means of carbon paper and embroider in French embroidery, using the finest mercerized cotton. One-half of the design is given.

WOMEN BLUNDER IN EXCESS.

Over-Ornamentation Is As Foolish as Painting the Lily or Gilding Refined Gold.

To know when to stop is just as important as to be able to begin. That is a fact that applies just as emphatically to the making of a hat or gown as to the actions of everyday life. Many women blunder in the wasteful and ridiculous excess of ornamentation that is as foolish as painting the lily or gilding refined gold against which the poet sings.

Just because a woman has bought one dozen crocheted buttons she, if of the blundering variety, must use the twelve. Perhaps ten can be disposed of creditably, but the effect must be foolishly sacrificed instead of two buttons, and the result falls short always of the good style.

A wish to use as much as possible on the little afternoon frock or the evening gown is the stumbling block for many home dressmakers. Certainly there can be too much of a good thing. If a little piece of velvet or maline be left, keep it. Do not tack it on the front, or wind it at the belt, just to feel that economy is worth while. You can use these short ends to better advantage on another garment. Better one-quarter of a yard of ribbon not in use than a gown that has lost the indefinable touch of the artist. The overornamentation is just another evidence of the use of extremes, a habit that should be avoided by all who aim at refinement and good taste.

Wooden Beads.

A curious departure from the scintillating glass forms are the wooden beads that are in either natural color or any shade that is delightfully barbaric in its intensity. The texture of the wood insures a lack of luster that hurts one's aesthetic feelings.

The wooden beads are strung on coarse thread or string and are used for forming a cabochon for a hat or for draping the eastern turbans of coarse net.

Tucks are edged with wooden beans dyed to match the color of the gown, and on net, voile or chiffon the colored forms are decidedly effective.

Belts of raffia are studded with colored wooden beads, while handbags, linen buckles and fancy clasps are but a few of the possibilities suggested to the clever ones.

A Hat for 20 Cents.

This is not strictly true, for it was lined with black satin and had a huge draped bow of the same, both taken from an old hat. But every woman has these somewhere in her storeroom or scrapbag. And the rest?

It was a bathing hat, purchased for 10 cents and molded over a hot chafing dish to the required scoop-bonnet shape. Then the black satin was applied, "fore and aft," so to speak, and in front was placed a square buckle contrived from a 10 cent piece of white chamois, purchased also at the 5-and-10-cent store. And there you are! The exact replica of a $30 French hat, but fashioned by the cleverest girl in town for 20 cents.

Pekin.

Pekin stripe is a blue and white silk of China or foulard weave showing a perfectly even arrangement of blue and white.

TO BE MADE UP IN GREEN

Effective Style for Visiting Costume—Worn With Handsomely Trimmed Jacket.

Willow Green cashmere makes up very effectively in this style; the slightly trained skirt is trimmed round the foot by silk of color of the cashmere that is lightly embroidered with black; a ninon blouse of same color is worn.

The jacket is trimmed with the embroidered silk, and handsome silk ornaments in which a little dull gold tinsel thread is introduced.

The small collar and cuffs are of velvet.

Hat of fine straw to match the dress, trimmed with a feather mount.

Materials required: 8 yards 46 inches wide, 6 yards lining silk for jacket, 8 silk ornaments.

The Tailored Parasol.

In Paris, the home of taste and fashion, only the very plainest sort of sunshade is worn with tailored suits or simple morning dress. The parasol is of silk or of silk and cotton and matches in tone the chief color of the costume. The only decoration allowed is one easily made at home; three large hemstitched tucks about four inches from the edge. Match the silk and apply this idea to your plain sunshade of the tailored season of 1908, and you will be in the latest Parisian mode for about half a dollar and an hour's work.

New Bolero Effect.

Wide shirring has found its way even into the bolero. A pongee bolero suit shows this shirred effect everywhere except in the upper sleeves. There are three bands of shirring about halfway down the tunic skirt also, and the entire effect is dainty and summerlike.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress after Eating.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

WHY pay rent when you can get a farm free, covered with timber and near a good market? For particulars add. E. A. Burriss, Port Arthur, Ont.

"PLAY WITH THE CHILDREN"

Fabled Fountain of Youth Could Not Be More Potent Than Association With Little Ones.

"Play with the children!" was the recurrent advice of a wise and successful man. "This will keep your heart young, your viewpoint fresh, your wit sparkling. The child heart is at once the purest and the happiest in all nature; the child tongue is a transfiguring power."

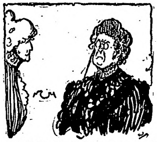
Something of this indubitable power attaches to good stories of those naive and innocent "little ones" scripturally declared specially blessed and potent. The child mind transforms, the child touch lifts to glad laughter incidents and accidents not otherwise worth noting. Witness this little tale of the careful mother to whom came a tiny son all agog over the acquirement of new and forbidden knowledge.

"Mother!" cried the child, baby eyes shining, baby cheeks glowing, "do you know what 'I'll be hornswoggled' means?"

"No, dear," said the mother, solemnly seizing the opportunity to implant a lesson. "I'm sure I do not."

"Well, I do," was the ecstatic answer, the suggested lesson being utterly ignored. "It means just the same as 'I'll be gol-darned!'"

THE LIMIT.



Landlady—Mr. Hall Roome is about the meanest man I ever met.

Mrs. Slowpay—What's the trouble?

Landlady—Wants me to reduce the price of his board because he's lost two teeth.

Yes, Indeed.

Hostess (at party)—Why, so silent, Miss De Muir? You've scarcely said a word since you came.

Youthful Guest—Really, Mrs. Leader, I am having a very enjoyable time, but my father has told me 100 times never to say anything unless I have something to say, and I suppose—

Hostess—But, my dear child, think what a stupid and tiresome thing society would be if everybody followed that advice!

Not His Fault.

"Oratory is a gift, not an acquirement," said the proud politician, as he sat down after an hour-harangue.

"I understand," said the matter-of-fact chairman. "We're not blamin' you. You done the best you could."

Know How To Keep Cool?

When Summer's sun and daily toil heat the blood to an uncomfortable degree, there is nothing so comforting and cooling as a glass of served with sugar and a little lemon.

Iced Postum

Surprising, too, how the food elements relieve fatigue and sustain one.

The flavour is delicious—and Postum is really a food drink.

"There's a Reason"

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Halvor Steenerson does not propose to be caught napping this year in his race for Congress. Halvor has a record of taking only one wink of sleep and that was two years ago.

We are still waiting for that wonderful platform of Ex Senator Hanson (mind you we say Ex) which he was going to construct to get in on, but not to stand on. We understand it is being prepared.

Senator Stephens, of Polk County, has not yet opened his campaign for renomination and re-election, but when he does he certainly has the goods to show for what he has done for his district. He is a credit to Northern Minnesota and should be kept in the senate for another term.

We present the name of Albert Berg, of Spooner, Minn., to our readers this week as a candidate for the republican nomination for state senator from this, the 61st, district. Mr. Berg is a man who is well known throughout the state, having served for two terms as Secretary of State and if he is nominated and elected, the interests of the 61st district will be well looked after in the state senate by a man who has the ability to deliver the goods.

It gives us pleasure to drive through the country and note the long ricks of hay, which seem to say: we don't have to sell our stock at a reduced price to keep them from starving. We will deliver you plenty of fine stock says Eastern Red Lake County at a fair price, but we are no "cheap skates" that are starved out, with our three thousand dollars a month income from our Highlanding Creamery and plenty of hay for our stock we will endeavor to stand it for another year and increase in wealth, stock, and population.

There is always one complaint ye editor has to make when he visits away from Eastern Red Lake County and that is, there is nothing quite as good as there is up in the eleven towns. When we visited the Experimental Farm at Crookston last week and saw their corn and wheat, we made the remark. "Why that is nothing extra, just come up to Eastern Red Lake County and we will show you a finer piece of wheat than that and a good deal bigger corn and potatoes. If they would just take time to come up here and take a look at the wheat fields of Walt McAndress, in the town of High Landing, and Mike Kolski, in the town of Deer Park, and take a taste of our new potatoes they would conclude that we are right.

We note a lengthy article on the question of the establishment of Pennington County by our old friend, Andrew Trovoten, in the last week's Thief River Falls News. Mr. Trovoten will be remembered by a number of the former residents of Polk County who are now living in Eastern Red Lake County, as one who fought with a number of us for the establishment of Columbia County for a number of years. It would have suited us much better if the proposed county had been called Columbia instead of Pennington which looks like a reward and honor for switching the Soo Railroad around us. Of course, it makes no difference to Mr. Trovoten as he is located near Thief River Falls, but it does make a lot of difference to the farmers who have to haul their produce 20 to 35 miles to market. As to his endorsement of D. P. O'Neil, we will say O.K., Andrew and you may be sure that you and I will vote together on that proposition. Now, some fellow will say that THE SUNBEAM is bought up by Thief River Falls when we say this; but, if they will take a glance at the head of the editorial column they will see: By W.G. Hunt.

We often hear the remark made that this one or that one is for Thief River Falls or Red Lake Falls. The question of the division of this county is the one that is now before the people, and to h— with both the Falls. Let the tax-payers speak.

The Democratic feeders at the public "teat" have discovered that John Lind meant what he said when he declined to be their candidate for governor. John Lind is O. K., but he knew that the people of Minnesota were ready to turn down the "gang" who were backing him.

For Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minn.

How To Get Rich Quick.

The "Sunbeam" accuses us of not being on record as a tax-payer. This is hardly fair in Hunt. We have not yet had a chance to build a farmers' boat or to engage in any other great enterprise for the benefit of the farmer that will give us the chance to "get rich quick."—The Eleven Towns.

We would hardly consider the above worthy of an answer; but for fear some farmer might be deceived by such "rot" we will briefly acknowledge that we have been engaged in every public enterprise that has been mentioned by his truly. We have helped to build the farmers' boat, we helped to build the Highlanding creamery and are likely to engage in any other public enterprise that would be of benefit to the locality in which we live.

We have been associated in this work with such well known residents of Highlanding as Walter McAndress, P. C. Wolf, Alfred Hammersteen, Anthony Dannacker, Sever Nelson, Ole Howard. T. S. Jacobson, Andrew Ellingson and many others of the Towns, Highlanding Kratka and Deer Park. If any of them have "gotten rich quick" at the business we have not yet learned how they did it. Such statements are an insult to every member of the Highlanding Creamery Association and the Red Lake River Transportation Company; but as they came from an old played out ignoramus, we hope all will consider the source and continue to contribute to all public enterprises and the upbuilding of the country in which they live.

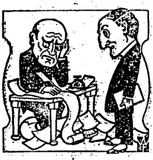
For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River. one-half mile south of the Highlanding creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office.

Reversed.

An East Boston doctor told of the experience of a druggist the other day who sold some alcohol to a new customer. After the man had signed the book as required he said: "Now, don't get that name twisted. It is Michael Sullivan and not Sullivan Michael, same as they turned it around in the directory."—Boston Journal.

A Hard Task.



John Eastman, editor of the Thief River Falls News, and Ex-Senator Hanson are busy preparing their platform.

Baltimore and Soft Crabs.

The genuine soft crab, or Brachyura baltimoriensis, is the most delicate as it is the most delicious of all victuals. It will no more bear transportation than a zephyr or a daffodil. The moment it is taken from its native deep it begins to lose bounce and flavor, and once it has left the Chesapeake littoral it is no longer eatable. That is why the soft crab is a superb delicatessen in Baltimore and a bitter disappointment everywhere else. So sensitive is it, indeed, to climate and handling that it is impossible to get a decent soft crab anywhere west of the first tollgate on the Frederick road. In Pittsburg, where embalmed soft crabs are offered in the gilded lobster palaces, their flavor is that of glucose. In Chicago the soft crab is a mere curiosity, to be gaped at, but not eaten. Baltimore alone has the genuine article, and it is fortunate for Baltimore that it cannot be transported. If it were possible to ship soft crabs the whole earth would bid for them, running up their price to $1, $5 and perhaps even to $100 a dozen.—Baltimore Sun.

A Teacher in the Making.

She was a popular young normal student who had been to a party the night before, and as a consequence was "not prepared" in the geography class. The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "stabs" from her fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The victim brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down.

"Yes, and what else?" encouraged the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet hopelessness.

"Now you can mention others, I am sure. Just think about it."

"Tea," drawled the flutelike voice of the pretty girl, "and," puckering her forehead with an intellectual tour de force, "and laundry work."—Youth's Companion.

Quick Cure.

Once there was a man who made life miserable for all he met by eternally harping about his aches and pains.

He would discourse on the subject of his dyspepsia, and he would almost interrupt a religious service to tell of his rheumatic symptoms.

If he had a stitch in his side he had to pester his friends with it, and a headache helped him make everybody unhappy.

At last a bright young woman, to whom the man applied for sympathy, cured him of all his ailments.

When he was in the midst of a catalogue of his sufferings she said sweetly:

"Yes, it is strange how many of these things afflict a man as he begins to grow old."

That man never even had a symptom after that.—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Judge.

When Men Were Branded.

A curious relic of bygone times, probably the only one in England, still stands at Lancaster castle. It is a strong iron holdfast, into which the prisoner, who in olden time had been sentenced to be branded as a malefactor, had his hand thrust and locked. The branding iron after being made red hot at the end was pressed against the "brawne of the thumb," and on being withdrawn the letter M branded on the unfortunate prisoner's flesh indicated from henceforward that he was a malefactor. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the judge and jury and in open court, and the brander invariably turned to the judge after he had done his work and exclaimed, "A fair mark, my lord!" It is over 100 years since the instrument was last used on two men sentenced to imprisonment for manslaughter.

His Maiden Speech.

It is related that when the Earl of Rochester in the reign of Charles II. rose to make his maiden speech in the house of lords he said: "My lords—my lords, I rise this time for the first time—the very first time. My lords, I divide my speech into four branches." Here there was an embarrassing pause of some seconds. "My lords," the earl then ejaculated, "if ever I rise again in this house you may cut me off, root and branches and all, forever."

The Devil's Sonata.

Tartini, the great violinist, after dining indiscreetly, dreamed that he had made a bargain with the devil for his soul. To prove his powers the evil one seized a violin and played a sonata of exquisite beauty. Tartini awoke with the ringing in his ears, committed the music to paper and published it as "The Devil's Sonata."

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 8, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th. 1910.

Notice is hereby given that John Walentok, of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 587. Serial No. 04211. for N. E. ¼. Section 12 Township 152 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B. Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Olaf B. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn., and John Radnecki, of Radney, Minn.

ARTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 12th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestby, of Anstad, Minn., who, on June 7th, 1909, made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial No. 04810, for W. ½ S.W. ¼. Sec. 3 & N. ½ S.E. ¼. Sec. 3 Twp. 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. on the 22nd day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lund, Casper Lund, Ole E. Wiseth, and George Wold, all of Anstad, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

McCALL PATTERNS 10 AND 15 NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50 A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 236 to 246 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

A Mohammedan Festival.

Taboots is an Indian festival in connection with the celebration of the month of Moharram, which begins the year of the true Mohammedan. This festival commemorates the death of Prince Hossein, the grandson of Mohammed, who met his death in battle after ten days' fighting against King Omar. The word taboot, from which the festival takes its name, means literally a tomb, and it is always built in front of the homes of some rich and important Mohammedans and under a temporary shed built for this purpose. The taboots are made from thin bamboo strips covered with highly colored paper, and it is always decorated with isinglass, gold and silver paper, glass balls and much red and green paint. On the ninth day of the festival of Taboots the taboots are carried in a possession through the streets of the various cities in India. On the tenth day all the taboots are thrown into some river, and thus ends the Mohammedan festival of Taboots.—Boston Herald.

Primitive Fire Fighters.

As late as the end of the sixteenth century in London the sole method of extinguishing fires was by means of contrivances known as "hand squirts." These were usually made of brass, with a carrying capacity ranging from two to four quarts of water. The two quart "squirts" were two and a half feet in length, one and a half inches in diameter at their largest part and but half an inch at the nozzle. On each side were handles, and three men were required to manipulate a "squirt." One man on each side grasped the handle in one hand and the nozzle in the other, while the third man worked the piston or plunger, drawing it out while the nozzle was immersed in a supply of water which filled the cylinder. The bearers then elevated the nozzle, when the other pushed in the plunger, the skill of the former being employed in directing the stream of water upon the fire. Such primitive contrivances are said to have been used during the great fire of 1666.

The Verdict.

"How did your act take amateur night?"

"Great! When I sang the first verse they yelled 'Fine!' and when I sang the next they yelled 'Imprisonment!'" —Baltimore Sun.

His Main Want.

Earnest but Prosy Street Corner Orator—I want land reform, I want housing reform, I want educational reform, I want— Bored Voice—Chloroform.—Manchester Guardian.

Proud of It.

The Lady—Poor tramp! Have you anything in your life to be proud of? The Hobo—Yessum. I never beat nobody out of no laundry bill.—Cleveland Leader.

Appearances.

Magistrate—If I remember rightly, this is not your first appearance in court. Prisoner—No, your honor, but I hope you don't judge by appearances.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

Give, if thou canst, an alms; if not, afford instead of that a sweet and gentle word.—Robert Herrick.

Her Sweeping Abilities.

Mrs. Neurich—Did you notice how grandly our daughter swept into the room at Mrs. Puppson's reception last night?

Neurich—Sure I did! When it comes to sweeping into a room Mamie wins in a walk. But when it comes to sweeping out a room she goes lame.

Wanted It Plain.

Mrs. Youngwife—I want to get some salad. Dealer—Yes'm. How many heads? Mrs. Youngwife—Oh, goodness! I thought you took the heads off. I just want plain chicken salad.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
FOR NEURALGIA. SCIATICA. RHEUMATISM. BACKACHE. PAIN IN CHEST. DISTRESS IN STOMACH. SLEEPLESSNESS.
DR. MILES' Pain Pills
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

Mike Kolski, of Deer Park, finished haying last Friday, with 106 big loads in the stack.

We and a large number of others are compelled to deepen our well, or drink river water.

Our printing press is somewhat out of order this week. We hope to have it in good running order next week.

The steamer, Lily, went down the river yesterday, notwithstanding the low stage of the water.

The Highlanding creamery is now paying over $3000.00 per month to patrons. This will be greatly increased next year.

George Singer has now a very complete stock of merchandise at Rhoda, which he is selling at bed rock prices.

LOST: A democatic candidate for governor. Finder please notify the democratic state committee.

We have not any complaint among the farmers about rainy weather during the haying season this year.

We will be through haying next week and can then give more attention to the publication of THE SUNBEAM and hope to give more reading matter.

We regret that we were not able to attend the fair at Thief River Falls this week, for the reason that we are not through haying.

Ye editor attended court at W. A. Swanson's in Deer Park Township last Saturday, representing the plaintiff in a garneshee proceeding.

C. L. Clark was up to Peasoup Island last week, helping George Cunningham in haying. He says there is no complaint made of the swamps up that way now, as the county is all dried up.

The Red Lake County Fair was held at Thief River Falls this week; but, as the farmers are very busy haying and harvesting the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been.

We were compelled to make another increase in our news paper order this week to supply the demand. This was done notwithstanding the fear of the "leven towns" that we would loose our subscribers, if we said anything about county division.

It looks as if there were some candidates for county office living in Thief River Falls, who are not positive that Pennington County will be established, so they will take chances of filing in old Red Lake. Good idea boys as it is better not to put all the eggs in one basket.

Joseph Belair and Mr. Zaiser, of Red Lake Falls, and Gilbert Haave, of Thief River Falls, were up viewing the extension to the south side of the river of the Highlanding-Deer Park ditch Wednesday. It is reported that they sometimes stop to argue on county division while looking over their work.

Walter McAndess harvested a field of early sown wheat and his oats this week, but harvest will not be general until next week. While crops are far below the avrage in this part of the country, yet our farmers are not complaining when they read the reports from other localities.

Wedding Bells.

Mr. Stephen Singer, of Kratka, and Miss Johanna M. Berghaus, of Minneapolis, were married in the latter city on last Wednesday evening. Mr. Singer is one of the firm of Singer Bros., merchants at Kratka, and Miss Berghaus is one of the popular young ladies of North-east Minneapolis.

THE SUNBEAM joins with their many friends in wishing them a long and happy matrimonial life. Mr. and Mrs. Singer will be at home at Kratka on Saturday, August 6th, and their many friends are to attend a grand reception and ball at the Kratka Hall on Saturday evening, August 6th, at 7 o'clock.

Royal Mistakes.

Sovereigns and princes are strangely given to making astonishing mistakes while dealing with dates. The inscription on King Edward VII.'s coffin that he died in the ninth year of his reign instead of the tenth is only an example of many similar errors. In November, 1858, Queen Victoria wrote to the late king to inform him that he might consider himself emancipated from parental authority and control, as he was now eighteen years old and therefore of age. Her majesty's letter, which was very long, was a quasi sermon, and it ended by informing the then Prince of Wales that he would be forthwith made a knight of the Garter and a colonel in the army. How Queen Victoria and Prince Albert fell into so extraordinary a mistake it is impossible to understand, for the prince had only then completed his seventeenth year. Dean Wellesley, to whom the young prince showed the letter, at once detected the serious error into which the queen had fallen, but he thought it best to say nothing.—London Truth.

Got Full Measure.

All yesterday James had played truant from school, and when the irate master raised his cane threateningly James burst into a flood of tears.

"Please don't lick me, sir," he sobbed.

"And why should I not lick you, pray?" thundered the schoolmaster.

"W'y, sir, 'cos I think I've 'ad enough!" gasped James. "Yesterday the boy as I played truant with and I fell out and he licked me, and a man we threw stones at caught me and licked me, the driver of a cart we hung on to licked me, the owner of a cat we chased licked me. Then when I got home mother licked me, and after that father licked me, and then mother licked me again for calling her a sneak for telling father."

"Well," responded the master grimly, "by this time one licking more or less won't make much difference, and it seems hard I shouldn't have my whack. Come here, sir!"—London Answers.

Remnants of a College Course.

Prosecuting Attorney (examining a prospective juror)—Do you know anything about chemistry?

"I studied it at school."

"Do you think you remember enough of it to make you a competent juror in a poison case?"

"I'm not sure."

"Do you remember any of the formulas?"

"Let me see—two."

"Only two?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are they in a poem?"

(Blushing) "Yes, sir."

"Is this the poem?

"Our Willie boy is dead and gone.
We ne'er shall see him more.
What Willie thought was H2O
Was H2SO4."

(Blushing furiously) "Yes, sir."

"I thought so. You are excused."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Went Back on His Authority.

Leslie Stephen's single meeting with Freeman, the historian, was in the nature of a collision. "I came in contact with him only once," he said. "He wrote a life of Alfred for the Dictionary of National Biography under my editorship, but declined to do more because we had a difference of opinion as to whether Athelstane should be spelled with an 'A.' That was, I confess, a question to which I was culpably indifferent, but I had taken competent advice, and my system (I forget what it was) had been elsewhere sanctioned by the great historian Stubbs. Now, as Freeman was never tired of asserting the infallibility of Stubbs, I innocently thought that I might take refuge behind so eminent an authority. The result was that for once Freeman blasphemed Stubbs and refused to co-operate any longer in an unscholarlike enterprise."

Three Men.

When H. H. Rogers was in the prime of his power, says a New York writer, he formed a "friendship partnership" with Mark Twain and Thomas Brackett Reed and took personal charge of their affairs, looking after them as he would a couple of children. It was great fun for all three, and especially Rogers. Neither Clemens nor Reed had any sense for business. The big ex-speaker came to New York a poor man. Five years later he died suddenly, and his estate assayed over $000,000. He probably had no idea what he was worth at any stage. Rogers made as much or more money for Clemens.

A Light Retort.

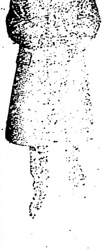
"How did the trouble in the family start?"

"The wife, it seems, got tired of her husband's heavy wit."

"Why didn't she simply make a light retort?"

"She did. She threw the lamp at him."—Exchange.

NEWS! News!
Cut this out and paste
it in your BIG hat.
SINGER BROS.
KRATKA, MINN
Is the cheapest and best place
to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices
Clothing.



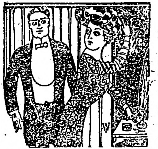
WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce

Yours For Bnciness,-- SINGER BROS,
Kratka Minn.

Not Expected Above.



Crusty Hubby—I suppose when I get to heaven the first thing you'll ask me will be to button your dress.

Caustic Wife—Better do it now.

A Puzzle.

Mother (reprovingly to little girl just ready to go for a walk)—Dolly, that hole was not in your glove this morning. Dolly (promptly)—Where was it, then, mamma?

In the Long Ago.

"Adam," asked Eve, "what are you doing?"

"I'm discovering Mars," he said, looking down at her to rest his neck. "I wonder if it has any inhabitants."

From which we learn that Adam already knew about as much concerning Mars as the modern astronomers do.—Chicago Tribune

A Lincoln Anecdote.

Jaspar Alban Conant tells the following anecdote of Lincoln in the Metropolitan Magazine:

"One of the comical characters in Washington during the war was jolly old Isaac Newton, the Philadelphia Quaker whom Lincoln appointed commissioner of agriculture—a new office just created by congress. Newton, who tried and at the same time amused the president, had made his reputation on a dairy farm. Beyond this he knew little of agriculture.

"Hearing which, I could not refrain from asking Lincoln why he had appointed such an ignorant man to the office.

"'Because I think he's competent enough to attend to all the agriculture we will have till the war is ended,' was the answer."

On Nagging.

My son taught me a lesson on the subject of "nagging" when he was but four years old and one that I have never forgotten. He had been guilty of a small misdemeanor and had tried to wriggle out of it by not telling the exact truth. I gave him a mild spanking and, as has always been my custom, talked the matter over afterward. I began by saying, "Now, Robert, if you had told me the truth I should not have punished you."

He stood before me, scraping one foot along the carpet, and he looked up at me and said, "What would you have done?" And I answered, "I should have only talked to you." "Well," he drawled, "how long would you have talked?"

He is a big boy in high school now, but when times arise requiring a reprimand and I get started I still hear that little voice, "How long would you have talked?" and I go right to the point and say what I have to say on the subject; but, in the boy's own language, I "cut it short" and never refer to it again unless it is absolutely necessary.—Harper's Bazar.

Killing a Bull Without a Weapon.

Cayetano, a famous Spanish toreador, once was strolling across a meadow with a couple of friends when his attention was attracted by an old and infuriated bull which was galloping toward them with lowered head and erect tail. Cayetano had no weapon, not even a cane, but he seized a dust coat which one of his friends was carrying over his arm. As soon as the bull got close to them Cayetano bade his companions make their escape while he engaged the animal's attention. Using the coat as a capa, he drove the bull crazy with fury, stepping aside with the deftest agility at each of the animal's charges. In this manner he caused the bull to turn sharply in the midst of its onward rushes until finally an ominous crack was heard, and the bull fell in a heap, with its backbone broken by the sudden wrench given by the animal's abrupt swerve.

Satisfied With Himself.

"Have any serious trouble with your new automobile?"

"Not a bit. So far I haven't hit a single man without being able to get away before he got my number."—Cleveland Leader.

THE MERCHANTS
State Bank,
OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,
THAT RAISE CROPS.
For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.
☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.
Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,
Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN
It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.
Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,
To Loan On Land.
* * * *
List your land with me, I can Sell it.
Hover O. Follkedahl,
Highlanding, Minn

"AIGLON"
A full blooded percheron imported stallion, will stand for service at the farm of C. W. Johnson, at Rhoda post office, in the town of Deer Park. Parties [illegible] brood mares are requested to call and examine this fine [illegible]

The Long Silence.

"Yes, we are pretty comfortably fixed here," admitted a veteran employee in the reading room of the Congressional library when a visitor envied him his soft berth and comfortable surroundings. "But there's one thing we long for—yes, thirst for with a burning thirst. That's noise—a real, nerve racking, ear splitting noise. The long hours of soft silence, the dead stillness of everything about, grows so oppressive that at times we could shriek out. We get into a sort of sickroom tiptoe and a low tone of voice that finally degenerates into a whisper even at the telephone. Give us an occasional battery of artillery or a roaring lion or a steam calliope. Even a squalling baby would help some."—Washington Star

Just a Blunder.

Sir Uptree Monless (who has got old Coldkash in a corner at the club)—Mr. Coldkash, your daughter is the idol of my life, the one hope and aim of my existence. Might I dare hope that some day I may be permitted to call her wife?

Mr. Coldkash (astounded)—But, my dear sir, I have no daughter.

Sir Uptree M.—Oh, pardon me! Somebody told me that you had. Let's have a drink.—London Scraps.

The Decoy.

"I notice," said the man to the parson, "that, although I am in the front pew, there is always a five dollar bill on the collection plate when it comes to me. Is that the contribution of the man who takes up the collection?"

"Not at all," replied the parson, who believed in business methods. "That's our decoy."—Detroit Free Press.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained
UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS
The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."
We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.
It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.
CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY,
Judges.
The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
THE GRAND PRIZE
(the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.
GET THE LATEST AND BEST
You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,
PUBLISHERS,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

The "Reliance"
SEWING MACHINE.
ROLLER BEARING.
HIGH GRADE.

Automatic Lift.

[illegible]ve [illegible]ey by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.
[illegible]ST GUARANTEE.
[illegible] Sewing Machine Co.
[illegible] ILLINOIS.

The only wealth which will not decay is knowledge.—Langford.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

RESTORED TO HEALTH.

After Suffering With Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

Mrs. John S. Way, 209 S. 8th St., Independence, Kans., says: "For a number of years I was a victim of disordered kidneys. My back ached constantly, the passage of the kidney secretions was irregular and my feet and ankles were badly swollen. Spots often appeared before my eyes and I became very nervous. After using numerous remedies without relief I was completely cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. This seems remarkable when you consider my advanced age."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

ANNUAL LOSS IS ENORMOUS

Two Hundred Million Dollars a Year Might Be Added to Wealth of Country.

Computing that there are in the United States at least 300,000 indigent consumptives who should be cared for in charitable or semi-charitable sanatoria and hospitals, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis estimates that the annual cost to the country for the treatment of these persons would be $50,000,000 at the rate of $1.669 per day per patient. At the lowest possible estimate the country loses $200,000,000 a year from the incapacity of these indigent victims of tuberculosis. This would mean a net saving of $150,000,000 a year to the United States if all victims of consumption who are too poor to afford proper treatment in expensive sanatoria were cared for at the expense of the municipality, county or state. And this annual gain does not include the enormous saving that would accrue from the lessened infection due to the segregation of the dangerous consumptives in institutions.

Clever Joke of King.

King Edward's great nature was illustrated the other night by a London correspondent at the Press club in New York.

"The king," said the correspondent, "was visiting Rufford Abbey, and one morning, in company with his host, Lord Arthur Saville, he took a walk over the preserves.

"Suddenly Lord Arthur, a big burly man, rushed forward and seized a shabby fellow with a dead pheasant protruding from the breast of his coat.

"'Sir,' said Lord Arthur to the king, 'this fellow is a bad egg. This is the second time I've caught him poaching.'

"But the king's handsome face beamed, and he laughed his gay and tolerant laugh.

"'Oh, let him go,' he said. 'If he really were a bad egg, you know, he wouldn't poach.'"

The Dentist's Joke.

At a recent dinner of the Authors' club in London to Mr. Owen Seaman, the editor of Punch, Mr. Walter Emanuel, another member of the staff of Punch, referred to the fact that the man with the largest sense of humor he had ever struck was an Englishman—a dentist. He went to him after suffering long with a toothache. He refused to have gas, and the dentist pulled out a tooth, leaving him writhing in pain, and took the tooth to the window, where he laughed quite heartily. He groaned: "What's the joke?" "Wrong tooth," said the dentist.

He Knew the Kind.

Little Edward, aged four, was an only child. He was anxious for a baby sister, and was talking of it one day with a friend of the family. In the friend's family was a baby girl of one year. The lady said: "Edward, you may have my baby; she is pretty and sweet."

"Oh," said Edward, "I don't want an old baby. I want a bran new one wif noffin on but tacum powder."—Red Hen.

A Protection Against the Heat.

When you begin to think it's a personal matter between you and the sun to see which is the hotter, buy yourself a glass or a bottle of Coca-Cola. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send 2c stamp for booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" and the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910. The latter contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues, and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. Address The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Literary Note.

"Do you think that poets should never marry?"

"I don't know about that. But they should be very careful about composing love letters unless they intend to."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

A nagging wife makes her husband forget his other troubles.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Do not gripe.

Many a budding genius has developed into a blooming idiot.

Violets or Roses

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

When Noel Osmond asked her if he might send flowers the night of the Hasken ball Milred Vard smiled enigmatically.

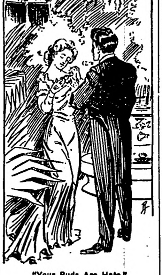
"You are very kind, indeed; and I am especially fond of white violets." Her quick glance caught his little start of surprise at the hint. White violets at that season were quite beyond the slim purse of young Mr. Osmond.

Noel's lips hardened into a straight line. All the pleasure he might feel in knowing that Mildred would wear his flowers was lost in the thought that the flowers would hold no meaning for her beyond their novelty and extravagance.

He did not remain long after that. Rather grave and preoccupied, he held Mildred's hand in his own for a brief instant and then went away. When he reached the florist's he turned in and asked for white violets. The clerk brought out a jar of the white blossoms, velvety, exquisite in texture, but quite odorless. The price was away beyond Noel's pocketbook, and he hesitated. Of course they might be charged—although he was poor himself, was he not the nephew of the rich Mr. Osmond and very likely his heir—and he need not be mortified in the sight of the girl he loved. Still Noel Osmond had come to the city with very high ideals of paving his way in the world and going without what he could not pay for.

The Vards were rich and fashionable people. But Mildred herself, the youngest daughter, was quite unspoiled by it all. Noel had found himself telling her of his fight for a place in the world and the ambition that kept him bright and keen eyed and fresh and clean hearted in the midst of a world of temptations.

Mildred had seemed to understand and their relations had been growing a little closer and Noel was hoping—hoping—some miracle might happen whereby he might become rich in a day and so be in position to declare his love.



"Your Buds Are Here."

And, knowing his poverty, she had expressed a wish for white violets!

A telephone bell rang sharply and the clerk turned to the instrument. Noel looked wistfully at the jar of violets. How he would have enjoyed sending that great mass of white blossoms up to Mildred! What was the man saying at the telephone?

"Yes, Mr. Kenyon, we have a few white violets—well, a good-sized bunch—send them up to Miss Vard? Yes, sir, thank you, sir!" He turned briskly to Noel.

"If you do not want these, sir, I have an order for them all."

"I won't take them," said Noel, turning away with a sick jealousy tearing at his heart. He knew Tom Kenyon well—Tom was as rich as Noel was poor.

He ordered pink rosebuds with grim, unpleasant mouth, and paid for them. As he strode homeward he felt for the first time the gall of poverty; he despised himself because he was too poor to be able to indulge the girl he loved. He could never hope to win her for his wife—what had he to offer her save youth and a perpetual struggle to keep up appearances?

Once more he would see her, would dance with her, talk to her; then he would go as far away as he could from this cold, unfeeling New York, where money was the standard in every walk of life. He would go into the west, where fortunes are made quickly, and perhaps some day, if Tom Kenyon did not step in between with his ready-made fortune—but it was very likely Tom would step in!

The hours intervening he spent in bitter calculations that only strengthened his resolve to cut it all and go away, and start his career over again in some city where Mildred Vard's lovely face and charming presence might never tempt him from work.

He carried these bitter reflections with him to the Hasken palace where so many millions rubbed elbows that it seemed to Noel that the very air of the lighted rooms sparkled with gold dust.

He saw Mildred dancing with Tom Kenyon. He had never been jealous of Tom before, but the episode of the violets had proved to him how weak his own standing was. And she wore on the bosom of her rose-pink gown—not his roses, but Tom Kenyon's white violets!

Noel made himself very wretched that evening. He did not dance often, but he glowered in distant corners where he might watch Mildred's dark head.

To approach her might be to invite a snub. When he did meet her it all happened so suddenly that he could not avoid the situation. He had wandered into the conservatory and was moodily watching the goldfish darting to and fro in the huge basin when there was the sound of quick steps on the marble floor and Tom Kenyon's deep voice saying:

"Sit down here, Millie; I'll bring you an ice." Then he was gone and Mildred herself, flushed and sparkling, came around the big palm and came upon Noel at the goldfish basin.

"Why, Mr. Osmond, I did not know you were here," she said as he bent above her hand. She drew away and looked at him oddly.

"I'm in a black mood, Miss Vard," said Noel. "In fact I'm so grouchy that I think I'll clear out!" His eyes lingered on her upturned face with its wistful look that he had surprised once or twice before. "I hope you are having a delightful time," he went on lamely.

Her head drooped a little. "Yes, it is a lovely ball. Thank you for the beautiful rosebuds, Mr. Osmond—they are just the color of my gown."

Noel flushed darkly and his eyes rested on the white violets. With a sudden impulse of angry despair he touched the blossoms with a tentative forefinger.

"I could not send you these," he said harshly. "I am too poor, Miss Vard—I sent what I could afford to pay for. You are very gracious to accept the roses when you asked for violets. You see, I've made a big mistake—I'm not in it with the other chaps—I can't play the game!"

Somehow her hand found its way to his arm and was timidly laid on his black sleeve. "I asked you to send violets, Mr. Osmond, because I knew they were extravagant," she said quietly.

Osmond stared, puzzled, yet strangely thrilled by her tone. "What do you mean, Miss Vard?" he asked.

"I wondered if you were like all the rest of them, living beyond your means, spending more than you could afford to pay for—or whether you were what you appeared to be, working your way upward with the courage of your convictions apparent in your actions! I am not disappointed, Mr. Osmond. If you had sent me white violets I am afraid I would have been quite disgusted with you."

Noel's heart was beating hard. "But I would have liked to have you wear my roses," he was beginning, when she touched the frill of pink chiffon that edged the low neck of her gown.

"Your buds are here," she said softly, and Noel saw that his pink roses formed a garland across her bosom above the violets. After that, events moved rapidly, and with Mildred's hands in his own and her head on his breast he was explaining all his doubts and fears since he had left her that afternoon. And Mildred explained that Tom Kenyon was engaged to her sister Ethel, and Ethel had pinned the white violets upon Mildred's gown, for generous Tom had sent her too many for one person.

The miracle did not occur till the next day when Noel's Uncle Francis Osmond offered him a place in his banking house. "In order to learn the business which you must one day inherit, young man!" he said sharply. "I've been watching you, Noel, and expecting you to fall into the fast pace every day, but I'm disappointed, agreeably, my boy! I happened to be in that florist shop yesterday (looking at orchids behind a screen) and saw you turn down the violets and pay for the roses like a man—you're the right stuff!"

One of Sheehan's Ways.

R. F. Sheehan, connected with the Tod-Stambaugh company, is said to have the most unusual characteristic that there is any record of. It is this: He never laces up his shoes until after breakfast. It matters not whether he's at home or abroad, he dresses himself carefully to the minutest detail, pulls on his shoes and lets them go unlaced until he has been to the dining room. He says he doesn't know why he waits until after breakfast to tie his shoes, except that it's a habit. He's followed the practise so long that he cannot remember when he first took on that system of dressing.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In Society.

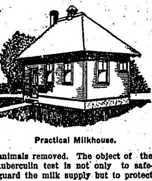
The Young Lawyer—I have only two books in my library, and they meet all my needs, "Good Style" and the "Penal Code."—Fliegende Blaetter.

The DAIRY

PRODUCTION OF MARKET MILK

Highly Essential That Cows Be Clean as Dust and Dirt Adhering Contaminate Fluid.

The health of the cows is the first essential in the production of good milk. They should be in good physical condition and free from disease. They should also be tested for tuberculosis by a capable veterinarian at least once a year, and all reacting animals removed. The object of the tuberculin test is not only to safeguard the milk supply but to protect the herd from the ravages of this disease. The feed of the herd should be wholesome, and the water supply should be protected from contamination.



Practical Milkhouse.

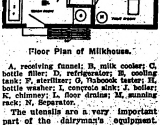
Dirt and dust adhering to the cows are responsible for most of the contamination of milk. It is therefore essential that the cows be clean—not necessarily washed every day and dried with a sterile towel, but clean in a common-sense meaning—that is, free from accumulation of dirt and manure, and thoroughly brushed. If the hair on the udders, flanks and tails is clipped, this will aid in keeping the animals clean.

The cow stables should be free from contaminating surroundings and well drained. An abundance of light is very important. About 500 cubic feet of air space should be provided for each animal. Proper ventilation will keep the air fresh and pure at all times. A coat of whitewash twice a year will make the stable lighter and the air sweeter and will destroy countless germs.

The milkhouse should be located at a convenient place where there is good drainage. A cement floor is very important and should be extended up on the sides at least six inches, or better still, to the window casings.

An inexpensive and conveniently arranged milkhouse as shown may be built to accommodate 25 to 60 cows. The building is divided into four rooms, arranged to eliminate unnecessary labor and at the same time to provide sufficient space for the apparatus, its operation and care. The best location for the milkhouse would be about halfway down the length of the barn and 12 to 15 feet distant from it. A door in the side of the barn at this point, opening from a cross alley, makes it convenient for the milkers and saves unnecessary time and travel. A driveway should be placed between barn and milkhouse for bringing empty cans, bottles, fuel, ice, etc., to the milkhouse, and for loading milk upon the delivery wagon.

In one corner of the building a small weighroom is partitioned off, the floor of which is raised 24 inches above the main floor; this room is entered from the vestibule. The milker takes the milk of each cow to this room, where it is weighed, recorded on the milk sheet, and emptied through the funnel (A), which is provided with cheesecloth strainers and a hinged cover. The milk passes from the funnel by gravity to a mixing tank and cooler (B), from which it empties into a can which is carried over to the bottle filler (C) for immediate bottling, or into shipping cans which may be placed in the pool built into the bottom of a refrigerator (E). If it is desired to separate the cream, a steam turbine separator would be provided at N, run by steam from the boiler. The milkroom is so located that it is not necessary to enter it except to care for the milk, thus making it easy to keep clean and cool and free from flies, dust and other contamination.



Floor Plan of Milkhouse.

A, receiving funnel; B, milk cooler; C, bottle filler; D, refrigerator; E, cooling tank; F, sterilizer; G, Babcock tester; H, bottle washer; I, concrete sink; J, boiler; K, chimney; L, floor drains; M, sunning rack; N, Separator.

The utensils are a very important part of the dairyman's equipment. The cans and pails should be well built and made with a view to perfect and easy cleaning.

Profitable Cow.

A Nebraska Jersey cow produced cream during the year ending March 1 that sold for $250. Her feed cost around $100.

GRAIN PASTURES FOR COWS

There Are Few Seasons When It Does Not Pay to Supplement Grasses With Soiling Crops.

(By M. J. KING.)

When dairy cows have the run of good pasture I have failed to find profit in feeding grain foods, but when they are compelled to stay in a parched pasture and are having green soiling crops fed to them it will pay to feed some grain foods.

It is a common sight to see dairy herds fighting flies and vainly trying to break through the fences and get into some luxuriant field of farm crops.

The loss to the dairy farmer under such conditions is severe and yet he generally hesitates to buy feed, uncertain as to whether it will prove profitable.

There are few seasons when it will not pay to supplement pasture grasses with soiling crops or grain foods.

It is much easier to let a cow down in her milk flow than to get her back to it.

Then again, the cow that is compelled to go through the hot summer weather and fight flies in some sunburnt pasture is in poor condition to produce a profitable flow of milk when the conditions are more favorable.

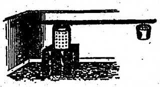
It is for this reason that it will many times pay to feed sufficient grain foods to prevent the cows from falling away in condition. The cow that falls away in condition during the summer and fall is in very poor condition to go into winter quarters.

Much of the lack of condition in the dairy herd is caused by the cow going into the winter in poor condition.

CHEESE BOX MADE USEFUL

Home-Made Contrivance, Strengthened by Metal Hoop, Proves Very Effective as Press.

I have a very useful device which I made from a cheese box, writes Mrs. G. H. Benedan of Nebraska in Farm and Home. I bored a number of small holes in the box, removed both the top and bottom, and strengthened it by putting a metal hoop around it.



A Homemade Cheese Press.

I put the cheese inside of this casing and place it on a block that has a groove in it to let the whey run off at one side. On top of the cheese I place a round block of wood, and across this is laid a long board, which is attached to the wall at one end and has a weight on the other. This serves as a cheese press, and proves very effective.

DAIRY NOTES

Clean cows mean clean milk.

Keep the calf pails scrupulously clean.

Cows are gentle unless they are abused.

The successful dairyman must be a successful salesman.

Possibly the high price of butter is making dairy cows higher.

Every ounce of food you put into a cow is turned into something.

You cannot get 11 pounds of material out of ten pounds of food.

Contamination of the milk in the barn may kill somebody's baby in the city.

The cows that drop their calves this month should be well protected from the heat and flies.

The treeless or shadeless pasture is one form of inflicting cruelty to domestic animals.

A domesticated cow is not apt to be vicious unless she has been raised amid vicious surroundings.

Dairying is the salvation of poor soil. But it's better to use it as a preventative than to have to use it as a cure.

Take especial pains to keep the vessels clean in which the calves are fed. Hot sun and dirty pails make serious trouble.

Death to babies sometimes lurks in the dirty milk can and death to young calves is often concealed in filthy feeding troughs.

No matter what some folks say, cows need salt. They ought to have at least three or four ounces each per day, but the best plan is to keep it where they can help themselves.

Secondary Dairying.

Secondary dairying is being practised by too many farmers. When anything had to be neglected it was always the dairy, and for this reason the profits from their dairies have been small. Where milking machines have been introduced they have influenced dairymen to clean up their farms and take more pride in their work. This naturally will result in the production of cleaner milk and in some cases, better prices. Any practical apparatus which has a tendency to improve dairy conditions should be welcomed by the industry.

Milk Prices.

The wholesale price of milk for June has been fixed by the executive committee of the Philadelphia Milk Shippers' union at [illegible] cents per quart.

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

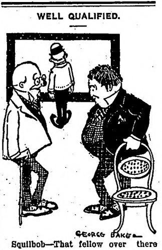
"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

WELL QUALIFIED.



Squilbob—That fellow over there would make a splendid magazine poet.

Squilligan—A genius, eh?

Squilbob—No, but he has dyspepsia so bad that he would't get so hungry living.

Merely a Prevaricator.

A doctor relates the following story: "I had a patient who was very ill and who ought to have gone to a warmer climate, so I resolved to try what hypnotism would do for him. I had a large sun painted on the ceiling of his room and by suggestion induced him to think it was the sun which would cure him. The ruse succeeded and he was getting better rapidly when one day on my arrival I found he was dead."

"Did it fail, after all, then?" asked one of the doctor's hearers.

"No," replied the doctor, "he died of sunstroke."

A Simple Matter.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "the paper says that the Prohibitionists have trouble with bootleggers."

"I believe so."

"Men are so stupid! Why don't they put a stop to it by compelling everybody to wear low shoes?"

Hungry
Little Folks

find delightful satisfaction in a bowl of toothsome

Post Toasties

When the children want lunch, this wholesome nourishing food is always ready to serve right from the package without cooking, and saves many steps for mother.

Let the youngsters have Post Toasties—superb summer food.

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Co., Limited.
Battle Creek, Mich.

A Trip to PAULO AFFONSO FALLS in Brazil

By H. W. FURNISS

FEW tourists ever have more than a glance of a very small section of Brazil, as they travel by large steamers which only touch at the more important coast cities and they accept, without question, the volunteered advice of resident fellow-countrymen who have never traveled in the interior of the country. These speak as if from personal knowledge, though in reality falsely, of the difficulties, if not danger, to such travel.

Though there is individuality in all cities, more striking in some than in others, yet after all, as a result of civilization, there is so marked a similarity that one soon tires of most foreign cities. This monotony seldom extends to travel in the interior of a country, at least not in Brazil, which abounds in enchanting scenery, remarkable plants, flowers and animals, and marvelous works of nature, giving to the traveler a new sensation at every turn. Such is the effect of a trip to the Paulo Affonso falls.

To reach Paulo Affonso falls it is necessary to take a coastwise vessel from Pernambuco or Bahia to Penedo, about 30 30 miles up the wonderful San Francisco river, which is navigable, except for a short distance on both sides of the falls, for over 1,000 miles into Brazil, and is full of interest from mouth to source.

Penedo is the second largest city in the state of Alagoas. Almost opposite Penedo is the ancient town of Villa-Nova in the state of Sergipe. The town is said to have once been an important place, but now chiefly consists of tumble-down houses. A large rice-hulling factory is, however, located here, also large cotton-seed and castor-oil factories and a cotton gin. The products of these factories are shipped to nearby towns.

From Penedo to Piranhas, the head of navigation of the lower San Francisco, or that part of the river below the falls district, one has choice of making the trip either by small double-decked light-draft stern-wheel steamer, which makes a round trip once a week, or by a locally built native sailboat called "canoa."

Canoa is Portuguese (the language of Brazil) for canoe, which it resembles in outline, but differs therefrom in having in the forward third a peculiarly shaped palm-leaf-thatched cabin with dovecot-like windows painted a dark color, contrasting with the other woodwork. Other than a shelf-like affair running around on a level with the windows and used either as seat or bunk, as occasion warrants, the cabin has no furnishings. The rest of the boat, except an area over the rudder on which stands the helmsman, and the small space occupied by a built-in box filled with sand, on which the cooking is done, is utilized as cargo space and is sufficient to carry from 10 to 20 horses or oxen, packed crosswise like sardines.

The size and character of the boat does not appeal to our idea of a canoe. Such a boat, with its crew of two men, can be chartered at a reasonable figure, while frequently a passage can be arranged for at a reduction on steamer rates.

Whether to take steamer or canoa is difficult to advise; that would depend upon the temperament of the traveler, the company and the circumstances. In the various trips of the writer, steamer or canoa has been used, in accord with mood or necessity. As to time, one method is about as quick as the other, each consuming two days in going the 150 miles and like time in returning. The steamer remains at Piranhas but one day, so that, unless it is desired to consume a week in the neighborhood of the falls, the canoa offers the only quick return to Penedo. On the steamer meals are procurable, while on the canoa provisions must be supplied by the voyager or arranged for with the captain. In either case it is wise to take some prepared food, as the cooks make chiefly native dishes, which require an educated palate for appreciation. Whether by steamer or canoa, unless mosquito proof, one must of necessity have a mosquito bar; a hammock or camp bed is a wise provision. In the daytime mosquitoes are not troublesome, but with the setting of the sun, when the boats usually tie up for the night, they become excessively annoying.

Voyage by canoa is both romantic and thrilling. Every day, commencing at ten o'clock, off Penedo, a stiff breeze arises and blows upstream with such force that the canoas, with their large sails spread, resembling at a distance huge bats, seem to fly upstream, frequently with such speed as to overtake and pass the steamer, which has left some time before. The river is practically straight, and the farther up one goes the more it is hemmed in by the hills along its banks, so that the canoa has the full benefit of the breeze, which follows the turns of the river.

Between Penedo and Piranhas there are several towns of importance, the chief of which are Propria and Gararu, in the state of Sergipe, and S. Braz, Traipu and Pao d'Assucar, in the state of Alagoas. All of these places are of sufficient interest to warrant short stops. They are the river ports of large sections in which cotton, beans, corn, rice and cattle are raised in large quantities. Rice is chiefly raised along the river itself and in ponds formed adjacent thereto when the river is in freshet.

Pao d'Assucar is so called because of a large hill on the river front which resembles a sugar loaf, but, unfortunately for the town, it acts as a barrier to the wind and causes the sand to be thrown up in such quantities that the portion of the town adjacent thereto has to be periodically excavated.

Piranhas is a picturesque village built in terraces around the curve of a practically barren hill. At this port one hears much of the "piranhas," or scissors fish, a terror along the whole San Francisco river, though said to be in greater numbers here than elsewhere. This fish has a peculiar shaped head with serrated teeth bent backward. It is of carnivorous propensities, frequently attacking and biting pieces out of animals which go down to the river to drink. Even men are said to have been victims to it.

From Piranhas there is a railroad to Jatoba, 71 miles distant, where navigation for the upper San Francisco is resumed. A little more than half way to Jatoba is the Falls Station, a desolate place with only a closed station house surrounded by a thicket, travel to the falls being too light to warrant even a caretaker. It is best, therefore, to stop at Pedras, a small village reached just before the station. Here guides, horses and food can be procured for the rest of the journey, which will take from two to three hours' riding.

The ride to the falls is best made very early in the morning, otherwise the heat is so intense that the trip would not be enjoyable. The road is frequently through dense thickets in which are found oncas (felix concolor), small wild cats, deer, prea (caven aperea) a ratlike animal hunted by the natives, wild hog (dicotyles), several varieties of small monkeys and birds. Here parrots, paroquets, wild pigeons and doves occur in flocks. In the dry season snakes, particularly rattlesnakes, are seen in great numbers, doubtless due to the drying up of the short, stiff grass, which renders them more visible.

Paulo Affonso seems to have moods, its appearance markedly differing with the seasons, or, more properly speaking, with the volume of water in the river, which is dependent upon season. The writer has made the trip there at the three principal stages of the river and notes that the cataract itself does not change much in form as a result of volume of water. However, when the river is in freshet additional cataracts are formed by the water passing through the ravines, which at other times are dry, and leaping over the high cliff direct into the lower whirlpool. The rapids, on the contrary, are materially changed by any deviation in the volume of water and, were they approachable when the river is high, they would doubtless be devoid of the great beauty which characterizes them at other periods.

The ideal time to visit the falls is just after the river has fallen sufficiently to allow one to cross the numerous rocky ravines through which, when the river is high, water is rushing, preventing a near approach to the true river bed and the falls. Soon after the freshet, which is from November to March, the grass springs up and the plants burst into bloom. Gaudy colors then predominate, from the deep yellow of the trumpet flower, the reds and blues of other plants, the beautiful pink flower of the "cebolla brava," which, when eaten cause the death of so many animals, to the black seed pod of the "blackwood" bush and the exquisite white bloom of the "cereus" which pops open at night, exhaling its delicate but penetrating odor. After a few weeks the dry season sets in. The grass and ephemeral flowering plants are then scorched by the sun, leaving only a few hardy bushes and the cacti.

Consisting as it does of a succession of rapids ending in a fall, opinion differs as to which point about Paulo Affonso one should first visit. To the writer the most beautiful and awe-inspiring portion is the rapids. One in viewing them realizes the truth of the words of a noted traveler, that "if Niagara be the monarch of cataracts, Paulo Affonso is assuredly the king of rapids." Either as rapids or falls, it stands unique. It has none of the artificial surroundings of Niagara, neither parks, houses, nor work of man. Instead, it remains unadorned, as it has been for centuries, with its almost barren banks standing like walls and more resembling cast iron than, as they are in reality, rock painted black by the iron and manganese held in solution by the water when the river is in freshet.

Living near the falls are a few men who, knowing the most accessible footpaths to the various points of interest, will act as guides for a small fee. However, they are not obtrusive or insistent in proffering their services; on the contrary, one has to make inquiry to find them.

The falls are slightly crescentric in form. The main body of water rushes down the steep incline of the last rapids to the Mal da Cachoeira, where it hurls itself with great momentum against a steep black wall directly in front of it, rebounds, swishing, swirling, churning and foaming, only to be pushed over the abyss, at a right angle to its original course, by the dancing, foaming waters of the Angiquinho before the water can recover its natural appearance. The width of the river at this point is about 50 feet, and the depth of the water at the base of the falls is given as 86 feet. The river then rushes straight on for a few hundred feet, only to be hurled back by a rock wall 300 feet high, forming the lower whirlpool, from which it finally escapes at a right angle and passes for some miles through a narrow forge.

The guide next leads one to the river above, where, hemmed in by low banks of black rock, it is broad and quiet, with nothing to suggest the turbulent waters just left. Continuing upstream, one sees numerous islands, mere rocks projecting like monuments from the water, and notes that already the water has commenced to hurry.

A short distance below the river makes its first leap of 30 feet. This is followed by the "Val-vem de Cima" (upper come and go), a miniature whirlpool, where the water ebbs and flows at oft-repeated intervals. Farther on, the rock banks of the river approach each other and through clefts in the rock the river is compressed into five narrow branches, four of which immediately start their descent by tumbling 15 or 20 feet and, becoming a mass of seething foam, rushes down the steep incline with a fury that almost causes the earth to shake and with a roar that can be heard for miles, thus forming the soul-inspiring rapids.

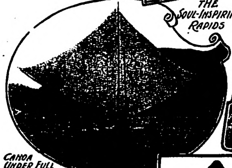
According to the guide, the trip to Paulo Affonso would not be complete without a visit to what he styles the wonderful "Furna do Morcego" (bats' cave). To see this one is induced to climb, crawl, and, if not very careful, fall down the zigzag path leading to the edge of the lower whirlpool where, after literally scrambling over the rubbish thrown up by it, one is conducted to the large gaping entrance to the cave. The cave itself is disappointing. It is nothing more than a large opening in the bank, and is uninteresting unless one excepts the great number of vampire bats which inhabit it. These are very troublesome to the cattle raisers in the vicinity.

From the mouth of the cave one has a good view of the whirlpool, but with thoughts of the difficult climb necessary to return, it is doubtful if this side trip has been worth the trouble.

THE QUAY AT PENEDO

AGIQUINHO FALLS

THE SOUL-INSPIRING RAPIDS

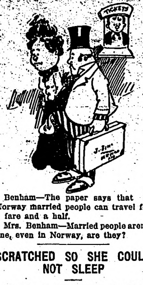


CANOA UNDER FULL SAIL

PIRANHAS LOOKING TOWARD PAULO AFFONSO

COWBOY OF THE PAULO AFFONSO DISTRICT

THEY ARE ONE AND A HALF.



Benham—The paper says that in Norway married people can travel for a fare and a half.

Mrs. Benham—Married people aren't one, even in Norway, are they?

SCRATCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

"I write to tell you how thankful I am for the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. My little niece had eczema for five years and when her mother died I took care of the child. It was all over her face and body, also on her head. She scratched so that she could not sleep nights. I used Cuticura Soap to wash her with and then applied Cuticura Ointment. I did not use quite half the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, together with Cuticura Resolvent, when you could see a change and they cured her nicely. Now she is eleven years old and has never been bothered with eczema since. My friends think it is just great the way the baby was cured by Cuticura. I send you a picture taken when she was about 18 months old.

"She was taken with the eczema when two years old. She was covered with big sores and her mother had all the best doctors and tried all kinds of salves and medicines without effect until we used Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. H. Kiernan, 663 Quincy St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27, 1909."

Wife and Country.

Paul D. Cravath, the noted New York lawyer, said at a luncheon at the Lawyers' club: "Vacation time is here, and already that dreadful song about the wife gone to the country is being resurrected. But a variant to the song was furnished by a conversation I overheard the other night.

"'Hello, Smith,' said one man to another, 'I'm glad to see you back at the club again, old fellow. Wife off to the country eh?'

"'No,' growled Smith. 'She's got back.'"

Taking Fatner's Job.

"Why should you beg? You are both young and strong."

"That is right, but my father is old and weak and can no longer support me."—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Tips you get are almost as worthless as those you give.

Millions Say So

When millions of people use for years a medicine it proves its merit. People who know CASCARETS' value buy over a million boxes a month. It's the biggest seller because it is the best bowel and liver medicine ever made. No matter what you're using, just try CASCARETS once—you'll See. 917

CASCARETS 10c. a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

PAXTINE
TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Your Salary Guaranteed Here is an exceptional opportunity for you to earn a liberal weekly income. Furthermore, you can establish a permanent, profitable business, or a well-paying "side-line" by working on our special plan. Our work is simple and remunerative, and requires no capital or previous experience. Remember, your salary is guaranteed—and is entirely apart from the liberal cash commissions and other bonuses. Some of our representatives have incomes ranging from $1,500.00 to $10,000.00 yearly. We need a representative in your town at once. Then insure yourself the big returns you can secure from this great unworked field by mailing this ad—NOW—to COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, Room 2D, 1789 Broadway, New York City

Put a
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER
in your vacation outfit

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

10 Post Cards 10c Regular 2 for 5c kind. High Class Art Pictures, all different. DREXEL POST CARD CO., 3901 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 32-1910.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE Famous Rayo Lamp

THE STEADY WHITE LIGHT

The Rayo Lamp is a high grade lamp, sold at a low price. There are lamps that cost more, but there is no better lamp made at any price. Constructed of solid brass; nickel plated—easily kept clean; an ornament to any room in any house. There is nothing known to the art of lamp-making that can add to the value of the RAYO Lamp as a light-giving device. Every dealer everywhere. If not at yours, write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the STANDARD OIL COMPANY (Incorporated)

KANTLEAK METAL SHINGLES

Cover your "Lid" with Kantleak Metal Shingles and keep dry! Best metal shingles on the market. If your dealer does not handle them, write to

DULUTH CORRUGATING & ROOFING CO.
Manufacturers of Metal Shingles, Roofing, Siding, etc.
DULUTH MINNESOTA

MSB Minnesota School of Business
May We Send You Our Free Catalog?
52 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
Every graduate an enthusiastic friend; every employer of its graduates a ready reference. May we have the privilege of training you for success now? Established over thirty years.
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

Finding Fighters for Uncle Sam

By EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W. A. PATTERSON

THE war department is trying to find ways and means to increase the number of cadets at the United States Military academy. Since the Spanish war, when the army was enlarged, there have not been anywhere near enough graduates to fill the vacancies in the commissioned ranks of the army. The result has been that not only has it been necessary to promote to the rank of second lieutenant, enlisted men of the army who can pass the required examination, but to appoint each year to the service large numbers of civilians.

Naturally enough the war department officials feel that the commissioned officers should be men educated to the profession of a soldier. There seems to be a pretty general feeling, one hard for the authorities to account for by the way, that every man is born a soldier and that the military profession is the only one for which no special training is required. Gen. Winfield Scott, at the close of the Mexican war, said that if it had not been for the officers of his army who were graduates of the military academy the war would have been prolonged for years. This praise of the institution and the men whom it turns out was given by a man not a graduate, and who, therefore, could not be said to be prejudiced in favor of the institution.

The course at West Point is a particularly hard one and a good many cadets are found deficient every year, generally in only one study. West Point, however, differs from all other schools of the world. There they do not strike an average of studies, taking all the lessons taught in a lump. For instance, if a man stands at the head of his class in four studies, but is a little bit below the proficient average in one study, the authorities throw him out, whereas in other schools they would strike an average and give such a man a high standing.

The result of such a system as this is that men who are qualified for the service in practically every way, but who may be a little lame in French or a trifle off in geology or chemistry, are separated from the army to which they might possibly be a credit if an average of excellence was struck by the authorities.

It is quite often the case that men who do not graduate but who have had several years' training at the academy succeed in getting commissions in the service. There are no records to show that any man who spent two years at West Point failed to pass his examination for a commission after he had been successful in getting an appointment to the army from civil life.

Some of the boys who have been at West Point, but have not graduated, enlisted in the United States army in order to get their commission from the ranks. When a man does so enlist he may be sent as a private soldier to a company in which some classmate is a lieutenant. Now it must be remembered that there is a deep gulf between officers and enlisted men in the regular army, a gulf which it is necessary to have remain fixed, because familiarity of intercourse between officers and enlisted men would lead to lax discipline. It is not the case, as some people seem to think, of an officer being too proud to associate with enlisted men. The officers of the army hold the enlisted men in high esteem. They know that they are the backbone of the army and they know that on their loyalty, obedience and courage hangs success in war and the credit of the army in peace. Every army in the world has learned the lesson that there must be a lack of familiar intercourse in a social way between the commissioned officers and the enlisted men.

When a young fellow who has been at West Point enlists he is likely, as has been said, to get into a command in which one of his classmates may be an officer. Then it is that a curious relation results. The enlisted man meets his former classmate, whom he once called Bill or Jim and with whom he possibly roomed as a cadet, and he must simply salute him as any other enlisted man would, and pass without a sign of "familiar recognition." Now this does not mean at all that Jim or Bill does not want to speak to his former classmate. It means simply that the enlisted man wants to preserve his own standing with his fellow soldiers and does not want to put his former classmate by and chance in an embarrassing position. If the enlisted men should learn that their newly enlisted fellow was a former classmate and a friend of one of the officers they might think that it was going to be a case of currying favor on the one side or of showing favor on the other. The man who is once a cadet and who enlists is more careful if he is built right, and he generally is, to maintain a proper attitude toward the men who rank him.

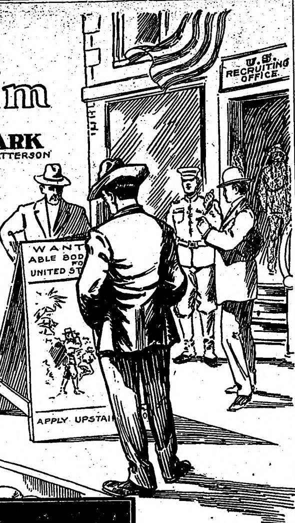
They tell a story in Washington of a young fellow who came of rich parentage, but who never had been at West Point, by the way, who enlisted in the army to get his commission. He attempted to presume on the fact of his wealth and he not only got the officers down on him, but the men as well. His lot was not altogether a happy one. It can be said, however, that cases like that of this young man are few and far between. The man who is willing to enlist in order to get his commission, generally speaking, is of good stuff enough to make him willing to take things as they come and to take rather more than his share of the duties and the hardships of the enlisted men with whom he is thrown.

There was once upon a time a cadet who, having spent time enough at the United States Military academy to cover a considerable part of the course, was compelled by the government to sever his connection with the school he had hoped would prove to him a fostering mother until the end.

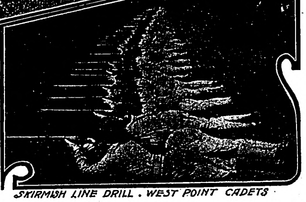
This cadet, who shall be nameless because of a modest desire to avoid the use of the pronoun in the first person, had a yearning for military life, and so a few years after leaving the academy he walked into a Boston recruiting office and enlisted. Several classmates and several other army friends knew of the enlistment and told the enlisted one prior to his application for admission to the service to strike out for a commission, and, above all things, not to let any of the enlisted men, or any of the officers who did not know him, have knowledge of the fact that he had been at the military academy, for otherwise they might think he expected favors.

The advice was needless, for whatever else the recruit intended to do he desired that his service should be performed on the same level with that of every other man in the United States army, but the truth is that this determination and its carrying out led to some complications that had humor enough at the time even though they lose the humor because of lack of power in the storyteller.

TYPES OF RECRUITS FOR UNITED STATES ARMY



U. S. RECRUITING OFFICE
WANTED ABLE BODIED MEN FOR UNITED STATES ARMY
APPLY UPSTAIRS



SKIRMISH LINE DRILL. WEST POINT CADETS

This cadet recruit was landed at David's Island, New York harbor, where there were 700 other recruits undergoing instruction, and a green lot they were. The cadet was turned out for squad drill with five other recruits, not one of whom knew enough about soldiering to keep his heels together. A tall, raw-boned Irish sergeant with the euphonious name of O'Baldwin was in command of the squad. He began to explain the position of a soldier. He found that the recruit on the right of the line already was in the position of a soldier. The truth was he couldn't help himself.

O'Baldwin eyed him critically. "Fall out!" he said.

The one-time cadet fell out. "What regiment did ye desart from?" said O'Baldwin, pleasantly.

"This is my first enlistment," answered the recruit, and in answering he told the truth, for a cadet isn't enlisted.

"What company are ye in?" asked O'Baldwin, though he knew perfectly well, for his own bunk was not three bunks removed from that of the recruit.

"D company," answered the queried one, and that's where he made the mistake of his life.

That apparently simple answer proved conclusively to the sergeant's mind that he had an ex-regular before him, for all the national guardsmen would have answered "Company D" instead of "D company." The regular who would speak of his command as "Company D" would be considered deserving of the guardhouse for a month, for to put the letter after the company save when it is written is to the army man the height of things unmilitary.

"You go to your quarters; we'll look into this," said the sergeant.

The recruit went to his quarters and half an hour later the first sergeant of the outfit sent for him. The "Top" opened the conversation cheerfully with a query as to what regiment the recruit had left in the lurch. Finding that he was bound to be considered a deserter, the unhappy one took the bull by the horns thus: "I am serving my first enlistment in the army; I never was in the marine corps and I never saw the inside of a national guard armory."

"Ever been in one of them private military schools?" asked the "Top."

"Never."

"Go to your quarters."

In another hour the recruit was given a rifle and cartridge box and belt and was ordered to turn out with the squad of recruits who had advanced far enough in the school of the soldier to receive lessons in the manual of arms. Now as a matter of fact the recruit knew the manual of arms so well he couldn't have hidden his knowledge if he had tried. This time there was another sergeant in charge. His eye took in the way the recruit on the right handled his piece and executed the manual.

In less than a minute the sergeant ordered him who was showing such proficiency to step to the front, and ordered "place rest" for the remainder of the squad. Then turning his attention to his victim, he said: "We'll try the bayonet exercise a bit. Guard!"

The recruit came down to "a guard" possibly with as much precision and in probably as proper style as the veteran sergeant had ever seen it done.

"Passing yourself off for a recruit. It's a fraud you are. Get to your quarters." And the recruit went to his bunk again, knowing that he was in deep disgrace.

About half an hour later he heard two old soldiers talking outside of the barracks window. One of them said to the other: "There's a cuss in there who ain't never been in the marine corps, nor in the milishy, nor in the reg'lars, nor to one of them military schools. The sergeant says he's either a blankety-blank liar or else he larnt his soldierin' from books, which ain't likely."

That night just after "tattoo," the first sergeant appeared and told the recruit that the company commander wanted to see him at once in the orderly room. The recruit went to the presence of the commissioned officer and stood attention as he had stood attention as a cadet a thousand times before. The captain looked him up and down. "I understand," he said, "that this is your first enlistment; that you have never been a national guard; that you have never been a marine and that you never attended a private military school."

The recruit acquiesced with a respectful "Yes, sir."

"About face."

The recruit made an about face, and then at a repetition of the command, again faced the captain, who was grinning.

"Go to your quarters," said the commanding officer.

The recruit went and in ten minutes the top sergeant was there, saying: "You can't fool the old man. You've been made a lance corporal and you go on guard as corporal of the third relief tomorrow morning."

There are a good many officers in the United States army today who served for a while at the military academy as cadets, but who were compelled to stay five years at the academy in order to get their commissions, having been "turned back" into the class next below them either for deficiency in studies or for breaches of discipline. If General Sheridan had not been given another chance after he had engaged in a little affair which was considered a breach of discipline while he was a cadet the wonder is who would have been the right-hand cavalry leader of Grant during the Civil war.

A few months ago Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins died. He entered the military academy some time prior to the opening of the Civil war, but the authorities did not allow him to graduate. Hawkins was not discouraged by the failure and as soon as the Civil war broke out he offered his services to his country and was given a commission. He staid in the regular army until the time of his death and so strong was his love of the military academy that before his death he asked that he might be buried in the cadet cemetery. It was Hawkins' custom each year when he could get away from his command to visit the school where he had spent three years of his boyhood. He had just as strong a love for the institution as did any graduate in the army.

Recently there has been a disposition on the part of the graduates of the military academy to give more consideration to the men who spent some time at the school, but who did not graduate. One class organization includes in its membership all the cadets who at any time were members of the class, and no distinction is made between graduate and nongraduate, even the offices of the organization being open to men who did not complete the course.

Other class organizations are said to be preparing to follow the example of that of the members of 1884 and if the custom of taking into full brotherhood the non-graduates becomes general the belief is that good will come to the academy and the country.

Statue of Liberty Grafters

If the visitors who paid good money to a soldier for the privilege of climbing up the steps of the statue of Liberty had only known about the sixty-second article of war they never would have graduated from the deadhead class on a reservation belonging to Uncle Sam, the New York Herald says. As it is, under the last general order from the war department two soldiers who levied tribute are doomed to penal servitude for their speculative enterprise.

According to the army orders, Axel T. Holm, a first-class private of G company, signal corps, and Edward A. Bagnall, of the same grade and command, organized a syndicate for the exploitation of the French evidence of friendship for America, which, following the actual language of the order, operated, as to Holm, after this fashion:

"He, the said Holm, did designedly and fraudulently obtain money from certain visitors to the statue of liberty, fees for the privilege of going up into said statue, by knowingly making false pretenses that such fees were necessary."

And as to the enterprising Bagnall:

"That he did knowingly assist in fraudulently obtaining money from visitors to the statue of Liberty by acting as a 'lookout' with the duty of actually giving warning to the man collecting the fees in case an officer were approaching."

All of this, according to the charges and specifications upon which conviction was made, and approval then passed, violated the sixty-second article of war. In the case of Holm the department orders his dishonorable discharge and his confinement for two years at Fort Leavenworth. Bagnall gets off with reduction to the grade of private, four months' confinement and the forfeiture of $13 a month. He will work his sentence out around the base of the statue, cleaning up such litter as the tributeless visitors see fit to make.

The evidence showed that the two men arranged a scheme to tax all visitors ten cents a head for the pleasure of climbing to the head of the goddess, with the ever-burning torch, and the story was printed exclusively in the Herald at the time. While one of them took in the toll the other lingered about to give the collector a tip if an officer chanced to be bearing down upon the post exchange. Capt. D. J. Carr, commanding the post, is very proud of this pretty show station, and he broke up the game just as soon as he found what was in the air.

STREET TRAFFIC OF PARIS.

There are nearly half a million horses and motor vehicles of all kinds in Paris today, with 20,000 hand carts and 9,000 wheelbarrows. In 1909 65,870 accidents were caused in the Paris streets by 81,868 vehicles. These statistics are contained in a report drawn up by M. Emile Massard at the request of the Paris municipal council on the incumberment of the Paris streets. One of M. Massard's calculations shows that the street traffic of Paris, if stationary, would occupy 445 acres of the 2,079 acres of streets which Paris possesses. Last year 600,000,000 persons traveled by omnibuse and tramway, and there were 294,000,000 passengers on the underground railway.—Indianapolis News.

TY COBB SAYS YOU MUST TAKE CHANCES TO WIN

DETROIT'S GREAT FIELDER DECLARES PLAYER WILL HELP HIS TEAM IF HE GRASPS EVERY OPPORTUNITY.

By TY COBB.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Taking chances at all times, taking every reasonable chance, and some that do not seem even reasonable, is the way I think a player wins games. If he has speed, and courage, and confidence, and then takes the chances, seizes every opening and runs hard and slides harder, he will help his team win.

Sometimes it seems to me that one ball player is better than another, simply because he has more nervous energy and what we call "guts," than another. Nowadays the teams are so closely matched and the men so nearly equal in ability, that the team to win must have some method, or some skilful leader, and then something to keep it hustling and fighting all the time.

If this is meant for advice to young players, just tell them that they must hustle every minute, forget themselves and dig for runs. I know that when I get into a ball game all I think of is to win that game and get around the bases. I can't see or hear the crowd, and every opposing player is my enemy, no matter how good friends they may be off the ball field. I think that is the way a ball player must feel to win. He must forget himself, forget everything, and go after that game with every bit of strength and speed he has, not loafing a minute, and taking every chance possible. He must run out every ball he hits. As for batting, that is more or less natural ability and determination. A man may improve his hitting by steady practise, but I doubt whether a man can be taught to hit. I think the secret of hitting is not to be afraid of injury and not to "pull" at all. There are lots of batters who pull, that is, draw back slightly from the plate when the ball is pitched, and lose the force of their swing. In most cases these batters are as fearless as any others, but they pull unconsciously from nervousness. Steady practise may help overcome this nervousness, and help the hitting.

Ty Cobb.

When a runner gets on bases he ought to have a definite plan of how he is going to get around, and signal the batter his intentions, but he must not allow that to keep him from taking any opening he sees, and he must be watching every instant for a half passed ball, and be ready to change his plan in a fraction of a second. When I reach first I look around to see the positions of the outfielders, and watch the second baseman and shortstop to see which is going to take the throw. If an outfielder is out of position I want to know it, for I may decide to try to take two bases on a hit, or take two on anything he a player gets a ball out of position to make a strong, fast throw. A base runner ought to know exactly how opposing players throw, and the strength of their arms, for a runner may take a base on one man when he would not dare to start on another.

Above all things, young players ought to study the game, and the other players. One can learn a lot just by watching other players and studying their actions—and experience and knowledge of the other players helps.

There is one more thing; always play square. I feel almost as badly when we win a game we don't deserve as when we are beaten. I don't mean that a player should not take every legitimate advantage, but that he should not take unfair advantage. The longer I play the more satisfaction there is in winning in a sportsmanlike way. There is no satisfaction in winning by trickery, and a fellow who does some hot-headed trick regrets it. They do not pay. The other fellows are trying as hard and earnestly as you are.

Brooklyn Youngsters Promising.

Brooklyn has a number of youngsters who promise to shine in the fast set with a little more experience. Tony Smith, Daubert, Wheat and Dalton are a most promising combination. Tony Smith at short is not bigger than a stick of gum in stature, but in fielding he is a giant. Fast as lightning, and a quick thinker.

Fred Pfeffer a Farmer.

The once-famous second baseman, Fred Pfeffer, has purchased a farm in the Ozarks and will quit the Chicago saloon business to live there.

Historical Society
MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1910. NO. 20.

City Items in Terse Form

Metropolitan News of Interest to All Readers

Faithful Dog Avenges a Policeman

NEW YORK.—Patrolman Lawrence Cummins of the East One Hundred and Fourth street police station, on whose post the car barn gang has its headquarters, was beaten savagely by members of that band and was in the hospital for several weeks.

The first request Cummins made to Capt. Corcoran when he reported again for duty was to be assigned to his old post. He said he wanted to show the toughs that he was not afraid of them and that they could not drive a policeman from his place of duty. Capt. Corcoran took the same view and sent Cummins back.

From the moment he resumed his work the gang annoyed Cummins, but it was not until the other night that the roughs got a chance to "do him up" again. He found about a dozen of them on the street insulting women who passed.

"Move on," commanded Cummins. But a truck driver, 19 years old, hurled insults at the policeman. Cummins arrested him. The rest of the gang disappeared. Cummins started for the police station with his prisoner, but as they went along there was a call from a roof. The prisoner broke from Cummins and ran into a house.

The gang had gone to a roof, torn away the chimney and waiter for the policeman and his prisoner. When the signal was given and the prisoner had fled from the firing zone his friends hurled the chimney bricks down at Cummins. After three had struck him on the head he fell unconscious. Men who saw the attack ran to the station. Sergt. Higgins and eight bluecoats raced to the rescue of their comrade.

Twice a week a Dalmatian dog, Bessie, who belongs to truck company No. 26 on One Hundred and Fourteenth street, visits the East One Hundred and Fourth street station, and has a supper at the expense of John Ritter. That night she was there and she went with the rescue squad.

When the men entered the house from which the bricks had been hurled on Cummins the dog went with them. But while the sergeant and his men went to the roof Bessie stopped at the second floor.

Back in a dark corner of the tenement hallway she had caught sight of a man, and, instead of going further, she leaped for him. She got a good grip on his trousers and he could not beat her off. Five minutes afterward the policemen on their way back to the street after a fruitless search, heard a scuffle. They found Bessie still holding on to the man. He was the escaped prisoner and was taken to the police station. The attack on Cummins was the fourth made on a policeman by the gang in as many months.

Law Can't Suppress Babies' Howls

NASSY OLD TOOTHERS
AW—N
AW—MYAW
AW
I'LL HAVE THAT BRAT PINCHED —!—?

BROOKLYN.—Anxiously awaiting the outcome of the important case of Tucker against Coch, tried in the Flatbush court, Brooklyn, Flatbush mothers learned with great relief that they would not be forced to the expense of equipping their teething babies with Maxim silencers, Coch lost and the babies of Flatbush were triumphant.

Passing, Solomon-like, on the great issue, Magistrate Naumer ruled that even a Flatbush infant must have teeth to go through the world with. Should one be expected to worry through life with gums innocent of molars and incisors, missing the joys of sinking them into sirloin at 20 cents a pound? To be sure not. Was Mr. Coch a toothless baby? Of course he wasn't. Didn't he cry when the soothing syrup failed to soothe? He did. Well, then, why should the Tucker baby be denied that world-old privilege of infancy? Mr. Coch could adduce nothing to overthrow this argument.

So it was ruled by the learned court that it was well within the old Roman, the English common, the revised or unrevised statutes, the city ordinances, Magna Charta, or even the plain or common variety of law for any Flatbush baby to howl and yowl and rip up the palpitating silence of the Flatbush night and turn it inside out while his "toofens" are pushing themselves out as a protest against a milk diet. This applies to both boy and girl babies not only in Flatbush, but all over Brooklyn.

King Hog Makes Lucky Farmer Glad

YOUR HIGH-NESS

KANSAS CITY.—The greatest moneymaker on the farm during the past year has been the hog. The farmer with a carload of hogs was assured of an automobile, a trip to Europe, or more farm land. Never in modern history have hogs been sold at such high prices, on a strictly gold basis, of course, as during the past several months.

Early in the present year there were reports of a "hog shortage" from many hog-raising districts. And market receipts bore out the reports. From January 1, 1910, to July 1, 1910, receipts at the five leading western markets—Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis and St. Joseph—were, in round numbers, two and one-fourth million head less than during the corresponding six months of 1909. Arrivals at the five big points in the first half of 1909 numbered 9,280,000. In the first half of 1910 receipts at the previously mentioned markets were 2,990,000. In other words, a growing population was fed on 75 per cent. of the hogs that were consumed in the first six months of 1909. The direct effect of the decrease in hog receipts, while the population was unquestionably increasing, was a sharp advance in market value of swine.

Mississippi Catfish Are Thirsty

NOBODY KNOWS HOW DRY I AM—

ST. LOUIS.—It is only within the memory of the oldest of river men that the rivers forming the great Mississippi system have been so low in the summer as they have this year. The old-timers say the low stages this year can be compared only with those of 1864, when the catfish had to climb out into the fields to moisten their parched throats with the dew.

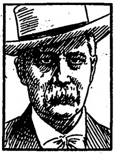
North of St. Louis steamboat traffic is almost at a standstill on account of the low water in the Upper Mississippi. The Diamond Jo line has been forced to take off its through boats to St. Paul and has great difficulty in getting its local packets through to Burlington, Ia. Many excursion boats are tied up. Several of the boats have been damaged in an effort to navigate.

But while the steamboat interests are suffering the pearl button factories and the pearl hunters are reaping a harvest. Hundreds of men, women and children can be seen along the water front of every town hunting clams. The shells are sold to the button factories after being searched for pearls. Many fine pearls have been found.

If it were not for the water that comes out of the Missouri, steamboat traffic would be suspended between here and Cairo. While the Missouri has not risen this year to within 15 feet of the flood stage, it has maintained a steady flow of water, enough to keep the steamboats going on the Mississippi and enough for the boats running on that stream. Still, unless there are rains soon in the north the Missouri is likely to go very low this fall, although not as low as it has been in some years. It has been many years since the Missouri has fallen below the zero stage. It is now eight feet above that stage, which is about the usual flow in the fall.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

POLITICIAN OWES MILLIONS



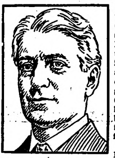
Col. James M. Guffey, oil magnate and national Democratic committeeman for Pennsylvania, whose affairs were recently placed in the hands of a receiver because it was said that he owed a vast sum which he had not the ready money to liquidate, will pay off his indebtedness in full and then still have some $8,000,000 balance left, according to John S. Willard, receiver for the politician. Schedules of the colonel's finances show that his assets are something more than $15,000,000, while liabilities amount to about $7,000,000. The receiver for Colonel Guffey's properties was appointed by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen, of Pittsburg, upon a bill in equity filed by J. H. Galey.

The bill filed alleges that Colonel Guffey's indebtedness is about $6,700,000, of which about $950,000 is unsecured; that the defendant has no ready money with which to meet the payments due and that certain creditors are threatening to sell his collaterals and enter suits.

Colonel Guffey, who is 65 years old, has been an active Democratic leader in Pennsylvania for over 20 years. He has also built up two great fortunes. In 1583, when he had amassed wealth amounting to millions as an oil producer, he "went broke" with a score of other Pennsylvania millionaires following the depression in oil securities. As it seemed there was little chance of recuperating his fortunes in the oil fields, Colonel Guffey changed his base of operation to Pittsburg, his business to the production of natural gas, and in a half-dozen years his wealth again was in its old repositories.

As a member of the national committee he has been a forceful figure and he was a strong probability for the successorship to Chairman J. K. Jones after the latter's retirement. He has long been credited with the ambition to become a member of the United States senate.

PREACHER VICTIM OF FIRE

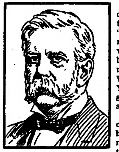


Rev. William John McCaughan, formerly pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Chicago, and his wife, were victims of a fire which swept the Kelvin hotel in Belfast, Ireland. Rev. Mr. McCaughan resigned his charge in Chicago three years ago to accept a pastorate of a church in Belfast. The fire spread so rapidly that guests and employees were cut off from escape. Three employees were burned to death and many of the guests were injured, perhaps fatally. The McCaughans occupied rooms on an upper floor of the hotel and when the fire started, tried to escape by a stairway. They were hemmed in by the flames, were severely burned and at last jumped from a window.

Rev. Mr. McCaughan was born in Moycraig, Ballycastle, Ireland, in 1559, and was educated at Magee college, Londonderry, and at New college, University of Edinburgh. He was ordained to the ministry in 1884, and occupied pulpits in Belfast, Toronto and Chicago. For many years he was active as an editor of Presbyterian publications and at one time was high chief ranger for Ireland of the Independent Order of Foresters. He has been prominent also in Masonic circles. His wife formerly was Miss Sara A. Cooper of Philadelphia.

As a minister Mr. McCaughan not only possessed unusual talents for preaching the Gospel, but he had great strength and breadth in dealing with human affairs. He was greatly interested in industrial problems, and had the respect and confidence of the laboring men of Chicago. Before coming to this country he was instrumental in settling a great strike in the shipbuilding yards in Belfast.

INVENTOR QUITS COMPANY

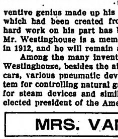


George Westinghouse, who resigns the presidency of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, having, he says, virtually been "frozen out" by his business associates, has been recognized as one of the country's greatest inventors since 1868, when he patented his air brake, now universally used on railroads. He has made many other inventions of great value. Mr. Westinghouse was born in Schoharie county, New York, in 1846. He is a member of the French Legion of Honor and holds decorations from Italy and Belgium.

It was not until after the reorganization of the company some years ago, when it went into the hands of a receiver, that Mr. Westinghouse first noticed that he was taking a secondary place in the business of the company—not voluntarily. The ventive genius made up his mind to retire entirely as active head of the firm which had been created from his brain and which through many years of hard work on his part has become one of the big corporations of the world. Mr. Westinghouse is a member of the board of directors whose terms expire in 1912, and he will remain as a director until that time.

Among the many inventions that are credited to the master mind of Mr. Westinghouse, besides the air brake, are a device for replacing derailed steam cars, various pneumatic devices for switching and signaling, a complete system for controlling natural gas and conveying it for long distances, adaptations for steam devices and similar creations. Mr. Westinghouse was recently elected president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

MRS. VANDERBILT TO FLY



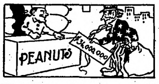
Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt has purchased one of the "smallest, prettiest and speediest" French monoplanes designed specially for women, and it is expected that she will soon be prominent among the feminine aviators. Three of the machines have been shipped to this country, with three French women to demonstrate them, and American women who long to experience the thrills of an aeroplane flight will soon have an opportunity to gratify their desire. The aeroplanes weigh only 180 pounds each and are equipped with 12-horse power engines. One will go to the aviation field at Mineola, L. I. All women who desire to learn the art of flying will be given instruction.

It is understood that two of the machines will become the property of Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, who has made flights with her husband, and of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., also experienced. Clifford B. Harmon will re-enter the ballooning field. He is to try for the international cup in the races from St. Louis and has purchased Captain Baldwin's balloon in New York for the purpose. He has piloted this same balloon before and with it established two American records, for height and duration, in a flight in October, 1909.

A series of "aeroplane matinees" under the auspices of the Aero club of America have been held on the aviation field at Garden City. Prizes were offered for flights of varied character. The first part of the program was a series of exhibition flights. Captain Baldwin and Mr. Harmon made ascents at the same time, the one turning to the left and the other following the two mile course to the right.

DOINGS AT THE CAPITAL

Vast Sum Which We Spend on Peanuts



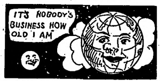
THE person who buys a nickel's worth of peanuts to munch at the ball game, to feed the squirrels in the park or to gladden the hearts of children at home, scarcely realizes that he has contributed to an industry that last year formed a million-dollar crop, and which placed on the market in various forms, reached the enormous sum of $36,000,000. But it is a fact, according to Washington statisticians.

This little seductive nut—a resolution to "eat just one" is soon forgotten—whose birthplace is America, was, until comparatively recently, unappreciated either as to the "money in them" or as a really nutritious product. Today the peanut plays an important part in pleasure, from the swell dinner party to the ever-present democracy of the circus, ball game or picnic. After all, what is a ball game, picnic or a circus without the peanut accompaniment?

By far the largest part of the crop is consumed from the peanut stand, the little whistle sign of the roaster being the signal for the average youngster to suggest to dad or ma that some of them would be very acceptable, and the paternal or maternal parent's willingness—nine times out of ten—to invest. Yet there are millions of bushels that go to the fattening of hogs throughout the south, the feeding of poultry, while the vines, often cured as hay, feed thousands of head of cattle, and even old Mother Earth is nourished by the roots of the plant, which furnishes nitrogen to it from the air.

The farming of peanuts during the past five years—not longer than this—has become an established industry of this country. At present about five-sixths of the crop comes from Virginia and most of the balance from Tennessee, Georgia, West Virginia and the Carolinas, although most of the southern states contribute some.

How Old Mother Earth Hides Her Age



IT'S NOBODY'S BUSINESS HOW OLD I AM

OLD MOTHER EARTH, like femininity through all time, but with her far greater success than most of her sex, has defied man to learn her age. Scientists still admit their defeat. Their latest estimate credits her with "not above 70,000,000 years or below 55,000,000 years." This estimate, given official sanction through publication by the Smithsonian institution in Washington, is the result of studies by Frank Wigglesworth Clarke and George F. Becker of the United States geological survey, who have followed the subject with considerable interest.

Prof. Clarke, in a paper entitled "A Preliminary Study of Chemical Denudation," presents a review of all the available data not only for the United States, but for the world of the proposition from a chemical point of view. Mr. Becker, on the other hand, discusses the question in a paper on "The Age of the Earth" from a more philosophical point of view.

The age of the earth always has been a subject for discussion among men of science and largely without any definite agreement among the representatives of the different branches of studies on account of the different points of attack.

Briefly, the more recent discussions as to the earth's age have placed the time as follows:

Lord Kelvin, in 1863, estimated the earth's age at 20,000,000 to 40,000,000 and perhaps 98,000,000 years.

Clarence King and Carl Barus, in 1833, placed the age at 24,000,000 years.

Lord Kelvin in 1897 revised his figures from 20,000,000 to 40,000,000 years.

De Lapparent, in 1890, said it was 67,000,000 to 90,000,000 years.

Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian institution, in 1893, placed the maximum age at 70,000,000 years.

J. Joly, in 1899, estimated the age of the ocean at 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 years.

W. J. Sollas, in 1909, placed the age of the ocean at 80,000,000 to 150,000,000 years.

Secretary Wilson Now the Bug Man

BEAT IT QUICK—HERE COMES WILSON

WASHINGTON.—Added to his already manifold duties, James Wilson, the secretary of agriculture, is now made by congress the chief bug inspector of the United States. It came about with the passage of a law identical with the pure food and drug act, but covering all insecticides and fungicides. The enforcement of the law, as in the pure-food law, is vested in a commission consisting of the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of commerce and labor and the secretary of agriculture. But the two cabinet officers first named are sort of commissioners emeritus. The real work comes down to the secretary of agriculture.

The bug commission has appointed the legal officers of the three departments, R. E. Cabell, commissioner of internal revenue; Charles Early, solicitor of the department of commerce and labor, and George P. McCabe, solicitor of the department of agriculture, as a subcommittee to look after the legal enforcement of the law. This subcommittee is up against a hard problem already. The law defines an insecticide as a compound for "repelling, destroying, mitigating or preventing" any insect. The law officers, after due consultation, admitted that while they understood how an insect might be repelled or destroyed, they did not see how they could prevent an insect or mitigate him.

The biological survey has issued an informal statement already, saying that the law is remiss in that it does not include rats among the insects to be prevented. An effort is being made to see whether the law officers are willing to consider rats as insects.

General Wood May Stir Up the Army

THE army is on the anxious seat. With a new boss on the job it is expected Major Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff, will make things hum until his own ideas are put into operation. Although he was appointed to succeed Major Gen. Franklin J. Bell last October, since that time he has been on a trip to Argentine to represent the United States at the centennial celebration, and has only lately returned to Washington.

In the meantime many important questions have been piling up awaiting his decision. Just what effect the personality of the new chief of staff will have on the army is a matter of much moment to the officers who know something of his strenuous career. It is expected he will undertake most actively a number of reforms which might not meet with the approval of the army at large.

One of the questions which will be taken up by General Wood is the physical test of officers. Since President Roosevelt inaugurated this system, many officers have been hoping that it would be modified. General Wood is one of the foremost of physical culture enthusiasts.

Instead of being made milder, it is not unlikely that the tests will be made harder than ever. The detail of troops to the Philippines is another matter that will be disposed of by General Wood very soon. He has also a number of ideas regarding cooperation between the regular army and the militia which he will probably attempt to put into practise.

General Carter, who has been acting chief of staff, will take his place as assistant chief. General Bliss, whom he succeeds, will go to San Francisco to relieve General Barry, who takes command of West Point.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - - MINN.

CANADA'S NEW TOY.

The germ of the Canadian navy is rapidly developing into a lively organism. The cruiser Rainbow, it is announced, will soon start from Portsmouth for the Pacific coast of Canada after having been thoroughly overhauled and inspected under the authority of the British Admiralty. The cruiser Niobe will leave Portsmouth for Halifax. Each warship will carry a full complement of British officers, who will serve in the Canadian navy for two years and a "skeleton" crew, of which the members will be engaged for five years, says Toronto Globe. It is not expected that it will be at all difficult to obtain the necessary officers and men in Canada when it becomes necessary to enlist them. It is interesting to note that the first proposal to construct a drydock of large dimensions under the legislation of last session has been made by the English firm of Vickers & Maxim, which has filed plans at Ottawa for works at Montreal covering fifty acres and costing two and a half million dollars. The construction of torpedo destroyers has long been a specialty with this celebrated firm, but far more important for this country is the building and repairing of steel vessels of large size. The introduction of such a plant will mark a new stage in the evolution of shipbuilding in Canada.

The Chicago public school authorities are preparing to establish a new high school course of two years, for the benefit of pupils who for financial reasons can remain no longer in the high schools. It is believed that by doing this many pupils who now go out into the business world from the district schools could be induced to take a special course of two years arranged with a view to their future employment. The development is in line with effort to strengthen the public schools as institutions for the preparation of young men and women for the practical work of life, and its outcome will be noted with interested by educators.

The rush to the newly-discovered gold fields of Alaska continues, and thousands are on their way, notwithstanding the certainty that many hardships and risk of failure to "make good" await them. And this in spite of that alleged discovery by a Scranton alchemist of a method for transmuting baser metals into the precious varieties, with the supposed possibilities of cheapening values. Evidently the glamour of gold has not yet lost power to lure the adventurous.

Look over a crowd of men in any place and it will be seen that black and the darker colors predominate in their clothes, no matter how hot the weather. Besides being unnecessarily uncomfortable they exert a depressing effect upon both wearer and beholder. A freer use of colors in men's clothing would make the world a brighter place for most of us.

A Pennsylvania man has gone into bankruptcy with liabilities of $1,446,773. Some of the actors who have gone into bankruptcy will be surprised to learn that his assets amount to considerably more than the price of an overcoat with a fur collar.

At a class dinner of a woman's college it developed that of the seniors fourteen were brides-to-be. This doesn't look as if Dan Cupid were worrying much over the higher education as a serious obstacle to his business.

Why can't people learn to say the "better"man won, instead of the "best" man, when but two contend? How can we hope to be a great people as long as the populace will be so careless?

Bethlehem, Pa., reports that the inventor of "pink circus lemonade" is dead. To have lived all these years, he himself couldn't have drunk much of it.

There is a German periodical called Der Gesundheitsingenieur. It must have trouble in finding room to put the picture of a girl on the front cover.

Two men in a New York town made their escape from jail by means of a safety razor. But it was a close shave.

When the mother birds are gadding about the little birds of today are learning to fly by watching the aeroplanes that Dayton, O., sends out and up.

If the comet was responsible for the unseasonable chill many people would now be glad if arrangements could be made for a return engagement.

New England holdups are just as bad as those born in the west.

FIFTY THOUSAND KNIGHTS PARADE

Brilliant Climax of Templars' Conclave in Chicago.

TRIENNIAL A BIG SUCCESS.

Acting Grand Master Melish in Command and Noted Masons From Different Parts of the World Present.

Chicago.—Fifty thousand Knights Templar, garbed in the handsome uniform of the order, wearing its glittering jewels and carrying drawn swords, marched through elaborately decorated streets of Chicago Tuesday, Aug. 9, passing beneath great arches and before a reviewing stand four blocks long, crowded with the leading officials of the order and the wives and families of the sir knights. Forty-two brass bands made music for the marchers, and all along the route they were cheered by the thousands of people who had assembled to witness the spectacle.

This magnificent parade was the climax, in a spectacular way, of the thirty-first triennial conclave of Knights Templar, which opened here on Sunday, Aug. 7. In accordance with the time honored custom of the grand encampment, the doings of the week began with divine service.

Begin With Divine Service.

The sir knights selected Orchestra hall for this purpose and entirely filled the body of that hall to listen to a sermon on "Templarism" delivered by Rev. Dr. George H. MacAdam of Madison, Wis., in the absence of Sir Knight George C. Rafter of Cheyenne, Wyo., very eminent grand prelate of the grand encampment. The music was in charge of the grand organist of the grand commandery of Illinois, the choir consisting of several male quartets belonging to the order in this state.

Monday was devoted mainly to the receiving of the grand and subordinate commanderies and escorting them to their hotels. It is estimated that fully 100,000 visitors came with the knights and that about 300,000 other excursionists have flocked to the city this week in consequence of the conclave. Of course every hotel was thronged and thousands of the visitors found quarters in private residences.

On Monday evening all the local and visiting commanderies kept open house at their respective headquarters, and many of the visitors found their way to the various amusement parks and the theaters.

Parade of The Knights.

The "grand parade" of Tuesday was the largest parade of Knights Templar ever held. The preparations were elaborate and Michigan boulevard was most elaborately decorated. The sir knights formed in line of march on the boulevard south of Thirty-first street, and signal to move was given by the guns of Battery B, I. N. G., the detachment for the purpose being composed of Knights Templar all of whom are members of the battery. The same detachment fired the salute to the grand master.

Marching northward in Michigan boulevard, the parade passed, near Hubbard court, beneath an entrance arch built in the form of an ancient battlement with its towers and turrets. This was intended to represent the entrance to the city, and as the column passed under it, buglers stationed on its heights heralded the approach of each grand division.

Next the knights came abreast of the first grand stand, one-half mile in length, and this needed no decorations, for it was filled to its capacity mainly with ladies whose beautiful summer costumes made it like a vast garden. About 50,000 persons were in this immense stand, as at its center was a gorgeous throne on which sat the acting grand master, William Bromwell Melish of Cincinnati, who became head of the order on the recent death of Grand Master Henry W. Rugg of Providence, R. I. Mr. Melish will be regularly elected grand master before the close of the conclave.

Just north of the Art Institute the parade passed before another reviewing stand in which were Mayor Busse, the city council and the park commissioners.

Beautiful "Templar Way."

At Washington street the marchers turned west to State, where they entered on the "Templar Way." This stretch extended from Randolph to Van Buren street and was made beautiful by a handsome arch and massive Corinthian columns of pure white erected thirty-three feet apart on both sides of the street. Festoons of natural laurel connected the columns, and the bright red cross and the shield and coat of arms of the order were prominent in the scheme of decoration.

Moving south to Jackson boulevard, the knights again turned west, and near the federal building passed before yet another reviewing stand which accommodated Governor Deneen and his staff. Marching north on La Salle street, the parade passed beneath the grand commandery arch of pure white which spanned the street at the La Salle hotel, the headquarters of the grand commandery of Illinois. This was a beautiful structure designed by one of Chicago's most famous sculptors. Upon its top stood the figures of mounted knights fourteen feet high. At the new city hall on Washington street the parade was dismissed, after marching forty-three blocks.

Entrancing Scenes at Night.

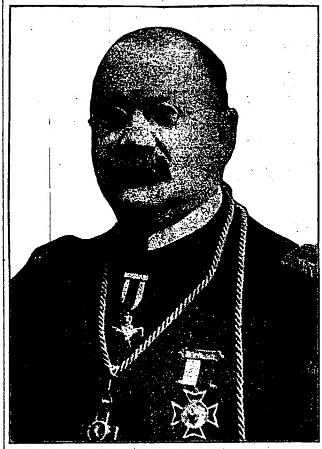
The scene in the streets at night was especially beautiful, for all the arches, festoons and columns of the decorative scheme were brilliantly illuminated, and on State street, in addition to the "Templar Way," the merchants had put up decorations that transformed the great shopping district into a veritable fairy land.

Undoubtedly the most spectacular feature of the night display was the wonderful electric set piece erected in Grant park on the lake front, reproducing in colossal size the official emblem or badge of the conclave. It was 150 feet high and its 5,000 powerful electric lights of varied colors brilliantly illuminated all that part of the city.

To provide added amusement for the visitors, a big aeroplane meeting was started on Monday under the auspices of the Aero Club of Illinois, and the Illinois Athletic club's Marathon swimming race in the Chicago river was set for Aug. 13, the closing day of the conclave.

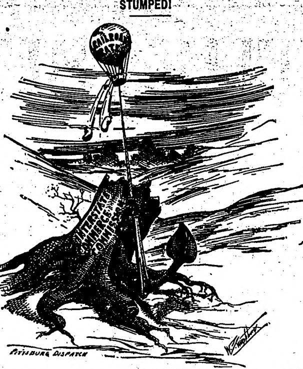
Much of the success of the conclave must be attributed to the efforts of John D. Cleveland, grand commander of Illinois and president of the triennial executive committee. Arthur MacArthur of Troy, N. Y., is the very eminent grand generalissimo of the grand encampment and W. Frank Pierce of San Francisco the grand captain general.

Among the most noted of the visiting masons from other lands are: The Right Hon. the Earl of Euston, pro grand master of the great priory of England and Wales; the Lord Athlumney, past great constable; Thomas Fraser, great marshal; R. Newton Crane, past great herald; F. C. Van Duzer, past great standard bearer; I. J. Homer, acting grand master banner bearer; John Fergueson, past preceptor of England and Wales, and the Right Hon. Luther B. Archibald, most eminent grand master of the great priory of Canada, and official staff.



WILLIAM B. MELISH, ACTING GRAND MASTER.

STUMPED!



The Root Holds Until November.

WEYLER HEADS ARMY

SPANISH GOVERNMENT RUSHES TROOPS TO SECTION WHERE TROUBLE THREATENS.

BASQUE COUNTRY SEETHES

Carlists and Members of Religious Orders Believed to Be Inciting Followers to Violence—Feeling Is Intense at Bilbao.

Madrid, Spain, Aug. 6.—Alarmed by fears that the proposed demonstration of the clerical forces at San Sebastian, the summer capital, will assume the character of an uprising, the government began to rush troops into that city. A regiment of hussars left Madrid followed by another regiment of cavalry and two battalions of chausseurs. A regiment of infantry also was ordered to San Sebastian from Vittoria. General Weyler, the captain-general of Catalonia, and Count Sagasta, minister of the interior, will go to the danger zone to be in charge in case of disorder.

Catholics Are Given Warning.

The government believes the Carlists and members of the religious orders, which are numerous in nothern Spain, are openly inciting their followers to violence. The governors of the Basque provinces and the adjoining province of Navarre issued orders to the mayors of all municipalities in these provinces to warn the Roman Catholics against assembling in or entering the city of San Sebastian with arms, and announced that the most energetic measures would be taken to repress any attempt at a manifestation.

Sends Message of Protest.

Bilbao, Spain, Aug. 5.—As the government has ordered the railroad companies not to furnish special trains for the proposed demonstration at San Sebastian Sunday the Catholic adherents are leaving for the summer capital on the ordinary trains.

Feeling in the city is intense. The committee which is organizing the demonstration sent a telegram of protest to the king against the interference of the authorities with the manifestations and issued a statement urging their followers individually to telegraph similar messages to King Alfonso. A message of sympathy also was sent to the pope.

Alfonso Is Far Away.

In the meantime King Alfonso lolls at Paris or in his railway carriage en route northward to take passage for the Isle of Wight, utterly regardless, it seems to many here, of the consequences to himself of the movement of followers of Don Jaime, the pretender to the Spanish throne, to stir up a revolution.

SEVEN SUFFOCATE IN FIRE

Twelve Others Injured in Incendiary Blaze That Destroys Immigrant Lodging House.

New York, Aug. 6.—Seven persons, two of them women, were suffocated to death, two were fatally hurt and ten others were injured less seriously when an incendiary fire destroyed a lodging house at 100 Rockway road, Jamaica. But for the heroism of one of the occupants, who was fatally hurt while attempting to save others, the loss of life would have been greater. This man, Stefan Marzorawski, was awakened by the barking of a dog.

In the building when the flames were discovered there were 45 persons, all asleep. Almost without exception they were immigrants recently from their native lands and seeking employment.

Massacre 100 Christians.

Constantinople, Aug. 5.—In consequence of the massacre of more than 100 Christians and Mussulmans in three villages in the Haran district of Syria by Druses, the government is sending a powerful military expedition to restore order.

THREE MURDERED ON RANCH FOR REVENGE

Missing Japanese Boy Believed to Have Killed Family After a Quarrel.

Santa Rosa, Cal., Aug. 5.—By the apprehension of a Japanese boy, Henry Yamagachi, for whom a vigorous search is being made, Sonoma county officials hope to obtain the key to a gruesome triple murder enacted on a lonely ranch near here, the elements of which parallel in certain respects the tragedies of the Gunness farm in Indiana.

The crime was revealed when the county authorities, investigating the mysterious disappearance of a family of three, discovered the charred bones of Enoch Kendall, Mrs. Ura Kendall, his wife, and Thomas A. Kendall, their son, in the yard of their canyon home on the Starbuck ranch near a summer resort known as Crospers, just south of Santa Rosa. A trail of ashes led from the spot to the kitchen stove, where the fragments of bones completed the array of ghastly evidence.

According to the authorities suspicion is directed toward the missing Japanese youth. Yamagachi occupied a cabin on the ranch and is known to have had a violent quarrel with Thomas Kendall, manager of the place, who is said to have beaten and shot at the boy. Nursing his grievance against Kendall, Yamagachi is said to have acted like one demented.

RELIGIOUS LIBERALS MEET

Thousands of Delegates Representing Every Civilized Country and Several Prominent Americans.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—One of the greatest religious gatherings ever held in Germany is the fifth world's Congress of Religious Liberals which convened in this city today, and will continue in session for four days. Delegates representing almost every known religious denomination and hailing from every civilized country on the globe, are present, and the speakers include the most prominent religious educators and pulpit orators in the world.

The attendance reached far into the thousands, and so many different nationalities are represented that three languages—German, French and English—have been adopted as the official languages of the congress, in order to facilitate a wider understanding of the papers read by the delegates.

The American delegation is especially large, having occupied the entire cabin space of the Devonian of the Leyland line, which sailed from Boston July 13.

ASK AID TO FIGHT FLAMES

Governor of Montana Beseeches Three Railroads to Co-Operate in Battling With Forest Fires.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 6.—So serious has the forest fire situation in northwestern and western Montana become that Governor Norris has telegraphed the presidents of the three transcontinental railroads beseeching their cooperation in fighting the flames.

A new and fierce burning is reported at the head of the Bitter Root valley, while the Stillwater valley of Flathead county is still one of the worst antagonists the fighters have essayed to control, and as yet ineffectually. Still another fierce fire has broken out along Nine Mile creek. The authorities have received advices that lead to the belief that many of the fires are incendiary.

Woman Wins Gun Meet.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 4.—First honors in the opening day preliminaries of the Pacific states trap shoot were carried off by Mrs. A. Topperwein of San Antonio, Tex., who made a score of 195 out of a possible 200.

Passengers Hurt in Crash.

Great Falls, Mont., Aug. 5.—Several passengers were hurt in a collision between a Great Northern and a Burlington train at Blackfoot, Mont.

TAFT IS INDORSED

IOWA REPUBLICANS HAVE WARM TIME IN STATE CONVENTION.

SUPREME JUDGES ARE NAMED

Cession Is Marked by Hisses and Cat-Calls—Senator Cummins Ignores President in His Address—Dolliver Elected Permanent Chairman.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 4.—Following a day of bitter factional controversy marked by hisses and cat-calls for United States senators and ex-congressmen, the Iowa Republican convention came to a close after adopting a platform and nominating candidates for the supreme bench and superintendent of public instruction and naming a state central committee.

The resolutions as adopted dismiss consideration of the president with the clause, "We indorse such efforts as President Taft and his advisers have made to fulfill the promises of the national platform."

Dolliver and Cummins Commended.

They reaffirm their loyalty to the platform of 1908 but do not recognize the revision of 1909 as a satisfactory fulfillment of the party promise and therefore favor the creation of an independent non-partisan tariff committee to secure facts regarding imports and urge revision of schedules separately. They commend Senators Dolliver and Cummins for "their work upon the tariff bill, the railroad bill and the postal savings bill." They commend the action of the house in revising the rules. They indorse the anti-trust law and recommend it be given additional strength to meet the devices of modern industry. They favor the fixing of a physical valuation on railroads in order to secure effective control of rates and a complete system of accounting. They favor amendments to the postal savings law to keep the money deposited with the government within the communities where deposited. They favor conservation of natural resources. They indorse the primary law. They promise there would be no backward steps along prohibition lines in Iowa. They demand election of United States senator by direct vote of the people. They insist on a readjustment of the representation of Republicans in national convention. They favor an income tax, and favor co-operation of the national government in enlarging the usefulness of the system of public education.

State Officers Named.

Judge Evans of Fort Dodge and Judge H. M. Deemer of Red Oak were renominated for the supreme bench. A. M. Deyce of Garner was nominated for the office of superintendent of public instruction.

The new state committee is composed of six Insurgents and five stalwarts and C. F. Franke of Parkersburg will be continued state chairman.

Fails to Mention Taft.

Senator Cummins, as temporary chairman, threw the convention into disorder when he named the party of "Lincoln, of Grant, of Roosevelt," ignoring President Taft.

Former Congressman Lacey, a standpatter, walked into the center aisle crying "Taft, Taft, Taft," in which he was joined by his fellow-stalwarts.

Senator Cummins was very emphatic in his declaration that the tariff bill as it stood needed considerable revision to make it right. He also warned the country against going too fast on the central bank idea, and said that wealth was demanding too much toll already.

Party Must Choose Its Course.

He referred to "hopeless and retreating reactionaries," and declared that the Republican party must speedily become all progressive, or all standpatters. He declared it would be easier to make the Republican party all progressive than secure proper legislation from a Democratic administration. He averred that Payne, Aldrich, Dalzell and other so-called regulars are no more in favor of the principle of protection than are the progressives.

Dolliver Is Hissed.

When the Insurgents presented the name of Jonathan P. Dolliver for permanent chairman, the stalwarts offered opposition in J. C. Mabry of Albia. Dolliver was named by a vote of 834 to 549. In accepting his position he said: "I have but one ambition left—to keep myself on the firing line for public rights against private interests. And so my sympathies are with the man who seems to have suffered at the hands of the roll call." Here Senator Dolliver was hissed.

For Taft and Ballinger.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 5.—"Insurgency" was roundly scored by speakers at the Republican state convention here. The platform adopted indorsed the administration of President Taft and also Secretary of the Interior Ballinger. The convention nominated the five present supreme judges as candidates for re-election.

Roosevelt Gets Auto Tag.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Theodore Roosevelt has applied to Secretary of State Koenig for an automobile license under the new Callan law. He was assigned No. 24715.

Kills Wife, Suing, and Self.

Chadwick, Ill., Aug. 5.—Enraged because his wife had filed a suit for divorce, John Divelbliss shot and killed the woman and himself.

GREAT ORE INCREASE

MESABA RANGE PRODUCTION JUMPS 15,000,000 TONS IN SEVEN YEARS.

GOVERNMENT GIVES OUT FIGURES

Much Money Spent in Improving Region.—One-Half of the Iron Imports Come From the Island of Cuba.

Washington, D. C. — A great advance in iron ore production has been made in the Mesaba range in Minnesota, where the shipments have increased from 13,000,000 tons in 1902 to 28,200,000 tons in 1909, according to a report of the geological survey on the movement of Lake Superior iron ores.

In that region where the increase has resulted from the continued activity of the opened deposit and from the extension of the operations of the ore field beyond the Mississippi river, the expenditures for railroads, permanent mine equipment and explorations indicate a faith in its future. The Lake Superior iron ore represent about 80 per cent of the total iron ore production of the United States.

The Adirondack region of New York, from which eastern furnaces draw ore, has produced since it was opened over 100 years ago about 36,000,000 tons. There are numerous other fields supplying ore and during last year the foreign iron ores imported aggregated 1,700,000 long tons, which is the maximum quantity imported in any one year. Over one-half of the imports were from Cuba.

ANDERSON OUTLINES CAMPAIGN.

Country Leaders Believe the Lanesboro Man Has Chance.

Albert Lea. — The insurgent Republicans assembled here, and the first gun in the campaign against Congressman James A. Tawney has been fired. Sydney A. Anderson of Lanesboro, Filmore county, the candidate of the progressives was present, and made a stirring address to the assembled progressives, outlining what might be expected of him, should he be elected and also what sort of a campaign might be hoped for.

His business and campaign manager, O. M. Levang, the "original" insurgent, accompanied him and is enthusiastic over prospects for success at the primaries. Representatives were present from practically every county in the district and many of the committeemen reported great enthusiasm over Mr. Anderson's entrance into the field.

Thomas Frazer of Rochester, one of the most radical of the insurgents stated that in Olmsted county the dissatisfied voters had been only awaiting the entry of some good candidate to express their disapproval of Tawney, and that they had taken up with Anderson at once, and would support him to the last ditch.

He is confident that Tawney will lose Olmsted. Eugene Miller of Winona, is also delighted over Anderson's entrance and believes that they now stand a good chance to make deep inroads into Tawney's vote in Winona county. T. P. Kelley of Owatonna, who was originally urged to make the run, was present at the meeting and pledged his hardiest efforts towards the success of the progressives. He has canvassed Steele county very carefully, and is of the opinion that Tawney will lose the county by a considerable majority.

Campaign Short.

The campaign agreed upon is to be short and decisive. Anderson will speak in every voting precinct in the district and will conduct a whirlwind fight.

To those who have suggested that the time remaining is too brief, he cites the fact that Knatvold made but a three weeks' campaign and yet placed the Winona man in perilous danger of defeat. Anderson is himself confident of success, and will put in some strenuous days from now until after the primaries.

Papers to Be Used.

One of the first things that will be done, is to line up those papers which are opposed to Tawney and endeavor to conduct through them a liberal advertising campaign, the idea of Anderson being that as much publicity as possible is desirable.

Levang cited a long list of papers throughout the district which were to be counted as insurgent publications. The active campaign will begin the latter part of the week when Anderson will sound the keynote of his fight and will make public declaration of his platform.

FOUND HANGING TO TREE.

Insane Farmer Commits Suicide in St. Louis County Forest.

Duluth.—Crazed by overwork too soon after his discharge a short time ago from the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, James Lackenberg, a farmer, living near Zim, Minn., hanged himself to a tree several miles from his home. He has been missing for a week, and the body was discovered by accident by woodsmen. Lackenberg has a wife and several children in Finland. He was about 28 years old.

ROBBERS LOOT A BANK

State Institution At Onamia Robbed of $3,000 in Coin.

Milaca, Minn. — Five burglars successfully blew the safe of the State Bank at Onamia, got between $2,500 and $3,000 in currency and escaped in a stolen rig toward Mille Lacs. It is believed they will try to elude their pursuers by crossing the lake.

J. H. McKenzie, lawyer and editor of the village newspaper, was passing the bank on his return from a night fishing trip when he was held up by three of the robbers who were standing watch outside. Thrusting revolvers into his face, they compelled him to halt and keep quiet, which he did while from inside the bank issued reports of the boring of the safe door and later the explosion.

A few minutes later the two safe experts of the robber crew emerged from the bank with their pockets loaded with money. With final and threatening warning to the editor to refrain from alarming the townspeople, the five robbers piled into a wagon, to which a spirited team was hitched and drove swiftly away.

Onamia is in Mille Lacs county, on the Soo Line and 30 miles from another town or railroad line. Owing to its isolated location it is believed detectives of Minnesota State Bankers' association and the Interstate Bankers' Protective association have more than a fair chance to apprehend the band.

As soon as the robbers had fled beyond pistol shot, Mr. McKenzie shouted the alarm to the townspeople. He then called J. H. McGilvra, president of the bank at Milaca, by telephone. The latter notified Charles R. Frost of Minneapolis, secretary of the Interstate Bankers' Protective association. Detectives were at once dispatcher to the village.

The village marshal of Onamia was engaged in quelling a miniature Indian outbreak at the edge of town while the burglars were working on the safe. The Indians were drunk and fighting. It is believed the robbers provided the Indians with liquor so as to get the marshal out of the way.

MOORHEAD MUST GO "DRY."

S. S. Comstock Says Washington Officials Stand Squarely by Order.

Moorhead.—Former Representative S. G. Comstock and Mayor Davy have returned from Washington, where they went to put before the Indian department on Indian affairs the financial condition of Moorhead, and the effect that the saloon closing order of Special Agent Johnson would have on the city.

In speaking of his trip Mr. Comstock said:

"The government is determined to stop the sale of liquor to the Indians and is taking drastic measures to reach this end. As far as the closing order goes, it is positive in its statement that the saloons must be closed. I have received no information from any source that would make me believe this order will not be enforced. No one could regret more than I the necessity for such a trip, but any one familiar with the finances of our city will comprehend its imperative necessity. The department is strongly prejudiced against Moorhead because of the undue proportion of saloons to the population, and the impression seems to be that the dealers in Moorhead have been engaged in the illegal sale of liquor to the Indians."

PLAGUE SANATORIUM PLANNED.

Otter Tail County Commissioners Will Pay Off Bonds First.

Fergus Falls.—The county commissioners of this county are considering the advisability of establishing a county sanatorium for consumptives, under the provisions of the law which was passed at the recent session of the legislature permitting counties to establish such institutions. The board would build at once but for the fact that the county is at present paying off some old railway bonds. When the Northern Pacific came through this county nearly thirty years ago, the county voted to issue $200,000 in bonds, and these are now being paid off. Two years more will complete the payment, and the commissioners expect them to erect a sanatorium.

OIL SEIZURE WRIT DENIED.

Minnesota's Pure Food Law Is Upheld in Linseed Traffic Decision.

St. Paul, Minn. — Judge Amidon in the United tSates circuit court denied the motion for an injunction restraining the Minnesota state dairy and food commissioner from seizing blended linseed oil sold in this state by the American Linseed Oil company of Omana. The hearing involved the question of constitutional rights, the plaintiff contending that the Minnesota statute was in violation of the United States constitution.

BRIDEGROOM RIVER VICTIM.

Former Winona Ticket Agent Drowns in Mississippi.

Winona. — Oscar Batallis, 28, until recently Burlington ticket agent in Winona, was drowned in the Mississippi at Homer, a summer resort just below here. He come with his bride from North Yakima, his late home, and went into camp at Homer with a party of friends. They were in bathing when he was seized with a cramp.

KANSAS PROGRESSIVES WIN OUT IN PRIMARY

Six Out of Eight "Insurgent" Congressmen Are Nominated—Gov. Stubbs Also Victorious.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 4.—The "progressives" made almost a clean sweep in the primary.

Six out of eight "insurgent" congresmen have been nominated in spite of everything the congressional organization in Washington and the "regulars" in Kansas could do to save their men. Their majorities run from 500 to 3,500.

Of the six "standpat" congressmen who were seeking renomination only two are sure of having their names on the ticket this fall. In the Third district P. P. Campbell defeated Arthur Cranston, "insurgent."

Victor Murdock and E. H. Madison, who alone of the present congressmen from Kansas have carried the Insurgent banner, were renominated without opposition.

The insurgents also won a notable victory in the renomination of Gov. W. R. Stubbs, whose campaign was waged on the same issues which entered into the congressional battles.

The Republican party in the state will be in the control of the Insurgents, as they are believed to have elected a majority of the Republican county chairmen of the 105 counties, who, with the state, congressional and state senatorial and legislative nominees, make up the party council to adopt a platform and elect a state central committee.

Kansas Democrats nominated a full state ticket at the general primary. George H. Hodges of Olathe was nominated for governor.

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—Missouri's ten Democratic congressmen and three out of four Republican members of the lower house were renominated at the primary election.

PILGRIM FATHERS HONORED

President Taft and Other Distinguished Men Unveil the Lofty Monument at Provincetown, Mass.

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 5.—Our early New England ancestors, who arrived in Cape Cod harbor several hundred years ago aboard the Pilgrim bark Mayflower, were fittingly honored today when President Taft steamed into the harbor on his yacht of the same name and participated in the exercises incident to the unveiling of the Pilgrim monument.

Fourteen battleships anchored in the bay for the purpose of engaging in target practise each fired the presidential salute of 21 guns, while a big following of cruisers, torpedo boats, etc., added to the din with their fog horns.

Many eminent men participated in the ceremony today, among them being James Bryce, the ambassador from England; Jonkheer J. Louden, minister from the Netherlands; Senator Lodge, Congressman Foss of Chicago and former President Eliot of Harvard. Dr. Eliot delivered the oration and brief remarks were made by some of the other guests.

In addition to the monument a tablet was unveiled as the successor of one which was destroyed when the old town hall, that occupied the site on which the Pilgrim monument stands, was burned in 1877.

NEW LABOR UNION PLANNED.

Western Federation of Miners and the United Mine Workers of America to Amalgamate.

Denver, Aug. 4.—Intimation of the formation of a new labor union of national scope, comprising the Western Federation of Miners, the United Mine Workers of America, and the steel woorkers of the country, was given by President Charles H. Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners.

In a resolution the executive committee of the miners' organization was empowered to meet with the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor and to complete the details necessary to affiliation with the latter body.

"PARDON RING" UNDER PROBE

Colorado Public Examiner to Investigate Purchase of Liberty by State Convicts.

Denver, Col., Aug. 4.—Fortified by a recent decision of the state supreme court upholding his power to issue subpoenas and to compel testimony, Public Examiner James B. Foley at Canon City has begun an investigation into charges of graft brought against former officials of the state penitentiary and members of the so-called "pardon ring."

It is charged that many convicts were able to purchase their freedom.

The investigation will be personally conducted by Attorney General John T. Barnett.

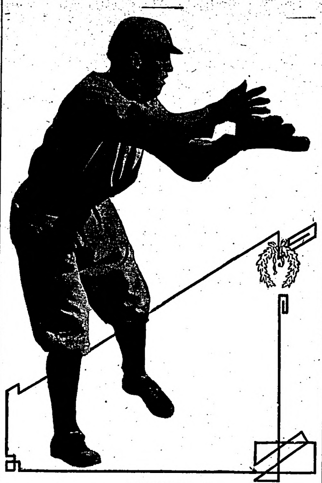
TO OPEN ST. PAUL CONGRESS

President Begins Preparation of Address to Be Delivered Before Conservationists.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 4.—President Taft has consented to fire the opening gun at the St. Paul conservation congress on September 5.

The president and Secretary Norton have already begun work on the address, which it is understood will be broad and comprehensive and will embody the recommendations which the president later will submit to congress in his annual message.

SAY BUSH IS AMERICAN LEAGUE'S BEST



OWNIE BUSH.

IF EVERY player on the Detroit team could play ball like Ty Cobb and Ownie Bush, the Tigers' shortstop, there would be no doubt who would win the American league championship this year. But Jennings isn't fortunate enough to have a team of Cobbs and Bushes. Consequently there is some doubt whether he will be able to overcome the lead Philadelphia has on him at present. Fans are figuring however that the Tigers will finish as good as second.

Bush has been a great help to the Tigers ever since he donned the Detroit uniform. Some of the experts say he is the greatest shortstop in the American league. He's a sensational player and covers a world of ground. Nothing seems too fast for him to at least get his hands on and the batsmen of opposing teams have had many a safe hit spoiled by his work.

Bush's worth as a fielder doesn't show in the averages. He reaches and break down so many hits that another shortstop would never get near that he is charged with many errors. His all around ability makes him the star shortstop. He is a good hitter, one of the best men in the league on the bases and plays the bag well in addition to his marvelous fielding ability.

"Sheriff Mullen, of Navasota, Texas, was the most obstinate club owner I have ever met," says Jimmy Gilman. "There are people, I am sorry to say, right here in Cleveland, who actually doubt the full and absolute truth of some of the stories I have been telling about the curious and wonderful things that happened in the baseball fields down in the big state, but every resident of old Navasota will swear to what I am about to tell you now:

"Ted Sullivan sent us down from Dallas to Navasota one day to play Sheriff Mullen's team. We had been guaranteed $250 and, as all our expenses were to be paid, we took along only two new league balls. The Navasotas came on the field with only one, making three altogether.

"The outfield in Navasota was simply one big pasture where Sheriff Mullen's horses, pigs, cows and sheep grazed at will. Among the animals was a pet broncho, and I noticed while we were at practise that this broncho would start in mad pursuit of every ball batted out near where he was browsing.

He chewed up two or three old balls used in the warming up period and I began to get suspicious.

"'Please take that palfry to the stable and lock him up,' I said to the Navasotas' owner.

"'Not on your life,' Mullen said. 'He's got as much right here as the umpire or you yourself. Moreover the home team makes its own ground rules down in this section of the state. Don't forget that. No, sir, broncho stays right where he is.'

"It meant $100 extra for us if we won the game, but there was nothing for us to do but to abide by the home club's rules.

"So far as the game itself was concerned it was a cinch from the start and we had them 17 to 5 at the end of the second inning.

"All this time the broncho had been nibbling grass out near the fence and paying but little attention to the players. In the third inning Virgil Garvin, the Navasotas' pitcher, hit a fly that was muffed by our centerfielder. The ball rolled out by the fence, where it was immediately gobbled up by the broncho.

"Another new ball was put into play, and the next batter up for Navasota drove a three-bagger to left center.

My outfielders had no chance to retrieve the ball, for the broncho was after it as soon as it left the bat and had chewed it into a shapeless mass ten seconds after it struck the ground. The umpire called it a home run and we let it go at that.

"We were still far ahead of the home team, but I had forgotten that we had but one more ball. In the next inning there was another long drive to left center, and once more the broncho pounced on the ball.

The outfielders seized the animal and tried to wrest the ball from its mouth, but the sphere had already been well masticated and was beyond redemption.

"The game had to be called before five innings had been completed because there were no more balls.

"The fans demanded their money back because they hadn't seen a full game, but we afterwards learned that this was just a little bit of stage play, put on for the purpose of fooling us.

"The umpire declared it no game and we finally compromised by accepting $150 instead of our $250 guarantee, and our $100 extra money, and all because I could find nothing in the book of rules to prevent a club owner from pasturing a ball-eating broncho in his own outfield."

It was a full year before I had a chance to get even partially even. Then, one day, we played the Navasotas in Texarkana. Our half of the ball park was in Texas and the other half in Arkansas. One of Sheriff Mullen's players got rough with one of my men and was arrested. Mullen tried to get his player acquitted on the grounds that the assault was committed in Texas and that there was no law on the statute books of that state making the assault a misdemeanor.

"I got a surveyor to take measurements and he found that the assault really occurred in Arkansas and Mullin had to pay a $10 fine."

Five times in the history of baseball has a first baseman gone through a game without having a put out. In the contest between Pittsburg and Chicago recently, Hofman of the Cubs did not have a put out. His only chance was a throw from Tinker and he dropped that. It was the first time in the history of the game that that record has been hung up. Here are the other four marks:

July 21, 1861—In New York City, First Baseman Mutuals in a game with Alpine.

August 6, 1891—McCauley, first baseman of the Washington American association team, in a game with Columbus, O., club.

May 23, 1906—Jiggs Donahue of the Chicago White Sox, in a game with the New York Highlanders.

August 12, 1906—Emerson, first baseman of the Monson, Mass., team in a game with the Stamford, Conn., club.

Bill Dinneen, who at one time was a star pitcher for the Boston club, more recently with St. Louis, and now one of Ban Johnson's umpires, is making good at that Job. Dinneen is right on top of all the plays, and there never will be any overruling of decisions while he is at work with Tom Connolly. They both work together very well. Dinneen has been going along so well that the American league has boosted his salary.

In view of the fact that the new home of the White Cox in Chicago is very large, and it will be possible to hit a home run to any field inside the fences, it is believed that they will be at a disadvantage, for it has been some time since Chicago had a home-run hitter of the caliber of Harry Davis, Sam Crawford, Stanage, Engle, Jake Stahl and others. Hughey Duffy, however, says that he intends to remedy that fault next season, having instructed the scouts to sign up nothing but home-run hitters of the "Home Run Haggerty" and "Swat Milligan" stripe.

Don't Persecute your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal—harsh—unnecessary. Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

If a fireman antagonizes you, tell him to go to blazes.

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. The favorite family laxative.

Pretty Bad.

Mrs. Hoyle—Does your husband use bad language at home?

Mrs. Doyle—He talks to me as if I were a fountain pen.

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca-Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

The Wrong Sort.

An old Irish peasant was one Sunday sitting in front of his cottage puffing away furiously at his pipe.

Match after match he lighted, pulling hard at the pipe the while, until at last the ground all round his feet was strewed with struck matches.

"Come in to your dinner, Patsy," at length called out his wife.

"Faith, and Oi will in a minute, Biddy," said he. "Moike Mulrooney has been a-telling me that if Oi shmoked a bit av ghlass Oi cud see the shpots on the sun. Oi don't know whether Moike's been a-fooling me or whether Oi've got hold av the wrong kind of ghlass."—Scraps.

It Wouldn't Stretch.

The assessor was doing the very best he could, but the farmer was shrewd and wary.

"How many acres of farming land have you?" he inquired warily.

"'Bout 20, I guess," said Reuben.

"Twenty! Why, it looks to me like nearer 120. Come, now, can't you increase that a little? There are surely more than 20 acres in that tract. Suppose you stretch that a little."

"Say, feller," said the farmer, "this ain't no rubber plantation."—Harper's Monthly.

What They Did With Them.

An American who spends much of his time in England tells of a cockney who went to a dealer in dogs and thus described what he wanted. "Hi wants a kind of dog about so 'igh an' so long. Hit's a kind of gr'y'ound, an' yet it ain't a gr'y'ound, because 'is tyle is shorter nor any o' those 'ere gr'y'ounds, an' 'is nose is shorter, an' 'e ain't so slim round the body. But still 'e's a kind o' gr'y'ound. Do you keep such dogs?" "We do not," said the dog man. "We drown 'em."

Reformation.

"You say you are a reformer?"

"Yep," replied the local boss; "of the deepest dye."

"But you were not always so."

"No. The reformers reformed our town last year and I want to reform it back again."

A COOL PROPOSITION

And a Sure One.

The Body Does Not Feel Heat Unpleasantly if it has Proper Food—

Grape-Nuts

People can live in a temperature which feels from ten to twenty degrees cooler than their neighbors enjoy, by regulating the diet.

The plan is to avoid meat entirely for breakfast; use a goodly allowance of fruit, either fresh or cooked. Then follow with a saucer containing about four heaping teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, treated with a little rich cream. Add to this about two slices of crisp toast with a meager amount of butter, and one cup of well-made Postum.

By this selection of food the bodily energy is preserved, while the hot, carbonaceous foods have been left out. The result is a very marked difference in the temperature of the body, and to this comfortable condition is added the certainty of ease and perfect digestion, for the food being partially predigested is quickly assimilated by the digestive machinery.

Experience and experiment in food, and its application to the human body has brought out these facts. They can be made use of and add materially to the comfort of the user.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 20 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

A Man With A Record.

[illegible] noted county option speak[illegible] J. Youngdahl, bit off more [illegible] could chew when he ac[illegible] Senator Stephens of being [illegible] representative of the brew[illegible] recent speech at Cro[illegible]. If the flush master of [illegible] had taken time to have looked up the record of Senator Stephens in the last session of the legislature, he would have found that he voted against the brewers' bill, permitting clubs that have a membership of five hundred or over to dispose of liquors without a license. This was the only bill brought before the last legislature that was backed by the liquor dealers and if Senator Stephens was their servant, it seems that he did not obey the orders of his employer when he voted "NO" on this bill.

The facts of the matter are that the county optionists of Polk County are running a mud throwing campaign that will not receive the endorsement of the intelligent voters of that county. We as old residents of Polk County have watched the legislative record of A. D. Stephens for a number of years and we confess that we did so for the purpose of finding some great break that he would make in favor of the corporations or liquor dealers, and particularly the railroad companies. But we must admit that we have failed to locate a single one.

[illegible] time the bill was up to [illegible] the railroad fare to two [illegible], Stephens offered an amendment reducing it to one [illegible] cents a mile; but his amendment was voted down. Does that look as if he was representing the railroad companies instead of the common people who pay car fare?

We could go down the list farther had we the space; but we want to say to the people of Polk County, that if they know what is for their best interest they will re-elect Senator Stephens with such an overwhelming majority that he will understand that the people appreciate what he has done for his district and the northern part of the state of Minnesota.

What Senator Hanson did for the 61st district during his term in the state senate..............0.

Albert Berg, of Spooner, is making a vigorous campaign for state senator and as he has a very weak opponent in Senator Hanson, he will no doubt be nominated and elected.

Ole Sageng, of Otter Tail County, has again filed for the populist nomination for state senator from his district. This disposes of Ole as a possible democratic candidate for Congress. Mr. Sageng has a good record as state senator and will no doubt be re-elected.

A. D. Hanson, the big banker from Ada, has come to the conclusion that horses are not swift enough to make his campaign this year, so he is sailing around the country in an automobile. He wrote home to one of his constituents two years ago that he would put the road and bridge money where it would do the most good; and we guess he did, for he needs something swift to get re-elected this year.

John Lattimore accuses us of being too personal; but we always shoot true to the mark and do not try to bring the whole country into the controversy as he did on the boat deal.

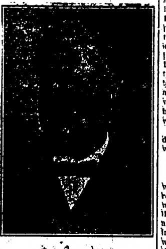
Peter Matson, Judge of Probate of Norman County, is being prominently mentioned as a candidate for district judge. We as an old friend of Mr. Matson do not desire to see him enter the race at this time.

Senator Hanson is out with his platform, which reads like he was for "anything to get the coon." He tells what he is going to do if he is elected, but when it comes to telling what he did do during his term in the senate, there is a silence that can be felt.

This week we have used some space for Polk County politics; but, when it is remembered that THE SUNBEAM was moved from Polk to Red Lake County and still has a large circulation in Eastern Polk County, we think we are justified in whispering in the ears of our Polk County friends occasionally.

It may be that those who shout the loudest for prohibition do it in self defense. We have seen some of these shouters when they come to town, occupy the entire sidewalk, with their legs trying to climb stairs. Not having the moral courage to prohibit themselves they shout to the multitude for prohibition, and they should have it.—Cass Lake Times.

ALBERT BERG.



For Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minn

Take A Stand.

The decision of the judges at the recent Akeley "Market Day" beauty contest will make an editor smile. Eight young ladies were entered and the judges awarded a box of bon bons to each instead of deciding the contest; four babies were entered in a contest, the prize being $5 cash. The judges divided the prize in four equal parts. This is merely an illustration and the reader can suit himself whether the judges did their full duty or not. The newspaper is supposed to make a stand, no matter how much patronage it may lose by its stand. A conciliatory (or straddle) attitude will not go for any length of time if the paper desires to hold its influence with friends or enemies. An article may be published that unintentionally hurts the feelings of a reader. Sometimes all patronage is immediately withdrawn. Sometimes the feeling is so intense that the aggrieved party advocates the starting of another paper—evidently overlooking the fact that if the newspaper would resort to similar retaliatory measures he might have just cause for complaint. As a usual thing the fellow who squeals like a stuck pig at some article in the paper that is probably not meant for him at all has reason to thank God that the paper is charitable enough to cover a multitude of his shortcomings. In more than one instance an editor is compelled to almost perjure himself to shield some ungrateful wretch who is everlastingly sticking a knife into his back clear to the hilt and is foolish enough to think the editor is not wise to him.—Akeley Herald-Tribune.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one-half mile south of the High landing creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office

He Needed a Prodding.

His arm was round her waist, her hand was on his shoulder, and they were walking through the fields as they had been wont to do for nine long years.

"Em," said he, "we've been coortin' a tidy time now."

"Nine year come next August bank holiday, George."

"I told you, fust start off, as how I shouldn't be in no hurry to git married, Em."

"You didn't tell no lie about it, neither, George," she declared, with a sigh.

"You're a-talkin' as if you was sorry that I'm a man o' my word, Em," he said reprovingly.

"Well, George," she replied, "now you mention it I have bin thinkin' this last year or two that if you could see your way to go back on your word just this once it wouldn't be amiss."—London Mail.

The House Was Shaky.

When John Quincy Adams was eighty years of age he met in the streets of Boston an old friend, who shook his trembling hand and said: "Good morning, and how is John Quincy Adams today?"

"Thank you," was the ex-president's answer. "John Quincy Adams himself is well, sir; quite well, I thank you. But the house in which he lives at present is becoming dilapidated. It is tottering upon its foundation. Time and the seasons have nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. Its walls are much shattered, and it trembles with every wind. The old tenement is becoming almost uninhabitable, and I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon. But he himself is quite well, sir; quite well."

With that the venerable sixth president of the United States moved on with the aid of his staff.

Had All His Nerve With Him.

In a downtown stand up lunch place, where the chief source of the waiters' revenue is in the form of tips and where the patrons are supposed to step lively so that those who wait may be accommodated, a man has been coming of late who brings a newspaper with him and reads it leisurely, sometimes for half an hour, while he takes his modest luncheon. The waiter at whose station he planted himself one day recently was prepared for the emergency, and when the man had finished reading his paper the servant handed him two others with the remark: "Maybe you'd like to see these?" The other waiters, knowing of the plot, looked to see the man wilt, but were disappointed. He took the papers with thanks, continued reading, and finally, when he asked for his check, asked also whether he might keep the papers.—New York Tribune.

One of Falb's Predictions.

In 1874 Professor Rudolf Falb predicted an eruption of Etna on Aug. 27. He offered a Vienna editor to write an account of it if the editor would send him to Sicily. Falb was commissioned. When he reached Etna there was not the slightest sign of disturbance. As the 27th approached Falb was tortured with anxiety and spent sleepless nights watching the volcano. Nothing happened on the 27th and 28th. The following morning the servant rushed into the professor's room shouting, "An eruption, a terrible eruption!" Falb saw the spectacle and sent off his dispatch.

"One" as a Pronoun.

I have never been smitten with the use of the word "one" as a pronoun. It takes a word juggler to attempt it and get away with it. Unless one feels that one has won one's spurs in this respect and can extricate oneself from the mess one gets oneself and one's readers into one should avoid the use of the word one in referring to oneself as one would a plague.—London Idler.

Swift.

Teacher—Children, nature is superior to man in everything. For instance, there is nothing that travels so fast as the unseen wind. Willie—Huh! You ought to hear what my pa says about a tight wad!—Puck.

Notice For Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 8, 1910.

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land office at Crookston Minn. July 5th. 1910. Notice is hereby given that John Wzlentek, of Hilda, Minn., who on July 7th, 1904, made Homestead Entry No. 567, Serial No. 04211, for N. E. ¼, Section 12, Township 152 N. Range 40 W. Fifth Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Five Year Proof to establish claim to the land above described; before Register and Receiver of U. S. Land Office, at Crookston, Minnesota, on the 16th day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

B Henry Costello, Frank Savage, Olaf B. Hanson, of Hilda, Minn., and John Radnecki, of Radney, Minn.

AURTHUR P. TOUPIN,
Register.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 19[illegible]

Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn. July 12th. 19[illegible] Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestt of Anstad, Minn., who, on June 7th, 19[illegible] made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial 04810, for W. ½ S.W. ¼, Sec. 2 & N. ½ S.E. ¼ sec. 3 Twp. 154 N. Range 40 W. 5th, Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before William Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn. the 22nd. day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lund, Casper Lund, Ole F. Wise, and George Wold, all of Anstad, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

McCALL PATTERNS 10¢ AND 15¢ NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

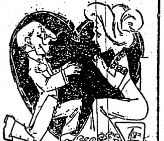
McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address
THE McCALL CO., 238 to 248 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

An Innocent Accomplice

A smuggling story in which a woman fooled her unsuspecting husband is told in the Century. The husband was a retired general, a martinet in discipline and overscrupulous regarding even the shadow of laxity in the performance of his own obligations. No smuggling was to be permitted, he told his wife, and before leaving Paris he insisted on making a full list of every dutiable article in his possession. Unknown to him she bought several yards of venetian lace. How to hide it was a problem until she thought of ripping the lining of his overcoat and hiding the lace there. She regarded her cunning as a tremendous joke, and to this day he doesn't know how she laughed to herself when, wearing that very same coat on the dock, he drew himself up to his full military height and, with a clear conscience, pointed to a tray containing "all his purchases." No idea of anything so serious as defrauding the government had ever entered her frolicsome mind.

The Other Way.



Antique Broker—Miss Laura, I'm sixty-eight, but I've got a million in government bonds. Do you think I'm too old for you?

"No, indeed. You are ten years too young."

She Thought Right.

Mrs. Young—I want to get a divorce from my husband. Lawyer—Well, what are your charges? Mrs Young—My charges? Mercy! I thought I'd have to pay you.—Boston Transcript.

A Duke's Maxim.

It was a maxim of the first Duke of Portland, who was a great lover of race horses, that there were only two places where all men are equal—on the turf and under the turf.

Sir Walter's Knock.

"Rum on the cloak," remarked Sir Walter Raleigh as he spread down his velvet garment before Queen Elizabeth. He could not resist giving her this little wrap.

Just the Contrary.

"I suppose you're one of those idiots that touch wet paint to see if it's dry."

"No, I'm not. I touch it to see if it's wet."—London Punch.

A straight line is shortest in morals as well as in geometry.—Rahel.

Yes we have plenty Of LUMBER, IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Windows and Doors, Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.
D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

A Dirge.

She laid the still white form beside those which had gone before. No [illegible], no sigh, forced its way from her heart, throbbing as though it would burst. Suddenly a cry broke the stillness of the place, one single heartbreaking shriek; then silence, another cry, more silence, then all silent but for a guttural murmur which seemed to well up from her very soul. She left the place. She would lay another egg tomorrow.—Princeton Tiger.

Curiosity is looking over other people's affairs and overlooking our own. —Wayland.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEURALGIA
RHEUMATISM
BACKACHE STOMACH
SLEEPLESSNESS
[illegible]LES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
DR. MILES' Pain Pills
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents
Never Sold in Bulk

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith and get them shod right.

James O'Brien is being pestered by boils, which he is trying to endure with the patience of Job.

There was a large attendance at the Kratka Farmers' Club meeting on last Sunday.

Walter McAndress made a business trip to Thief River Falls, Monday.

John Poloni now has the ferry at Highlanding in first class condition for ferrying teams across.

Blacksmith Peterson has a felon on his finger, which is laying him up for the time being.

Mrs. Ole Howard is suffering from some trouble of the eyes. She will leave for St. Paul this week to consult a specialist.

Peter McAndress came up from Minneapolis on last Friday for a few weeks' visit with his brother Walter.

Myrtle and Clifford Shustan are over from Erie doing the harvesting on their old Highlanding homestead.

B. Henry Costello of Hilda, made a business trip to Thief River Falls Wednesday, returning home yesterday.

There seems to be as much, if not more hay put up in Eastern Red Lake County than there was last year.

Glen Martz, Martin McAndress James Walker and Arthur Hall were up yesterday to make a survey of the Martin Hyland ditch in Deer Park Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Singer entertained a large number of their friends at Kratka on last Sunday afternoon and evening, in honor of their wedding.

The log drivers went by here Tuesday morning and the river is now clear of logs with the exception of a large number of "deadheads."

It seems to us that there is not much use to quarrel about county option in Northern Minnesota, as "Pusseyfoot" Johnson has passed a prohibition law which prohibits.

D. P. O'Neil and E. L. Quist, of Thief River Falls, were up to the Farmers' Club meeting at Kratka last Sunday. This is the year that the politicians begin to take an active interest in the welfare of the farmers.

Misses Emma and Nettie Sater are experimenting with a new method of catching rats by baiting a fish hook and trying to get them to bite; but at latest accounts they have failed to land a single rodent.

We publish the announcement of Charles Fellman, of St. Hilaire this week for the republican nomination for sheriff. Mr. Fellman is very popular and will surely poll a large and we think a winning vote at the primaries.

The Red Lake River is so low that all navigation has been stopped, so that the merchants are having much trouble in getting their goods from Thief River Falls, as the farmers are all to busy harvesting to go to town.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Homme, of Erie, went to Thief River Falls yesterday. Mr. Homme who is Halvor Steenerson's committeeman for this town, may go to Crookston to interview the congressman regarding the opening of his campaign in this township.

Our school district is having their school house repaired this week, in preparation for the fall term which is to start the first Monday in September.

The county has appropriated $150 to be expended on the roads on section lines 29 and 32, and 28 and 29 in this town. The town is to appropriate an equal amount.

Ye editor drove through a portion of the northern part of Highlanding on Wednesday and found all the farmers busy harvesting. The crops are rather light, but the farmers are congratulating themselves that they are better than in some other localities.

Fears Socialism.

Archbishop Ireland in an after dinner address in Duluth this week declared "socialism" one of the greatest menaces to human liberty in America. It is perhaps better to quote the worthy prelate in full:

"If there is the sign of alarm in the skies of the future for our country as I see it, it is that there will be an effort to this individualism, to give all into the hands of the government and to bring every one to a common level, which, in that case, must be the level of mediocrity. We are equal in liberty and equal in rights, but equal in talents never, nor in the possessions which depend on those talents. May the day never come in America when the individual shall cease to be the individual. The most perilous problem ever presented to humanity is before America. There are clamorings for a division of property, for special laws and there are mobs and riotings. If these go on and increase, the hour will come when America will say, 'I must mantain order at any cost, if not with liberty, then with a powerful centralized government.'

"All must see that they do not go too far. The employers must recognize that the welfare of the employed is their welfare and the laborers must respect the rights of the employers as well. All must recognize that public order and safty of the country are far above any individual claims and privileges. Above all we must cast our ballots under the dictates of conscience for true and good men. In that way America will last and her opportunities will last."

We will venture to say there are a number of men in Bemidji who radically differ with the distinguished prelate.—Bemidji Sentinel.

Keep Off!

We hope that Beltrami County will not seriously consider bringing out a candidate for representative. Red Lake County has had no representation in the legislature for the last two terms and with the senator from Beltrami County, it would look rather as if they wanted the whole thing if they should want the representative also.

Norman have their representative for their end of the district; now let us all be neighborly. Put Berg in the senate and O'Neil in the house. Of course, if a candidate files for representative from Beltrami County, it means a cat and dog "scrap" and all mixed in it are likely to get scratched. A move of this kind is likely to have originated in the ever fertile brain of Ex-Senator Hanson, as he is the only one that could possibly be benefitted by it.

Candidate for Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Red Lake County that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff, at the primaries on Sept. 20, 1910. Should you see fit to nominate and elect me I shall endeavor to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability.

Charles Fellman.

On Nagging.

My son taught me a lesson on the subject of "nagging" when he was but four years old and one that I have never forgotten. He had been guilty of a small misdemeanor and had tried to wriggle out of it by not telling the exact truth. I gave him a mild spanking and, as has always been my custom, talked the matter over afterward. I began by saying, "Now, Robert, if you had told me the truth I should not have punished you."

He stood before me, scraping one foot along the carpet, and he looked up at me and said, "What would you have done?" And I answered, "I should have only talked to you." "Well," he drawled, "how long would you have talked?"

He is a big boy in high school now, but when times arise requiring a reprimand and I get started I still hear that little voice, "How long would you have talked?" and I go right to the point and say what I have to say on the subject but in the boy's own language, I "cut it short" and never refer to it again unless it is absolutely necessary.—Harper's Bazar.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2. 50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.—SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

A SINGULAR CASE

Where Circumstantial Evidence Played Justice False.

HANGED AN INNOCENT MAN.

Every Incident in the Remarkable Sequence of Events Seemed to Point Conclusively to the Guilt of Harry Blake, Who Was Accused of Murder.

It began in the Blue Horse tavern, on the highway leading to Albany.

Toward the close of an autumn day a half dozen men sat in the old barroom discussing events which then were leading to the outbreak of the American Revolution. At such a time arguments were very likely to be rather more vigorous than ordinarily would be the case. And this was no exception. Fearing that trouble might result, one of the men exclaimed: "Come, Wickliffe, stop this. Such a dispute is nonsense."

Wickliffe was an ugly looking fellow, short and stout, with a dark, sallow face, black eyes, low, wrinkled forehead and lips that bared his teeth on occasions like a dog preparing to bite.

"My quarrel is with Harry Blake," he snarled. "It is none of your affair."

"Well, Wickliffe," Blake cried good naturedly, "if you will quarrel, I won't. I'll say no more."

Evidently Wickliffe was bent on trouble, for he muttered something which brought a cry of "Shame!" from every one in the room. Blake's face became deadly pale. "Wickliffe," he said steadily, "I didn't hear what you said, but I dare you to repeat it. If you do and there's one improper word in it, this hour will be the bitterest of your life."

Once more the offensive words were flung at him, and in an instant Blake had seized Wickliffe and thrown him across the room. For a moment he lay stunned, but presently, his face dark with hatred, he rose and, shaking his fist at Blake, exclaimed:

"You may take your measure for a coffin. You will need one."

"Not before you," was Blake's reply.

Shortly after the quarrel Wickliffe left the Blue Horse for his home. Blake, whose road lay in the same direction, followed soon. Ten minutes later two more of the loiterers, also going over the highway taken by Wickliffe and Blake, started on their homeward way.

The last two travelers had ridden several miles, talking earnestly of the stirring events which then engaged men's minds, when a loud cry was heard at a little distance. In a moment it was repeated.

"Mercy!" the voice pleaded, and then, "Oh, Harry!"

"Can Blake be settling scores with Wickliffe?" exclaimed Grayson, one of the two riders.

In a moment they had galloped around a copse of trees at a bend in the road. Within twenty yards of them, on his back in the dust, lay Wickliffe dead. Bending over him stood Blake, grasping a knife driven to the hilt in his bosom.

"Taken red handed," Grayson cried, while Walton, his companion, himself a magistrate, sprang from his horse, exclaiming, "Blake, I charge you with murder."

"Why, I didn't kill him," Blake said earnestly. "You are mad. I found Wickliffe lying dead and was about to pull this knife from the wound when you came up."

Grayson shook his head. "I wish I could believe you, Harry," he said, "but as I hope to be saved I saw you stab him. I did."

It would be hard to imagine a situation more likely to convince a jury of the prisoner's guilt. Conan Doyle in his wildest fancies in deduction never presented more damning evidence to Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson—the quarrel in the Blue Horse tavern, the epithet resented, the fight, the counter-threat of death, the departure of both while their temper yet was warm and then the terrible tableau on the highway.

What might a man expect even now with the thousand loopholes that the law provides for escape? There could be only one conclusion now, as then, and that conclusion the jury reached without leaving the courtroom. Blake's protestations were vain. He died on the scaffold declaring his innocence.

Three months after the execution the judge who presided at the trial was summoned to Albany to see a prisoner under sentence of death. Grayson, whose testimony chiefly had convicted Blake, also was summoned. Much in wonder, they entered the cell together.

"You," the prisoner said to the judge, "presided at the trial of Harry Blake."

"I did."

"And you," turning to Grayson, "swore you saw him stab Wickliffe. On your testimony he was hung."

"I saw Blake stab him," Grayson said.

"You did not," the prisoner sneered, "for I killed Wickliffe. I sprang into the wood at Blake's approach. His story was true."

The confession was so clear and full that it left no doubt in the judge's mind that a fearful wrong had been done Blake. As for Grayson, the chief witness, he committed suicide. The records contain many instances of the law's mistakes, but few so pathetic as the case of Harry Blake.—Kansas City Star.

Method is like packing things in a box. A good packer will get in half as much again as a bad one.—Cecil.

Killing a Bull Without a Weapon.

Cayetano, a famous Spanish toreador, once was strolling across a meadow with a couple of friends when his attention was attracted by an old and infuriated bull which was galloping toward them with lowered head and erect tail. Cayetano had no weapon, not even a cane, but he seized a dust coat which one of his friends was carrying over his arm. As soon as the bull got close to them Cayetano bade his companions make their escape while he engaged the animal's attention. Using the coat as a cape, he drove the bull crazy with fury, stepping aside with the deftest agility at each of the animal's charges. In this manner he caused the bull to turn sharply in the midst of its onward rushes until finally an ominous crack was heard, and the bull fell in a heap, with its backbone broken by the sudden wrench given by the animal's abrupt swerve.

Couldn't Risk It.

Husband—Did you hunt up the new cook's references? Wife—No, John, I didn't. I was afraid they might prove prejudicial.—Harper's Bazar.

THE MERCHANTS

State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds, Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US. J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,

THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale In Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money, To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Folkedahl,

Highlanding ....Minn

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY, Judges.

The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

THE GRAND PRIZE (the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

GET THE LATEST AND BEST

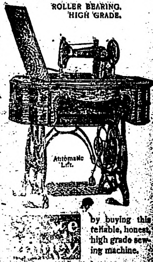
You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., PUBLISHERS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The "Redgeton" SEWING MACHINE.

ROLLER BEARING. HIGH GRADE.



Automatic Lift.

by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

[illegible] GUARANTEE.

[illegible] Sewing Machine Co

[illegible] ILLINOIS.

When the sea is smooth [illegible] many good sailors.

At the Parting of the Ways

By Francis A. Corey

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Lying back in her big easy chair with the red firelight playing over her jewels and laces, Mrs. Taylor Peyton was a picture of luxurious ease. Young, beautiful, fabulously rich, the prizes of life had been showered lavishly upon her. Lois Barton could not understand why her proud face wore that look of weary discontent.

This six weeks' visit with her city cousin had given to Lois, herself, her one taste of real luxury. It was all very wonderful. She felt, sometimes, like a person transported to a land of enchantment. She had enjoyed every moment. But her visit was drawing to a close. Soon, she must return to the drudgery of the school room.

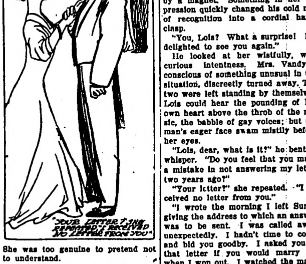
A flush sprang to her cheeks, kindled by a sudden thought. She, too, could live in a beautiful house with servants at her beck and call—buy her gowns at the big shops patonized by her cousin Virginia! Fate had thrown a golden apple in her way. She need not go back to the old treadmill round, the uncongenial tasks, unless she chose to.

But—Ward Winthrop! Well, what of him? It was two years since he had left Surry without bidding her goodby. In all probability she would never see him again. The surest cure for her aching heart was to set up the image of another in the shrine so long kept sacred to him.

Meanwhile Virginia Peyton, on the other side of the dancing fire, was looking her over approvingly.

"My dear," she said, "that simple white gown is in excellent taste. A country girl shouldn't make herself too smart at city functions. I wanted you to look your best tonight. Gordon Vance will be at the reception. He is very fastidious. With men of his temperament, trifles turn the scale. I shall let him know that you return home the last of the week. I think he will come to the point before the evening is over."

"Oh, I hope not!" Lois exclaimed with a sudden revulsion of feeling.



"YOUR LETTER?" SHE REPEATED "I RECEIVED NO LETTER FROM YOU"

She was too genuine to pretend not to understand.

Mrs. Peyton frowned. "Of course you have known what was coming. Ever since the acquaintance began he has been sending you flowers, taking you to lunch and to ride. It's better that everything should be settled before you go."

"But I'm not at all sure—"

"That you want to marry him? Why of course you'll marry him. He can give you everything—wealth, position, influence. It's a wonderful opportunity to come in the way of a country school teacher."

"But—if I do not love him?"

Mrs. Peyton laughed scornfully. "Love! Oh, you little ninny! Nobody marries for love nowadays. It's money that counts."

Lois understood now what had brought about Virginia's marriage with the bald, elderly man she met occasionally at the dinner table.

"You always lacked worldly wisdom," Mrs. Peyton added with some asperity. "But for my intervention you would have thrown yourself away on Ward Winthrop two years ago—a struggling artist without a dollar."

Lois' face became white. Instantly she was on her feet.

"Virginia," she gasped, "I never understood why Ward went without a word. I had felt so sure that he—he—cared. You were visiting me at the time I remember. Did you—send him—away?"

"Of course not, you little fool! How can you think it?"

Lois leaned forward, trembling slightly, and looked straight into her cousin's guilty face. But before she could speak one of the maids appeared to announce the carriage, and she slipped thoughtfully into her wraps.

Mrs. Vandyke's parlors were filled to overflowing with fashionably dressed men and women. It was the usual crush—music, flowers, ravishing toilets. As the newcomers were making the slow round of the rooms Virginia Peyton dropped a sharp whisper into her companion's ear.

"Look! There he is! He's coming this way. This may be your last chance, remember!"

Gordon Vance paused beside them, his handsome face deeply flushed. "I was watching for you, Miss Barton," he said.

Lois' eyes drooped under his ardent gaze. She was at the parting of the ways. The momentous question must soon be answered, and the thought terrified her. There was a cowardly impulse to run away—escape from it all.

But marriage with this man meant the elimination of many bitter-sweet memories from her sore heart. Gordon Vance was cultivated, agreeable—she might love him in time. The prospect of becoming his wife would have dazzled most girls in her position. It would be madness to throw away this matrimonial prize.

"Let us find a quiet spot where we can talk," he pleaded presently. "I have something particular to say to you."

Lois gave a frightened gasp. Glancing around, as if for protection, she saw her cousin suddenly change color, stare right ahead with tense expression, then wheel about and come swiftly toward her.

"I'm faint—ill! These rooms are stifling," Virginia panted. "Please take me home, Mr. Vance. Lois, get your wraps and come quickly."

But Lois' suspicions had been aroused by this sudden indisposition. Glancing curiously toward the upper end of the long room she saw a tall, distinguished-looking man talking animatedly with their hostess. It was Ward Winthrop!

One long-drawn, startled breath, and the girl's sweet lips came together in a straight line. A dozen thronging emotions all at once resolved themselves into a fixed determination. Virginia put out a detaining hand, but she shook it off.

"I mean to know the truth," she said in a resolute voice.

"Have you no pride—no shame?" Virginia cried angrily. "After that man's shabby treatment!"

Ward Winthrop flushed, then paled, when he saw her coming. His eyes had been drawn to her face as by a magnet. Something in her expression quickly changed his cold nod of recognition into a cordial handclasp.

"You, Lois? What a surprise! I'm delighted to see you again."

He looked at her wistfully, with curious intentness. Mrs. Vandyke, conscious of something unusual in the situation, discreetly turned away. The two were left standing by themselves. Lois could hear the pounding of her own heart above the throb of the music, the babble of gay voices; but the man's eager face swam mistily before her eyes.

"Lois, dear, what is it?" he bent to whisper. "Do you feel that you made a mistake in not answering my letter two years ago?"

"Your letter?" she repeated. "I received no letter from you."

"I wrote the morning I left Surry, giving the address to which an answer was to be sent. I was called away unexpectedly. I hadn't time to come and bid you goodby. I asked you in that letter if you would marry me when I won out. I watched the mails for many days, but no answer ever came. Of course, I concluded you had taken that way to let me know my hopes were futile."

A sudden brightness went over Lois' face like a flood of spring sunshine.

"Your letter never reached me, Ward," she said softly. "I think I understand why—"

"What would you have answered if it had?" he interrupted eagerly. "That is what matters. I can ask you to marry me with a clear conscience. For I have made good! Fame and fortune are mine. I love you more than ever. Have I any chance of winning what is of greater consequence to me than anything else in the whole world?"

Lois glanced back to where Gordon Vance and Virginia were standing, and a shiver went over her. The next moment she was smiling happily into her lover's face. "Oh, Ward, you did not come too soon," she said in a sobbing whisper. "I was at the parting of the ways. I might have taken the one that led forever away from you!"

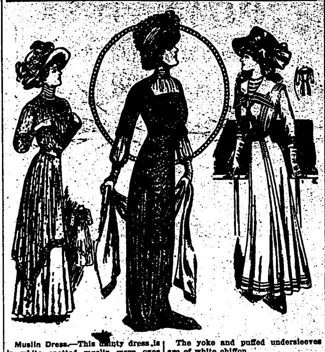
"Smoker's Throat."

Widespread attention has been directed to this complaint since it was announced that King Edward suffered from it, and that the congestion and thickening due to it, combined with other conditions, hastened his death.

The assumption that this was so has been disproved by scientists, who have pointed out that 80 per cent. of adult males suffer from "smoker's throat." The term involves catarrh of the throat, inflammation of the mouth, and even of the upper part of the air passages, which may extend into the windpipe and bronchial tubes.

These exceedingly objectionable and annoying symptoms are due to the smoke producing a local irritation of the mucous membrane covering the parts affected.

THREE SMART COSTUMES



Muslin Dress.—This dainty dress is in white spotted muslin worn over pale blue crepe-de-soie. An overskirt is made of the muslin gathered to a belt of the crepe, and cut with points at the back and sides; muslin embroidery edges the overskirt; the bodice is also trimmed with this, and has a deep frill of lace gathered to a tucked collar of crepe; the cuffs are also of crepe.

Straw hat of pale blue trimmed with pink roses.

Materials required: 4½ yards muslin 42 inches wide, 6 yards insertion, 3 yards crepe-de-soie, 1 yard lace.

Visiting Dress.—Amethyst crepe meteor is chosen for this smart dress; the princess part is cut with rather short kimono sleeves. The center front is continued much longer than the sides and forms a sort of panel; the lower part is slightly gathered to edge of princess upper part.

Russia braid in straight rows and loop pattern forms a trimming round the entire edge.

The yoke and puffed undersleeves are of white chiffon.

Toque composed of small flowers, with chiffon taken round and arranged in a rosette at the side.

Materials required: 7 yards crepe meteor, about 4 dozen yards Russia braid, 1½ yards chiffon 44 inches wide.

Dress for Girl From 16 to 18 Years.—A dress in the sailor style is always so becoming to young girls; it may be made in linen or serge. Three tucks are arranged each side back and front of skirt and blouse, on the skirt they are stitched about four inches, and on the blouse to waist. A darker colored material is used as a trimming; three straps of different widths edge the skirt, collar and cuffs; the belt is also of the darker, and the singlet, which is in white, is trimmed to match.

Straw hat trimmed with ribbon.

Materials required: 6½ yards 48 inches wide and about 1½ yards dark material.

VALUABLE SEWING HINTS

Things Worth Knowing for My Lady of the Needle—Avoid the Knot.

The geimpe of plain sheer tulle or net is more frequently used than that of tucks. The yoke is extremely shallow, and the clear flesh tint is the usual color.

A dainty little workbag, just fitted to hold the embroidered collars and belts and other paraphernalia of the summer piazza, is of figured lawn, over a lining of light blue china silk. China silk makes a good lining, by the way, for bags which are to hold embroidery silks and other things which might be likely to catch upon rougher fabrics. On each side of the bag is a semicircle of lace insertion, bordered with a shirring of blue baby ribbon. The embroidery hoop handles are covered with blue ribbon.

The use of a knot is to be avoided in sewing and not to be tolerated in embroidery. The accomplished needle woman rarely finds it necessary to start with a knot, save in gathering or basting. Sometimes a tiny one is slipped under a hem, but it will show on right side if material is sheer and makes an ugly lump in ironing. Two or three over and over stitches taken on wrong side of material is as secure as a knot and much more sightly. In embroidery there is no excuse for a knot. Two or three tiny stitches taken on outline or in body of work where it is afterward covered will hold any stitches. Knots only tend to an untidy wrong side, which no good embroiderer will tolerate and make the work rough in laundering.

Summer Frills and Fixings.

Dutch necks and collarless dresses are spoiling the demand for ear-height collars and some of the departments tell you frankly if you ask for extremely high ones that they do not have them. There is a sort of craze among the girls who like to be odd and "quaint" for the low collars with colored embroidery to match their suits and with them, of course, go embroidered jabots or bows to match. One needs an extra trunk this season for mere trifles such as this if one's wardrobe is half equipped with frills, collars, neck fixings generally and belts and sashes. This is to say not a word about the chiffon overwaist that daughters prodigal of time are making by the score for the varying of their toilets.

Hats Still Elaborate.

A noticeable point in the woman's linen costume this year, however, is that, while the tailored lines run to the simplest, in the dress, it is nearly always offset by an elaborate hat. This may be in the form of a floral turban, or something built up in the "nabob" turban form, of masses of fancy foulard, or tulle, with shot effects; or it may take the form of a large, wide-crowned hat with a huge bird upon it, massed and veiled with tulle. This shot effect has even invaded the field of the linen itself, of which a few examples have met my eye, though invariably in very expensive weaves.

VERY LATEST IN GLOVES

Chantecler Gloves Have Come to Match Chantecler Handkerchiefs—New Hints.

Tucked long gloves are in again, and will stay for the summer.

Pink silk gloves are reversible to yellow, and just match the tearose gowns.

White kid gloves are stitched in colors to match the frock. Lavenders and pinks are especially favored.

The stitching itself is varied; a broad chain effect is new and pretty.

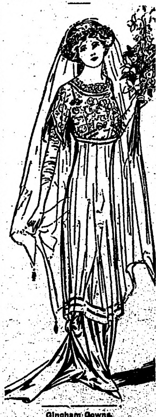
Yellow lisle gloves are cool and washable, and look like the fashionable but heavy chamois.

Thin brown cloth gauntlets are good for the horsewoman.

Chantecler gloves have come to match the chantecler handkerchiefs. A tiny rooster or a golden pheasant is embroidered at the elbow.

And this new embroidery and backstitching can quite easily be done by one's self, which is their chief attraction.

FOR THE YOUNG BRIDE



Gingham Gowns.

Ginghams with grounds of gray or of th "bloud" shades seen in cloths, lend themselves particularly well to combination with bright plaids, and some charming frocks of these tones are made up with flowered, striped, or plaid materials, piped with brilliant blue, red or green, to which are added other accents, such as a belt or still little bows of the same brilliant tone.—Harper's Bazar.

POULTRY

GOOD HOUSE FOR CHICKENS

Detailed Instructions and Illustration Showing How Building May Be Built.

The ground plan of a substantial poultry house, shown in the illustration, is 12 feet by 30 feet, and is divided into parts each 12 feet by 10 feet.

The compartment on the right is used as a winter roosting and laying place.

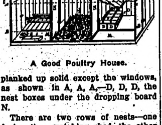
The center as a scratching shed in the winter and a shelter from rain and sun during the summer.

The room at the left is used during the winter as a place of exercise and in which to feed mashes and to water the fowl. This room also contains the dust boxes and where the feed is stored.

A, A, A, in the dotted squares represent the windows or their location in the front of the house. B, B, is sided up solid to the line running from B to B 1½ feet high.

The line running from C to C is the top of a four-foot high poultry netting which runs the entire length of the house.

There is a drop curtain arranged in each room to come down next to this wire in stormy weather or cold nights. From C, C to top of the house is planked up solid except the windows, as shown in A, A, A,—D, D, D, the nest boxes under the dropping board N.



A Good Poultry House.

There are two rows of nests—one facing the scratching shed, the other facing the right-hand room. A trap nest may be arranged very conveniently here.

E is a drop curtain in front of the roosts in the winter department, which is to be let down at night. F is the roosting poles in the winter quarters.

G is the roosting poles in the summer roosting quarters.

H, H, the doors of poultry netting.

I, the little door that leads from the scratching shed to the end room.

J, cut straw scattered on the floor of the scratching shed in which to scatter wheat, rye, oats and corn.

K, the dust box.

L, the drinking fountain.

M, M, M, the floor, which should be of sand and gravel.

N, the dropping board in winter roosting department.

A house of these dimensions should be nine feet in front and seven feet tall in the rear. It may be made of any stuff at hand, or to suit the builder.

It can be made a very costly affair, or it may be gotten up very reasonably.

CARE OF INCUBATOR CHICKS

Not Always Fault of Eggs or Breeding Stock That Little Ones Do Not Thrive.

It is not always the fault of the eggs or the breeding stock that the little chicks do not thrive, as the incubator men would have us believe. It is the fault of the hatching, brooding and feeding combined. The chicks do not have enough fresh, warm air at hatching time, say the last five days. Too many are put in a bunch in the brooders and the air is not warm enough for them and the brooders are not ventilated sufficiently at all times. Chicks are fed too soon and too much at a time, and do not have enough exercise. If a chick is hatched strong and vigorous it does not matter how it is hatched. If it is kept warm and dry it does not matter how it is done. If it is fed right and the right kind of feed it does not matter where it is, or how it is, done.

Brooder for Chicks.

Less Profit in Scrubs.

The breeder in scrub fowls has the same trouble and often in greater degree, as the breeder of fancy fowls, yet his profits—if any at all—are less. In other words, this time and expense given to scrub fowls seldom gives good profit, while thoroughbred birds and eggs from any good breed are always in great demand, and usually pay.

Water for Ducks.

Ducks kept entirely on land must have deep drinking vessels, so they can get their heads under water. Where shallow vessels or troughs are used, they gum up about the eyes, become listless, sit about, lose appetite and eventually die.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HEALTHY KIDNEYS.

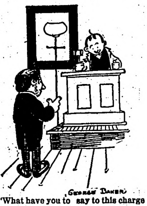
Weak kidneys fail to remove poisons from the blood and are the cause of backache, headache, urinary troubles and dizzy spells. To insure good health, keep the kidneys well. Doan's Kidney Pills remove all kidney ills. Read what a physician says:

Dr. H. Green, 215 N. 9th St., No. Yakima, Wash., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my practice for years and they have given satisfaction. I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills personally and pronounce them the best remedy I have prescribed in my long career as a physician and surgeon."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Every Picture Tells a Story

LIKE HOCH.



"What have you to say to this charge of bigamy; why did you have so many wives?"

"Well, judge, I expected to weed out a few of them later."

THE BEST OF ITS KIND

Is always advertised, in fact it only pays to advertise good things. When you see an article advertised in this paper year after year you can be absolutely certain that there is merit to it because the continued sale of any article depends upon merit and to keep on advertising one must keep on selling. All good things have imitators, but imitations are not advertised. They have no reputation to sustain, they never expect to have any permanent sale and your dealer would never sell them if he studied your interests. Sixteen years ago Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic Powder for the feet, was first sold, and through newspaper advertising and through people telling each other what a good thing it was for tired and aching feet it has now a permanent sale, and nearly 200 so-called foot powders have been put on the market with the hope of profiting by the reputation which has been built up for Allen's Foot-Ease. When you ask for an article advertised in these papers see that you get it. Avoid substitutes.

History Cleared Up.

The third grade was "having history." Forty youngsters were making guesses about the life and character of the Father of His Country, when the teacher propounded a question that stumped them all.

"Why did Washington cross the Delaware?"

Why, indeed? Not a child could think of anything but the answer to the famous chicken problem: "To get on the other side," and, of course, that wouldn't do. Then little Annie's hand shot into the air. Little Annie crossed the Delaware every summer herself, hence the bright idea.

"Well, Annie?"

"Because he wanted to get to Atlantic City."—Philadelphia Times.

Only One Cobb.

The morning after Judge Andrew Cobb, a one time justice of the supreme court of Georgia, tendered his resignation, an Atlanta lawyer and a shoe drummer sat in the same seat in an outgoing train.

The lawyer bought a newspaper and looked over the headlines. Then he turned to the drummer and said:

"Well, I see Cobb has resigned."

"Gee!" said the drummer. "What will Detroit do now?"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Different Values.

"There's a big difference in men."

"I judge so, by studying the various rates for which Pittsburg councilmen were bought."

No Trouble—
A Saucer,
A little Cream,
and
Post Toasties
right from the box.

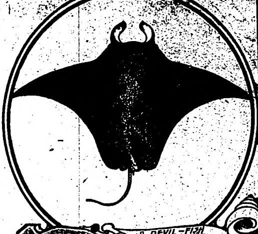
Breakfast in a minute, and you have a meal as delightful as it is wholesome.

Post Toasties are crisp and flavoury—golden-brown, fluffy bits that almost melt in the mouth.

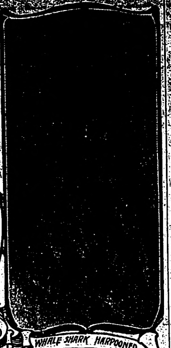
"The Memory Lingers"
POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

Some Giant Fishes of the Seas

By HUGH M. SMITH
U. S. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIES



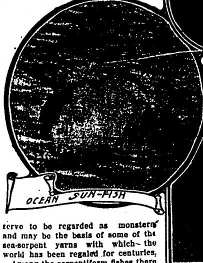
A DEVIL-FISH



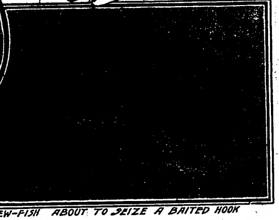
WHALE SHARK HARPOONED

MAN-EATER SHARK

SAW-FISH OF THE SOUTHERN LAGOONS



OCEAN SUN-FISH



A JEW-FISH ABOUT TO SEIZE A BAITED HOOK

BELIEF in the existence of sea-serpents and other marine monsters goes back to a very remote antiquity and may be as old as man himself. That great Hebrew poem which we call the Book of Job has much to say about the "leviathan." This creature has been the subject of much speculation and may have been a myth, but there is nothing inherently improbable in its being a giant fish.

Who knows that primitive man may not have been coeval with some formidable marine creatures now extinct, the tradition of which has come down through the ages and left its impress on the mind of the present generation? The avidity and credulity with which the general public year after year receives newspaper accounts, which are purely fictitious or hang on slender threads of fact, portraying the capture or sighting of creatures of impossible form, show how firmly established and deep-seated is the conviction that the sea contains leviathans not yet known to science. Every season yields a fresh crop of sea-serpent stories and a new series of grotesque pictures of creatures which, if they really existed, would revolutionize our ideas of the animal kingdom. The writer has personally followed to their lairs two or three of the most horrible monsters conceived by the vivid imagination of the newspaper man, and found them to be well-known animals with little to suggest the sea-serpent.

As to whether there really exists in the sea today strange monsters, scientists are not wholly in accord, although a negative view is held by most of them. The very circumstantial account of the sighting of a "sea-serpent" on the Asiatic coast by the French gunboat Decidee a few years ago, as published in the journals at the time, will perhaps weaken the belief of some intelligent persons who have heretofore denied the possibility of the existence at this day of marine monsters comparable to those of geological times.

Whatever may be the truth as to the existence of such creatures, there are well-known members of the fish class which are so large that they deserve to be regarded as monsters and may be the basis of some of the sea-serpent yarns with which the world has been regaled for centuries.

Among the serpentiform fishes there is none of such exceptionally large size as properly to belong in the sea-serpent class, although some deserve to be considered as giants among eels. If any known fishes may be suspected of aspiring to be sea-serpents, surely they are the morays, although a sea-serpent only 30 feet long would hardly satisfy present-day requirements, and no morays have yet been recorded which were half so long. They have, however, been known to exceed ten feet in length, and they are among the most dreaded of fishes, having formidable teeth and showing a disposition to attack men.

A fish of such peculiar form that the Italians call it mola, a millstone, and the Spaniards pez luna, moon-fish, is known to Americans and English as the sun-fish, for it appears at the surface of the ocean on bright days and spends many hours basking listlessly in the sun, sometimes lying flat with one side just out of the water, sometimes with the back fin projecting like a buoy above the surface. It is disk-shaped, its height nearly equaling its length, and it has a long, narrow fin on its upper and lower edges posteriorly, and a short, broad flap representing the caudal fin; its eyes are large and its mouth small, and taken altogether it is one of the most grotesque of fishes, being apparently all head. Of almost world-wide distribution, its is particularly abundant on the southeastern coast of the United States and on the California coast. It swims but little, being usually content to be drifted along by the ocean currents. The Gulf Stream wafts many a sun-fish northward each summer, so that the species is not a rarity off southern New England, and I have seen a number of specimens that had become stranded on the coast of Norway. The fish is entirely harmless, and is so sluggish and listless, and is such a conspicuous object at sea, that it is easily approached and harpooned.

That the sun-fish deserves a place in the list of giant fishes may be judged from the fact that examples weighing 200 to 500 pounds are not rare, and that much larger ones are occasionally met with. The largest known specimen, harpooned in 1893 at Redondo Beach, California, weighed 1,800 pounds. On such a monster, lying on one side, there would be room for 30 men to stand. The strong teeth, shaped like a turtle's beak, suggest that hard-shelled animals constitute its food, but as far as known jelly-fish are its chief diet. The extremely tough, fibrous skin, several inches thick, and the general coarseness of structure seem inconsistent with such delicate food.

The valuable mackerel family has one member which easily ranks first in size among the bony fishes, as distinguished from the sharks, rays, sturgeons, etc., with gristly skeletons. This is the horse mackerel or great tunny (Thunnus thynnus), whose range encircles the globe and which is an object of fisheries in many countries, notably southern Europe. Built on the compact and graceful lines of our common mackerel, it is the apotheosis of speed, alertness and vigor among the fishes of the high seas, and might very easily make a transoceanic trip in one-third the time of our fastest steamships.

Three species of fishes of the sea-bass family known as jew-fishes rang among the largest of the spiny-finned fishes. They inhabit tropical American waters, and range as far north as the California and South Atlantic coasts. The spotted jew-fish (Promicrops itaiara) is common in the West Indies, and reaches a weight of 600 pounds. The black jew-fish (Garrupa nigrita), found from South Carolina to Brazil, weighs 500 pounds. The California jew-fish (Stereolepsis gigas), usually called sea bass, sometimes attains a weight of 600 pounds and is one of the really great game fishes of the country, being much sought by anglers in southern California. An experienced angler has written: "My largest fish weighed 276 pounds, and I was repeatedly almost jerked overboard by the struggles of the bass. I have seen a 200-pound fish snap the largest shark line like a thread, and large specimens straighten out an iron shark hook; yet the skilled wielders of the rod catch these giants of the tribe with a line that is not much larger than some eye-glass cords."

Among the rays are several members which reach colossal proportions. The largest and best known of these is the so-called "devil-fish" (Manta vampyrus) of our South Atlantic coast and the tropical waters of America, which occasionally strays as far as Cape May and is comomn south of Cape Hatteras. It is shaped like a butterfly or bat, and has been called the "ocean vampire." Projecting from either side of the head is a horn-like appendage, which in reality is a detached part of the pectoral fin or "wing." These horns, to which the name "devil-fish" owes its origin, are sometimes three feet long and are freely movable, being used for bringing food to the mouth. The mouth is peculiar in having no teeth in the upper jaw, while the lower jaw has about a hundred rows of small paved teeth. Many years ago the pursuit of the fish was a favorite pastime of the Carolina planters, and William Elliott, in his "Carolina Sports by Land and Water," said: "Imagine a monster from 16 to 20 feet across the back, full 3 feet in depth, possessed of powerful yet flexible flaps or wings with which he drives himself furiously in the water or vaults high in the air." There are well-authenticated instances of this fish entagling its horns in the anchor ropes or chains of small vessels and towing them rapidly for long distances, to the mystification of the people on board.

The expanse of body in this species is greater than in any other known animal. Examples 16 feet wide are common, and those 20 feet across and over 4 feet thick are not rare. The maximum width is stated by authors to be 25 or 30 feet. One specimen, of which the writer had a photograph, caught in Lapaz Bay, Mexico, many years ago by the crew of the U. S. S. Narragansett of which George Dewey was captain, was 17 feet wide and weighed nearly two tons. A fish of the largest size mentioned would weigh not less than six tons.

In the lagoons, sounds, and bayous of the West Indies and our southern coast there exists an abundant fish of great length, intermediate in structure between the sharks and the rays, and at once recognizable by the elongation of the snout into a wide, flat blade in the edges of which are large, sharp teeth fitting in sockets and directed horizontally. The teeth are in 25 to 30 pairs, separated by wide intervals, and give to the saw-fish its name. The species is well-known to those who reside in or visit the South Atlantic or Gulf seaboards, and the "saws" are familiar objects in curio stores all over the country.

When giant fishes are mentioned most people will at once think of the sharks, among which, indeed, are found the largest fishes now existing. Of the many species of sharks noteworthy on account of their size, there are about half a dozen which are pre-eminent. These differ much in their disposition, some being harmless as doves and others the incarnation of ferocity.

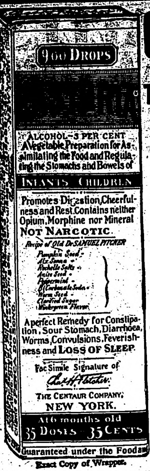
The sleeper shark (Somniosus microcephalus), whose scientific name fits it so admirably, appears to have developed its body at the expense of its brain, for is a sluggish, stupid glutton, about six times as long as an average man. At home in the arctic regions, it sometimes makes visits as far south as Cape Cod, the British Isles, and Oregon.

One of the most prodigious and perhaps the most formidable of sharks is the "man-cater" (Carcharodon carcharias). It roams through all temperate and tropical seas and everywhere is an object of dread. Its maximum length is 40 feet and its teeth are 3 inches long. While there are few authentic instances of sharks attacking human beings, there have undoubtely been many cases where sharks simply swallowed people who had fallen overboard, just as they would swallow any other food. How easy it would be for a man-eater to devour a person whole may be judged from the finding of an entire hundred-pound sea-lion in the stomach of a 30-foot shark on the California coast.

The largest of all fishes, the largest of all cold blooded animals, and the largest of all existing animals, with the exception of a few species of whales, is the whale shark (Rhineodon typicus), originally described from Cape of Good Hope, but now known from India, Japan, South America, Panama, California and various other places, a small specimen having been obtained on the Florida coast a few years ago. This shark has a very broad and obtuse snout and an exceedingly wide mouth armed with numerous minute teeth; the dark-colored body is marked with many small whitish spots. The species is stated to attain a length of 70 feet and is known to exceed 50 feet. Notwithstanding its immense size, however, it is harmless to man unless attacked, and feeds on the small creatures for which its teeth are adapted. Its huge bulk makes it dangerous in the same way that a whale is dangerous.

The ribbon-fishes constitute a group chiefly noteworthy for their shape and the circumstances under which they have been met with, although some of them are among the most elongate of fishes. Imagine a creature one foot high, three or four inches thick, and more than 20 feet long, with the consistency of a wet towel, and you will have some idea of a ribbon-fish.

Our knowledge of these fishes is due to no activity on the part of zoologists in finding their habitat and collecting them therein, but to the circumstance that when they die or lose their equilibrium they fall upward and float on the surface, whence they are picked up or drift ashore. Nearly all the specimens known have been found dead or dying, and few, if any, have been secured in deep-sea collecting apparatus. This suggests how fragmentary must be our knowledge of the larger animals of the oceanic abyss and how possible it might be for unknown monsters to exist there in abundance.



900 DROPS
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES — 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food an Exact Copy of Wrapper.

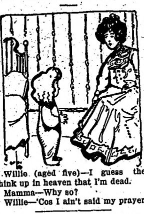
CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

NAUGHTY WILLIE.



Willie (aged five)—I guess they think up in heaven that I'm dead.

Mamma—Why so?

Willie—'Cos I ain't said my prayers.

RAW ECZEMA ON HANDS

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. I had three good doctors but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now.

"My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. She used Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks they were entirely cured. I have used Cuticura for other members of my family and it always proved successful. Mrs. M. E. Falin, Speers Ferry, Va., Oct. 19, 1909."

Fine School.

"Your daughter should attend my school of education."

"She shan't! She's attended one, and she's positively—"

"Ah, but I teach a new system. When my pupils are asked to recite they are trained to refuse."

119 Years Old When He Died.

Paddy Blake, who was born at Ballygireen, parish of Kilnasoolagh, county Clare, Ireland, 119 years ago, has died in the Corofin Union hospital. Paddy had a clear memory of events that happened a hundred years ago and was one of those who went to see Daniel O'Connell passing through Bunratty Pike on his way to Ennis for the great election of 1828.

His Busy Season.

"How's business?"

"Brisk," answered the druggist. "I've bought tickets for two picnics and four excursions this morning, and donated goods for several indoor affairs."

For Red, Itching Eyelids, Cysts, Styes Falling Eyelashes and All Eyes That Need Care Try Murine Eye Salve. Aseptic Tubes—Trial Size—25c. Ask Your Druggist or Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

After marrying for money many a man wishes he had been brought up to work for a living.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

A man's argument is nearly always self-convincing.

Northwestern Conservatory
40 Instructors
600 Students
(26th Year, Opens Sept. 5, '10)
All branches of Music Art and Dramatic Art, Orchestral and Band Instruments. Normal Courses in Public School Music, Art, Piano, Physical Training, Domestic Science. Terms Reasonable. Catalog Free.
O. A. EVERS, Pres. Minneapolis, Minn.

Oh! That Awful Gas

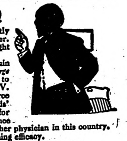
Did you hear it? How embarrassing. These stomach noises make you wish you could sink through the floor. You imagine everyone hears them. Keep a box of CASCARETS in your purse or pocket and take a part of one after eating. It will relieve the stomach of gas. 918

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world—million boxes a month.

PATENT your ideas. 64-page book and advice FREE. Established 1880. Fitzgerald & Co. Box K, Washington, D.C.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

A Poor Weak Woman



As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M.D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of woman's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address as above.

MICA AXLE GREASE
Keeps the spindle bright and free from grit. Try a box.
Sold by dealers everywhere.
STANDARD OIL CO.
(Incorporated)

WHY MEN DRINK AND USE DRUGS, AND HOW TO CURE THEM
OUR NEW BOOK TELLS ALL ABOUT IT, SENT FREE, ADDRESS
THE KEELEY INSTITUTE, 829 Tenth Street South, Minneapolis, Minn.

The TALLEST TREE THAT GROWS

By EDGERTON R. YOUNG

IN THESE days, when the reforesting of the waste lands of our country is becoming a question of such national importance, the study of the relative value of different species of trees is naturally very essential.

Scientific parties are scouring the earth in search for new plants, fruits and vegetables to add to our enjoyment and happiness. A good degree of success has already attended their efforts, and doubtless much more will yet be accomplished by them.

Owing to the rapidly increased price of timber and lumber, the matter of forest-growing is of vital interest to the great corporations like the railroads, manufacturing and building companies, that must have, for their very existence, vast quantities of timber and lumber. The timber required by the railroads for the one item of railroad ties, not taking into consideration the quantity used in the construction of cars and buildings, consumes the output of many hundreds of thousands of acres of timber lands every year.

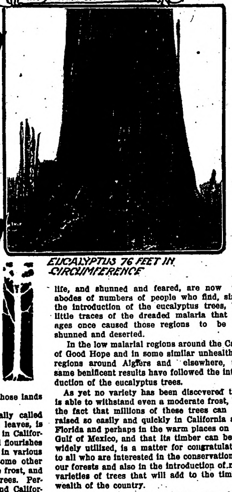
While undoubtedly the valuable trees indigenous to America will be most largely replanted and utilized, many others that are not natives of this continent, when found by experiment to be easily grown and of value, will also be imported and largely cultivated.

In the case of the eucalyptus this has already been done, and so extensively is the tree now grown in California, and so many and valued are its uses, that it will be news to multitudes to hear that there still live many who remember when it was first brought into that state by the late Bishop Taylor from distant Australia, its original home.

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS, SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS (THE BLUE GUM): CALIFORNIA

EUCALYPTUS VIMINALIS: CALIFORNIA



EUCALYPTUS 76 FEET IN CIRCUMFERENCE

It was a surprise, as well as a revelation, to find on our recent visit to Australia that in that far-away land, under the Southern Cross, were growing trees that towered in the air 150 feet higher than the great Sequoia, the famous red wood of our American west; and yet such is the fact, as some specimens of the Eucalyptus amygdalina reach to the great height of 480 feet. Specimens abound that are from 120 to 200 feet in circumference. They are practically of no use for commercial purposes, as the expense of cutting down such enormous trees and then getting their logs split up into pieces that can be handled is so great that these monsters are passed by the thrifty lumbermen for the smaller ones that are more easily handled.

The Eucalyptus amygdalina is the tallest, if not perhaps the largest, tree that grows. Specimens over 400 feet high are frequently found, while some have been measured towering up to 470 and 480 feet. The timber of these great specimens is easily worked, and, as it does not warp readily, is much used in carpentry.

The eucalyptus tree is a genus of trees and shrubs of the natural order of Myrtacea, embracing about 150 species. All but four of them are natives of Australia and Tasmania only. The eucalyptus trees are so abundant in many parts of Australia that over vast areas they are practically the only trees visible. The fact that the fully developed trees are destitute of symmetry and beauty robs the great Australian wooded regions of that attractiveness and charm which gives such pleasure and delight to the primeval forests of America.

One striking characteristic of several varieties of the eucalyptus is that, while they never seem to shed their leaves, they cast or slough off their bark in long strips every year. The leaves, which have a leathery appearance, contain a considerable quantity of volatile oil. The tincture or oil extracted from them has a bitter aromatic taste and is extensively used as a remedy for various diseases.

On the young shoots of many species the leaves in pairs are opposite to each other, as they appear on ordinary plants, while on the older branches the leaves are arranged alternately and grow in such a way that they present their edges to the sun. This seems to be nature's provision to protect them from the intense heat of the tropical sun of those lands where they most flourish.

The Eucalyptus globulus, generally called the blue gum, from its bluish-green leaves, is the variety most successfully grown in California. It has also been introduced and flourishes in India, Natal, Egypt, Algeria, and in various parts of southern Europe and in some other warm countries. It cannot stand the frost, and so must be classed among tropical trees. Perhaps only in the state of Florida and California can we expect to see it in perfection in this country; yet although its introduction into California has been of but recent date, already its value to that state has been very considerable.

Some of the species of eucalyptus are much more valuable than others. There is also a great diversity both in their appearance and worth. One of the most valuable is the Eucalyptus marginata, popularly called the Jarrah wood. It grows to a great size and its timber is so hard that it is found to be especially valuable in the construction of wharves, as it resists the attack of the ship worms and borers that are so destructive to ordinary wood. Because of this quality it also enters largely into the construction of ships and is ultilized in other marine uses.

Some varieties of the eucalyptus yield a kind of astringent gum or resin called Vino, while from others a species of manna—a hard little, sweet substance—is obtained in considerable quantities. As an antidote against malaria and as being valuable in warding off or dissipating malaria in regions where malaria abounds, the eucalyptus has obtained a considerable reputation. Expert opinions seem to be divided as to the way in which its beneficent results come about. Some think it is the result of the volatile oils which these trees give off through their leaves, acting as a neutralizing and even destructive power against the malarial matter in the atmosphere; others maintain that its beneficent results are caused by the fact of the trees being such rapid growers, and the great quantity of water they thus absorb and then give off purifies the atmosphere. Whatever may be the cause, the fact is evident that their presence in goodly numbers, planted in malarial regions, has produced most beneficent results.

The Roman Campagna especially has been greatly benefited, so much so that large portions once considered almost fatal to human life, and shunned and feared, are now the abodes of numbers of people who find, since the introduction of the eucalyptus trees, but little traces of the dreaded malaria that for ages once caused those regions to be so shunned and deserted.

In the low malarial regions around the Cape of Good Hope and in some similar unhealthful regions around Algiers and elsewhere, the same benificent results have followed the introduction of the eucalyptus trees.

As yet no variety has been discovered that is able to withstand even a moderate frost, but the fact that millions of these trees can be raised so easily and quickly in California and Florida and perhaps in the warm places on the Gulf of Mexico, and that its timber can be so widely utilized, is a matter for congratulation to all who are interested in the conservation of our forests and also in the introduction of new varieties of trees that will add to the timber wealth of the country.

In general, eucalyptus may be successfully planted in the sections of the United States suitable for the culture of citrus fruits. They are grown in nearly all the agricultural sections of California, along the coast of southern Oregon, and to a limited extent in Arizona. New Mexico and western Texas. Several species have also been planted in Florida and along the Gulf coast. Here, however, occasional frosts have killed or severely damaged the trees, and for this reason planting has been discouraged.

The blue gum (Eucalyptus globulus) has a phenomenally rapid rate of growth. Seedlings stands will average a height growth of 50 feet in 6 years and 100 feet in 10 years. Under very favorable conditions individual trees have reached a height of 125 feet and a diameter of 36 inches in 9 years. In sprout stands growth is even more rapid; trees frequently reach 3 inches in diameter and 35 feet in height in 8 months, while in 3 years a diameter of 7 inches and a height of 70 feet are often attained. In California, under favorable conditions, trees have attained a height of 175 feet and a diameter of 5 feet in 25 years. Although sometimes irregular in form, the tree tends to develop a straight, gradually tapering, unforked stem. In plantations the trunks become rapidly cleared of branches to a considerable height, but in the open, trees branch more widely and gradually develop a short crown of massive, spreading branches.

Blue gum is practically immune from disease. Where trees are reproduced by sprouts, the old stumps frequently decay slowly at the heart, while the sprouts remained unaffected. Growing trees are not attacked by insect enemies, but felled timber lying unbarked upon the ground is subject to injury by a wood-mining insect.

Blue gum rarely suffers any breakage of the limbs by winds, and the spreading root system renders the trees very [illegible]

Fire is the greatest source of injury to eucalyptus plantations. Both the natural characteristics of the trees and the conditions within planted groves render them peculiarly susceptible to fire injury. The large quantity of litter—dry leaves, branches and shredded bark—which accumulates beneath a stand is extremely inflammable. The bark of eucalyptus is so thin that the trees are injured even by light surface fires.

The wood of blue gum is very heavy, hard, strong and tough, but is not durable in contact with the soil. It is close-grained, and is split with difficulty after it has dried. It is less elastic than hickory, but it has been demonstrated by mechanical tests that seasoned blue gum timber is a little inferior in strength and stiffness to the best second-growth hickory. In appearance it closely resembles the wood of hickory and ash.

Blue-gum timber is utilized for a great variety of purposes in California. The wood is excellent for fuel, and in the treeless valleys has been the chief fuel supply for many years. In southern California the steady demand renders commercial planting for fuel very profitable. Eucalyptus timber has been extensively used in California for wharf piling. Blue-gum piles are in use in nearly every port on the California coast, and extended trial has shown that they resist the attacks of marine borers which destroy timber in sea water longer than other species commonly used for piling. Blue-gum timber has also been used to some extent for fence posts and telephone poles. The wood is not suitable for this purpose, however, on account of its short life in the ground. Seasoned posts last a little longer than green posts, and timber cut from the heart is more durable than sapwood.

Blue-gum timber has been used to a limited extent to determine its value for railroad ties. The results thus far obtained indicate that it compares favorably with second-grade pine-tie timber.

The lumber has been extensively used for vehicle stock and for wooden parts of agricultural implements. It is also made into insulator pins for electric wiring, and is used for furniture and cabinet work, hardwood flooring, trip-hammer beams, the levers of windlasses, and the blocking for oil and wine presses, wood paving, pulley blocks and belt wheels.

The extensive utilization of gum lumber has hitherto been prevented by the scanty supply of timber of merchantable size and by the difficulty experienced in seasoning the lumber without warping and checking. It is believed, however, that in the seasoning of gum no greater difficulties will be encountered than in seasoning of any other hardwood of similar density and strength.

A product of considerable importance derived from blue gum is the oil distilled from the leaves. Eucalyptus oil is recognized as a valuable drug and is extensively used by pharmacists and physicians.

In many valleys of California eucalyptus windbreaks are considered absolutely necessary to insure the successful production of crops. They have been most extensively used to safeguard citrus orchards from strong and destructive winds in southern California, but they are now being established also for the protection of vineyards and orchards of deciduous fruits, olives and walnuts. The blue gum excels other species for windbreak purposes on account of its height and the rapidity of its growth. The tall shafts of the trees bend before the wind and act as a cushion to deflect it upward over the orchard, whereas ordinary wind-break trees form a more solid wall, and the wind draws downward, forming eddies near the leeward side.

Eucalyptus reproduce readily by both seeds and sprouts. The trees bear seed in abundance annually, and under favorable conditions natural reproduction is freely established. Trees also sprout vigorously from both the stump and the roots, either after cutting or in response to injury. In California commercial groves are almost invariably reproduced by sprouts.

Plantations should be started with young trees and not by direct sowing. The opinion is generally held that eucalyptus seedlings are so difficult to raise that their propagation is impracticable except for expert nurserymen. In point of fact, blue gum is one of the most easily propagated species.

OLD MEN AT PLAY

Missouri Village Has a Marble Craze That Occupies Attention.

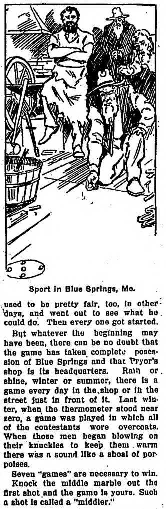
Men Now Past Sixty Who Find Delight in the Playthings of Their Early Years.

Blue Springs, Mo.—Horseshoes! Aw, shucks! Horseshoes do well enough to furnish a light diversion now and then, but for a serious game of headwork and skill, Blue Springs believes no game is half as good as old-fashioned marbles.

For two years the boys and men of Blue Springs—representatives from all of Shakespeare's seven ages—have been playing marbles the year round, each month with increasing skill. There is a legend that Uncle Dan Stanley, who is seventy-four, and Uncle Tom Holloway, who is seventy-five, were so evenly matched in a contest arranged last winter that they lagged from taw for two days without either man winning an advantage of a sixteenth of an inch in the struggle to gain the privilege of having the first shot, and the contest had to be declared a draw before it began.

Knickerbocker teams, ten-year-olds, fifteen, twenty-five, fifty, or seventy-five-year-old teams, or any other age that a challenger may prefer, can be furnished by Blue Springs on five minutes' notice. Blue Springs challenges the world.

Just how marbles got started here no one appears to remember. Possibly some gray-bearded citizen of the town sat on a nail keg in front of Pryor's blacksmith shop on a spring day two years ago and got to thinking, while he watched the "kids" playing marbles in the street, that he used to be a pretty fair hand at that game himself in days before the war. Then he went out and knocked a "middler" from "taw"—or almost did—and went back and bragged about it to somebody else. And that other person used to be pretty fair, too, in other days, and went out to see what he could do. Then every one got started.



Sport in Blue Springs, Mo.

But whatever the beginning may have been, there can be no doubt that the game has taken complete possession of Blue Springs and that Pryor's shop is its headquarters. Rain or shine, winter or summer, there is a game every day in the shop or in the street just in front of it. Last winter, when the thermometer stood near zero, a game was played in which all of the contestants wore overcoats. When those men began blowing on their knuckles to keep them warm there was a sound like a shoal of porpoises.

Seven "games" are necessary to win.

Knock the middle marble out the first shot and the game is yours. Such a shot is called a "middler."

Knock any marble out and you must "clear the ring"—knock all the others too, to win the game.

If your marble stays in the square after the first shot, you are "fat," or "dead" for the rest of the game.

If some one else hits your taw you are dead for the rest of the game.

Lynn Pryor, the blacksmith, stood at taw, took careful aim, and from 12 feet away spotted the middle of the square. One game for Pryor and Binger! But nobody got excited. Middlers from taw are ordinary occurrences in Blue Springs. John Henry Moore holds a record of having knocked out 11 of such middlers in 14 shots.

A minute later Uncle Dan Stanley knocked a middler. Capt. George Webb, the furniture dealer and undertaker, did the same thing, too, as soon as he had the chance. So did Farmer George Binger. They didn't do so all the time, of course, but middlers came with an astonishing regularity. And when there was a game in which all four men had a chance to shoot, other plays just as remarkable for distance and accuracy were taken by the gallery at the blacksmith shop door as matter of course.

"You must understand," the blacksmith said, "that if a man comes with a horse to be shod, the game stops instanter. But when there's nothing going on, somebody is sure to start a game. Farmers come in on rainy days, sometimes from several miles around, and some of them are good hands at marbles.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1910. NO. 21.

Odd News From Big Cities

Stories of Strange Happenings in the Metropolitan Towns

Uncle Sam Asks All to Swat the Fly

NEW YORK.—The whole United States government, with its vast treasury of wealth, its brainy statesmen and insurgents, its army and navy, its immense horde of highbrows, against the poor little house fly! That's the line-up in a bitter war of extermination scheduled to set the nation by the ears and enlist the courageous support of every man, woman and child in this broad land. The final knell of the house fly has been sounded and the battle has just begun. "Catch 'em and kill 'em; show no quarter"—that is the war cry of the army of extermination that is to put forth every effort to rid the land of the Musca Domestica, the polite name by which the house fly should be addressed by strangers.

Until the scientists got busy with their investigations the house fly was considered merely as a pestiferous insect, designed by the Creator of all things merely to take its bath in the sweet cream and maple sirup, annoy the late morning sleeper, skate about with abandon on the polished surface of shiny baldheads and practise the Morse telegraph code on the cleanest of windows.

Long suffering housewives since time began were the only really active enemies of the seemingly insignificant little fly, and they alone and unaided applied the imprecations and dish cloths vigorously against the nuisance. But after the scientists got onto the job the fight against the insect began to assume proportions of magnitude.

This little, but potent, messenger of death wanders from the sick room, from the filth of the garbage pail, from the heaps of refuse of all kinds into the peaceful, happq homes of our land, walks upon the butter, the meat, the fruit, the sugar, takes a bath in the milk, leaving everywhere the germs of disease that have gathered upon its furry feet and body.

According to a noted scientist the extermination of the post is comparatively easy. All that is necessary, he says, is a systematic effort on the part of the public. If all the people will practise the utmost cleanliness, it is declared, the house fly will be extinct in this country within a few years, for the house fly cannot exist without filth.

"Cleanliness," then, is the watchword for the American public to put an end to an insect that is not only a terrible nuisance, but a terrible instrument of death to thousands of our population every year.

'Gators and Insects Hunt New Home

I HATE MOVING
M

NEW ORLEANS.—More than 1,000,000 acres of marsh land lying within 50 miles of New Orleans are to be drained, reclaimed and transformed from a wilderness into gardens, homes, hamlets and towns. The work of reclaiming some 50,000 acres within the corporate limits of New Orleans is now well under way, while contracts have been let for the reclamation of fully 100,000 acres additional in adjoining parishes.

This neans that within two years the alligator will no longer find aboriginal harborage in the Carnival city, that the breeding grounds of countless billions of mosquitoes will be turned into highly productive farms on which mosquitoes cannot breed, that hundreds of miles of paved roadways will lead from New Orleans north, east and west, and that for the first time in its history New Orleans will posess suburbs.

The nearest town or settlement of any consequence is now 50 miles distant from New Orleans. Within fifty miles of every large city in the country a million or more people reside, and many industries develop business and wealth for the urban population.

This is the end New Orleans is working to and will have reached, in large part, anyway, by the time the Panama canal is opened to the ships of the world.

Meanwhile modern sewerage and drainage within the city proper have practically and wholly solved the city's sanitary problems, and the discovery of a simple method of filtering the waters of the Mississippi river has given the city a pure water service excelled by none in the world. These systems are in operation and are nearly complete. They have cost the city about $25,000,000.

Dentists Believe They Have a Kick

TEETH YANKED WHILE YOU WAIT
CASH IN ADVANCE

CHICAGO.—"Well, I don't know what under the shining forceps I am going to do, anyway," and a dentist in the Masonic temple sighed a perfect mammoth of a sigh.

"The matter? Hair, just plain hair. No—not plain, either. Now, for instance. A lady came up to my office the other day and wanted her teeth fixed, and finally I took hold of the top of her head with one hand, while I worked with the other. Then I turned away to get an instrument, and my sleeve button caught in her hair and the whole back of it, about fifteen fat, shiny curls, came along with me. She simply froze me up, and she didn't come back to pay her bill, either. Say, this new fangled hair style is putting me to the bad.

"The worst feature of the whole thing is that the heads, or rather the hair, won't fit into the headrests. I have tried all manner of schemes, and even had a new headrest built along lines that I was sure would fit, but the heads simply won't fit into anything.

"I do tell you what, the dentists ought to get together and boycott the present style of hairdress, or else insist that all extra hair be taken off before any dental work will be done. That would settle it, all right."

No Corsets are Worn at West Point

I WONDER IF HIS NAME CAN BE LIZZIE

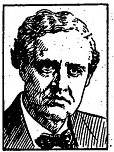
WASHINGTON.—"I have often heard a question as to whether West Pointers wore corsets. It is absurd in a way, because should any effeminate youngster resort to such a thing it would be impossible to keep the affair a secret, and once known his school life would become a burden to him on account of the endless amount of criticism he would receive from his fellows. He would be made the laughing-stock of the school and would soon find himself the possessor of any number of effeminate nicknames that would grate upon his ears in any but a pleasant manner.

"It is true," continued the old soldier, who was no other than Col. K. B. Collins, a retired army officer, in a discussion of West Pointers, "that many West Pointers acquire a figure of perfection of symmetry and a carriage the acme of manly grace, but these are due not to any ingenious appliances, but to the systematic drills and exercises that make the cadet, to a certain extent, an athlete. At the outset these young fellows are put through what are called the 'setting up' exercises, their object being to straighten the body and develop the chest. One might suppose that it would require a great amount of such exercise to make any marked showing, but three long hours of such exercise daily will soon produce beneficial results in the most stooped forms.

"The cadet uniform is also a great help in this direction. The dress coat is tight, very tight. The shoulders are heavily padded in order to give them a square effect. The chest is made thick, so that there will be no danger of wrinkling. All this for the sake of looks; comfort has no place in the make-up of a West Pointer; it is discipline and looks."

PROMINENT PEOPLE

GOVERNOR STUBBS OF KANSAS



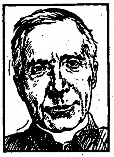
Governor Walter Roscoe Stubbs, who was renominated at the Republican primaries of the state, has had a short career in politics, compared with most leaders. It is only seven years since he began to interest himself at all actively in public affairs, and now the governor's ambition is to succeed Senator Charles Curtis, whose term expires in March, 1913, and whose successor will be chosen two years hence.

Stubbs is red headed, like that other insurgent leader of Kansas Republicans, Victor Murdock. Red hair means energy. Oddly enough, he comes of Quaker stock. His parents, who lived in Richmond, Ind., when he was born, were very poor. Now fifty-two years old, the governor is wealthy as a result of many years of hard work as a contractor, mostly in railroad building. Thus he has an intimate acquaintance with one feature of railroad affairs, the cost of new lines.

A big man physically, Stubbs has a face that is often boyishly emotional, though it can change into granite hardness when his fighting spirit is aroused. His talk is homely and direct. He frankly admits that he is ambitious to go high in politics. He has hardly any "book learning," and he does not pretend to have any. He has been, however, a very good friend to the state's educational institutions and appreciates education.

Stubbs began his political career in 1903 by going to the legislature. In 1904 he became chairman of the Republican state committee and remained such for four years. He nominated Edward Wallis Hoch for governor, after Hoch had refused to accept the nomination. Stubbs hired two good talkers to use the long-distance telephone from Topeka on every farmer in the state who had a phone in his home. It cost a good deal of money, but Stubbs was satisfied with the result. "They wouldn't have worried about a letter," he said, "but when they got a long-distance call they knew that meant something."

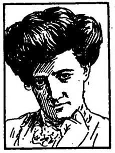
CARDINAL GIBBONS AT 76



James, Cardinal Gibbons, who recently celebrated the seventy-sixth anniversary of his birth, is noted among churchmen and is head of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States. He was born in Baltimore, but at an early age was taken by his parents to their former home in Ireland, where his education began. Upon returning to the United States he lived for a while in New Orleans. He studied first at St. Charles college and later at St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore, and in 1861 he was ordained to the priesthood. In a short time he was made private secretary to Archbishop Spalding and chancellor of the archdiocese. In 1863 he was raised to the episcopate and in 1877 was created coadjutor archbishop of Baltimore. A few months later he succeeded to the see, and on June 30, 1886, he was invested with the insignia of cardinal. Cardinal Gibbons presided at the third national council of the church, held in Baltimore in 1884. He has written books and pamphlets on religious subjects and is noted for his charitable work.

In the course of a general conversation with the cardinal recently, the subject of divorce came up and he at once opened up on it with all his batteries. The evils of divorce are ever uppermost in his thoughts. "Divorce is a canker which is eating into the very vitals of our life," he said in the interview, in which he also urged young men to enter politics. "Society—our whole civilization uprears itself upon the sanctity of the home and the unity of the family. When you attack the family you attack government itself. And government to protect and perpetuate itself must expunge from its statutes the criminal divorce laws which the best of our life abhors.

WEDS A JAP WAR ADMIRAL

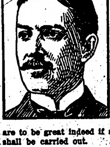


Miss Florence M. Roche, the only daughter of the late James Jeffrey Roche, the famous poet and author, was recently married in Boston to Read Admiral Henry Walton Grinell, formerly the "Yankee admiral" of the Japanese navy, and they are now touring Europe. They have been friends for years. The admiral was a friend of the young woman's father while he was editor of the Pilot. During last winter the two were brought together a great deal at St. Augustine and their long friendship strengthened by constant association, led to their engagement.

Miss Roche is about 25 years old and has lived in Boston virtually all her life up to the time that her father was appointed consul to Génoa by President Roosevelt in 1905, when she gave up her work and joined him. Mr. Roche died two years ago. Admiral Grinell entered the United States navy at an early age and rose to the rank of lieutenant.

Just before the Chinese-Japanese war Japan asked for an American naval officer in helping to build up and organize its navy. Grinell was made the choice of the navy board. He was given the rank of rear admiral by the Japanese government and remained in its employ for several years in an advisory capacity.

WILL GIVE AWAY MILLIONS



With the announcement that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has resigned from the directorate of the Standard Oil company and has relinquished other large business interests to assume charge of the work of giving away his father's vast fortune, a new public interest in this young man has arisen. Now thirty-three years old, he has been looked upon for many years as the heir apparent of the elder Rockefeller's habits of acquisitiveness and frugality. His talks to his Sunday school class have been keenly watched and reported in the newspapers, and their tone has been considered, by a good part of the public at least, that of unctuous, self-satisfied piety. But now everything is changed; both the father and the son are preparing to demonstrate their belief that "faith without works is void," and the works are to be great indeed if all that is promised of the Rockefeller Foundation shall be carried out.

Gradually the younger Rockefeller has been relinquishing his responsibilities as a director in large corporations. As a Sunday school teacher Mr. Rockefeller has been an utterer of many precepts for the guidance of his fellow young men. He has advised against living beyond one's means, against borrowing money on friendship, against drinking anything intoxicating, against shirking humble work, against discontent because of poverty, against sourfacedness, against timidity and several other things that have been the subjects of platitudes and homilies since religion began to be associated with morals.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Bungling Diplomats Cause Trouble

WAR SCARE SOAP

WASHINGTON.—Ignorance on the part of amateur diplomats concerning the proper form of diplomatic correspondence nearly precipitated a war scare in two nations not long since. It was announced that the emperor of Germany had deliberately affronted the United States government by employing affectionate terms in addressing President Madriz of Nicaragua, whom our government had refused to recognize.

"Great and Good Friend," is the way the kaiser's letter to Madriz was commenced. This had sinister significance to the amateurs. Immediately the newspapers were filled with stories that Germany had espoused the cause of Madriz; that the Monroe doctrine had been thrown down and repudiated by the warlike kaiser;; also the emperor had been acting queerly of late and undoubtedly was bent on making all the trouble he could for the United States. After a little inquiry the war scare faded away.

"In all probability," said a state department official, "the emperor never knew that the note in question was sent. It was a regular routine matter in the German foreign office and followed the stereotyped form.

Nations are excessively polite to one another in their interchange of communications. Every letter that goes out from the state department to a foreign government has this ceremonial finish:

"Accept, excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration."

The cermonail letters of all countries begin in about the same way. For instance, all of England's communications begin:

"George V., by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, king, defender of the faith, emperor of India, etc."

"Nicholas, by the Grace of God, emperor autocrat of all the Russias, czar of Casan, czar of Astracan, etc., lord of Plescott and grand duke of Smolenski, etc."

Bad Land Title Tangle Is Revealed

I WONDER WHETHER I OWN THIS OR WHETHER I DON'T

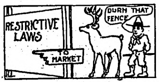
A REPORT made to congress by a commission appointed to examine land titles in the District of Columbia discloses that many lots of land occupied by modern business houses and residences in the national capital are still owned by the government, notwithstanding the present tenants believe they have a clear title to the property.

This question of land titles in the national capital is not a new one. Two years ago congress created a commission to study it. The commission consisted of the attorney general, the secretary of war, Senator Scott of West Virginia, Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, and one of the district commissioners. The report reveals a horrible land tangle, which the courts will probably never be able to straighten out. The tangle is the outcome of the wild speculation in real estate that took place for a good many years after the capital was laid out.

Private lands were acquired in Washington, in the early days, by a very simple process. The territory "not exceeding" ten miles square was ceded to the United States government by Maryland and Virginia and placed under the authority of three commissioners, appointed by the president. They or any two of them were required, under the direction of the president, to survey and by proper metes and bounds define and limit a district of territory, and the territory so defined was established as a permanent seat of the government of the United States. Power was given the commissioners to purchase or accept land on the eastern side of the Potomac, for the use of the United States, and, the commissioners were further required to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of congress, the president and public officers of the government of the United States.

No sooner had the capital city been laid out than land speculators appeared on the scene, and as a result of their operations, it is asserted, much land which belonged to the government illegally passed to individual owners.

Now Planning a Substitute for Beef



DEER and elk preserves may play an important part in reducing the high cost of beef. According to government experts who have made an investigation of the cost and methods of raising venison, declare that the game laws of the various states are preventing deer and elk farming and denying the country one of its chief sources of cheap and good meat. Deer and elk can be raised readily in nearly every state in the Union. They are easily controlled and cheaply fed. The increase of elk under domestication is fully equal to that of cattle.

The state and the government, through its Yellowstone park officials, have co-operated with individual ranchmen in caring for the vast herds of elk in the Jackson's Hole region in Wyoming. It is estimated that there are 30,000 elk in the Yellowstone park region; constituting the only great herd left. For two or three winters these elk have been fed, and have now come to look upon the feeding as a matter of course, and State Game Warden Nowlin of Wyoming, who has led the feeding experiments, says that the last of the great elk herds is becoming rapidly domesticated. Several ranchmen in the Rocky mountain country have conducted private elk preserves for years. Outside of the private elk preserves there are few herds left in the west.

In nearly every state in the Union the killing of deer is forbidden excepting in the fall and during a limited period. If deer and elk are to be raised for the market the venison farmer must be allowed to kill for the market, whenever the demand is there.

Government's Census of Indian Wards

IN the present census the government has made a great effort to obtain, through special agents, full and authentic data concerning the tribal relations of the Indians, as a decade hence when the fourteenth census will be taken, it probably will be found that those Indians who are now dependent wards of the nation have become full-fledged citizens.

The Indian population of the United States decreased in the decade from 1890 to 1900, from 273,607 to 266,760. In 1880 the care of the Indians cost the national government $5,206,109; in 1909 the cost had risen to $15,724,163, more than three times as much. The total attendance of Indian children in schools conducted by the government or by missionary enterprise is 25,777. In these schools no effort is spared to teach the child some industry by which he may support himself when he comes of age, and the Indians are gradually learning to live by the sweat of the brow upon the product of their own self-respecting handiwork, rather than upon the bounty of the government.

The Apache Indians employed on the Roosevelt reclamation project under the act of June 17, 1902, earned $34,000 in 1909, and rendered eminently satisfactory service in regions where, on account of the heat, a white man could not have labored. Sheep herding has given profitable employment to many hundreds of Navajos and Pueblos in the past year, and Pima and Papago Indians, employed as navvies on the Southern Pacific railway, earned many thousands of dollars. The Sioux farmers have done well, though they are deficient in the quality of persistent patience that makes the most successful sort of agricultural laborer.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.
SUNBEAM. MINN.

STEEL TRUST AS CAT BUYER.

A rat got tangled up in one of the dynamos which supply power for the great blast furnace mill of the United State Steel corporation at Gary, Ind., says Louisville Courier-Journal. It required several hours to separate the rat's remains from the dynamo and in the meantime the corporation was losing money at the rate of a thousand dollars a minute. Now the steel trust is advertising for cats. Advertisements have been inserted in the Gary newspapers, offering 50 cents apiece, with no limitations as to age, sex, size, pedigree or character. Fifty cents a head is a good price for cats and the officials of the steel trust are likely to have to contend with an embarrassment of offerings. When the news percolates to all the cities and small towns of Indiana there will be a rush of feline shipments to Gary and the steel trust will find itself with a surplus of cats scarcely less troublesome than the overplus of rats with which it has been contending heretofore. Hundreds of Indiana families will willingly part with all their feline possessions at a compensation of 50 cents per cat. Some thousands of small boys will explore the alleys and woodsheds until the last backyard fence is denuded.

The report from Pisa that royal engineers state that the inclination of the leaning tower at that place has increased eight inches and that the structure is likely to collapse will tend to further increase the number of those who believe that the tower was never intended to be a freak of masonry, but that it became a wonder by the yielding of its foundation on one side. As a "drawing card" for tourists the famous leaning tower has had value in addition to the historic considerations, and if it should fall there would doubtless be a demand for its reconstruction. A modern builder could give Pisa a leaning tower of greater inclination by using an anchored steel skeleton and clothing it with well fastened veneer.

A speaker at a meeting of a medical society in New Jersey declared that some of the greatest surgeons living had left sponges, forceps and other instruments in the abdominal cavities of persons operated upon, and that the practise was "inexcusable." This makes cheerful reading for the lay public, especially that portion of it that has hospital experience in prospect; but the statement of the existence of this practise is also puzzling from the fact that it must be a more or less expensive practise to the surgeons themselves to be so careless about losing good instruments.

A New York woman was fined five dollars for getting drunk in public and using the large "D" to a policeman. New York seems to be doing something to keep the cost of the necessaries of life on the Great White Way within reason.

An Englishman has paid $700 for a 600-year-old alphabet. He could have got a new one for nothing, but these Britons are so conservative!

St. Louis is howling for a barrel of free ice water at each corner. Will ice cool that concrete composition fondly thought to be water in St. Louis?

Doctor Wiley says that there's nothing especially dangerous in kissing—except the prospect of marriage, we presume.

Some one has discovered 61,000,000 germs in a malaga grape. Still, for all that, malaga grapes are pretty good eating.

An eighty-three-year-old Pennsylvania dame takes her first ride on a train. She couldn't learn any younger.

Even in hot weather some self-sacrificing, hard-working correspondent manages to sweat out a war scare.

Staten Island has seen the first sea serpent, and now the lid ought ot be put on S. I.

Two Dreadnaughts will cost $23,000,000, but that can't scare a dreadnaught.

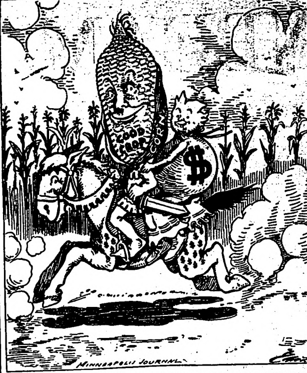
Forty-four scrubwomen have been laid off by the city of New York. New York's economy fad knows no bounds.

Down in Pittsburg the overcoat makers have gone on a strike. This may be the psychological moment for an overcoat strike, but who'd have thought it?

Aviating and ballooning kill a man every day or two just to prove that the air is a long way from being conquered yet.

Excellent hot weather exercise is watching a tennis match.

OH, YOUNG LOCHINVAR CAME OUT OF THE WEST.



NEW TARIFF MAKES BIG GAIN

TREASURY FIGURES SHOW ADVANCE OVER BANNER YEAR.

In First Twelve Months Act Produces $75,000,000 More Than In 1907.

Washington.—The Payne-Aldrich tariff law has produced in its first year a revenue larger by $75,000,000 than the sum collected in any twelve months in the country's history, except the banner year 1907, according to treasury department figures issued Monday.

During the first full year, ended last Saturday night, the total ordinary receipts, including customs, ordinary internal revenue, corporation tax and miscellaneous, aggregating $678,850,816, exceeded disbursements by $20,214,029. These ordinary receipts were larger by $15,000,000, approximately, than during 1907, and the 1907 receipts exceeded those of any other year of record by almost $60,000,000. Although there was a deficit of $58,784,955 in the ordinary operations of the government in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1909, there was a surplus of more than $20,000,000 in the year which ended last Saturday, according to the department.

The corporation-tax revenue was $27,090,934, which is only $207,000 less than the amount assessed.

RAPER WINS KNIGHTS' DRILL

Indianapolis Commandery Captures First Honors, Cincinnati Is Second, Kansas City Third.

Chicago.—Raper commandery No. 1, of Indianapolis, captured first honors in the competitive drill open to all Knights Templar commanderies outside of Cook county.

Hanselmann commandery, No. 16, of Cincinnati, was awarded second prize, and Oriental commandery, No. 35, of Kansas City, took third prize.

Raper's trophy is an immense silver libation fountain with silver cups.

An international concordat between Knights Templar organizations of England, Scotland, Ireland, Canada and the United States was formally ratified and adopted by the grand commandery of the United States at the first real business meeting of the sixty-first triennial conclave.

It is agreed that no commandery or other branch of the order in one country shall be organized in another country which is in the alliance. Each grand encampment, or grand priory, as they are termed in other countries, is given exclusive jurisdiction in its own country, and no other Templar body may be organied or conducted therein.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN BOSTON

Property in Business Center of the City, Valued at $2,000,000 Is Destroyed.

Boston.—Driven by a strong southwest gale flames destroyed property valued at $2,000,000 here Tuesday night and for a time seriously threatened to wipe out the business and manufacturing part of the city.

A general alarm called all the fire apparatus in the city to the scene and later a call for help was sent to Brookline, Cambridge and Somerville and all the available fire fighting apparatus in those towns was rushed to the scene of the conflagration.

Naval Collier at Bottom.

Norfolk, Va.—The naval collier Marcellus lies at the bottom of the Atlantic in latitude 36, longitude 74:08, having sunk ten hours after she was struck by the Norwegian fruit steamer Rosario di Giorgio.

Langford Refuses to Fight.

Philadelphia.—The bout between Al Kaufman of California and Sam Langford, scheduled to take place at the Philadelphia ball park Thursday night, was called off because Langford refused to fight.

AERONAUT IS HURT BY FALL

Walter Brookins' Machine Crashes Into Crowd of Spectators—High Wind Causes Accident.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Walter A. Brookins, the aviator, and seven spectators were seriously injured at the Interlaken field Wednesday when Brookins, in a new type of Wright biplane, attempted to effect a landing in a high wind, after making a sensational flight.

George Burnett, fourteen years old, living at Spring Lake, N. J., was pinned under the wreckage and is dying at the Long Branch hospital as the result of a fractured skull, dislocated hip and internal injuries.

Brookins, although pinned under the heavy motor, escaped with a broken nose and contusions about the head and body. The accident might have cost many lives, if it had not been for Brookins' presence of mind. In order to inaugurate Asbury Park's aviation meet on schedule time, he went up shortly after four o'clock in a gusty wind blowing at the rate of 30 miles an hour. As he was about to descend with one of his spectacular spiral turns he lost control of the machine. Being directly over the grand stand the machine dived for the panic-stricken crowd.

Realizing that the result would be frightful if the craft fell on the spectators, caught like rats in a trap, Brookins managed to swing the machine around at an angle still more acute. But the aeroplane was too close to the ground to make the maneuver entirely successful. It barely cleared the heads of the wildly hysterical crowd, when it smashed into the grand stand at the end of the field. The groups of attaches there were unable to escape over a high wire fence designed to keep out the crowd. All of them were pinned under the wreckage.

BUTTER BLENDERS BARRED

Product Produced by Machines Is Pronounced to Be An Adulteration.

Washington.—Commissioner Cabell of the internal revenue bureau is hot after those persons using butter mergers or blenders to increase the butter supply of the country.

He is sending to collectors and other agents of the internal revenue a circular branding as adulterated butter, within the terms of the law, the products of these machines.

Briefly the decision is that the use of so-called butters mergers and blenders for emulsifying certain quantities of milk and butter subjects the product to a tax of 10 cents per pound as adulterated butter and the manufacturer or manipulator to a special tax of $600 per annum, if such goods are sold. If oils are used in this process the product is oleomargarine and subject to all the provisions of that law.

The merger machines claim to make two pounds of butter from one pound of butter and one pint of milk.

Indiana Sons of America.

Glenwood, Ind.—The state camp of the Patriotic Order Sons of America of Indiana was held here Tuesday, opening with the address of President O. Perry Everson of Crawfordsville. The report of Secretary Sam D. Symmes showed that the order was in excellent condition in the state and that five new camps were soon to be instituted.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster Dead.

Washington.—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, one of the most noted women lawyers and civicists in the country, died in Garfield hospital Thursday. Mrs. Foster, who was seventy years of age, had been seriously ill for several months.

Alleged Murderess Dead.

Newark, N. J.—Miss Virginia O. Wardlaw, one of the three sisters under indictment for the murder of Mrs. Ocey W. M. Snead, died Thursday in a cell in the house of detention here.

FOUR SHOT TO DEATH

MAN, WIFE AND SON AND WOMAN'S FATHER SLAIN IN CHICAGO.

OFFICERS ACCUSE HUSBAND.

W. J. Myers and Spouse Had Quarreled and Separated—Police Believe Former, Who Was Crack Shot Fired Fatal Bullets.

Chicago.—As the result of a tragedy which occurred at their home, 2934 Cottage Grove avenue, on Thursday, W. J. Myers, aged forty years; his wife Grace, twenty-five years old, their seven-year-old son Ralph and Frank Bouton, Mrs. Myers' father, are dead.

Each of the four had been killed by a bullet and the police are convinced that all of the fatal missiles were fired by W. J. Myers, the proprietor of a shooting gallery, a crack shot. All the bullets had penetrated the brains of the victims.

Myers had been living apart from his wife and child and this circumstance, together with the fact that the revolver was found beside him, convinced the police that he shot the other three and killed himself.

Myers and his wife are said by the police to have quarreled and separated several weeks ago and the woman is declared to have caused his arrest recently. He is said to have been placed under a bond to keep the peace. Since that time he had not been living at the family home.

The police found all four dead or dying in the flat. The body of Mrs. Myers lay on the kitchen floor, with blood flowing from a wound in her head. In a narrow hall leading from the kitchen to the dining room was the body of Ralph Myers, the son.

Bouton lay on the kitchen floor near the rear door, a few feet away from that of Mrs. Myers. Myers, the husband, was found dead across a bed in a room adjoining the kitchen. A revolver, the only weapon found in the flat, lay on the floor beside the bed.

BEEF OFFICIAL IS INDICTED

Manager of Armour & Co. Accused of Giving Perjured Testimony Before Grand Jury.

Chicago.—Thomas G. Lee, manager of the dressed beef sales department of Armour & Co., was indicted for perjury by the federal grand jury Thursday. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest.

The grand jury sent a report to Judge K. M. Landis, in which it was charged that stenographers' notebooks of Armour & Co., containing information which the grand jury wanted, had been destroyed. The report also severely arraigns A. R. Urion, chief counsel of the packing company and president of the board of education, with other officials.

Judge Landis issued an order commanding A. R. Urion, George M. Willitts, assistant office manager, and W. W. Shaw and W. A. Helander, employes of the concern, to appear before him and answer the charge.

Henry Edmunds, chief of the stationery department of Armour & Co., appeared before the grand jury August 5. He stated that he was unable to produce the books.

Attorney Urion is charged by the grand jury with saying that there were no books and that if there were none Edmunds could not get them.

Lee is charged with perjury in his testimony before the grand jury on July 28. He is said to have made false statements regarding weekly meetings of representatives of the packing corporations, at which, the grand jury declares, prices were fixed and agreements were made regarding the quantity of fresh meat each company was to ship in interstate commerce.

JOE GANS, PUGILIST, DEAD

Former Lightweight Champion Succumbs to Ravages of Tuberculosis at His Home.

Baltimore, Md.—The "Old Master" has taken the final count. Joe Gans, former lightweight champion of the world, died here Wednesday of consumption.

The most popular and most skillful negro boxer who ever appeared before the public, a favorite for close on 20 years, he died, as he wished to—in the arms of his mother. It was that he might be with his old "mammy" at the end that the great fighter made his race with death a week ago, hurrying on from Arizona.

Only a few friends had seen him since he left for Arizona a few weeks ago, in the vain and desperate hope of checking the white plague. When he came back he was little more than a skeleton, scarcely able to whisper, and weighed but 65 pounds.

Immigrants Arriving in July 52,727.

New York.—In the month of July 52,727 citizens of foreign lands entered the port of New York and of this number the Ellis island records class 12,985 as illiterate. The number barred was 1,127. The immigrants brought $1,537,794 in money.

Promotion Slow, Fireman a Suicide.

Newark, N. J.—Frederick J. Hebring, a Newark fireman, committed suicide Thursday at the home of an aunt because of his failure to win rapid promotion.

GORE BARES LOBBY SECRETS

AGAIN REFERS TO SHERMAN IN LAND INQUIRY.

McMurray, the Alleged Promoter, Shown to Have Operated a Campaign of Telegrams.

McAlester, Okla.—Senator T. P. Gore at the investigation of the Indian land deals Tuesday introduced and had read to the special committee telegrams in which the names of Vice-President Sherman and Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas were named. One of the telegrams read:

"With McMurray there to state our claims, with Mr. Curtis and Mr. Sherman, who understands better than anybody else what we want, and with the assistance of our president, it begins to look like we are coming into our own."

Its relation to Senator Gore's charges of having been offered $25,000 bribe to "put through" congress the $30,000,000 McMurray Indian land deal was explained by the senator.

"It merely shows the activity of the McMurray interests at Washington," said Senator Gore. "By offering this evidence, I do not wish to reflect either on Mr. Sherman or Mr. Curtis," said the senator.

"Do you mean that as an exoneration from you of Mr. Sherman?" asked Dennis Flynn, attorney for McMurray.

"It is merely to state that if the names of these men were taken in vain at one time they may have been at another," replied Mr. Gore.

McAlester, Okla.—Six hundred Indians assembled at a "war council" at Sulphur, Okla., and, using up almost an entire bottle of ink, wrote their signatures individually to the McMurray land contracts.

Although informed that J. F. McMurray, holder of the contracts, would net a profit of from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 in "attorneys' fees," the Indians were advised that the contracts afforded the quickest way to realize on their land, estimated to be 450,000 acres in extent, and valued at $30,000,000 to $40,000,000. In addition to the land contracts, McMurray's agents had the Indians sign contracts for tax cases against the government at a stated fee for each case. The land fee was 10 per cent., contingent upon the sale of the land.

James H. Godfrey, a Chickasaw Indian by intermarriage, gave this testimony before the congressional investigating committee Wednesday.

Godfrey said he induced the Indians to assemble at Sulphur to persuade them to sign the contracts, almost 10,000 of which McMurray previously had obtained. McMurray, he said, had been successful in previous litigation for the Indians and the Indians believed if they paid him 10 per cent. attorneys' fees he would be able to urge the authorities at Washington to expedite the sale.

ILLINOIS MINERS' FIGHT ON

President Lewis Is Hissed at Opening of Special Convention in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The fight over the Illinois compromise agreement began before the special international convention of miners.

Thomas L. Lewis.

At the opening session President Lewis counseled harmony in a speech to the delegates. His report on the strike situation in the entire country brought hoots and hisses, when he mentioned the recommendation to the Illinois strikers to pay all over 1½ cents a ton of the cost of shot-firers.

Secretary Perry of the miners came out as an opponent of President Lewis and recommended that the convention make the Illinois strike the main issue of the international union to be fought until all the demands of the proposed Peoria agreement have been accepted by the operators.

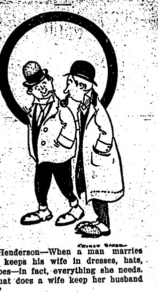
Wire Franks Called In.

New York.—Following the revocation of railroad passes which the interstate commerce law abolished several years ago, the telegraph companies announce that the telegraph franking privilege is soon to be withdrawn from those who have used it.

Congressman Lamb Renominated.

Richmond, Va.—By a majority of 700 to 800, in a vote of about 6,000, Congressman Lamb of this, the Third district, has been renominated for reelection by the Democratic primary.

SOMETIMES.



Henderson—When a man marries he keeps his wife in dresses, hats, shoes—in fact, everything she needs. What does a wife keep her husband in?

Henpeck (absently)—Hot water.

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

Keeping It Dry.

An old woman of a wealthy New Jersey family was going visiting. The coachman, who had not been in this country long, had just been equipped with a new uniform and a new silk hat. Before they had gone far it began to sprinkle, and the old woman told the coachman to fasten down the side curtains of the wagonette.

He drove up to a hitching post beside the road and, dismounting, hung his new hat on the post, and begun to fasten the curtains.

The old woman noticed his bare head and asked him where his hat was.

"Oi took it off me head, mum, so as is wouldn't get wet," the coachman replied.

Opinions Aired.

"Were the commencement exercises interesting?"

"Very. The time was divided between advice from public men on the selection of a career and suggestions from graduates on how to run the government."

Game.

The Creditor—Will you pay this bill now, or never?

The Debtor—Mighty nice of you to give me my choice, old scout. I choose never.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated tiny granules.

Men are always betting that their sins will not find them out.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.
PAXTINE
TOILET ANTISEPTIC
Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.
A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.
THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

SEED CORN WEEK

FOR BEST RESULTS FARMERS SHOULD MAKE SELECTION IN FIELD EARLY IN FALL.

FOLLOWS THE STATE FAIR

Agricultural School Says That Period Is Proper One for Picking Best Ears For Next Season's Planting.

The week following the state fair and the conservation congress has been set apart by Governor Eberhart as seed corn week. In a proclamation the governor reminds the people of the state corn is our more profitable crop and asserts that the yield could be doubled if the best kind of seed were used.

The governor thinks that there is too little corn planted in the state. There are only 1,500,000 acres this year and there should be 3,000,000, he says. But the seed should be selected carefully and he urged the farmers to take one or more days during seed corn week to go through their corn fields and select the best ears for seed.

The common practice among farmers is to select their seed corn from the crib in the fall after the whole crop is husked. Some pick their seed corn without any particular care as to the quality of the ears they select. Only the most careful farmers go through the field and select the seed corn from the stalk, as the governor and the professors at the state farm advise all to do.

The state fair, where the results of good seed and good cultivation are shown, and the conservation congress, where practical talks will be made on better farming, are expected to be an inspiration to the farmers, and as it happens the week following is the right time, in most localities, for the selection of seed corn, it is expected there will be many out in the fields looking for fancy ears during seed corn week.

The Proclamation.

The governor in his proclamation says:

"The farmers of Minnesota have this year received a most impressive lesson as to the importance and value of the corn crop. The May crop and pastures have been partially destroyed by drouth and the wheat crop has been shorn of its expected proportions by the same cause. Corn well cared for has thrived and will evidently be the most substantial crop of the season. It promises to yield an abundance of grain for feed and forage for fall and winter feeding and will help to supply the deficiency in the stock-raiser's resources caused by the failure of the hay crop.

"But out of a tillable area in Minnesota of about 12,000,000 acres only 1,500,000 acres are planted in corn, where there should be 3,000,000 acres planted each year. And, what is even more important, while the average production is now only thirty bushels per acre, it has been proved that, by a careful selection of seed and good tillage, the average can be raised to sixty, or even more, bushels per acre.

"The beginning of the work which is to double the production of corn per acre lies in the selection of good seed. So important is this that the representatives of the extension division of the Minnesota agricultural college have sought to impress it upon the farmers by recommending the observance of a seed corn week.

Time Is Fixed.

"Heartily agreeing with them in their estimate of the importance of seed corn, I hereby appoint the week of September 12 to 17, inclusive, as seed corn week, and would join in urging that every farmer in Minnesota shall, on some day of that week, make it his special duty to go through his cornfield and select for seed the best ears from the sturdiest stalks, carefully storing them according to the suggestions made in Extension Bulletin No. 9, which may be had by writing to Extension Division, University Farm, St. Paul.

"I would also urge an increase in the acreage of corn in every county. It has been demonstrated by reliable tests that the average net profit on corn, based on its feeding value, is $6.92 per acre against $.62 per acre on oats. Corn, being a cultivated crop, also leaves the land in excellent condition for succeeding crops."

Winona.—The United States steamer Curlew, which it was planned to take down the Mississippi to engage in clam propagation work, will be retained in this section to continue the task of freeing land-locked fish. The government's attention was called to the need of keeping the boat here and their order calling for removal was rescinded.

CULPRITS ARE NOT FOUND.

Men At Large Who Dynamited Duluth Coal Dock.

Duluth.—No trace has yet been found of the men who attempted to destroy the new machinery on the Philadelphia & Reading coal dock in Superior by blowing it up with dynamite. Two explosions occurred, one coming just before midnight and the second at 12:25. They were distinctly heard even in Duluth, but the police were unable to locate them until after the second explosion.

MINNESOTA'S CROPS ARE FAIR.

Maximum Yield of Wheat 41 Bushels to the Acre.

Winona. — The past week has been favorable to crops along the line of the Northwestern in southern Minnesota and South Dakota. The harvest is well progressed and some threshing has been done.

The report of General Agent T. J. Wagen, issued Saturday read:

"The weather since our last report has been excellent for harvest. The temperature has ranged from 60 to 80 degrees with a 30 minute rain between Winona and Sanborn on Aug. 1 and heavy rain from Waseca to Watertown Aug. 2. The additional moisture has been very beneficial to corn and vegetables. The harvest of small grains is about completed and will be in stack within the next ten days. Some threshing from the shock has been done and reports indicate a fine quality of all grains.

"We have received the following reports of individual yields of threshing for the past week:

Elgin.—Barley, 15, 20, 25, 26 and 45 bushels to the acre; oats, 59; wheat 25.

Viola.—Barley 20, 25 and 30; oats 25.

Kasson.—Barley, 21 and 28; wheat, 25.

Eagle Lake.—Wheat 27 and 29.

Mankato.—Oats, 60; wheat, 26, 29, 27 and 41.

Kasson.—Wheat, 28 and 30.

Courtland.—Wheat, 20.

New Ulm.—Wheat, 28.

Springfield.—Wheat, 25.

Sleepy Eye.—Wheat, 20.

Lamberton.—Barley, 30; oats, 60.

Vesta.—Barley, 32; oats, 40.

Rovers.—Wheat, 29 and 30.

Walnut Grove.—Barley, 25; oats, 45.

Marshall.—Barley, 40; oats, 50 and 55; wheat, 30 and 31.

Minneota.—Barley, 48; wheat, 32."

AFTER WILD DUCKS.

Mallards and Teals Have Hard Time Dodging "Sooners."

Walker.—Wild ducks are having a hard time dodging premature hunters in this vicinity this season and by the time it becomes lawful to hunt the birds they will either be all killed or driven from the country.

Practically all the shooting is being done by campers on Leech Lake, and settlers living near the rice beds, and while the boom of guns can be faintly heard across the lake, the state game and fish commission sends word to the Walker Gun club that it is not a feasible plan to station a deputy here, as this territory can be looked after from Cass Lake.

For years past game has been illegally shot on Leech Lake, and for this reason the local hunters organized the Walker Gun Club this year to co-operate with the state game and fish commission in protecting the game.

The commission was asked to station a deputy here until the season opened and make occasional trips to the slaughtering grounds but the request was turned down.

BLUFF IS GIVEN TO RED WING.

"Old Sentinel" Becomes Property of City; Will Be Park.

Red Wing.—After several years of agitation to save Barn Bluff for picnic purposes and prevent further quarrying, the 'Old Sentinel," as it is sometimes affectionately called, has been donated to the city of Red Wing.

James Lawther, who now lives in Ireland and who recently donated $50,000 for the Y. M. C. A. building here, offered to buy the bluff for the city, giving other citizens the privelege to participate. Accordingly announcement was made that Mr. Lawther, the Bank of Pierce, Simmons and company, the Red Wing Manufacturing company and C. A. Beecher would jointly give the famous bluff to the city.

Barn bluff was once suggested as a state park because of its unusual natural beauty. There is much rejoicing over the happy outcome of the controversy which for some years threatened to disrupt Red Wing's unity. The Milwaukee road is said to have sustained a loss of $10,000 by discontinuing quarrying in response to the demands from the people.

ST. PAUL'S POPULATION 214,744

Federal Census Shows Gains of More Than 50,000.

St. Paul.—The population of St. Paul, according to the federal census of 1910, is 214,744. This is an increase of 51,679 over the federal census of 1909, when St. Paul was given a population figure of 163,065. This is a gain of 31.7 per cent.

The state census in 1905 gave St. Paul a population of 197,025 and the result of the federal canvass announced today shows a gain of 17,719 during the last five years.

Since 1908 the results of the directory canvass in St. Paul have placed the estimated population at a figure higher than the federal canvass this year places it. In 1908 the St. Paul directory estimated the population at 225,300.

KROHN IN POLITICAL FIELD.

Shevlin Merchant and Publisher Up for Representative.

Bagley.—Iver A. Krohn, the Shevlin merchant and newspaper man, has filed as a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative from the Sixty-first district, which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. Mr. Krohn stands for anything and everything that will help build up Northern Minnesota.

STUDY WEAK POINTS OF OPPOSING PITCHER

ROBERT WALLACE, THIRD BASEMAN OF ST. LOUIS BROWNS, SAYS FIRST STUDY WEAK POINTS OF TWIRLER OF OTHER TEAM.

BY ROBERT WALLACE.

(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Working together for one run at a time, and hitting at the weak points in the opposing team is my idea of how to win baseball games. To me a baseball game is just like a battle. The effort should be to attempt to break the defenses some place, and then attack that broken spot. The easiest point to attack, of course, is the pitcher and every effort of a team should be concentrated to weaken the pitcher.

Knowledge of a pitcher, whether he is wild, whether he has good control, whether he fields bunts well, is essential before a game is started and the attack should be directed at the weak spot. Run bases on pitchers who do not watch the bases carefully, outguess the slow thinking pitchers, and bunt on the bad fielders. I believe in playing hard for one run early in the game, for the first run handicaps the other team and forces them to hit. The first run I think is almost half the game, and one run in the first inning usually is worth three later in the game.

It is nearly all a study of individuals, and experience helps a lot. As to third base, it is one of the most difficult positions in the field to play, and when the other team is at bat a third baseman is forced to do a lot of thinking or he will lose the game. With runners on bases the chief attack by the bunting plan is directed at third base and the baseman, playing less than 90, often only 75 feet from the batter, is in a ticklish position. He must decide whether a certain batter will bunt, or whether he will try to draw the baseman forward by pretending to bunt and then push the ball hard past him. If he decides wrong his chances of fielding a hard pushed ball while he is running forward, are slim. If he gets the ball it is because he is lucky enough to have it hit straight at him because while coming forward he is unable to change direction or to stop in time to field such a hit. A wrong guess with men on first and second usually means the loss of the game.

I know through experience what almost every batter is likely to do, but in baseball there is nothing quite so dangerous as thinking you know what a man will do because he has done that thing many times. He is likely to change quickly and upset everything. I watch the batters carefully, especially in situations where two or three plays are possible, and frequently can guess from the actions or position of the batter what he is going to try to do. He may hide his intentions perfectly and yet tip off his plan through his very effort to conceal it. A false position or an exaggerated show of doing one thing frequently means that the other is coming. I like to know what the pitcher is going to pitch to a batter in an important situation. It is difficult for a third baseman to get the signals because the catcher is covering up all the time in order to prevent the coachers from seeing. It is a big help to know what ball is to be served, especially if the pitcher is pitching inside or slow, and giving the batter great opportunities for pulling the ball hard over third base, as it gives a third baseman time to establish an alibi or fix up a self-defense plea.

Robert Wallace.

Working with the short stop is necessary, and a third baseman and short stop must understand every instant which is to take balls hit between them, or hit slowly. A single mixup there will lose many games, and the decision must be made like a flash.

These are merely pointers which I hope may help young players who are studying the game.

Naps Give $7,000 for "Phenom."—Outfielder Jackson, the batting and fielding sensation of the Southern league season, has been sold to the Cleveland Americans for a stated consideration of $7,000 [illegible]

Major Aldrich and His Watch

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

When Clyde Lester, the portrait painter, found himself in a chair car on a train between New York and Philadelphia, and a handsome young girl occupying a chair only a few feet away, he felt that he had a moral right to study her profile. He did it in a dreamy sort of way, and he did not know that she had caught him at it. For an hour or more he was thinking how her face would look on canvas and for an hour or more she was saying to herself that he was a young man who lacked energy and ambition and would be heard of only among the dreamers.

As Jersey City was reached and the passengers disembarked for the ferry the young girl became nervous and hurried out.

When Lester reached her chair on his way out he saw her silver purse lying on the floor. He picked it up and hurried out to find the loser among the crowd hurrying to the boats, but the young woman was nowhere to be seen. He looked for her as his boat headed across to Chambers street, but he decided that she must have taken the other ferry.

When the purse was opened it was found to contain a few dollars in money, a couple of keys and a card bearing the words: "Miss Jessie Aldrich, Irvington." This information would save Mr. Lester the trouble of advertising for an owner. His mother and sister lived at Tarrytown, and he spent much of his time with them. He would drop off at Irvington and return the purse. He had been taken by the girl's face and wanted another and a nearer view of it. In his dreamy way he thought of things that might happen.

When Miss Jessie Aldrich reached home, which she did because she had the luck to have a return ticket in her glove, she told her father of her loss. The retired Major Aldrich at once began to storm and roar. Such criminal carelessness he had never heard of before! No; it was worse than carelessness. She had probably fallen asleep in her chair and given some passenger a chance to pick her pocket. While only $12 had been lost, suppose it had been a hundred—a thousand? Supposing she had been carrying his medals and commission? Supposing she had had the family plate with her? Could she remember that any of her fellow pasengers looked suspicious?

Miss Jessie was provoked with herself and vexed with her father, and, thinking she must urge some excuse in extenuation, she replied:

"Why, there was a gentleman with dreamy eyes who looked at me a good deal, but I can't say—"

"He was a pickpocket!" shouted the major.

"But he wasn't near me."

"Oh, but he must have been. Dreamy eyes, eh? A thousand to one he got your purse!"

"But I think he was a poet."

"Poet be hanged! He was a robber! He could put on any kind of look he wanted to. I'd give a hundred dollars to get my hands on him."

Two days later Mr. Lester was journeying up to Tarrytown. A friend shared the seat with him and was told of the purse. In reply he informed the artist that Miss Jessie's father was Major Aldrich, retired, and that he knew the ex-officer by sight. They were talking of the major when they reached Irvington. Glancing out of the window the friend exclaimed:

"Why, here is our old war hero on the platform!"

Acting on impulse, Mr. Lester hurried out of the car and approached the ramrod with the gray mustache. He thrust the purse into one of his hands and his card into the other, and hurriedly exclaimed:

"Your daughter's purse—dropped on the floor of the car—tried to find her, but couldn't—happy to restore it!"

And then the bell rang and he swung himself on to the car. He was a little disappointed at not having come face to face with the girl, but rather glad to have the matter off his hands. The major did not come to himself until the train was out of sight. Then he inspected the card and purse. Then he started for home and reached it to say to his daughter:

"Ah, ha, ha! I was right. I am always right. Your Raffles heard I was on his trail and he drops off the train to restore the plunder and placate me. Mumbled out something about finding your purse on the floor."

"But perhaps he did. I know I had it in my lap just before I got up. A thief wouldn't bring it back and leave an address card at the same time."

"But he had an object—an object! He may have hoped to get into the house and see how the windows were fastened. Did I serve 30 years in the army not to know the little games of confidence men and burglars?"

The major went away to saw a board in two to repair the henhouse. He changed to an old suit of clothes to do it. He changed back when the work was finished. His wife and daughter had figured it out that the finder of the purse was a gentleman and that the mystery of the return [illegible] the major who had gone to the postoffice with a letter after his work, came striding home with pale face and quivering chin. The two women looked at him in alarm.

"Insult added to injury!" he hoarsely exclaimed.

"What is it?"

"I was made a major after second Bull Run for bravery on the field. The regiment presented me with a gold watch, suitably inscribed."

"We know."

"Where is that watch—where?"

"Have you lost it?"

"Lost it! Lost it! No! That contemptible scoundrel picked it off my person when he restored the purse. It's gone. Presented to me for bravery, and it's gone!"

"But—but—"

"But I'll catch the scoundrel! I'll live to do it. I'll live to see him in state prison for 20 years. There's your dreamy eyes for you. By the bones of Gettysburg—"

It was no use to talk with the major. He was a roaring lion. He stamped up and down and muttered and mumbled and swore, and he even threatened to move out of the United States and take the oath of allegiance to Nicaragua.

Meanwhile, Mr. Lester had reproached himself for his haste. The more he thought of that profile in the car the more he regretted. It was a brusque way of restoring lost property. Perhaps the major had not clearly understood him. It would be better to drop off the train and go to the house and explain all about it.

Three days after the restoration of the purse, the portrait painter again swung down on the platform at Irvington. Major Aldrich at once seized him and called for help. Some queer influence had drawn the major to the depot again. Mr. Lester tried to explain, but was hustled to a police station. There he tried to explain again, but it was no good.

"He robbed my daughter and he robbed me!" the major kept shouting. "I was looking for him, and I have got him, and to prison he goes!"

Into a cell went Mr. Lester, and the major started for home to tell the great news. Half way there he met his daughter and she laid his watch in his hand and said:

"I found it in your old vest. You forgot to take it out when you changed back."

The major leaned up against a tree and shook all over. He had made the mistake of his life. He was a roaring lion of a major, but he was an honorable man.

Be that as it may, the young man walked home arm in arm with the major and as they reached the house the profile had a smile for him, and he would have been a curious man not to have said to the man of war a year later:

"Major Aldrich, I'm in love with Miss Jessie and want to ask her to be my wife."

Taking Advantage.

Joseph H. Choate remarked recently at a dinner in New York, apropos of the movement toward barring insanity as a defence for murder:

"The insane, you know, are too prone to take advantage of their weakness. A lunatic, out walking with his keeper, saw a case of beer in front of a grocery. He broke away, ran to the case, and, opening a bottle, began to drink it down, at the same time ramming, with the other hand, other bottles into his pockets just as fast as he could.

"'Here, here,' said a policeman, 'this won't do.'

"'Go away,' was the reply. 'You can't do anything to me. I'm a lunatic and I'm not responsible for my actions.'"

Was Reminded.

An applicant for naturalization papers was being questioned by a clerk. "Where was your son born?" was asked him.

"In one place," came the ready answer.

"Yes, there are lots of places, but in which one; which town, city, or part of the country?"

"Yes, that was alla right. He born in a city."

"But what city?" and the clerk raised his voice. "What city? What place? Where?"

The applicant's smile became more genial. "Yes, I know all datta now. He born at home."

Two Good Stories of Children.

A mother whose good little son came to her with a tale of horror concerning the "naughty talk" of a boon comrades was anxious, for various reasons, to know just what the small sinner had said. Her own boy hesitated long before consenting to repeat the verbal enormity, but finally, upon insistence, whispered behind his hand: "He said what papa meant when he says 'darn!'"

Still another diminutive fellow not at all used to bad language astonished his mother by casually remarking that it was "cold as the debbils" on that particular morning.

Rubies as large as eighty karats have been made by "building up" that [illegible]

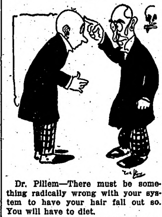
DRIVEN ALMOST CRAZY.

Bakersfield, Cal., Woman's Awful Suffering.

Mrs. H. W. Heagy, 1515 L St., Bakersfield, Cal., says: "Doctors failed to help me and I was in despair. The kidney secretions scalded terribly and passed too freely. I often staggered as if drunk. I could not lie in bed over half an hour. My side was numb, sight affected, and a tingling sensation covered my body. It actually seemed as if I would go crazy. I was saved from fatal Bright's disease by Doan's Kidney Pills and my health improved wonderfully."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

TOO LATE.



Dr. Pillem—There must be something radically wrong with your system to have your hair fall out so. You will have to diet.

Skantlox—Dye it? I'm afraid, doc, there's not enough of it left to dye.

A Bernhardt Trick.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who is supposed to be something of an artist as well as an actress, was recently called upon in one of her marvelous creations to enact the role of a sculptor, and to model a certain bust in view of the audience. This fairly electrified the critics, but when going into rhapsodies over the technical skill in handling the clay which Mme. Bernhardt exhibited they showed that they knew little of the artistic tricks of actors and actresses; as a matter of fact, she does nothing of the kind. The bust is modeled and baked, and over it is placed damp clay of the same color. This the talented actress merely pulls off, exposing the beautifully modeled head underneath.

One Side Enough.

Senator William Alden Smith tells of an Irish justice of the peace out in Michigan. In a trial the evidence was all in and the plantiff's attorney had made a long and very eloquent argument, when the lawyer acting for the defense arose.

"What are you doing?" asked the justice, as the lawyer began.

"Going to present our side of the case."

"I don't want to hear both sides argued. It has tindency to confuse the coort."—Washingtonian.

More Likely.

It is said that the Nicaraguans would rather fight than eat.

But don't jump at the conclusion that this is an indication of great courage.

It may mean poor cooking.

A Treasure.

"Your new maid looks very discreet."

"Indeed, she is. She even knocks at all the drawers before opening them."—Pele Mele.

You Know Them.

"Is that a new hobby he is riding?"

"No; same old frayed hoss. It's the new bit and bridle that attract attention."

Good intentions are always hot stuff; that is why they are used for paving material in a certain locality.

Summer Comfort

There's solid satisfaction and delightful refreshment in a glass of

Iced Postum

Served with Sugar and a little Lemon.

Postum contains the natural food elements of field grains and is really a food drink that relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst.

Pure, Wholesome, Delicious

"There's a Reason"

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNBEAM,

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

What is the use of quarreling over county option when we have "Pussyfoot" Johnson?

Wilhelm Michelet is candidate for re-election for county attorney. It may be all right to elect him so as to let him draw the salary, but it has been the custom during his present term for the county to hire a LAWYER, when they needed one.

As John Lattimore devoted about half a column of the valuable (?) space of the leven towns to apologize for the bad breaks of his brother, Alex; it would now seem that it would be a good idea if Al. would devote a column to explaining the bad breaks of John.

We publish this week the announcement of Iver A. Krohn, of Clearwater County, candidate for representative from this district. As Mr. Krohn is a stranger to the voters of Red Lake County, we will state that we have known him for fifteen years and that he is now and has been for a number of years the editor and publisher of the Shevlin Advocate. He is of Scandinavian birth, but raised and educated in this country. Mr. Krohn is a gentlemen of honor and integrity and has the ability to well represent the district. He may not get to see all of you personally before the primaries, so takes the method of soliciting your votes through the columns of your local paper.

Who Cares For Expenses?

E. L. Quist, the editor of the Thief River Press, says that the argument that taxes will be higher if Pennington County is established will have no weight whatever. There are two classes of individuals that this argument would have no weight with. One class would be men like John Lattimore, publisher of the Eleven Towns, who does not expect to have any taxes to pay and the other class men like E. L. Quist who expects to get the appointment of Register of Deeds and make a small fortune out of transcribing the records.

But there is a class of people who are heavy tax-payers, that it does make a difference to and that is the farmers; particularly the farmers of the eleven towns, who have now about all the obligations that they can meet without having this extra burden placed on them.

There is another class who gets up on the corners and yells, "We don't care if it does increase taxes we are going to vote for county division anyhow." If you will take time to investigate the financial standing of those ducks you will find that they have their farms mortgaged for "all they could get" and have never paid a dollar of interest or taxes. Of course, they don't care whether taxes are increased or not, as it will make no difference to them. But it does make a difference to the farmer who is trying to make a living here, pays his taxes and other obligations. This class will consider this question of the division of this county from a business stand point and not in the interests of city property boomers and pie-suckers for county office.

Since Thief River Falls is beginning to think that they can carry county division there is a silence that is felt regarding the donating of that city hall free of charge ten years as a court house; but, of course, they could not make any definite promise for it until they have consulted the bond company for you bet it is bonded for every dollar that it is worth.

You farmers living in the eastern part of the county should look out for Senator Hanson's automobile, as your horses are not used to the cars. Senator Hanson put the money where it would do the most good, when he was a member of the senate, regardless of petitions. He thought it would do the most good to put it into an automobile, so he could go around fast enough to see you in this campaign.

About the only reason that John Saugstad can give for his candidacy to try to fill Senator Stephens' shoes in the state senate; is that he would like the honor and the salary. It would be a calamity for Northern Minnesota, if Saugstad should be elected from 60th district and Hanson from the 61st. Then we might all as well go "way back and sit down," for that is what we would have to do when the senate was called to order.

The farmers of the eleven towns ought to all turn in and vote for Pennington County to help Thief River Falls out, for their kindness in helping to save them from being annoyed by the Soo Railroad being built through this part of country. Just consider what an annoyance it would have been to you to have to hear the locomotive whistling through your locality. Oh, yes help them out! Double your taxes! When you want to see the cars, go to Thief River Falls!

We do not wish to be understood as being radically opposed to county option and we should certainly not object to a member of the legislature from this district voting for it, if he was petitioned to do so by a reasonable number of his constituents. But what we do object to is that a candidate who expects to be elected by all the people, putting that in his platform, so he goes down to St. Paul a "marked man" and if he cannot get his county option bill through all of his other measures die with him and his county option. Do you see the point?

Thief River Falls is to vote on a proposition to bond the city for another $25,000 next Monday. This is their second bond election this year. It is no wonder they are getting desperate to get the farmers of that proposed Pennington County behind them as they have the city bonded for about every dollar they can get, and they will have to vote bonds at least twice more this fall to keep up expenses. When you get set off into Pennington County, you will soon see the bonds for building a court house being issued and for paying for transcribing all the records. But go it, you reservation farmers who are howling for county division, we can stand it if you can.

Iver A. Krohn, of Shevlin, is a candidate for representative in this district. Mr. Krohn is one of our pioneers and highly respected citizens. He knows the needs of our district and county as none other, having been county commissioner for six years and chairman during the past year, and therefore if successful in landing the nomination, which is equivalent to election, ought to be in position to give us a good business administration.—Clearbrook Journal.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Candidate for Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Red Lake County that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff, at the primaries on Sept. 20, 1910. Should you see fit to nominate and elect me I shall endeavor to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability.

Charles Fellman.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination for the office of Judge of Probate on the Republican ticket. I earnestly solicit the support of the voters of Red Lake County at the primary election to be held September 20.

Ben Christianson.

ALBERT BERG.

For Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

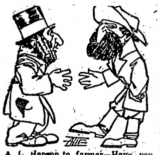
Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minn.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative for the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Clearwater, Beltrami and Red Lake and respectfully solicit your support at primaries. I pledge myself to the support of all measures looking to the best interests of my constituency and in the event of my nomination and election will at all times use every honorable means to further the interests of same. I heartily indorse the platform adopted at the Northern Minnesota Development Association meeting held at Bemidji, last March.

Iver A. Krohn,
Shevlin, Minnesota.

Hanson Electioneering.



A. L. Hanson to farmer—Have you read my platform?

Farmer—Oh, yes I have read it, but we don't want any more promises. What we want is a man in the senate able to do something for the district.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one-half mile south of the Highlanding creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office.

Consistency.

Murilla—Do you consider engagements binding? Millicent—Certainly. If one didn't there would be no fun in breaking them.—Illustrated Bits.

Notice for Publication.

First Pub. in The Sunbeam July 15th, 1910.
Department of the Interior. U. S. Land Office at Crookston Minn., July 12th, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that Lina Vestby, of Anstad, Minn., who, on June 7th, 1909, made Homestead Entry No. 04810 Serial No. 04810 for W ½ S.W. ¼ Sec. 9 & N ½ S.E. ¼ Sec. 8 Twp. 154 N., Range 40 W 5th Principal Meridian has filed notice of intention to make final Commutation proof to establish claim to the land above described, before Wilhelm Michelet, U. S. Commissioner for District of Minnesota, at Thief River Falls Minn, on the 22nd day of August, 1910.

Claimant names as witnesses:

Ole O. Lund, Casper Lund, Ole E. Wiseth, and George Wold, all of Anstad, Minn.

Aurthur P. Toupin,
Register.

McCALL PATTERNS 10 AND 15 NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 236 to 246 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

Played Them Both Ways.

The French comedian Perlet was extraordinarily thin. A physician recommended him to try some bath in the Pyrenees, so he betook himself to the mineral springs, where he bathed unremittingly, but all in vain; he did not increase in size. "Patience," urged the doctor. "There is nothing like our baths for making people fat." One day while Perlet was waiting philosophically in his bath for an embonpoint which never came he heard a conversation in the next room, from which his own was divided by only a thin partition and which was occupied by an enormous woman, fat as the Hottentot Venus. "Doctor," said she, "I am getting tired of this." "Why?" asked the Aesculapius. "I have been here two months." "Well?" "Well, I am as enormous as I was when I came." "A little patience, madame," urged the doctor. "There is nothing like our baths for making people thin." Perlet, hearing these words, sprang out of his bath, dressed, rushed home to his hotel, ordered his bill and left for Paris by the next train.—Argonaut.

A Simple Life.

"And what," inquired the visitor who was "being nice" to little Bobbie, "are you going to do when you grow up?"

"Be a business man," responded Robert, "like father. He took me down to his office last week, and I'm going to work like him and have a good time."

"And what are you going to do in business?" pursued the visitor.

"Going to do just like dad," repeated the youngster—"catch the train every morning and when I get to the office light a big cigar and sit down at my desk and say there's so much work to do it's no use beginning till after lunch, and then go out with another big to and eat and eat till I can't eat any more, and then go back to business and ask everybody else why the work ain't done, and then get so mad because nobody does anything that I'll go home early and be so tired I can't do a thing except read the paper and smoke more big cigars and swear."—Pearson's.

Florists' Jargon.

The florists have a trade jargon of their own. When a man who grows flowers for a living rattles off something like "paper whites, valleys and Romans," the confused layman has to stop to think what the jumble of words means. It is only the trade way of saying paper white narcissus, lily of the valley and Roman hyacinth. Likewise "mum" is their word for chrysanthemum, and time and space are likewise saved by saying "cyp" instead of cypripedium. So Bridesmaid roses are "maids," American Beauties are "beauties," Perle du Jardin becomes "perle" and is pronounced pearl, while Souvenir du President Carnot is reduced to its last word, just as those other illustrious French rose names, General Jacqueminot and Marechal Niel, were shortened to "Jack" and "Niel" in the heyday of their glory.—New York Press.

A Locomotive's Breathing.

The "breathing" of a locomotive—that is to say, the number of puffs given during a journey—depends upon the circumstances of its driving wheels and their speed. No matter what the rate of speed may be, for every one round of the driving wheels a locomotive will give four puffs—two out of each cylinder, the cylinders being double. If the average circumference of the driving wheel is twenty feet and the speed per hour fifty miles, a locomotive will give, going at express speed, 880 puffs per minute, 52,800 puffs per hour and 1,056 puffs per mile.—London Standard.

His Part.

"Who is the responsible person in this firm?" asked the brusque caller of the office boy.

"Can't tell you, sir," replied the pert lad, "but I'm the one who gets all the blame."

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS

Windows and Doors. Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays. Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

gineer, but the man who doesn't need credit is the one who can most easily get it.—Portland Express.

Talked Too Much.

Wife (reproachfully)—You forget how you once breathed your love in my ear and promised that my every wish should be gratified. Hub—No, I don't, but I wish now I'd followed the hygienic rule of keeping my mouth shut while breathing.—Boston Transcript.

Billiards.

"Have you heard the billiard conundrum? Well, here it is:

"'What made the red ball blush?'

"'Why, when it saw the two whites kiss in the corner.'"

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents, "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
FOR NEURALGIA. SCIATICA. RHEUMATISM. BACKACHE. PAIN IN CHEST. DISTRESS IN STOMACH. SLEEPLESSNESS
DR. MILES' Pain Pills
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents
Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

Mr. O. Beaudry left Wednesday morning for Argyle, where he will run his threshing machine during the threshing season.

The Ladies Aid Society, of Highlanding, met at Mrs. Paulson's on Wednesday afternoon. There was a large attendance.

Mr. Vaughn threshed a small load of oats Wednesday and was surprised to get forty bushels of No, 1 oats from it.

Harvesting is nearly completed in this locality with the exception of flax and the threshing machine will soon be heard in the land of plenty.

Ellingson Bros have been putting in a new and complete stock of dry goods, fall and winter underwear, which they are selling at bed rock prices.

Rev. Kostolo will hold religious services at the school house near Tobias Olson on next Sunday, at 11 o'clock A. M. All are invited.

Ole O. Sunsdahl, of Erie, lost all his hay by fire this week and a portion of the hay of Ole Omlind was also burned. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Be careful about setting fires as the grass is dry as tinder and we are likely to have some disastrous fires, if people are so careless as to set them going.

Mr. O. Beaudry closed a deal Wednesday on a half section of land that he owned near Germantown. He sold it to a Dakota farmer, the price paid was five thousand, four hundred dollars.

George Beaudry returned home from Warren where he has been working this season, Wednesday. He will now look after the Beaudry farm, while Mr. Beaudry is away threshing.

There has been a new Farmers' Club organized in Highlanding, to be known as the Republican Farmer Club. They held their first meeting at Stickstrud's last Sunday and meet at Anthony Dannacker's next Sunday afternoon.

Erickson Bros. will start their machine in shock threshing next Monday, on the farm of G. Erickson north of Highlanding, and will thresh out that neighborhood as fast as possible. They have a new threshing rig, which we understand does first class work.

James Blake, the agent who is getting up a plat book and map of Red Lake County, finished his work in the towns of Star and Reiner Wednesday. He will now commence in the town of Hickory and go westward on that row of townships. The books will be ready for delivery in December.

Daniel Reirson was down to Thief River Falls this week to consult a doctor about his baby daughter for paralysis. This complaint seems to be rather prevalent among the little children this year, as the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Ronie was troubled with the same affection.

Rev. E. A. Boen, for ten years a missionary in China, will preach in the school house by W. A. Swanson next Sunday, Aug. 21, at 10.30 A. M., and in the school house by Ole Nesland at 3.00 P. M. on the same day. Rev. Boen is a most forceful and eloquent speaker. All are most earnestly invited.

C. L. Clark and Pete McAndrews are cutting out the section line between sections 29 and 32 and getting it ready for grading which will started next week.

LOST: Six spring calves. Any information about their whereabouts will be rewarded by T. G. Rome, Sunbeam, Minn.

Sheriff Nelson was up to-day posting notices of the hearing on the extension to ditch No. 47 and made this office a pleasant call.

There is a bad prairie fire in north of Highlanding, but it is to be hoped that we will get a rain before it does any further damage.

As the ground is very dry people should be very careful in setting fires. Keep your matches in your pocket or the first thing you know you will have a disastrous fire sweeping through the country.

We publish this week the announcement of Ben Christianson for Judge of Probate, who asks your support through the columns of your local paper. We understand that Mr. Christianson is well qualified for the position.

The Eleven Towns says that some of their neighbors calls THE SUNBEAM their comic paper. We wonder if the publishers of that sheet know that several of their neighbors refer to them now as "Boozy John" and "Nicotine Al" who are running a graft office to try to farm the farmers out of $5.00 each in a confidence game.

S. L. Holm, of Starkweather N. D., has been up in this locality buying land the past week. He bought a farm of Daniel Reirson and was looking over the Dan Sullivan farm which he expects to buy. He has recently been traveling through Montana and parts of Canada and said we had the best looking country and the best crops of any place he had visited this year.

Assistant County Surveyor Glen Martz will be up next week to survey the Swanson ditch of Deer Park and Highlanding and will straighten out the section line between sections 29 and 32 for us before actual grading is commenced. The line is so crooked that we were afraid our old "plug," Captain, would break his back traveling it, so we got Glen to straighten it just to save the life of the old horse.

Warning To Homesteaders.

Owing to numerous complaints of money being paid by farmers to the Eleven Towns for which they got no value received for, we hereby warn all to be careful about making payments to them until they publish your final proof notices. There has been several complaints made by farmers that they have advanced the money for the payment of publishing of their final proof notices and when the Register of the U. S. Land Office designated some other paper to publish their notices, the publishers of that sheet have kept the money and refused to return it.

This is something that has never happened in THE SUNBEAM office and we don't think it will under its present management. We have often collected in advance for the publication of final proof notices and if the Register designated some other paper to publish the notice, we always remitted the money we had collected, to the farmer, the publisher or the official who is to take the proof. There is always plenty of time to pay for the publication of your final proof notices after they are published. If the management of the Eleven Towns does not want to write your applications on these conditions, come to Sunbeam where you will be attended to like gentlemen, given a cup of coffee and your applications correctly written. You can then go on your way rejoicing with an assurance that your business will be promptly and correctly attended to and you need not bring a cent of cash with you.

THE SUNBEAM has now been published nearly ten years and we challenge anyone to produce a single instance where we took $5.00 from a farmer for publishing a final proof notice unless we published the notice. We have returned hundreds of dollars that we had collected to applicants, when the Register of the U. S. Land Office had designated another paper to make the publication, but we never stole a dollar from the farmers.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

Additional Locals.

Mr. Boss lost a few tons of hay by prairie fire this week.

There is to be a young folks' picnic in the James O'Brien grove next Sunday.

John Poloni is busy getting up patents for his mower, so as to cut his flax and save it all.

The steamer, Lily, made a trip to Thief River Falls this week, notwithstanding the low water.

John S. Johnson, of Kratka, is running the mower a race with a scythe. He cut two big loads of hay while the mower was cutting three and John says two and three make five.

Now comes the FIRST STATE BANK, of Thief River Falls, with a circular advising the farmers how to vote on county division. Well "Harry" will also advise you how much your taxes are and where to pay them, after the division is carried. We don't blame Harry, as he is a pretty good fellow, but every man looks out for his own interests and it is beginning to look as if it was getting to be pretty near time for the farmers to look out for their interests.

Striking It Rich.

"Did you ever strike it rich prospecting?"

"Only once," replied the westerner. "I was going along a trail in the mountains late one afternoon when I saw the gleam of metal. Hastening to it, I found—"

"Silver or gold?"

"Tin, it was a matchbox, full too. And I had been out of matches since my early morning smoke."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Always Answered.

Children often are highly logical, though not quite in the adult manner. They attain conclusions by those processes of "pure reason" which, being quite unbiased by the opinions of others, sometimes result in startling truths.

Almost everybody, for instance, has heard of the little lad who, listening to the questions of an irreligious friend of the family as to what would happen supposing that one good Christian should pray for an east and another for a west wind at sea, innocently answered that of course there'd be an awful tempest, but not every one has heard of the equally pertinent and naïve solution recently offered by a thoughtful youngster for the ever perplexing problem of "Are prayers answered?"

The child was talking with another, who asked the vexed and puzzling question, explaining at the same time that he didn't believe that prayers were answered, because he never got anything he asked for.

"You don't pray for the right things," answered little Mr. Wiseman. "Of course all prayers are answered, but sometimes the answer is 'Yes' and sometimes it's 'No.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Brain of the Bee.

In a German scientific periodical C. Jonescu gives the results of his studies of the brain of the bee. As might be expected from its wonderful instincts, this is found to be very complex. The various divisions of the brain are described in detail, but perhaps the most interesting part is the comparison of the brains of queens, workers and drones. The worker has a larger brain than the queen, and as the difference between queen and worker is the result of diet during the grub stage it appears that the food which develops size of body and fertility is not best for the growth of brain. The "royal jelly" as a mental stimulus is a failure. In the drone the brain is not larger than in the worker, but the optic lobes are large, corresponding to the large eyes.

Superfluous.

Rollingstone Nomoss—Wot does "superfluous" mean? Tattered Torn—A bath robe an' a cake of soap.—Philadelphia Record.

THE MERCHANTS

State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US,—— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS,

THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money,

To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Follkredahl,

Highlanding .... Minn

Didn't Wait the Attack.

At Boulogne during a royal reception some years ago a number of English ladies in their anxiety to see everything pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line that the soldiers were forced to give way and generally were, as policemen say, "hindered in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, observing the state of affairs, called out: "One roll of the drum! If they don't stand back kiss them all!" After the first sound of the drum the ladies took to flight.

"If they had been French," said a Parisian journal, "they would have remained to a woman."

Suitable Game

Uncle Jack came to visit the family just after Johnny had recovered from an attack of the whooping cough.

"How did you amuse yourself while you had it?" he asked.

"Me and another boy who had it played Indians and gave warwhoops," answered the little fellow.—Chicago News.

Plenty in Reserve.

A man who had been fighting got two black eyes. Next morning he met a friend, who exclaimed:

"Why, Jack, where have you been? You've got two black eyes!"

"That's nothing," he replied. "I could have got plenty more, only I had no place to put them."

Pleasant.

Strange Guest—I don't know half the people in the room. Just look at that woman over there—the cross eyed, red headed one. And some one told me she was married. Don't you think the fellow was a fool? Other Guest (meekly)—I know he was. I'm him.—Baltimore American.

Might Have Nodded.

Edna—It's a good thing for me that silence gives consent. Amelia—Why? Edna—Last night when George asked me to be his wife I lost my voice.

A Child's Character.

No artist work is so high, so noble, so grand, so enduring, so important for all time, as the making of character in a child.—Charlotte Cushman.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY,
Judges.

The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

THE GRAND PRIZE (the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

GET THE LATEST AND BEST

You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., PUBLISHERS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

Automatic Lift.

The "Redgeton" SEWING MACHINE.

ROLLER BEARING. HIGH GRADE.

Save Money by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

[illegible] Sewing Machine Co. BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

After Fifteen Years

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Melvin Taylor and Adelia Scott had lived next door to each other all their lives, yet they had not spoken for 15 years.

Adelia, forty now, with a powdering of white in her brown hair, was sitting in the old grape vine swing, swaying idly to and fro. Her soft eyes were fixed on the toe of her small shoe as it lightly touched the green turf.

Overhead the April sky was cloudless; around her was growing grass and young springing flowers.

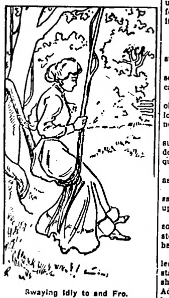
In her heart was a great yearning for happiness—a renewal of the joys that had belonged to her girlhood; the dreams, the ideals that were hers before the awakening.

From the other side of the dividing lilac hedge came the fragrance of tobacco and the sound of men's voices, growing nearer.

"Women are naturally stubborn," Melvin Taylor was saying in a disagreeable tone. "If May has quarreled with you, Walter, you might as well give her up now and be done with it—no matter how deeply you repent. What apologies you may offer however humble yourself, take my assurance she will not forgive you."

"Rubbish!" retorted Walter Stone, laughing. "May and I have had a disagreement, but I know we shall make it up—who knows when—perhaps today! As for the rest of womankind, they are all like May, I do believe—sweet and forgiving—only some clumsy brute of a man like you or me—"

"I've had my experience," interrupted Taylor brusquely. "I was engaged to marry what I believe to be the sweetest girl in the world. We quarreled a week before our wedding day—15 years ago. I wrote a note begging her to forgive me—"



Swaying Idly to and Fro.

Their voices died away as they passed beyond hearing, and Adelia still swayed to and fro in the grape vine. Now her face was white.

So Melvin Taylor had made overtures of peace and she had never known it. She, too, had written a note to him and hidden it in their true lover's postoffice—a cup-like hollow in the old apple tree that grew in the lilac hedge.

Day after day, 15 years ago, she had gone to the hollow—but there was never a letter; and her wedding day had come and gone and she had never been a bride. Invitations had been recalled, presents returned and bridal garments hidden from sight, while Adelia picked up the dull threads of every-day life and learned to meet Melvin Taylor now and then and greet him with a cold little inclination of the head.

With a sudden impulse she left the grape vine swing and sought the old apple tree. The lilac branches had grown unpruned until their smooth green stems quite hid the cup-like hollow.

Adelia stood on tiptoe and thrust her little hand into the old letter box. The hollow was empty save for a few dead and crumpled leaves and a gathering of moss. Just as she withdrew her hand her fingers were caught in a warm, strong grasp.

With a faint cry of alarm, Adelia tried to jerk her hand away, but in vain.

"Who is it?" demanded Melvin Taylor's voice from the other side of the hedge.

"Release me at once," commanded Adelia angrily.

"Oh!" There was enlightenment in his tone; but the grasp only tightened its hold.

"If you have the faintest instincts of a gentleman," began Adelia after a while.

"I haven't," returned Mr. Taylor coldly.

Adelia leaned against the rugged trunk of the old tree, her white, outstretched arm gleaming against the brown bark. Her eyes were shining like twin stars and her breath came in little gasps.

"What—what do you want?" she found courage to ask after another painful silence.

There was a moment's hesitation and then: "I placed a note in here 15 years ago," he began lamely.

"Well?"

"I never received a reply," he said gruffly, his hold on her hand tightening cruelly.

"You are hurting my hand," she said with a little cry.

"You hurt my heart 15 years ago," retorted Melvin stubbornly.

After a long silence Adelia's voice came faintly over the hedge. "I, too, placed a note there—15 years ago and—"

"And?" queried Mr. Taylor.

"I never received a reply to my note."

"The—dickens!" Mr. Taylor whistled softly. "I never got it, Adelia! Do you mean to say you never got a note from me the day after—after we quarreled."

"I never received any word from you." Adelia's voice was tremulous now, as she added: "If you will release my hand—"

He relaxed his hold reluctantly, and Adelia slipped down in a crumpled heap in the soft turf at the foot of the apple tree.

"Go, Adelia," he said gently. It is too late for me to offer you any apology for my long silence; I wrote you a letter, asking your forgiveness and I placed it here in the hollow—I believed you were hard and unforgiving when I did not receive any answer and I grew more angry with you, instead of seeking an explanation. Your little note, as well as mine, was probably taken by some marauding catbird to build his nest in the hedge. I think I shall go away now—I have been such a fool I want to seek the uttermost ends of the earth to try and forget my folly!" His voice regained its bitterness.

There was a long silence after that.

"I am here, Melvin," said Adelia.

"May I come over?" he asked in a strange voice.

"Yes," she said softly, but not so softly that his eager ears did not catch the longed-for words.

Presently he was beside her, the old boyish smile on his lips, the old lovelight in his eyes, the old happiness in his face.

Adelia flushing rosily, leaned for support against the apple tree and her downcast eyes dared not meet his questioning ones.

"Will you forgive me, Adelia?" he asked holding out his arms.

"If you will forgive me, too," she said sweetly, turning a radiant face up to him.

And then she came to him, all her sorrows stilled, all her happiness restored ten-fold because of the pain she had endured.

Overhead the April sky was cloudless, underfoot the green grass was starred with dandelions; there in the shade of the beloved old apple tree, Adelia's youth came back to her, with happiness and love and all the old ideals.

High-Priced Biberon.

Ten thousand guineas were given by C. Wertheimer, at the sale of the late Baron Schroeder's collection at Christie's a few days ago, for a sixteenth century biberon of carved rock crystal mounted with enameled gold. It is made in imitation of some fabled monster which its designer may have imagined to be a sea serpent, but the body of which, lost in a series of flutings, resembles more closely that of a water fowl. The crystal neck and body is mounted with enameled gold, and is poised like a wineglass on a crystal stem, also mounted very beautifully in gold and enamel. The lid of the biberon is surmounted by a statuette in enamel of Neptune sitting astride a Triton, and in this, as in every other portion of the decoration, the work is of unsurpassable delicacy. It is thought to have come from the hands of Daniel Mignot of Augsburg, who made it for the Emperor Rudolph II.—London Graphic.

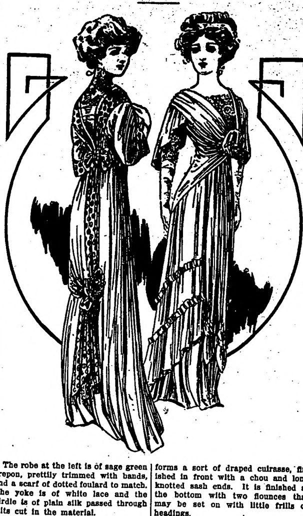
Light That Is Ideal.

For interior illumination it is of decided advantage to have the rays of the lamp directed up to the light colored ceiling and then reflected below. This makes a light which is almost ideal, but in lamps designed for street illumination this is not to be desired, for such rays are lost entirely. The members of the New York section of the Illuminating Engineering society recently had their attention called to a new device which has been invented by Dr. Clayton H. Sharp of that city, who has devised a reflector consisting of a pair of parabolic mirrors arranged to throw the rays in the direction of the street, so that all the light will be used to the best advanage. The claim is made that instead of having the streets lighted in spots, as at present, a continuous degree of illumination is provided.

Field Spiders of Maine.

Walking through the pastures of Dresden the Gossiper found many small deep holes in the earth which he supposed were those of field mice. Instead, however, he learned that they were made by great spiders with bodies beautifully marked in black and gold and half as large as hens' eggs. A bite from one of these field spiders would make a man remember.—Kennebec Journal.

Summer Robes



The robe at the left is of sage green crepon, prettily trimmed with bands, and a scarf of dotted foulard to match. The yoke is of white lace and the girdle is of plain silk passed through slits cut in the material.

The more elaborate robe at the right is of yellow crepe de chine. It forms a sort of draped cuirasse, finished in front with a chou and long knotted sash ends. It is finished at the bottom with two flounces that may be set on with little frills or headings.

The chemisette and undersleeves are of irish guipure.

SUGGESTIVE FAREWELL GIFT

Box of Correspondence Paper Is Considered a Most Acceptable Present.

A delicately suggestive as well as acceptable farewell present is a box of correspondence paper. For foreign use there are gray white sheets accompanied by gray or metal blue tissue lined envelopes, pure white with envelopes lined with clan plaid and various colors with double faced envelopes of a contrasting shade.

Ultra smart are the pale gray dimity stationery having envelopes lined with a darker shade of gray, the French lawn in pale tan and dull blue and the squares of white fabric which fold once into their casings.

For quite small children there are special sizes in dimity and lawn sheets which fit into envelopes of from one and a half to two inches square.

The correct way of presenting a stationery gift is to place it in a cabinet of cretonne, pigskin or silk, which emptied will answer perfectly for handkerchiefs, ribbons and gewgaws and will continually serve to remind the possessor of the donor.

Madeira Embroidery.

Madeira embroidery, which has become so fashionable in handkerchiefs, low collars, jabots, lingerie and table and bureau sets, as well as in allover embroidered gowns and skirt and jacket suits, is all made in the Madeira islands, off the western shore of Africa, opposite Morocco. Funchal, the only town of any size, is the port of exportation.

The native workers who produce this exquisite embroidery are paid from ten to seventy-five cents a day for their labor, the former wage being much nearer the average. Men, women and children work together, sitting on the grass outside their thatch-roofed huts. Thread, material and the modern patterns are all supplied to the local houses near Funchal by French and German designers, these two countries being the markets for the world of this Madeira work.

Made-Over Garment.

"When I have a dress to make over," said the practical woman, "I always rip it completely, clean and press it, and put it away for two seasons. Then, when I take it out again and refashion it in the latest mode, I have a dress that not my closest friends will recognize. People's memories last over one season, but never over two.

"If the material is of a very striking color, I often dye it a slightly darker shade. Then if anybody remarks that my new garnet is very like my old cerise, I answer composedly, 'Yes, very like,' and no one is the wiser."

For Stout Women.

When the stout woman buys a silk petticoat, she will seldom find one to fit her; they seem to come only in the smaller sizes. But let her buy one so much too long that it will fit around the waist, and then shorten it by a deep tuck, or by cutting it off at the top and finishing it by a bias seam that will make the petticoat snug over her hips.

She will find that she is not then debarred from that extravagance which is really the greatest economy—a good silk petticoat.

ONE OF THE SEASON'S WRAPS

New Raglan Styles Afford Compromise for Woman Who Must Do With One Wrap.

The woman who must make one wrap do duty for many purposes, can compromise happily this year on the new raglan styles. They are neither coat nor cape, but a graceful combination of both.

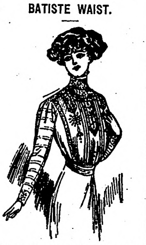
One of the best looking of these styles is called the Parsifal. It is cut circular with seamless shoulders which merge into raglan sleeves. The neck is collarless and cut slightly rounding.

Around the neck down each side of front and edging the sleeves are braided bands of the material, stitched bias bands or embroidered or braided trimmings.

The wrap is cut slightly double-breasted in front and fastens just above the bust line and at one side of the waist with buttons and loops. Similar buttons are put opposite on other side of front.

By this arrangement when the wrap is wished for for more formal occasions the upper part can be turned back into one or two revers as preferred.

BATISTE WAIST.



This dandy waist is of white batiste made with tucks and trimmed with embroidery and valenciennes lace. The yoke is of irish lace.

The sleeves are encircled their entire length with tucks and are finished with cuffs of the embroidery.

Padding Under Color.

Often in padding a buttonhole edge or a design for solid embroidery, the white padding shows through the color that is afterward stitched under it. This is especially noticeable and disagreeable in a dark shade.

One woman solved the problem by doing her padding in cotton as near the shade of the silk as she could get. The result was eminently satisfactory. It may seem extravagant, but the cotton was only three cents a spool, and the extra expense was worth while.

To Prevent Slipping.

When sewing a hem or straight seam, pin the material to your knee, and you will be sure of keeping the goods even and preventing slipping. Every few inches move the goods on and pin again.

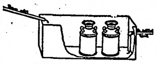
The DAIRY

CARE OF SEPARATOR CREAM

Much Depends on Manner and Method of Cooling—Illustration Shows Satisfactory Way.

For the last five or six years, there is nothing that has come up oftener or been discussed at greater length at our dairy meetings than the quality of our hand separator cream. Our dairy association made a separate class for butter made from this cream, not asking the butter maker to compete with the whole milk creamery. This article is not written with a view of championing the cause of the hand separato manufacture but to try and help the man who has found the separator on the farm best suited to his conditions, writes W. G. Barney, Iowa state food and dairy commissioner, in Homestead.

We have been told so frequently that we must wash our machines and keep them clean that I need not call your attention to this fact. I would like to ask if you would expect a butter maker in a whole milk creamery to produce a high class article if he did not keep his machine in a sanitary condition. It is my belief that much improvement may be made in quality by better care of the cream after it is separated. In talking with a government expert who makes Chicago his headquarters, he asked if I were aware of the fact that there were a large number of hand separator cream creameries in western Wisconsin along the river that were turning out just as good an article of butter as were the whole milk creameries in eastern Wisconsin. I asked him how he accounted for this. His answer was, that in the hilly country along the river springs were numerous and that the cream can was set into the spring and cooled down and then not mixed with the next skimming until that had been treated in the same way. Springs are not numerous enough with us in Iowa to adopt this plan, but we have found the following most satisfactory at Home farm and have used it for several years with good results. We hope we may make ourselves understood from the description and the cut.



The Cooling Process.

We have a galvanized iron tank in our cream house near the well with a pipe connecting from well to this tank at the top in the cream house. In one side of the tank we make a hole for a piece of gas pipe using a couple of lock nuts one on the inside, the other on the outside to keep from leaking. On the inner end of this outlet which connects with the water tank for cattle, we use an elbow with a piece of gas pipe about 16 inches long turned down so that the circulation is good in this tank, the water going in at the top and out at the bottom. All the water for cattle must pass around the cream where the cream can is set as soon as we have finished separating. If you don't care to go to the expense of buying a galvanized iron tank only having a small amount of cream, buy a barrel and saw it in two as this will hold two or three shot gun cans of cream and will be better than nothing. In case the wind does not blow to make the windmill do the work of pumping, we use our gasoline engine which is attached to the pump. Before we put in the engine we pumped enough by hand twice or three times per day to change the temperature in the tank.

SIRE OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

Little Study of Results of Breeding Necessary to Show Value of Head of Herd.

(By R. B. RUSHING.)

We have all heard the saying that the sire is half the herd. This is literally true. That is, of the qualities bequeathed to the calves the parent furnishes half, and generally more. The cow influences the character of but one calf a year; the bull passes on his personality to many calves, to all the calves of a herd of ordinary size. When he is chosen, half the character of all the calves is determined, thus, his influence is as much as that of the whole number of cows taken together in the herd.

If he is of stronger prepotency than most of the cows, that is, able to transmit his qualities more surely and strongly to the progeny, which is usually the case with a well bred sire, then the bull represents more than half the herd. In this case more than half the characteristics of the calf, or the stronger and predominating half comes from the sire, thus he is more than half.

So the sire may be much more than half the herd whether judged by the strength, quality, or accumulated effect, of the characteristic he transmits.

It is true, however, that the sire may thus within a few years, at slight expense, completely transform a dairy herd and more than double its profits. Then is he not a good investment?

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

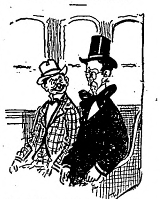
Chicago, Ill.—"I was troubled with falling and inflammation, and the doctors said I could not get well unless I had an operation. I knew I could not stand the strain of one, so I wrote to you sometime ago about my health and you told me what to do. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I am to-day a well woman."—Mrs. WILLIAM AHRENS, 988 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

MISUNDERSTOOD HIM.



"My friend," said the solemn man on the railroad tran, "do you drink intoxicating liquors?"

"Sure!" cried the convivial chap. "Much obliged for the invitation. Got a flask with you?"

Doll House Library.

A search for a child's short story, "The Griffin and the Minor Canon," in a volume all by itself revealed to a persistent city shopper the thought and money that are expended on the furnishing of dolls' houses. Book stores had not the story in a single volume, but in a department store one young woman interviewed had recently been transferred from the toy department and was able to contribute a helpful hint.

"I think," she said, "you can find it in one of the dolls' houses downstairs."

Curiosity had by that time become a sauce to literature, so the shopper hurried downstairs to inspect the doll houses. Three of the most expensive houses contained libraries consisting of a score of diminutive books and each book contained a child's story complete. One of them was "The Griffin and the Minor Canon."

A business man's leisure is simply the time he doesn't know what to do with.

Convenient For Any Meal

Post Toasties

Are always ready to serve right from the box with the addition of cream or milk.

Especially pleasing with berries or fresh fruit.

Delicious, wholesome, economical food which saves a lot of cooking in hot weather.

"The Memory Lingers"

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

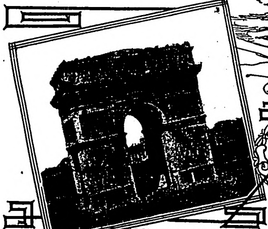
Commemorating Historic Scenes and Heroic Deeds

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

COPYRIGHT BY W.A. PATTERSON

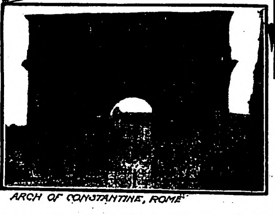
IT IS probable that never before in the history of the country has there been such a well-sustained movement as there is today to secure proper public memorials of the dead who in life rendered great service to their fellows, and to commemorate by tablets and by monuments the scenes of great battles and of the great events of peace which had their lasting effect upon the history of this great republic.

For two or three years during the sessions of congress, the senate and house committees which have memorial matters in charge have been busy considering memorial plans which properly might have congressional support. At the same time the Daughters of the American Revolution and kindred patriotic societies have been engaged in the work of raising funds to make memorials of the past possible. In the city of Washington the residents have felt a touch of the same spirit, and there is here today an active organization which was formed for the express purpose of providing ways and means to keep in the mind of the present generation, the memories of the past, by means of worthy memorial tablets emplaced on buildings of historic interest, or on land or ground made famous as the witnesses of historic events.



ARCH OF TRIUMPH, PARIS

WASHINGTON MONUMENT, WASHINGTON



ARCH OF CONSTANTINE, ROME

For some time there have been before congress three plans for a great memorial to Abraham Lincoln. No one plan has been definitely adopted, but the sentiment is all one way, and it is virtually assured that before another year has passed there will be under way the work necessary to commemorate worthily the life and the deeds of the "Rail Splitter President."

One of the plans is for a great highway to be known as the Lincoln Road, or the Lincoln Highway, to connect the capital with the battlefield of Gettysburg. It is held by many students of English that the short address which Abraham Lincoln delivered on the battlefield of Gettysburg is one of the finest examples of expression in the mother tongue known to the world of letters. Lincoln is inseparably connected with Gettysburg, and the fact is due almost wholly to the speech which he delivered on the anniversary of the battle, a speech which, it is said, was prepared only at the last moment before delivery, the only preparation except that of thought, consisting in a few notes jotted down upon the back of an old envelope.

The senate committee on library, which has in charge memorial work, reported favorably a bill authorizing the expenditure of $100,000 for the erection of a memorial arch upon the camping ground of the American army at Valley Forge, in the state of Pennsylvania. The library committee some time ago, recommended and secured the passage of a bill appropriating money for the erection in Washington of a statue to John Barry, commodore in the United States navy during the Revolutionary war. A monument also is to be erected to Christopher Columbus and a part of the cost will be paid by the people of the United States. Statues to Kosciusko and Pulaski have been erected within the year, and other statues and monuments, either have been put in place, or are now well on the road to completion. It is said that the patriotic societies, by their excellent educational work throughout the country, have so aroused the sentiment of the people that the pressure which has been brought to bear on congress properly to recognize the services of the dead and gone has been irresistible.

A good deal of interest attaches to the proposed memorial arch at Valley Forge. It was there that Gen. George Washington and his army passed the awful winter of 1777-8, a time of suffering, starvation and danger from the enemy. As has been said, a bill authorizing the expenditure of $100,000 has been reported favorably from the library committee. There seems to be no opposition in congress to the appropriation, and a bill sanctioning it probably will be passed at the next session.

The money for the arches at Valley Forge is to be expended by the Valley Forge park commission under the direction of the secretary of war. A considerable part of the encampment grounds of General Washington at Valley Forge, in the winter of 1777-1778 has always been a forest, and the greater part of the earthworks, consisting of entrenchments, the star redoubts, and Forts Washington and Huntington, had not been greatly affected by the elements nor disturbed by man. In 1878 an imposing celebration of the anniversary of the evacuation was held. As a result of this celebration, the Centennial Memorial association was formed by patriotic women, who purchased the house which General Washington occupied during the greater part of the encampment. The house has been restored to its condition when occupied by Washington.

In 1893, the general assembly of Pennsylvania declared that "the title to and ownership in the ground covering the site, including Forts Washington and Huntington, and the entrenchments adjacent thereto, and the adjoining grounds, in all not exceeding 250 acres, but not including therein the property known as Washington's headquarters, and now owned by the Centennial and Memorial Association of Valley Forge, shall be vested in the state of Pennsylvania, to be laid out, preserved and maintained forever as a public place, or park, by the name of Valley Forge, so that the same and their fortifications thereon may be maintained as nearly as possible in their original conditions as a military camp."

Since the establishment of the park, the state of Pennsylvania has appropriated $313,215 toward the acquisition and improvement of the land and buildings, including the Washington headquarters building and ground, which were acquired five years ago by condemnation, and made free to all visitors. The park now contains 467 acres.

In 1901 the Daughters of the Revolution erected on the reservation an imposing granite shaft 50 feet high, called the Waterman monument. On the face of the monument is the following inscription:

To the Soldiers of Washington's Army
Who Sleep at Valley Forge, 1777-1778.
Erected by the
Daughters of the Revolution.

On the south side is another inscription as follows:

Near This Spot Lies Lieutenant John
Waterman,
Died April 23, 1778, Whose Grave Alone of All
His Comrades, Was Marked.

It is estimated that there were 3,000 deaths in General Washington's army during the winter's stay in this camp, Most of the bodies were buried in the camp grounds. Five years ago the Daughters of the Revolution erected east of, but not far from where Varnum's brigade is supposed to have been encamped, a log hut of the exact dimensions erected by the soldiers under Washington. Above the door to this hut has been placed a tablet bearing the following inscription:

On This Spot Stood One of the Huts
Occupied by the Soldiers of Washington's Camp
During the Winter of 1777-1778.
This Reproduction Was Erected by Colonial Chapter of Philadelphia,
Daughters of the Revolution,
May, 1905.

Members of the senate committee on library, express the hope that eventually all the great battlefields of the Revolutionary and Civil wars in the states of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland will be connected by boulevards.

The great memorial arch at Valley Forge will be one of the few great arches of history which will represent something more than mere victory in the battle of men. It was a moral and physical victory in one that Washington and his men achieved at Valley Forge. They conquered privation and they conquered rebellion against the hardships of fate.

The Romans were practically the originators of the memorial and triumphal arch. In fact, they used the ordinary building and bridge arch itself to a much greater extent than had ever been known before. Three of the great Roman triumphal arches are still standing. They are those of Titus, Septimius, Severus and Constantine. That of the first Christian emperor is by far the most beautiful. It marks the triumphal return from Gaul and Britain led as tradition has it, by the blazing cross of stars, with the luminous sign which bade him "conquer by this."

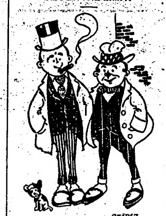
In the Arch of Septimius there could be traced for years after its erection, the information that the emperor had gained great victories over the Parthians. As one looks at this monument today it is interesting to recall that the man and emperor who passed in triumph under it after its completion, was the one who built the wall in Britain to check the inroads of the fierce Scotch Highlanders. The Arch of Titus has but one arcade or entrance, and upon this there rested at one time with other spoils of war, the golden candlesticks of the Temple of Jerusalem, of which Titus in very truth, had not left "one stone upon another."

Of the other famous Roman arches, the foundations of one erected in the days of the republic, may still be traced, though of the structure which rose above them little or nothing is known. It was under this arch that Fabius Maximus walked in triumph after he had thoroughly thrashed the Gauls. Another arch, but of which no trace exists, was one that was erected in Syracuse in honor of Verres, the legate of Rome in Syracuse, for whom Cicero, as every schoolboy knows, made it so uncomfortable in one of his orations.

There are still foundations left of the Arch of Drusus, "erected to commemorate the success won in Germany by the son of Augustus' wife."

Napoleon commemorated his passage of the Alps by the Simplon road, by erecting at the road's terminus at Milan, an arch which is a magnificently beautiful copy of Roman models.

ABOUT THE LIMIT.



Jim—Gruet is terribly absent-minded.

Jack—I should say so! I've known him to telephone to his office and ask if he was in.

Try This, This Summer.
The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

Another Tradition Exploded.

Two Englishmen were resting at the "Red Horse Inn" at Stratford-on-Avon. One of them discovered a print picturing a low tumbling building underneath which was printed: "The House in Which Shakespeare Was Born." Turning to his friend in mild surprise he pointed to the print. His friend exhibited equal surprise, and called a waiter who assured them of the accuracy of the inscription.

"'Pon my word," said the observing Englishman, shaking his head dubiously, "I thought he was born in a manger!"—Success Magazine.

Advice.

"Doctor," cried little Bingle, over his telephone, "my wife has lost her voice. What the dickens shall I do?"

"Why," said the doctor, gravely, "if I were you I'd remember the fact when Thanksgiving day comes around, and act accordingly."

Whereupon the doctor chuckled as he charged Bingle two dollars for professional services.—Harper's Weekly.

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over 30 Years.
The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Included Her.

"Why did she get angry at the stranger in town?"

"She asked him if he had seen her daughter and he answered that he had seen all the sights of the place."

Force of Habit.

Little Girl—Mummy! (No answer). Mummy! Are those swallows!"

Mummy (deep in her book)—Yes, dear. Don't touch them.—Punch.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Better a nagless wife than a horseless carriage.

Constipation Vanishes Forever
Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion—improve the complexion—brighten the eyes. Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

Murder!
One gets it by highway men—Tens of thousands by Bad Bowels—No difference. Constipation and dead liver make the whole system sick—Everybody knows it—CASCARETS regulate—cure Bowel and Liver troubles by simply doing nature's work until you get well—Millions use CASCARETS, Life Saver! 882
CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

MEXICO LANDS We are the largest handlers of Mexico irrigated and improved farm lands. 160,000 acres now open for colonization to Americans, on Railroad, improved and in cultivation, subdivided into farms to suit purchaser. The lands are now producing corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, flax, alfalfa, red clover and timothy, citrus fruit, navel oranges, commercial lemons, limes and grape-fruit. Various kinds of grapes, both California and Spanish, all kinds of truck, and strawberries mature every month in the year. Climate ideal. Elevation 5,125 feet. Soil black loam, 8 to 20 feet deep. Markets good. We can show you one field of corn now containing 18,000 acres. Wheat is sowed in October and harvested in April, and then put into corn, harvested in September. Our next excursion to Mexico City, Acambaro and Atequiza leaves Houston September 5th. For further particulars write us. A. C. SWANSON & COMPANY, Houston, Tex.

Northwestern Conservatory 40 Instructors 600 Students (26th Year, Opens Sept. 5, '10)
All branches of Music Art and Dramatic Art, Orchestral and Band Instruments. Normal Courses in Public School Music, Art, Piano, Physical Training, Domestic Science. Terms Reasonable. Catalog Free.
O. A. EVERS, Pres. Minneapolis, Minn.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

You can shave first time you try with a Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE
PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK) C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES
SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC.
AT DRUGGISTS. TRIAL BOX BY MAIL 50C
PLANTEN, 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.

OLD SORES CURED
Allen's Ulcerine Salve cures Chronic Ulcers, Bone Ulcers, Scrofulous Ulcers, Varicose Ulcers, Indolent Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg, Fever Sores, all old sores. Positively no failure. By mail 50c. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. A6, St. Paul, Minn.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

DEFIANCE Gold Water Starch makes laundry work a pleasure. 16 oz. pkg. 10c.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 34-1910.

We Give Away Absolutely Free of Cost
The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English, or Medicine Simplified, by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Chief Consulting Physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, a book of 1008 large pages and over 700 illustrations, in strong paper covers, to any one sending 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, or, in French Cloth binding for 31 stamps. Over 680,000 copies of this complete Family Doctor Book were sold in cloth binding at regular price of $1.50. Afterwards, one and a half million copies were given away as above. A new, up-to-date revised edition is now ready for mailing. Better send NOW, before all are gone. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.
DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION
THE ONE REMEDY for woman's peculiar ailments good enough that its makers are not afraid to print on its outside wrapper its every ingredient. No Secrets—No Deception.
THE ONE REMEDY for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots of well established curative value.

THE Famous Rayo Lamp
Once a Rayo user, always one
THE STEADY WHITE LIGHT
The Rayo Lamp is a high grade lamp, sold at a low price. There are lamps that cost more, but there is no better lamp made at any price. Constructed of solid brass; nickel plated—easily kept clean; an ornament to any room in any house. There is nothing known to the art of lamp-making that can add to the value of the RAYO Lamp as a light-giving device. Every dealer everywhere. If not at yours, write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the STANDARD OIL COMPANY (Incorporated)

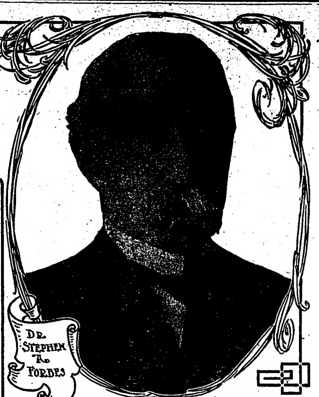
MSB Minnesota School of Business
54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
ESTABLISHED IN 1877
A safe school for young men and young women, where character is considered as important as culture. It places its graduates with only reliable firms. Its free catalog tells how it can start you toward success.
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary.

THE BATTLE WITH THE BUGS

By BERT E. POWELL



THERE is an underworld not invaded by novelist or playwright. Yet in it occur strange and often subtle dramas of survival and destruction. Nor is it a noiseless underworld. Every evening after a hot sunset it forms an orchestra which shrills out its prowess and flaunts its coming achievement. And in all the world there is no orchestra so well paid. To be sure it gets little in the matter of attention, but in ways more substantial it is rewarded handsomely. For it is permitted to levy toll upon the corn and the wheat, the cabbage and the apple, as they grow. It is allowed to eat the profits of the miller and the grain dealer. Certain members of the shrilling tribe go farther and demand greater concessions in their greed. Not satisfied with money tribute, they exact human lives. Their gruesome tracks are made upon the faces of little children. Then from places where poverty forces women and babies into filth and sickness, they take wing and they bear their death message into homes fair and clean—homes where the inmates cannot concern themselves with life's wretched ones. And so nature in her inexorable circle from which neither the proudest nor the poorest can escape, herself supplies the link which brings the miserable home to the fair one.

But reducing it to a dollars and cents basis which all of us understand, what would you say the insects of this country cost us each year? Millions of dollars! More in fact than our entire system of public school education, from the kindergarten to the university!

Moreover whole sections intended by nature for the production of particular crops often are compelled to abandon them for no other reason than insect infestation. This is especially true of horticulture. Myriad, indeed, are the insect foes that infest vegetables and fruit. If ever the life of this underworld is brought upon the stage as that of the barnyard has been, it may well open with this plaint of the truck grower:

> The insects are busy in clover and grass,
> A-hatchin' out sorrer fer my garden sass,
> They're happily hummin' this giddy refrain
> The old mule will still be your airy-oplane.

Now the farmer has found himself helpless before this foe which must be fought with microscopes and laboratory mysteries. Consequently he has appealed to the man of science whom everyone despises in the day of prosperity and rushes to consult when the world is awry.

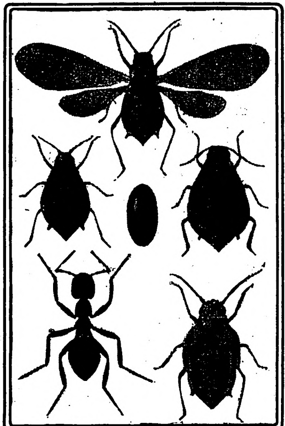
Let me tell you of what has been accomplished by one man with a microscope. His name is Stephen A. Forbes and he is state entomologist of Illinois. His chief work in this position is to exterminate "economic insects," as those which damage the growing things are called. He is also head of the state laboratory of natural history and professor of entomology in the University of Illinois. He has held these offices 25 years, which means that he has spent a quarter of a century fighting the predaceous instincts of economic insects; barring an occasional short lapse to fight the economical instincts of state legislatures. Naturally he is on intimate terms with a vast number of bugs.

For a practical knowledge of an insect, the ability to recognize it in all its phases is a mere beginning. Its dietary must be known, not only what it prefers but what it likes next best and what it will eat to escape starvation; how the weather affects its health, its temper, and its power of multiplying; is it subject to contagious diseases? If so, how may it be induced to catch one? Also it is well to know how its neighbor bugs regard it. Whether the sight of it arouses the instinct to protect or the instinct to kill. For there are bugs so kindly disposed toward other bugs that they will carry them to their food supply, hatch their eggs for them, and bring up their offspring. The sole duties they leave to those they protect are breathing, eating and multiplying.

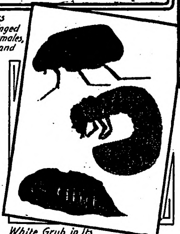
First let me tell you about the fight against the chinch bug. As everyone knows, the chinch is a devil-devastator whose evil intentions are backed with energy and resourcefulness. When it starts to take what it wants from the farm there is just one thing it leaves—the mortgage. For more than a generation scientists in all parts of the country directed their intelligence against its instinct; and instinct won the victory. It seemed that reason could not fathom the cause of the outbreaks nor find a way to prevent them. In despair the men of science were for saying as did the old Irish woman of the rain that spoiled her potatoes, "There's no raison in it, it's just the will of God!"

And right there it seemed the problem would have to rest. But an occasional persistent brain was unable to accept this solution. Observations went on not only week by week but day by day, and often even hour by hour. Even so it was a work that proceeded slowly. The chinch bug was hard to make rules for. Indeed, it seemed more an exception to rule than the French language. For instance, scientists flattered themselves that one thing was proved concerning his chinchship viz., the abandonment of wheat culture meant an end to chinch bug ravages. But farmers made the sad discovery, quite unintentionally, you may be sure, not at all for the sake of enlightening the men of science, that the abandonment of wheat may even increase the chinch devastation. For if they have become numerous and can find no wheat, they will accept oats, barley, grass or corn. The abandonment of wheat to be effective against the chinch, must take place at the beginning of an outbreak.

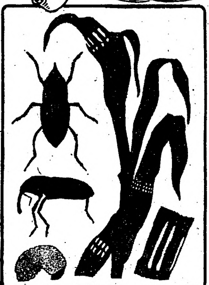
Therefore Dr. Forbes straightened his mortarboard, polished his microscope and prepared for wholesale slaughter. He was going to wade deep, not in gore but in bug juice. The first plan was to present the chinch with a contagious disease. It had been observed that it was subject to a fungous disease similar to that of the common house fly, which left the dead covered with a white mould. Why not spread it? It was tried upon the university fields and the bugs took it most obligingly and died most successfully. Before it could be considered more than an experiment, however, it was necessary to try it on a larger scale.



CORN ROOT APHIS AND ITS ATTENDANT ANT: Winged Female, Two Wingless Females, Egg and Pupa of Aphis, and Worker Ant.



White Grub in its Four Stages: June Beetle, Egg, Grub and Pupa.



Corn Bill-Bugs, Grub of same and Corn Plant showing Bill-Bug injury.

Consequently letters were sent among the farmers, asking for boxes of sound bugs. These bugs were to be given the disease and returned with directions for spreading it. The response was surprisingly immediate. Boxes of bugs poured into the express offices and yet more boxes of bugs. Farmers from neighboring states heard of the offer and they, too, went bug hunting. The express companies worked overtime. The assistants in the entomologist's office became mere undertakers for bugdom. The mouldy bugs were sent out on their beneficent mission of destruction. Then the results came in. They varied; they did, indeed. Some thought the entire entomologist's office should be fitted out with a golden, glorious halo as the rescuer of its country; others alas! thought a fool's cap would fit the case more exactly.

But although the disease project could not be called a complete success, means were found which make it possible to raise grain even in the very worst of the chinch outbreaks. The barrier methods and sprays with a kerosene emulsion will catch them every time. Just after harvest the scarcity of food in the wheat fields arouses in the chinch an instinct to migrate. On foot it sets out to get an appetite for corn. This is the time to make a ridge beween the infested field and the field the chinch desires to infest. This is done by plowing a backward furrow which is packed with a light roller or by hand and has a line of tar poured upon it from a can with a tubular spout. Post holes are dug at intervals of about twenty feet. By keeping the tar line fresh his chinchship cannot cross, but will follow it to the posthole, into which he speedily tumbles. It then is merely pleasant recreation for the farmer to travel out and pour a weak solution of kerosene upon his accumulated enemies. Kerosene is an excellent death dealer for these pests. When they get into the cornfields the farmers of Illinois sally forth with an emulsion containing four per cent. of kerosene and half as much whale oil soap mixed by five minutes simple beating with a stick. This is flirted by hand upon the corn in the cool of the day when the insects feed most thoroughly and when there is less danger of injury to the corn. Sometimes a single application does the work; when the infestation is very bad two and even three may be required.

Now let us talk about corn exclusively for a while. With that staple at its present price and with the grave gentlemen who produce statistics as hens produce eggs—the louder the cackling, the smaller the statistic—assuring us that it is on its lofty perch to stay, it seems that the farmer will have to cultivate automobiles and bad habits as obesity cures for his bank account. But, halt! Nature provides several. There is the weather, more exasperating and with less regard for a poor man's purse than rich relatives on a visit, there is the fretful soil which gets sour like a colicky baby, and there are sturdy, hungry insect foes. Over two hundred of these attack corn, forty capable of doing notable damage.

It is in discovering the way to conquer a pair of these precious rascals that Dr. Forbes has made his most valuable single contribution to science. They are the corn field ant and the corn root-aphis or, as it is better known, the corn root louse. For a long time they were the particular scourge of the corn grower who supposed that they operated each on its own account. Through the research of Dr. Forbes it is now known that one is helpless without the other. The resourceful and industrious ant is entirely unable to extract the coveted sap from the corn root, and the stupid aphis would, if left to itself, starve in the very presence of the corn. But the ant can carry the aphis to the corn root and deposit it thereupon; the aphis can extract the sap and then exude it, thus passing it on to the ant. Therefore it was not a problem of exterminating two foes but of outwitting the clever little ant. Were it banished, the aphis would soon disappear. The wretched little soft-bodied hunk o' creation can do nothing for itself except lay eggs and suck corn sap. The ant gives it a home in its own burrows, hatches its eggs for it, carrying them to the warm surface if they are slow, bearing them farther into the ground if they threaten to hatch before its food supply is ready. And this protection extends through the aphis' life. If, because of plowing or other inadvertence, the ant finds its charges scattered, it will cheerfully collect them and reconstruct its home if that has been molested also. The ant has nothing else to do and it is as active as an outraged Puritan conscience. However, methods of control have been found. The use of the disk and crop rotation will exterminate them. The root-aphis refuses entirely to occupy ground planted to oats, so this crop is of the greatest importance in clearing fields of them. Also by disking two or three times with a 20-inch disk in spring, especially on a sunny day when the ants are likely to have their charges near the surface, they will be killed and scattered and their nests so broken up that even the enthusiastic little ant cannot reconstruct the colony.

Another enemy of the corn that Dr. Forbes has caught by cultivation is the bill bug, as certain beetles are called because of their long, hard snouts, which they poke into the farmer's business to ruin it. This time the cultivation must be with the plow instead of the disk and in the autumn instead of spring and in the fields of grass where the bill-bugs breed. These bugs are distinguished by a belligerency which is only equaled by their strength of claw. One variety appeared in Illinois which looked so large to the harassed farmers that it was christened "elephant bug." Chickens turned into the fields to feast upon them fled in flapping, comical flight, unable to relieve their terrified souls by a squawk, as their bills were tightly held together by the encircling claws of what were meant to be their banquets. As for sprays, the bugs throve upon them. Dr. Forbes had his assistants in the fields before it was found that plowing the infested grass in the autumn would practically do away with the pest.

Of all the foes which the agriculturist must fight, none presents a more difficult problem than the white grub. For one thing, there are many species. Illinois has about thirty—differing in habits, but all endowed with an original and hard working brand of natural cussedness. They attack plants at the roots, and it is not at all uncommon to find whole acres of grass where the sod can be rolled up like a carpet. By preference they devastate grass, but if the supply is scant, they are willing to ruin small grain, corn, strawberry plantations, woodlands, and, indeed, many other situations. They are especially difficult to combat because the life history is hard to follow from the first to the last stage. Only a single specimen has been bred from the egg to the beetle and its life cycle occupied three years.

So far the best remedy has been found to be in cropping, especially in planting the infested ground to clover. Well-known enemies of the white grub also are the festive porker, which will dig a foot for a nice fat one, and crows and crow blackbirds.

Occasionally a farmer notices that a field which has been brown from a grub ravage becomes green and alive. He is inclined to think it a clear case of the Lord remembering the righteous; as a matter of fact another insect has appeared and is working out another set of instincts. This is the Tiphia, a member of the solitary wasp family. It stings the grub into submission and then glues to its thick hide an egg which in a few days hatches into a veritable vampire. It sucks from its host its life juices, leaving the shell to crumble back to earth.

Trees, both those in natural forests and those which have been planted, "noble and helpless products of nature," to quote Dr. Forbes, are often dragged to a slow and unsightly death through insect infestation. Have you never late in May or in June noticed upon shade trees little wads of cotton? Each wad, you will see, if you look, projects from a brown cap, which is the female maple scale. It is a native insect parasite of the soft maple. It will infest, besides the maple, the linden, box elder, elm and honey locust. These cotton wads are the soft bed in which the careful female lays her eggs, and each female can be relied upon to deposit something like 3,000 eggs in her own particular little wad. Dr. Forbes found after considerable experiment that a kerosene emulsion was effective in disposing of these pests. A 20 per cent. emulsion could be used in winter if the roots of the trees were protected, and a 10 per cent. in summer. It is made by dissolving one pound of common soap in one gallon of water by boiling. This is removed from the fire and two gallons of kerosene poured in. With a spray pump the mixture is then forced back into itself for about five minutes, when it will look like a thick cream, and no longer separates on standing. Seventeen gallons of water added to the three gallons thus prepared will give a 10 per cent. solution. The cost will be 4.8 cents a gallon and three or four gallons will save a large tree from destruction.

Doubtless you have noticed upon the apples you brought home in a paper bag and those that fell from your own cherished tree a crescent mark. This means that a busy little curculio has had its beak in your apple before you and has probably laid an egg at the sign of the crescent curculios. A spray compound of 12½ ounces of acetate of lead and four ounces of arsenate of soda to fifty gallons of water, if used three or four times, will catch practically all these orchard destroyers.

Among the insects injurious to health the common housefly takes first rank. Dr. Forbes has found that 75 per cent. of the common houseflies breed in horse manure. As the remedies that will kill the housefly maggots are too dangerous to be used in stables, except boiling water, which is hardly practicable, the only protection seems to be in screening stables against flies as we do our houses and in careful city sanitation.

MAY RULE CANADA

Duke of Connaught Likely to Be Governor General.

Popular Brother of the Late King Edward Is Reported to Be Slated for Head of the Dominion Government.

Ottawa, Can.—If the present program is adhered to the next governor general of Canada will be the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward. Such was the desire of the deceased monarch, and the probabilities are that the new King will not oppose the program. Canada appreciates the distinguished honor of having at the head of her government as the representative of the mother country so eminent a member of the royal family. Never before has one of the royal family occupied such a position, though Queen Victoria's daughter, a sister of the duke, was for years a resident of the Dominion when her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, now the Duke of Argyle, was governor general. At the same time the Canadians appreciate that society affairs at Rideau Hall, or Government House as it is sometimes called, the official residence of his excellency at Ottawa, will be upon a much grander scale than in the past, and that it will cost a pretty penny for those who try to be in the swim. Ottawa, more than ever, will become the social center.

The Duke of Connaught is the only surviving son of Queen Victoria and is 60 years old. Her majesty had nine children, of whom the eldest was Princess Victoria, mother of Emperor William; she died in 1901. The second child was the late King Edward. The Princess Alice Maud Mary, mother of the present Czarina of Russia, died in 1876. Alfred, Duke of Edinburg, died in 1900. Leopold, Duke of Albany, died in 1884. Beside the Duke of Connaught there survive Helena, Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein; Louise, Duchess of Argyle, and Beatrice, now Princess Henry of Battenberg.

The Duke of Connaught married Princess Louise of Prussia in 1879, and has three children. His eldest daughter is Margaret, wife of Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. His son is Prince Arthur Patrick, and his younger daughter is the beautiful and decidedly independent Princess Victoria Patricia.

H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

PRINCESS VICTORIA PATRICIA OF CONNAUGHT

No princess in Europe has given such evidence of having a will of her own as has the Princess Patricia. Over and over again has a husband been selected for her by those wise in statecraft, but she has bundled these suitors off with slight ceremony and has repeatedly declared that she will have a husband of her own choosing or none at all. She is the most popular princess in England and was a favorite of her uncle, King Edward. Her name, which is a compliment to Ireland, alone makes her popular with the people of that part of the empire.

The British government has a purpose in sending to Canada a prince of the royal blood. It is believed a governor general so close to the throne would tend to forward the empire movement and bring the Dominion in closer sympathy to the mother country. The governor general as a matter of fact has very little to do with the government of Canada. He has the power of veto but never exercises that right. Did he do so there would be as great a commotion as would occur if the King in England should set himself actively in opposition to the elected government. But nevertheless he has a tremendous influence, though it is operative only through social and diplomatic channels. His salary is $50,000 a year with an executive residence. Those governors general who have been most popular and influential have been those who have really come to love the Dolmnion and its people for themselves and have developed a deep interest in their welfare. Whether the duke and his family can forget the life in England to which he has been accustomed remains to be seen.

Historical Society
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

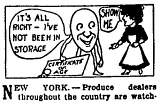
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 1910. NO. 22.

Odd News From Big Cities

Stories of Strange Happenings in the Metropolitan Towns

Sell Eggs by the Pound in New York



IT'S ALL RIGHT - I'VE NOT BEEN IN STORAGE SHOW ME
CERTIFICATE OF AGE

NEW YORK.—Produce dealers throughout the country are watching with interest the enforcement of the ordinance recently passed in New York requiring dealers to sell eggs by the pound. When eggs are sold by the pound the buyer is more likely to get all that is coming to him. It is conceded that a fresh egg of average size weighs more than one that is stale, there being always more or less evaporation when an egg comes out of storage. The difference is about an egg to the pound, eight fresh eggs being equal to nine out of storage.

It is only the idealist or the optimist who believes that eggs are either good or bad, with no half-way about the matter. Really this is a fond delusion. There are as many grades of eggs as there are ways of making an omelet. The range is all the way from that rare article, the honestly labeled "strictly fresh" egg down to the "cull." The cull is a doubtful egg from the start, but sometimes deposits, and emerges months later. Even then it is not as low as an egg can sink, for there is the desiccated egg, which was laid in China, and has been a world traveler before getting to the ultimate consumer here.

These desiccated eggs are removed from their shells in China, put into cans with preservatives, and then shipped across the Pacific and the continent to this city, where they are sold in bulk for use in bread and pastry making in the cheaper bakeries. Some doubt has been raised as to the nutritive value and legality of those fresh China eggs as a food product. But they have one great advantage, from the consumer's point of view—no way has been discovered yet of putting them into shells and selling them as fresh laid eggs from a Long Island farm.

New Yorkers are not apt to get anything more foreign in the way of eggs in their shells than the product of the henneries of Germany and Austria. Within a week, 80,000 dozen of eggs from those countries have been received in New York City by way of Hull, England, and are now in the local marwet. As many more are on the way, and they sell for a few cents less than the American egg. Covered with a paraffin preparation which excludes the air, they remain in the "fresh" class for a long time.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the vgoernment food expert, told congress, through a committee, that there is only one sure way to get a fresh egg—that is to watch the hen, seize her egg the instant she lays it, boil it or fry it on the spot and eat immediately before a commission merchant or a cold-storage man sees you. That is not always practicable. Another test is to drop the egg in a bowl of water containing a 10 per cent solution of common salt. If the egg sinks it is fresh; if it floats it is only fresh in a trade sense, which is an entirely different matter. Just what a poor showing the eggs consumed in this city every day would make under such a test is shown by a simple sum in arithmetic.

Assuming that the population of New York City is 4,000,000, there are enough eggs sold for every man, woman and child in the town to have one a day. Putting it in the figures of the trade, there are 72,000 cases of eggs used by the New York people every week. Each case contains thirty dozen, so the total for every seven-day period is 2,160,000 dozen, or approximately 28,000,000 eggs. That is what the town eats. But the receipts of the genuine fresh eggs sold there within a week after their production on near-by farms do not exceed 5,400,000 eggs, as against that total of 28,000,000. So the 22,000,000 and odd eggs must come out of the cold storage and from the foreign supply and the shipments from remote sections of this country.

It is possible that if the New York idea of selling eggs by the pound proves practical and satisfactory other cities may follow suit. If they do the wholesaler declares the retailer must rearrange his prices to suit. So far as the former is concerned the rates are not affected. The average weight of a case of eggs is from 45 to 53 pounds, dependable upon freshness and size.

Waging War on the Worthless Curs

HOLY SMOKE IT'S THE S.P.C.A.

BALTIMORE.—The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is waging a war of extermination on worthless and ownerless curs. In one day 109 such dogs inhaled carbonic acid gas, administered by the agents of the society, and out went their lives. Their bark ceased forever and their bite is a danger of the past. Hundreds of dogs have been caught by the society's agents during the summer months and destroyed.

"Where do all these worthless dogs come from?" This question was asked George M. Diedeman, secretary to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "The city has its own supply," said Mr. Diedeman. "This supply is largely augmented by daily arrivals from the country round about. They wander into the city from the suburbs, lose their way and become marauders until they fall into the hands of our agents. That is the last heard of them."

"How about the supply of worthless meowing cats that live in garbage boxes and make sleep impossible at night?"

"There is no diminution in their supply. The cats, like the dogs, are ever with us. The cat is a more elusive animal than the dog. It can skin over the backyard fences and hide in inaccessible places. The dog can't climb. The cat is harder, therefore, to capture. We hesitate to deal with cats in many cases because warring neighbors often grab each other's pet cats and send them to us for final treatment. We are thus made innocent parties to family quarrels. We are doing all we can, however, to exterminate cats."

Not Worth While.

"I notice that you usually tell the truth."

"Yes; I found that telling lies gets you into about as much trouble."

Nerve-Racking Noises of the City

BANANA
HONK

ST. LOUIS.—That the majority of people would live to be more than a hundred years old in these days of scientific comforts if nerve-racking and unnecessary noises were eliminated is the belief of Dr. Charles H. Hughes, one of the city's nationally known neurologists.

The noises of civilization are more than a nuisance, says the doctor. They are a peril to the public health, because they rob people of restful sleep. No one in the crowded section of cities, these days, gets as much sleep as he ought to have. The people who are renovating the slums, seeking to give the residents of tenement districts fresh and pure air, are doing good work, but they would do a greater work if they would give the people more rest. Restful sleep is quite as essential as good food. Every adult should have at least seven or eight hours of perfect, dreamless, rebuilding sleep; but with all the noises of the city this seems almost impossible.

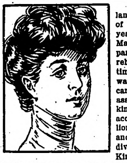
To rob a person of sleep is as much thievery as to put your hand into his pocket and take his money, for adequate sleep means money, health and life to the man who must labor in order to live. The coming generations will pay as much attention to promoting rest to the citizens of the commonwealth as to guarding them against poisonous microbic influences.

The unnecessary noises of modern times are turning the nation into a multitude of sleep neurasthenics. Men become nervous wrecks and are at a loss to understand why until they reflect on the few hours of sleep they get from day to day.

Dr. Hughes has an international reputation as a neurologist, having been a member of the teaching staff of every medical college in St. Louis and a well-known writer on his specialty for more than 30 years.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

LONELIEST ENGLISH DUCHESS

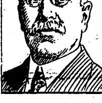


The loneliest and loveliest duchess in all England is our own Consuela Vanaderbilt. Daughter of William K. Vanderbilt, she was only eighteen years old when in 1895 she married the Duke of Marlborough. Her splendid fortune was used in part to pay the debts of the young duke and to rehabilitate his mansions and estates and for a time the union was a happy one. King Edward was much impressed by the charm of the American girl and her position in British society was assured. But the duke failed to appreciate the kindness of fortune in giving him so sweet and accomplished a wife and placing so many millions at his disposal. He neglected the duchess and the couple became estranged, though no divorce followed. English society, backed by King Edward, gladly would have shown its sympathy with the beautiful American and she might have queened it in the most exclusive circles, but, while making no complaint, her grace has preferred a life of semi-seclusion, devoting herself largely to philanthropy.

Tall, graceful, with a refined beauty which would be noticeable in any gathering and with limitless wealth at her command—with all her natural and worldly endowments the duchess of Marlborough never gives the outside world the appearance of happiness. It may be part of her petite beauty that some faintly traceable expression of sadness should cling to her face; it may be that her face is but the index to her heart.

Whichever the case, her grace never suggests to those who see her from time to time that she is happy. She is rarely known to smile. Wearing her $50,000 chinchilla cloak, she has sat through a Platonic lecture unmoved by the playful fancies of a favorite society lecturer; standing at the top of the giant stairs of Sunderland house, she has, in a Paquin gown of silk, received the guests of a charitable gathering—smilingly, it is true, but not in the happy way.

HEADS MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY

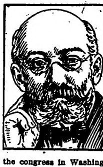


President Harry Burns Hutchins of the University of Michigan, is sixty-four years of age. He was born in Lisbon, N. H., and prepared himself for college at the Conference seminary at Tilton and at the Vermont Conference seminary at Newbury.

He entered Wesleyan university at Middleton at the age of nineteen, but on account of poor health was unable to complete the year. Later, however, he took up the studies of physiology and surgery at Vermont university. In 1867 his parents having moved to Michigan, he entered Ann Arbor. Here he kept at the head of his class, was its valedictorian and commencement orator, and in 1871 graduated with honors and with the degree of bacholor of philosophy. After his graduation he went to Owosso and was placed in charge of the public schools there. The next year Professor Hutchins returned to the state university at Ann Arbor and was made instructor in rhetoric and history, being advanced to the position of assistant professor the following year. He continued in this capacity for over three years, when he entered the legal profession, and in partnership with his father-in-law was in active practise for several years, when he again became connected with the university as professor of law. He afterward went to Ithaca and organized a department of law in Cornell. Michigan got him back again in 1875, he was made dean of the department in which he had previously been instructor, and during the years when President Angell was absent as minister to Turkey he was the acting president of the university.

For a dozen years he has been dean of the law department and has made a record as an advocate of more dignity in undergraduate life, keeping the scholastitc requirements in the department always at the highest standards. The regents of the university feel that in President Hutchins they have a man who combines both a high degree of scholarship and a genius for administration, qualities very necessary in this important position.

THE FOUNDER OF ESPERANTO



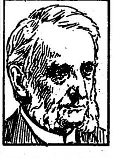
Considerable interest was manifested in the sixth international congress of Esperanto, the universal language, which convened in Washington recently and was in session a week. The delegates numbered 500, coming from 40 nations, and among them was Dr. L. L. Zamenhof of Warsaw, Poland, the author of the new language, whose portrait is here presented.

At some of the meetings the only language spoken was Esperanto and the play "As You Like It" was presented in that tongue.

Esperanto is said to be making considerable progress in the United States and has been taken up by scientists, linguists, teachers, public men and commercial houses. At its last session the Maryland legislature passed a law permitting the study of Esperanto in the public schools. At the congress in Washington the teaching of Esperanto in the public schools of this country and in other lands was discussed and advocated.

Esperanto is not intended to supersede any other tongue, but is meant to be supplementary to other languages, aiding in promoting an interchange of ideals between the peoples of different countries where other forms of oral speech are lacking.

PEARSONS WOULD DIE POOR



D. K. Pearsons, the Chicago philanthropist, who has given six million dollars to small colleges, expects to give away the rest of his money this year and to retire into a sanitarium to await the end of a very long life. Dr. Pearsons is over ninety years old and afflicted with rheumatism. He will sell his home and spend the balance of his days in the sanitarium. He praises his own wisdom in disposing of his wealth before his death, and says he knows where it has gone and has prevented any contest after he is gone.

April 14, his next birthday anniversary, Dr. Pearsons plans to make his last bequests to his colleges, which will be the last of his fortune. He will then rest content waiting for the end.

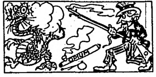
"A man is his own best executor," said Dr. Pearsons, "and I intend to be mine. I will sell my home and use the money to pay my debts." Dr. Pearsons always speaks of his conditional pledges as his "debts." "I will make no more presents until my next birthday," he said. "Then I will dispose of everything."

"As soon as the house is sold I shall go to the sanitarium," said he, "and prepare for the final distribution. For twenty-four years I have lived in the old mansion. Twenty-one of the years I have been giving. I have given something like $6,000,000 to twenty-nine colleges and institutions in twenty-four states. My debts, yes, that is what I call them. You see, I have promised Berea college $100,000 if $400,000 additional is raised.

Then there are other conditional debts that I must meet."

NEWS FROM the CAPITAL

Will Lead in War on the Opium Evil



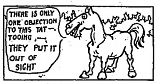
THE United States will lead the nations in the fight against promiscuous opium traffic at a conference to be held at The Hague in September, according to statements of authorities in Washington. The conference was made possible through diplomatic correspondence with the interested powers by Secretary Knox. The nations represented will be the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Portugal, China, Siam, Persia, Japan, the Netherlands, Russia and probably Turkey.

The work of the conference will follow along lines suggested by the International Opium commission, which met last year at Shanghai, on the invitation of this country. The fight against the promiscuous use of the drug and other narcotics which figure in international trade will be made by means of international agreements through which opium producing countries will protect, by means of government supervision, ports where the importation of the drug is prohibited.

The first realization of the seriousness of the opium traffic so far as the United States is concerned came when the government started to put the Philippines in order. An attempt to regulate the unlimited traffic there called for the appointment of a commission. The commission in tracing the many Americans engaged in the opium trade found that the United States, with some 200,000 American users of smoking opium, to say nothing of the Chinese users here, presented almost as serious a question as the insular possessions. Since that time the United States has led the fight among the powers against the drug.

About a year ago a law absolutely prohibiting the importation into this country of opium for any except medicinal purposes was passed. But there are now about 150,000 Americans using the drug, and in spite of the prohibitory statute about 68,000 pounds of smoking opium is smuggled into this country annually.

Tattoo Suggested for Army Horses



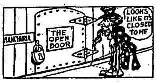
THERE IS ONLY ONE OBJECTION TO THIS TATTOOING,—THEY PUT IT OUT OF SIGHT

WASHINGTON.—Army horses are to become tattooed animals if a suggestion made by Capt. Casper H. Conrad, Jr., of the cavalry arm, is adopted. Captain Conrad is detailed for duty in the quartermaster's department, and is recognized as an expert on horses required for military use. Horses are now being purchased by members of the quartermaster's department, who are making their selections in various parts of the country.

The success attending this effort has been very gratifying to the quartermaster general, who has established an army remount system, with a view to improving the cavalry mounts and the horses furnished to the field artillery. When a young horse is purchased in any locality to be sent to one of the two army remount depots—at Fort Keogh, Montana, or Fort Reno, Okla.—he is marked with a numeral. The mark lasts about four months, when it becomes obliterated, and it is necessary to apply another. A third marking takes place when the horse is sent from the army remount depot to the troop or battery.

It is Captain Conrad's idea that a more enduring designation could be accomplished by applying a mark to the inside of the upper lip of the horse. He has devised an instrument for this purpose, and suggests the use of India ink, with the result that the numeral adopted will be indelible. This will require, of course, a regular system of marking so that there may be no duplicates. By this means a horse accepted for military service will keep its number. It may be necessary to have legislation to prevent tampering with the designation or making use of a similar mark in the case of horses not used in the military service.

Uncle Sam Is to Test the Open Door



LOOKS LIKE IT'S CLOSED TO ME
THE OPEN DOOR
MANCHURIA

THE United States is to test the sincerity of Russia and Japan in their recent claim of adherence to the open door policy in China made recently coincident with the signing of the new treaty by the Czar and the Mikado. It has been announced at the state department that the government will press at once for recognition from these two powers of the railroad concession recently granted by China to an English-American syndicate.

This is the concession which Russia blocked with an emphatic protest last winter. Since then the negotiations have been in the statu quo. The government is to find out whether or not Russia and Japan intend to bar the United States as well as other powers out of Manchuria by raising unjustifiable objections to the admission of other nations to that rich field.

When the recent convention between Russia and Japan was sprung on the world American diplomats expressed little surprise. The government has believed from the first there is a secret article in this convention which has not been made public. It is felt the unpublished portion is an agreement on the part of the two nations to support each other in barring other nations from the territory in question. The United States intends to force Russia's hand and determine whether such a secret bargain exists. The concession granted to the English-American syndicate was for the construction of the Chin-Chow-Aigun railroad line. English capitalists were to furnish the funds and the materials were to be built in America.

Capital a Suffragette Stronghold

OH YES
YOU BELIEVE IN WOMAN SUFFRAGE DON'T YOU?

THE increased attention which the suffrage cause is attracting in Washington has astonished the old-timers whose remembrance of the small body of women who called upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections at the convening of every new congress is the last impression of a few plucky women leading a desperately forlorn hope.

Time was when the woman who had suffrage leanings was afraid to avow them in Washington, and when it was thought exceedingly courageous of such well known society leaders as Mrs. John B. Henderson and Mrs. John R. McLean to entertain Miss Susan B. Anthony, the most famous apostle of the cause of woman's rights. Belief in the right of women to the ballot was supposed to imply that the believer wore short hair, impossible frocks, a man's hat and other cranky accompaniments of "queer views."

Time has changed all that. The women who compose the committees which have appeared to demand the vote at the last few sessions of congress have been modishly gowned, attractive and in most instances socially prominent. The cause of the ballot for woman has swept the country to such an extent that many of the senators and representatives of the present congress are avowed sympathizers and not a few of them have put themselves on record as favoring suffrage. The "votes for women" agitation is now discussed openly and sympathetically at many a Washington tea table presided over by a hostess whose social prominence is undisputed.

It is not safe to scoff at woman suffrage anywhere in Washington now, for too many members of the set which is really influential have developed leanings of that kind.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

LARGE AND SMALL FAMILIES.

Where the population is largely agricultural and isolated, and where labor is scarce, the husbandman is proud to raise a large family, for the boys in time will help to lift the labor from his shoulders, and also there is always plenty of work for the girls to do about the farm. Moreover, food is plentiful and other desires are few. But no such stimulus for a large family exists in urban life, where it is often necessary to live in a flat, the very limitations of which point to the inadvisability of a numerous progeny, says Indianapolis Star. Moreover, as the individual rises in the social scale former desires become present needs. The coming of numerous children would mean the sacrifice of these needs by the parents, the descent to a lower standard of living, and the parents will not consent. Finally science has shown that a small family well taken care of makes a better showing in future generations than a large family poorly looked after. The fewer children of the well-provided-for family will actually show a more numerous progeny in the third generation than will the underfed and neglected children of the larger family. Eugenics is a big question, and a conscientious investigation of it will convince anyone that dogmatic assertion in that field is a hazardous performance. It is a general rule in biology that species with the most numerous offspring are those that bring fewest perfect and efficient individuals to maturity.

A Rhode Island traveling agent who was disappointed in the demand in a certain section for the fireless cookers which he was offering, discovered that the farmers of "Little Rhody" have taken to the use of their incubators for summer coking. Like the discovery of roast pig in China, this utilization of the incubator was the result of accident. A husband who had forgotten to put on the pork and beans in accordance with a promise to a wife "out shopping," dashed the beans into an incubator, thus saving his bacon at the expense of a few chicks which were called out to death in a fervent pork-and-beans atmosphere. The idea of both raising and cooking chickens in incubators is depressing to the manufacturers of fireless cookers.

President Taft has signed orders which provide for the further withdrawal of coal lands from entry and appropriation for mining purposes. The aggregate of such withdrawals now reaches over 71,500,000 acres. This means that the enormous area in question is to be preserved by the government for disposition in the future and that it is not to fall into the hands of grasping monopolists, says Troy Times. Coal lands may be open to agricultural entry, but the rich deposits underneath are to remain public property, subject to such arrangement as may be made in the general interest.

The ramming of the gunboat Castine which as a result lies on the beach at Provincetown, Mass., full of water, was due to a miscalculation in mimic warfare similar to that which caused the sinking of the French submarine Pluviose and the drowning of her entire crew. But in the case of the Bonita, which struck the Castine, the mistake was made in the line of duty, whereas the loss of the Pluviose was due to a "fool trick" on the part of her commander, who miscalculated when attempting to dive under a passenger steamer merely for spectacular effect.

The first sham battle in the air is reported from Vincennes, France, where balloons carried guns to the height of 325 feet and discharged them. One of the contending balloons was compelled to retreat, and both balloons happily outlived the sham battle, which was remarkable chiefly for this latter denouement.

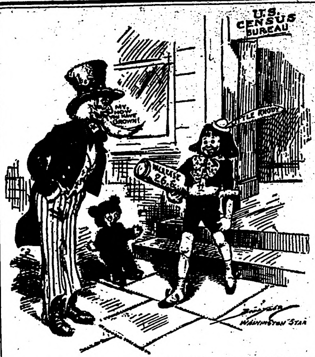
Congress is to have another prince as delegate from Hawaii, but neither he nor his country can be superstitious, for his name is Jonah. It does not follow, however, that his entrance into our national deliberations will be followed by a wail.

A physician says that going on the stage is a sure cure for the blues. Somebody ought to protest against this prescribing for the individual at the expense of the public.

There has been a gain of $114,000,000 in the value of imports during the past eleven months, not including the diamonds and things that were missed by the inspectors at New York.

In Russia it is against the law to marry more than five times. Even in Russia we can't see why such a law should be necessary.

In London they say that a man should allow his wife one-fifth of his income. Here she gets five-fifths, [illegible]



TURNS ON CANNON

LONGWORTH, AFTER CONFERENCE WITH TAFT AND OTHERS, MAKES STATEMENT.

WILL NOT VOTE FOR SPEAKER

Son-in-Law of Roosevelt Declares He Will Not Again Support Danville Man for Presiding Officer of House.

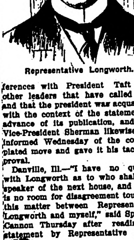
Beverly, Mass.—The fight of the Republican party reorganization against Speaker Cannon was opened by Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, son-in-law of ex-President Roosevelt.

In a statement which he issued Thursday Mr. Longworth declares that having voted for him in caucus on four different occasions he has supported Cannon for the speakership for the last time and that when the proper time comes, namely the meeting of the Republican caucus at the assembling of the next congress he will oppose Uncle Joe to that position.

Mr. Longworth makes it clear that in his view harmony in the Republican ranks and party success depends upon Cannon's elimination.

"I am absolutely convinced," he he says," that Cannon cannot be again elected speaker."

The importance of the Longworth statement lies not only in the fact that the Ohio congressman, a long time friend and supporter of Cannon issued it, but that it was not given to the public until after a series of conferences with President Taft and other leaders that have called here and that the president was acquainted with the context of the statement in advance of its publication, and that Vice-President Sherman likewise was informed Wednesday of the contemplated move and gave it his tacit approval.



Representative Longworth.

Danville, Ill.—"I have no quarrel with Longworth as to who shall be speaker of the next house, and there is no room for disagreement touching this matter between Representative Longworth and myself," said Speaker Cannon Thursday after reading a statement by Representative Longworth.

"If any Republican candidate for congress feels that his position on the Republican ticket would be strengthened by pledging that he will not support me in a Republican caucus I have no objection to his making the pledge."

Mite Born to a Farmer.

Duquoin.—A baby girl, weighing one and one-half pounds and less than twelve inches in length, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace, who live on a farm east of town. The infant is so small that a match will hide one of her fingers, while her head is about the size of a hen's egg.

American Gift to Mexico.

City of Mexico.—Americans in Mexico will present a $50,000 peace memorial monument to the people of Mexico as their contribution to the centennial of independence celebration next month.

Oil Fire in Oklahoma.

Tulsa, Okla.—Approximately $150,000 worth of oil and tanks in the Oklahoma fields were destroyed by fire Thursday during a heavy electrical storm, according to advices received here.

PRESENT STATUE TO FRANCE

BRONZE IMAGE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON DEDICATED.

Virginia's Gift to French Republic Is Placed in Napoleon Hall at Versailles.

Versailles, France. — With appropriate ceremonies the bronze replica of Houdon's celebrated statue of George Washington was dedicated in Napoleon hall of the Chateau of Versailles in the presence of the French minister of war, General Brun; the French ambassador to the United States, M. Jusserand, and his wife, and the American ambassador, Robert Bacon, and Mrs. Bacon; the marquis de Lafayette, the members of the French mission which presented to America the statue of Rochambeau, now at Washington, and former United States Senator Nathan B. Scott of West Virginia.

General Biron, who presided, spoke of the statue as the greatest work of the greatest French sculptor of the eighteenth century. Col. James Mann, chairman of the Virginia commission, delivered the speech of presentation. State Senators Don P. Halsey and F. W. King of Virginia also made addresses on behalf of the state of Virginia.

Ambassador Jusserand, in the absence of the French minister for foreign affairs, M. Pichon, accepted the statue on behalf of the French government. He declared that the friendship of General Washington and of the American people constituted one of the glories of France. It was, therefore, singularly appropriate that this statue, "the third erected on French soil by our ancient allies, should be placed in the palace consecrated to all our glories."

CALIFORNIA IS INSURGENT

Hiram W. Johnson, Exponent of Anti-Machine Doctrines, Wins Gubernatorial Nomination in Primary.

San Francisco.—California is insurgent in its Republican politics. Hiram W. Johnson, leading exponent of anti-machine doctrines, has swept the field in Tuesday's primaries, winning his party's nomination for governor by a plurality that will border on 50,000 when all returns are in.

Just how great was the extent of the disaster to the stalwarts cannot be known until outlying districts have been heard from, but every indication points to a clean-cut declaration by the party for insurgency and against the political activities of the Southern Pacific railway.

It is asserted that the progressives have carried to victory two new insurgent nominees for congressmen, William Kent in the Second district and W. D. Stephens in the Seventh.

CRESCEUS' TIME IS BEATEN

The Harvester Trots Mile in 2:02 and Makes Four New World's Records.

Buffalo, N. Y. — Sensational racing marked the second day of the Grand Circuit at the Fort Erie track. Several world's records were made in the final heat of the 2:07 trot, when The Harvester, driven by Ed Geers, covered the mile in 2:02, cutting a quarter of a second from the world's record, held by Cresceus for nine years. The 2:02 mile also gives The Harvester a world's record for five-year-old trotters; a world's third heat record, stallions, mares or geldings; a world's record for stallions. The track, horsemen, said, was two minutes slow.

Big Dam Near Completion.

Washington.—The earthwork on the big Belle Fourche irrigation dam in South Dakota, which is one of the largest earth embankments in the world, practically has been completed, according to advices received here Friday by the reclamation service.

Cotton Mills Closed.

Lawrence, Mass.—The Everett cotton mills were closed Friday and will reopen September 6. About 1,200 operatives are [illegible]

I. C. STORM BREAKS

THREE FORMER OFFICIALS OF ROAD ARE TAKEN INTO CUSTODY.

MORE ARRESTS WILL FOLLOW

Charges of Conspiracy to Defraud and of Confidence Game Placed Against Harriman, Ewing and Taylor in Car Repair Frauds.

Chicago.—The Illinois Central railway graft scandal storm broke Friday with tempestuous fury when three former high officials of that road were arrested on charges of conspiracy to cheat and defraud the road by false pretenses. More arrests are to follow and the names of others said to be implicated will probably be revealed at the trial of the men already under arrest.

Those arrested are:

Frank B. Harriman, former general manager of the Illinois Central system.

Charles L. Ewing, former general superintendent of the Illinois Central lines north of the Ohio river.

John M. Taylor, former storekeeper for the Illinois Central.

The men were taken before Municipal Judge Bruggemeyer, who released them on $20,000 bonds each.

Both Harriman and Ewing made statements after their arrest.

"There is absolutely no truth in the charges, and I have nothing to fear," said Harriman. "My record as general manager of the Illinois Central is an open book. Nothing will be proved against me."

"I deny the charges," said Ewing, "and I will be proven innocent. I have done nothing to be ashamed of."

Certain men identified with the conspiracy will be given an "immunity bath" as a result of confessions they made. They will turn state's evidence, it is said, and they already have promised to take the witness stand and tell the inside story of the frauds, its origin, its growth, its continuation and the names of the men who benefited.

The history of the car repair frauds, the alleged fraudulent transactions between the officials and railroad employes, and the like also will be told on the witness stand.

Harriman, as general manager of the entire system, was the next man to Ira G. Rawn, the vice-president who resigned to become president of the Monon road, and who was killed with his own revolver in his Winnetka home. Harriman resigned his position in March, the public announcement being made March 15.

C. L. Ewing resigned as general superintendent of the northern lines at Chicago soon after the first exposures were made in connection with the discovery of wholesale frauds.

Taylor resigned as general storekeeper May 1, at the time when President Harahan's office was being flooded with resignations from officers of high and low rank.

MAKES FLIGHT TO LONDON

Daring American Aviator Travels From Paris and Captures the $25,000 Prize.

London.—The youthful American aviator, Moissant, accompanied by his mechanician, Albert, Wednesday made a remarkable flight in a biplane from Paris to London across the English channel. It was the first time this feat was ever accomplished, although often tried.

Moissant accomplished his remarkable flight from Paris to Calais, and across the channel in company with his mechanician, Albert.

By making his remarkable flight he captures the cup that a London paper offered and the proceeds of the subscription raised in England for Graham White, which the unsuccessful competitor in the London-Manchester flight offered as an award in the Paris-London competition.

Hubert Latham, who started from Issy, a suburb of Paris, to race Moissant to London, met with a series of accidents, the last at Amiens, culminating in the wrecking of his machine as he was preparing to resume the flight. Latham escaped unhurt, but was out of the race.

The last stage of Moissant's flight, the trip across the channel, was accomplished in a strong channel breeze, the wind being so high that experienced aviators looked upon the start as foolhardy. It was such a wind as repeatedly deterred Bleriot, Latham and other aviators from attempting the passage of the straits.

Paris, France.—M. Le Blanc, the aviator, arrived at Issy, in the suburbs of Paris, at 6:45 a. m. Wednesday and is the winner of the cross-country flight which started August 7. The distance of the race was approximately 485 miles. The prize is $20,000, offered by a Paris newspaper.

Le Blanc, the winner, covered the circuit in 11:55:59. He used a Bleriot monoplane.

Strike May Delay Ohio Fair.

Columbus, O.—Governor Harmon is devoting his energies to settling the street car strike here before the state fair opens, August 29. Entries for the state fair will open Saturday and there is fear that if the strike is continued the fair will be postponed.

Fifteen Soldiers Killed.

Mainz, Germany.—Fifteen soldiers are reported to have been killed Friday by a premature explosion of dynamite in maneuvers at Sechetheimerberg.

EXCUSES 36 BROWNE JURORS

MORE VENIREMEN ADMIT THEY WERE APPROACHED.

Judge Kersten in Bribery Trial Deals Blow to "Crooked Work" in Selecting Jurymen.

Chicago. — In the trial Legislator Lee O'Neil Browne charged with bribery in connection with the election of Senator William Lorimer, Judge Kersten excused 36 veniremen from service when they admitted that they or members of thefamilies had been approached by men interested in the case.

When court convened Judge Kersten called the whole 60 special panel before him and asked all those who had been spoken to regarding the Browne case to step forward. A handful of men stepped out.

The court then ordered those whose families had been spoken to to advance, and about two-thirds of the panel responded. The court then ordered the attorneys to proceed with the selecting of a jury from those left.

Chicago.—The jury which is to try Lee O'Neill Browne on the charge of bribery in connection with the election of United States Senator Lorimer was completed Friday after four more veniremen who acknowledged they had been approached, had been excused.

Since the examination of jurors started August 4, eight special panels of 100 men each have been drawn for service, and more than 500 personally examined to ascertain their qualifications, etc.

Judge Kersten after charging the jury adjourned court until Monday, when the actual trial will begin.

ROOSEVELT IS TURNED DOWN

Is Denied the Honor of Presiding Over the New York Republican State Convention.

New York.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt's name was presented for the office of temporary chairman of the Republican state convention at the meeting of the Republican state committee Tuesday, but his selection for that honor was lost by a vote of 20 to 15.

Vice-President Sherman was chosen unanimously to act as temporary presiding officer.

Let by State Chairman Woodruff and William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, the "Old Guard" encompassed the defeat of Colonel Roosevelt, whom several of the state leaders charged with attempting to dictate the fortunes of the party in the state.

After the meeting had been called to order and the time and place of the state convention had been decided, William Barnes, Jr., offered a resolution presenting the name of Vice-President Sherman for temporary chairman of the convention. Lloyd C. Griscom moved to substitute the name of Colonel Roosevelt and moved also that the vote be postponed.

After much debate the motion to postpone was defeated by a vote of 12 to 23. The resolution to make Colonel Roosevelt temporary chairman then was lost by 20 to 15, following which Vice-President Sherman was unanimously chosen for temporary presiding officer. Mr. Griscom and Henry Mack of New York not voting.

The state committee adjourned to meet September 26 at Saratoga.

PEST IN ITALY SPREADING

Twenty Thousand People Flee From Cholera-Stricken Town—Disease of Virulent Type.

Rome.—The cholera epidemic is rapidly spreading in southern Italy, but rumors that it had also reached this city are without foundation. Not a single case has been reported here and the health officials are on the qui vive for any appearance of the malady.

According to the reports Friday the disease is of a most virulent type and accompanied by a high death rate. Thirty deaths are reported at Trani. The town is being rapidly depopulated because of the panic among the inhabitants, 20,000 of whom have already fled. Similar conditions prevail in Barletta.

The authorities are greatly concerned over the possibility of a still wider spread of the epidemic as a result of this flight of people from the disease centers.

STABS CONVICT TO DEATH

Colored Inmate of Bridewell Plunges Shears Into Benchmate—Causes Panic Among Prisoners.

Chicago. — An oath, an epithet, a scuffle, and ninety prisoners at work in the tailor shop at the bridewell saw William Jones, 26, a colored prisoner, killed William Meyers, also colored, with a pair of shears, which he stabbed him in the breast with. The tragedy happened with a quickness that paralyzed interference.

Love Affair, Double Shooting.

Morgantown, N. C.—An attendant at the insane hospital here Friday shot and fatally wounded Miss Mary Cuthbertson, an attendant at the same hospital, who refused to marry him. He then fatally shot himself.

Doctor Killed by Patient.

Ottawa, Ont.—Dr. William Empsy of Vars was fatally shot Friday by Alfred Blondin, a patient. Before he died Empsy said Blondin fired at him deliberately. Blondin declared the shooting was accidental.

Your Liver is Clogged up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days.

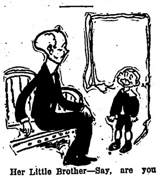
They do their duty. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, and Sick Headache.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

GAVE SIS AWAY.



Her Little Brother—Say, are you goin' ter marry my sister Bess?

Her Suitor—Why, er—er—er don't know.

Her Little Brother—Well, you are. I heard her tell pop she was goin' ter land you tonight.

KEEP BABY'S SKIN CLEAR

Few parents realize how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of the proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing, disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end, nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted, when necessary, by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, for their free 32-page Cuticura Book, telling all about the care and treatment of the skin.

Sign of Recovery.

"If when the devil is sick a monk he will be," said Rose Stahl sagely, "then the devil gets well in double quick time. Witness that young 'divil with the ladies,' my kid cousin. Last winter he was ill, so ill he didn't have any sense of humor left nor any sense either. I was staying at the same hotel, and when I went in to look after him he virtuously remarked that his room was no place for a 'Chorus Lady' and promptly shooed me out. (A few years ago I spanked that kid.) Then he got scared and sent for a doctor and the doctor sent for a trained nurse. For several days I got bulletins of his progress from the chambermaid. The fourth morning she set my mind completely at rest.

"'Sure, ma'am,' said Maggie, 'an' I think he do be gettin' along very well. The nurse was sittin' on his lap this mornin'!'"

Mrs. Wiggin's Idea of London.

During the recent visit of Mrs. Wiggin, the American author, in London, an interviewer called on her. With pencil poised, the interviewer asked: "And what do you think of London, Mrs. Wiggin?"

"You remind me," answered the author cheerfully, "of the young lady who sat beside Dr. Gibbon at dinner. She turned to him after the soup.

"'Do, dear Dr. Gibbon,' she said, 'tell me about the decline and fall of the Roman empire.'"

Why Not?

"I see some genius has set Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song' to ragtime."

"Well?"

"I wonder how 'Il Trovatore' would go as a musical comedy?"

Right food is a basis
For right living.
"There's only one disease,"
Says an eminent writer—
"Wrong living
"And but one cure—
"Right living."
Right food is supplied by

Grape-Nuts

It contains the vital
Body and brain-building
Elements of wheat and barley—
Most important of which is
The Potassium Phosphate,
Grown in the grain
For rebuilding tissues
Broken down by daily use.
Folks who use Grape-Nuts
Know this—they feel it.
"There's a Reason."
Read "The Road to Wellville,"
Found in packages.

Sylvia's Romantic Year

By Gerald Prime

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

On har twenty-fifth birthday Sylvia Brough stood face to face with grim necessity for the first time in her life. She sat perfectly still and helpless in the big leather-covered armchair in old Judge Buchanan's private office—the spot in which the dismal revelation of her poverty had come to her—a crushed and bewildered little figure, dainty as a flower even in her distress.

"Cheer up, Sylvia," consoled the grizzled old lawyer, her dead husband's friend, and her own, since earliest childhood. "You are young and the very best of life is still before you. All the unhappiness of this cruel day will be blotted out and the sting of your sudden affliction will grow duller with the passing of time. Believe me, dear friend, you will even be happy again."

"Should it happen as you predict," she said, with a pitiful attempt to accept his cheerful augury as something prophetic, "I shall recall how impossible it seems to me today."

It was Sylvia's great problem, and her lack of preliminary training left her helpless to solve it. When she tried to take stock of her possible resources she could settle on nothing that was likely to prove available. She could play and sing in an amateurish way. She had rather a pretty knack at composition, but was a lamentable speller. She was unskilled in housewifery because she had never kept house and she was not an adept with the needle. Clearly, she had reason to doubt her capacity to become a successful bread-winner, and that is precisely the alternative to which she was reduced. There was not even time to hesitate, so urgent was the need.

In her depression she searched the newspapers, and made lists of everything that suggested the barest hope, and of many things which did not. Then she tuned her courage to the highest note and set out on her novel errand. The first advertisement in her collection was for a private secretary for the head of a mammoth concern which collected news from all parts of the globe and sold it at bargain prices. Sylvia knew that there were such factotums as private secretaries, but of their qualifications and duties she was profoundly ignorant.

That was the reason she made her way to the office of the advertiser and asked for an interview with the president. At first sight of him she came to the conclusion instantly that she had blundered. He was a young man of about her own years, a giant in stature, with a face and figure of remarkable perfection, but with an expression and manner that made her shrink from him before he had spoken a word.

"Are you another applicant for the vacancy in my office?" he asked her in a tone civil enough, but suggesting Mount Olympus.

Sylvia was too uncertain of her voice to speak, but she nodded slightly and tried to recover her self-possession.

"What is your name?" he continued, with a look in his great blue eyes that was so eloquent of superiority that she could answer him only in a tremulous half whisper.

"Have you any well-defined reason to suppose that you could be satisfactory to me?" he demanded, loftily.

At that she rallied, her indignation developing slowly, but very certainly. "I'm quite sure I shouldn't," she said firmly.

She looked at him, and as their eyes met she fancied that his seemed less insistently asure; still they were the bluest she had ever seen and she did not like the color.

"Would you mind telling me why you are so sure?" he asked, and for the life of her she couldn't tell whether his manner was the reflex of impertinence or the honest expression of a desire to be informed.

"I'm afraid I'm not competent," she said, giving him the benefit of the doubt. "I have had no experience."

He smiled frigidly. "It is possible that you underrate your ability," he said. "You are the first of all who have applied for the position to profess lack of confidence in your capacity. That, of itself, is noteworthy. I will give you a trial."

Without giving her the opportunity to say yea or nay, the extraordinary young man touched a bell, and to the slight, dark young man who appeared instantly from an inner office he proceeded to give this amazing order:

"This young woman will act as my private secretary until further notice. You will instruct her as to what is expected of her and arrange the salary. I am going out of town and shall not return until Monday."

So saying, he turned on his heel without so much as a glance at her and left the room.

Sylvia could only stare at the remaining young man with a look that besought enlightenment. He had seated himself at the table opposite her, and his clear-cut, refined face was aglow with amusement and polite interest.

"First of all," he said, with a little laugh that dissolved some of the gloom that had fallen on her, "you are not to take our president too seriously. He is so new to the business that he isn't properly adjusted yet. Until very recently he was a post-graduate student at the university. His father's death put him at the head of this great concern without a warning. His father invented this system and made it what it is. General Maitland was a wonderful man."

Sylvia did not say a word, but she wondered if the son had inherited his father's manner. The young man must have divined her thoughts, for he looked rather conscious as he proceeded: "The general was a second Chesterfield in deportment. He had the most agreeable manner of any person I have ever known."

Still Sylvia did not trust herself to speak. Left to make the conversation as he would, he continued:

"But our president is very like his father in many ways. He is the soul of integrity and he is very clever. In another year he will know the business from start to finish. Every one here realizes that he is capable of great things. He has already revolutionized everything."

"But is that good—for the business?" asked Sylvia.

"Precisely what it needed," he replied earnestly. "It was getting a little archaic, you know. Our competitors were beginning to make it warm for us. Our new head has already worried them. They are wondering what he will do next."

She sighed feebly as his words recalled her own unsettled future.

"Pardon me," he said. "I am tiring you with my talk about Stephen Maitland. I should be telling you what you will be expected to do as his private secretary. You will have to open his mail and read all his letters."

"Never!" exclaimed Sylvia positively.

"Not at all difficult," he laughed. "He doesn't receive many letters of a business nature, and as soon as you discover their tendency you are to turn them over to me. It is only his personal mail that you are to inspect."

Sylvia shook her head despairingly.

"There are very few of them," he hastened to assure her, "and they are almost exclusively invitations and begging letters. The former you will be expected to decline without consulting him. The latter you must return to their writers with a printed slip referring them to the United Charities association."

"And now for the actual duties, please," said Sylvia with dignity.

"That's about the list, so far as I have been able to find out. Of course, if I were to be incapacitated by sickness or any other cause I suppose you would be expected to do my work."

"What would that be?"

"I am a sort of combination of stenographer, business secretary and confidential adviser. But I should advise you not to cherish any vain hope of stepping into my shoes even temporarily. I'm never sick and am very careful to avoid beind hurt. Your salary will be $12 to begin. Shall I put you on the pay roll, Miss—Miss—"

"Mrs. Sylvia Brough," she corrected with still greater dignity.

"Ah, I see," he said, writing the name on a slip of paper.

"I am pretty sure I shall not be satisfactory," she said, rising to go, "but I must try, for it is very necessary that I should have work."

"To-morrow morning, then, anywhere between nine and eleven," he called out pleasantly as she was leaving.

A year later Sylvia made another visit to Judge Buchanan's office. She still wore the doleful garb of a widow, but her face had lost its hopelessness.

"How about my prediction?" the old lawyer asked almost immediately.

For a reply she sat down and told him her story of the past year.

When she had concluded he sat for a moment and gazed at her with a look, half quizzical, half paternal.

"Each of these young men has asked you to marry him," he said, precisely as if he were summing up in an interesting case. "Being a woman, you will probably choose—"

"I have promised to marry Stephen," she said.

Not Up to Our Slang.

Joseph Epstein, cousin of Louis Simon of the board of review, was born in Dublin, regardless of his name, and lived in Ireland until about two months ago, when he came to Cleveland. Soon after he reached here he began to look around for a job. The manager of a furniture house promised to give him a trial.

"Come around in the morning and go to work," he said, "and if you can deliver the goods we'll probably keep you permanently."

The Dublin native went over to tell Cousin Simon about it, according to the story. He confided to him that he didn't believe he'd go back to take the job, after all.

"They want me to deliver the goods," he said. "Think of going around delivering big, heavy furniture. That's what horses and wagons are for in my country."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

RICHES FOR STATE

SUIT TO BE TRIED INVOLVES OWNERSHIP OF DEPOSITS UNDER LAKES.

IN THE DULUTH IRON DISTRICT

Law Passed at Last Session to Be Tested.—Governor Eberhart and Members of Drainage Commission Study Case.

Hibbing. — Several millions of dollars worth of natural resources are involved in a case which will be brought by the state of Minnesota to determine the ownership of the ore deposits under the beds of lakes in the range country. Property worth $25,000,000 will be saved to the state if the state wins, according to state officials.

Attorney General Simpson and his assistant, C. Louis Weeks, came to Hibbing on the same train that brought Governor Eberhart and the members of the state drainage commission. The attorney general, his assistant, State Auditor Iverson and Governor Eberhart conferred with Frank Willis, state mine inspector, concerning the case. A visit was made by the officials to Long Ear lake, where the mine which is being used as the test case is located. Millions of tons of ore in this lake alone will be saved if the state wins. There are many such lakes on the range.

Common Law Principle.

It is a principle of common law that the owners of land on the shore own the lake bed if the lake goes dry. The question as to the state's owning the ore did not come up until seven years ago, when application was made to State Auditor Iverson for the leasing of such land for mining purposes.

The lease was granted for the purpose of making a test case. The matter was carried to the United States supreme court, but that court decided that it had no jurisdiction as it was entirely a question of state law. The next time an application was made, it was refused so that the courts could be asked for a decision. Again the supreme court decided that it had no jurisdiction.

As there was no state law governing the case, the matter was put up to the legislature. Twice the legislature refused to enact such a law, but at the last session a law was passed which provided for the state ownership of all ore deposits under lakes.

The Euclid Mining company was mining on the shores of Long Ear lake at the time. The state started injunction proceedings to stop it from stripping this ore which the law said belonged to the state. The mining company finally gave bonds to the state so that it could keep on mining until the case was settled in the courts.

If the state wins the company will have to pay the state for the ore taken out. The money which will be brought into the state treasury in the event of the state's winning this suit, will be devided into two parts, one-half going into the revenue fund, and the other into the road and bridge fund. The revenue fund will be so materially increased in the event of the state's winning that taxes which have already been reduced will be reduced a great deal more and in time, perhaps eliminated.

The outcome of this case involves much more money than comes from either the inheritance tax or the gross earnings.

DULUTH CATHOLIC POLES LOSE.

Court Awards Decision to Bishop in Church Controversy.

Duluth.—That no Catholic congregation is really Catholic unless that congregation adheres strictly to all the rules of the church is the gist of a decision handed down by Judge Dibell, of the district court in the case of Anthony Koneczny against August Kolenda.

The trouble arose over the fact that a portion of the congregation of the West End Polish Catholic church quarreled with the bishop and ousted the priest whom he had appointed to the church.

The bishop refused to appoint another priest to fill the vacancy and another dispute arose over the title to the property. The trustees permitted services to be held by other than a regular priest.

The judge stated that judgment may be entered for a writ of injunction enjoining the trustees from causing or permitting religious services other than those provided for under the creed and faith of the Roman Catholic church and under the auspices of a duly ordained priest to be held.

Cologne Students in Duluth.

Duluth. — Thirty-two special students of the University of Commerce of Cologne are in Duluth to study industries. Duluth is one of the points selected for inspection on a hurried six weeks' tour of the country. The party is in charge of a representative of the Hamburg-American line, and is also accompanied by Prof. Christian Eckert, head of the university; Professors Kurt Hassert and Paul Mondenauer of the faculty and Karl Rehorst, deputy mayor of Cologne.

CURVEYORS AT WORK.

Crew Said To Be Employed by Milwaukee Road.

Fergus Falls.—The railway surveyors who have been working in this direction, from the southeast, reached this city. They are making no effort to conceal their identity, and talk freely of their work. They state that they are in the employ of the Milwaukee road, and as their pay checks are drawn by that company there is no question about it.

They have run their line from the present terminus of the Milwaukee branch at Hutchinson, McLeod county, up through Meeker and Stearns, striking the Great Northern near Sauk Center and following that line northwestward through Douglas and into Otter Tail. They have kept just south of the Great Northern track thus far, but think they may cross it here and follow it on the north side to Fargo.

They state that their instructions are to run the line to Fargo, and beyond that they do not know where it is going. While the survey may be something of a bluff for the purpose of wringing concessions from the Great Northern or keeping it from entering Milwaukee territory elsewhere, the work is being thoroughly done, and will give the Milwaukee all the data it requires for a new line.

DROUTH STOPS THRESHING.

Farmers at East Grand Forks Have to Haul Water.

East Grand Forks. — The farmers living northeast of this city after losing a good share of their crops because of heat and drouth, have run against another big problem. The continued drouth and heat has caused an unusual lack of water, and in some cases the farmers are unable to go ahead with their threshing until some arrangements are made for securing water. August Lietleg, a farmer living near Key West, was in the city today, endeavoring to find some means of securing water so that he can do his threshing. A small stream, known as the Marais, is in that vicinity but it has been entirely dried up, necessitating the hauling of water from Red Lake river below Mallory. This is an unusually long distance to haul water for some of the farmers in a northeast direction from this city, but it wil undoubtely have to be done if threshing operations are to continue. Farmers have to haul water for their cattle, being unable to get sufficient supply on farm land.

COMMISSION COMPLETES WORK.

Inspection of Mining Properties in North Is Finished.

Duluth.—After six days' spent in viewing state mining properties and inspecting drainage ditches, the officials on drainage commission completed their work with the inspection of state ditch No. 63, near Aitkin. The ditch extends from Blind lake to the Mississippi river and drains about 12,000 acres of land.

Complaints have been made as to the construction of the ditch, but the officials, after a careful examination, found that it was one of the most satisfactory ditches in the state. State Engineer Ralph expressed himself as pleased with the work.

On the way to Duluth the party paid a visit to Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, and was entertained by her in her private car. The actress listened attentively as Attorney General Simpson and State Auditor Iverson told her of the work being done by the state in the northern section.

Some of the officials attended a Republican gathering in Duluth last evening.

INDIANS ARE AFTER MONEY.

White Earth.—Attorney E. P. Henderson of Washington, D. C., is in conference with members of the Chippewa band here regarding their claim against the government for swamp lands claimed by the state and recently awarded to Minnesota by the interior department, notwithstanding the claim of the Indians.

The land involves 190,000 acres, and is composed of swamp property given to the Chippewas in return for their relinquishment of other lands in Minnesota.

The government has expressed no intention to make good the loss suffered by the Indians, and the latter are consulting with Henderson regarding a plan of action looking to a just and equitable compensation for the loss of their land.

MAY BUILD SANATORIUM.

Faribault People to Develop Mineral Springs.

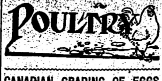
Faribault.—There are several mineral springs within two miles from the center of the city that are claimed to be highly impregnated with minerals that are valuable for medicinal properties.

There is a prospect of establishing a sanatorium at the springs. The matter has been taken up by the development committee of the commercial club.

BEMIDJI SCOTS ENTERTAIN.

Old Songs, Dances and Picnic Prove Entertaining.

Bemidji.—The Scotch Association of Bemidji gave its third annual picnic and the event was a highly successful and enjoyable affair. There was a fine attendance of Scotchmen from outside points, as well as Bemidji, and "Hoot, mon" was the salutation from early morning until well on into the night.



POULTRY

CANADIAN GRADING OF EGGS

Poultry Producers' Association Making Efforts for Proper Classification.

The Poultry Producers' Association of Canada has been making an effort to provide a classification and grading for dressed poultry and eggs. Last year a number of grades were adopted for the use of poultrymen and at present the secretary wishes to get the views of producers and dealers in regard to any amendment of the grading rules that may seem desirable.

In the grading of eggs it is laid down as a first requirement that they must all be shipped new laid. A new laid egg is an egg that is not over five days old when shipped, an egg that has been gathered promptly and kept in a moderately dry, cool place (under 60 degrees), free from foul odors and other contaminating influences. On holding a new laid egg to the light it will be seen that the air space in the large end is very small and the yolk almost invisible. As the age continues the air space enlarges and the yolk becomes visible as shown in the illustration. Rough shelled and abnormal eggs should never be shipped. Through some markets may call for several grades of eggs as a general rule there is no necessity for many grades. What the best trade demands is freshness, grading, uniformity in packing and regularity in supply.

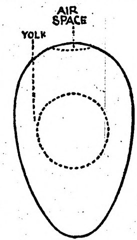


FIG.I.

A Fresh Egg.

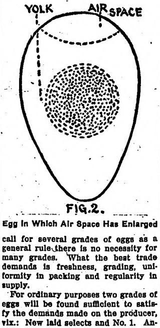

FIG.2.

Egg In Which Air Space Has Enlarged

For ordinary purposes two grades of eggs will be found sufficient to satisfy the demands made on the producer, viz.: New laid selects and No. 1. Another grade of common stock may for a time be marketed, but they must not be sold under the brand of the association.

New Laid Selects.—These are to consist of strictly new laid eggs, not over five days old, weighing not less than twenty-four ounces to the dozen. Clean, of uniform size and color, packed in substantial neat cases having clean fillers.

No. 1.—To consist of new laid eggs, not over five days old, weighing not less than twenty-one ounces to the dozen. Clean, packed in substantial and neat new cases with clean fillers.

Note.—Common eggs, not covered by the foregoing grading, must not be marketed under the brand of the association.

Healthy Fowls.

The natural inheritance of all fowls is constitutional vigor, provided, of course, they are not enfeebled by injudicious breeding. Constitutional vigor can be maintained and brought about by choosing the strongest, healthiest and hardiest of the stock for breeders every spring and by killing off the weak and sickly ones in the fall. The introduction of fresh blood frequently not only keeps up the stamina, health and vigor of stock, but it also enables them to resist sickness and sudden changes of weather much better than fowls closely and continuously inbred, or fowls not bred to any degree of constitutional excellence, or selected for establishing any permanent quality.

Box for Grit.

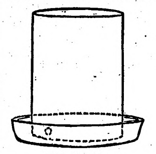
Do not throw oyster shells, charcoal or beef scraps upon the ground or litter, but have a box for such purposes. A self-feeding box with three partitions admirably serves the purpose.

HOME-MADE CHICK FOUNTAIN

Handy and Inexpensive Receptacle for Watering Little Ones—Many Advantages.

The above sketch illustrates a practical chick fountain which can easily be made from a tin can and an earthern or tin dish.

Procure a tin can about four inches in diameter (baking powder usually comes in cans this size) and punch a hole in the lower rim with a nail about five-eighths of an inch from the bottom; fill with water and place a dish over same (diameter of dish must be about two inches larger than diameter of can).



Chick Fountain.

Turn the can and dish over quickly and set where desired.

The advantages of this simple arrangement are many, the chicks cannot stand in the water and foul it, neither can they turn it over, and the dish is automatically filled from the tank as fast as the chicks drink it.

RATION TO FATTEN POULTRY

Method Adopted at Maine Station and Gives Much Satisfaction—Coops Are Used.

At the Maine station the following ration for fattening is fed to fowls in small pens with great success.

Hundred parts of cornmeal.
Hundred parts wheat middlings.
Forty parts of meat meal.

This was fed as porridge, thick enough to drop, but not run, from a spoon. Milk is preferable for moistening the mixture.

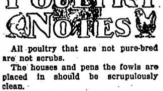
French and English fatteners who make a specialty of the business of fattening thousands of chickens each year confine them in small coops. The coops used at the Maine station had a floor space of 16 by 23 inches, in each of which four chickens were placed. This method can be used when the space is limited. At the Maine station it was found that chickens fattened in a pen put on weight as rapidly and at as low cost as those in crates or on which cramming machines were used.

Where a pen is used the fowls should have shade, grit and the water must be fresh and plentiful. Feed them three times a day and be careful to see that none is left in the troughs between meals.

Poultry Business.

The poultry business is not adapted to sluggards. The lazy man loses money with hens. Every neglect in poultry raising has its cost.

He who is constantly complaining about "bad luck" is only advertising the fact that his methods are at fault. Bad luck investigated will nearly always prove to be wrong management. Good luck and proper management are akin..



POULTRY NOTES

All poultry that are not pure-bred are not scrubs.

The houses and pens the fowls are placed in should be scrupulously clean.

Generally a hen with a nice, clean-cut head and a full, bright eye will be a good layer.

Crossing an African gander on Toulouse geese is said to give the largest sized offspring.

It is well to consider what is the best treatment of fowls while they are passing through the moult.

Fowls always seem to moult earlier and quicker when they are warm and in places where they are exposed to the sun.

When moulting actually commences, it is best to feed liberally on rations which are easy of digestion and rich in protein.

The cockerels should be culled out early and sent to market. Pullets will develop much better if this is done.

Some hens in every yard are too old for good service. Have you any? Good time right now to get rid of them.

Among the several varieties of the Cochin family the Partridge is considered by many to be the most beautiful.

Skimmed milk is a good feed not only for raising calves, and pigs, but it is also an excellent feed for raising chicks and for egg production.

It is as difficult to name the best breed of fowls as it is to name the best breed of hogs or sheep, or the best make of corn planter or cream separator.

Many people are realizing the profit in raising heavy geese, as they are worth more a pound than the lighter breeds and every year there is more demand for the Toulouse.

Of first importance is to keep young stock growing vigorously. Too many poultry raisers compel their young stock to shift too much for itself during the middle and last summer months.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 31 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn. under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Vote for Republicans.

We are publishing a republican newspaper and expect to support the nominees and endorse the platform of that party. The republican party held a state convention and formulated a platform, in which there is no mention made of county option.

Now the question for the republicans of this, the 61st district to decide is; whether they want to nominate men to represent them in the legislature, who are republicans, who endorse the principles of the party and their platform; or elect men who have written a platform of their own at the dictation of Tom, Dick and Harry and who are going to St. Paul to fight the republican party.

We had Senator Hanson there doing that one term and the only record he made was the honor of voting in the minority.

If the republican party is not good enough for our candidates for the legislature, unless they make up a "blend" of the prohibition and of this year's democratic party, let them get out of the party, and not try to secure votes by calling themselves republicans. Our nominee for governor stands on the republican platform and two-thirds of the next legislature will do the same, so do not let us, as republicans and voters of the 61st legislative district, make the mistake of sending men to represent us, who are standing on a patent platform of their own manufacture.

Are Not Temperance.

There is one phase of the liquor question and the restricting of its sale in certain localities by that old Indian Treaty, that is not considered by the plug hat aristocracy who are howling for almost anything that will close the saloons. That question is the loss of the lumber jacks and river-men in Northern Minnesota.

They are a highly respectable class of people that Northern Minnesota cannot very well get along without if they are going to continue to built up and improve the country. But those boys, when they have finished their labors on a drive or a winter's work in the woods, are bound to have a little "spree" and if they cannot have it in one place they will go to another locality to get work.

We are firmly of the opinion that if the saloons were closed in Thief River Falls in less than six months it would be pretty nearly an impossibility to employ a man to work in the woods or on the drive.

Now my dear temperance friends do not jump up and say that all these men have reformed because they could not get whiskey; for they have not; but they have gone to some other locality where they can get it.

There is one locality that does not seem to be taking any interest in the division of the county and that is Red Lake Falls. Perhaps there are reasons for their lack of interest, among which might be the possibility of the passage of a county option law at the next session of the legisture. In the event that such a law should pass, the diminished Red Lake County would vote to close the saloons, while Pennington would go dry. There are also other reasons which might account for their lack of interest, which are only understood by the informed; but we do not care to mention them.

Polk County is beginning to realize the fact that they might loose Senator Stephens as their able representative in the state senate and they are going to move to get him into the race. Mr Stephens is a man who does not need to take this office for the honor or the salary, but he will take it for the good he knows he can do for the people of his district and the northean part of the state. He will not hustle particularly to get re-elected, but we are pleased to note that the people of Polk County are beginning to appreciate the true worth of A. D. as a senator and are taking an active interest in his election.

The Popular Candidate.

It was with considerable satisfaction that Hon. Albert Berg noted the strong sentiment, during his tour thruout the district in favor of his candidacy and the apparent support promised him on all sides.

There are, of course, many reasons for such, and vital reasons that are of interest to every voter and resident of the North country. First and foremost, Mr. Berg is one of the most enthusiastic boosters of the North country, and will brook no interference in any project tending towards the development of the country. Second, he is the endorsed candidate of the Northern Minnesota Development Assn., and stands pledged to the enactment into law of several demands embodied in the association's resolutions tending towards relieving the present adverse conditions confronting the pioneers and prospective settlers of this vast North Country. Third he is a man to be fully relied upon to meet any emergency and to stand out for such legislation as will mean the greatest good to the people and especially to his constituents.

There is perhaps no greater proof of our candidate's fitness than his enviable record and standing in his home town and in reference to which we are pleased to point with pride.

To Mr. Berg was entrusted the office of president of the village upon its incorporation and he has held such since, until his duties otherwise and his business interests compelled him to lay such aside and it was with reluctance that the people looked upon his refusal to serve longer as their president. He has been, ever since his residence here, the one sought council in not only public matters but he has become the advisor of many in private and business matters, enjoying the full confidence and respect of the people both old and young.

Mr. Berg's slogan in his campaign is: "Reapportionment, Development and Good Roads for Northern Minnesota" and are what he will demand of the Senate and House at their next sessions should he become the people's representative.

That he will become such lies entirely with the voters of the 61st district and it is to their, as well as to the entire Northern Minnesota, interest that he be the sucessful candidate at the primaries on September 20th, next.—The Northern News.

Indignant.

The mayor of a small town had come to Leipzig to see the fair. A stranger who had lost his way asked him: "Pray, good honest man, what is the name of this street?"

"I am not a good honest man," said the former; "I am the mayor of Mut-burg."

Distinction, If No Difference.

"Why do you want [illegible] daughter?"

"I'm no object of charity. I [illegible] accept your money in any other way."

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Candidate for Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Red Lake County that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff, at the primaries on Sept. 20, 1910. Should you see fit to nominate and elect me I shall endeavor to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability.

Charles Ellman.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination for the office of Judge of Probate on the Republican ticket. I earnestly solicit the support of the voters of Red Lake County at the primary election to be held September 20.

Ben Christianson.

ALBERT BERG.

For Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next.

Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minn.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative for the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Clearwater, Beltrami and Red Lake and respectfully solicit your support at primaries. I pledge myself to the support of all measures looking to the best interests of my constituency and in the event of my nomination and election will at all times use every honorable means to further the interests of same. I heartily indorse the platform adopted at the Northern Minnesota Development Association meeting held at Bemidji, last March.

Iver A. Krohn,
Shevlin, Minnesota.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st legislative district which comprises the counties of Beltrami, Clearwater and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my best efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota, and a county option law.

D. P. O'Neil.

Senators to Elect.

The Thirteen Towns, published at Fosston, in a strong editorial endorsing Senator A. D. Stephens, says in conclusion:

"It is an easy matter for a member of the legislature to sit in his seat and register his vote right upon the different propositions which come to a vote, but it is quite another thing to see what is needed by your constituency and then be able to go ahead and get it. Such a representative Senator Stephens has proved himself to be and he is needed in the next legislature by not alone Polk County, but by all Northern Minnesota."

The above applies to the situation in this district, for perhaps Senator Hanson did vote all right; but he might as well have sent his hat down to do that. Now let us adopt the plan of Polk County and send a man to the state senate, who can see what is needed, then go after it and get it.

We believe we have such a man in Albert Berg so do not make the mistake of returning a man to the state senate, who can do nothing. Stephens and Berg would be a good pair for Northern Minnesota to draw to.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one-half mile south of the Highlanding creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office.

McCALL PATTERNS 10¢ AND 15¢ NONE HIGHER

McCALL'S MAGAZINE 50¢ A YEAR INCLUDING A FREE PATTERN

McCALL PATTERNS
Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE
More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS
to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 238 to 248 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

Aaron Burr's Grave.

Aaron Burr died at Port Richmond, Staten Island, Sept. 14, 1836. His remains were conveyed to Princeton, N. J., where, according to his request, he was interred at the feet of his father and grandfather. Both his father and grandfather were presidents of Princeton college.

Concerning the tombstone which marks his burial place, we quote from the history of his life by Parton: "Some efforts were made and some money subscribed soon after his death to procure a suitable monument, but the project failed. For nearly two years the spot where he lay was unmarked when one morning it was discovered that a small, very substantial and not inexpensive monument of granite and marble had been placed during the night over his remains. No one in the town saw the monument erected or knew anything whatever respecting it. There was no stonecutter in the vicinity capable of executing the work. The stone bears the inscription: 'Aaron Burr. Born February 6, 1756. Died, September 14, 1836.'"—Philadelphia Press.

The Presidential Salute.

One explanation of the reason for adopting twenty-one guns as the presidential salute is that there might be maintained a uniformity in national salutes, Great Britain having in the distant past adopted twenty-one as the number for the royal salute. Of the many surmises as to why the number twenty-one was settled upon we mention two—first, that twenty-one was the number of years fixed by English law as the age of majority; second that seven was the original salute and three times seven would signify one seven for each of the divisions, England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland. It is asserted that the United States adopted this salute to signify to the mother country that her child had reached his majority and was prepared in law to inherit the land and to this end fired the "gun of 1776," the figures of which year, 1+7+7+6, equal 21.—Philadelphia Press.

Underground Hotels.

An extraordinary hotel is that in the sewers of Paris, immediately below the Church of St. Madeleine. It was built and is conducted solely for the benefit of the sewer workers. Nearly a hundred meals are provided every day, and for the sum of $2 a man can be comfortably housed and fed for a week in this gigantic drainpipe.

Very similar is the hotel which offers for visitors to the coal mine of St. Pierre at Mons. It is to be found at the bottom of the mine, 600 feet below the earth, and is carved out of solid coal. The electric light on the glittering black walls, which have been left unpapered, is extremely effective. Large reception and bedrooms splendidly fitted up are provided, and the hotel even boasts the luxury of a swimming bath.

Mark Twain as "Attraction."

A girl who was a stranger to Mark Twain once found her way into his Bermuda home with the hope of getting a sight of the author. She came suddenly in contact with him and frankly explained her errand.

"Have you seen the crystal cave yet," he asked, "or the aquarium?"

"No; I came to see you first," she answered.

"Well, you shouldn't have seen me first," he answered. "I run in opposition to the crystal and the aquarium. But they're not shucks to me. I'm lots better. I give them their money's worth. But you should see them. Then you'll appreciate me."

This was said in his most earnest drawl and with only a sparkle of humor in his keen blue eyes.—Chicago Tribune.

Change.

Old Lady (in drug store)—Boy, can you change a dollar bill? Boy—Yes, ma'am. How'll you have it—in quinine pills or cough drops?—Exchange.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors. Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

To be wise we must first learn to be happy.—Maeterlinck.

A Comparison.

In a school at Washington a boy was asked to compare the word "sick."

The little fellow arose in his place, looked around him for a moment, his face a picture of deep thought, and then he said:

"Sick, worse, dead."—Los Angeles Times.

Easily Managed.

First Girl—I mean to be engaged when I'm nineteen. Second Girl—But supposing you can't manage it? First Girl—Then I shall remain nineteen until I am engaged.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS
FOR Headache
FOR NEURALGIA
SCIATICA.
RHEUMATISM.
BACKACHE.
PAIN IN CHEST.
DISTRESS IN STOMACH.
SLEEPLESSNESS.
TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.
DR. MILES' Anti-Pain Pills
If you have Headache Try One
They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects
25 Doses 25 Cents
Never Sold in Bulk.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

The best and cheapest place to buy your spring and summer shoes is at Singer Bros.

If you need your horses shod, call on the Kratka blacksmith, and get them shod right.

Ljot Sigurdson and Olaf Sunsdahl drove over to Winsor in Clearwater County, yesterday.

There was a large attendance at the church near Tobias Olsen last Sunday.

There was a large attendance at the Farmers' Club meeting at Anthony Dannacker's on Sunday last.

Charles Swansen, of Deer Park made a business trip to Thief River Falls and Grand Forks this week.

Joe Johnson drove out out from Thief River Falls to fight the fires, so they would not enter his Star Township farm.

There was a very pleasant picnic held at the grove of James O'Brien on last Sunday. There was a large attendance.

The school term in this district commences on the first Monday in September, but as that is Labor Day there will not be any school until Tuesday, the 6th.

Martin Swanson came up from Thief River Falls, last night, with a load of goods for Andrew Ellingson. He came by the over land route.

The Gazette surely had some "hot stuff" on county division last week, but there are very few people in the northern part of the county that will ever hear about it.

T. S. Jacobson, Justice of the Peace, was a caller here yesterday, looking up the fire law and preparing to make some arrests on the complaint of State Fire Warden Johnson.

There has been a state fire warden out looking after extinguishing the fires north east of here; but the fire does not seem to recognize his authority and keeps right on doing business.

Olaf Sunsdahl, of Erie, lost all of his hay and his barn by prairie fire last week. He plowed around his barn and hay; but the fire burned up the plowed sods, hay, and barn and came very near burning his house.

Mrs. Mat Erickson, of Highlanding, died from paralysis on Wednesday morning. This was the second attack of the disease, she having had a slight attack a few years ago, from which she recovered. She leaves a husband and four small children to mourn her loss. The remains were taken to Thief River Falls for burial, today.

Walter McAndress finished his wheat and oats stacking Tuesday. The wheat looks to be a very fair crop of fine quality of wheat; but it is strange how it could have amounted to anything in view of the fact that you see the marks of the harrow, where the field was given its last harrowing last spring, as there has not been enough rain this season to wash them out. Surely this country can stand drouth.

William Hern with a big crew of drivers went up the river, Wednesday, to bring down the last drive of the season for the Thief River Falls Lumber Company. This will be a big drive and as the water is very low it will require a large crew of men to push the logs along. The lumber company can not have any complaint against the Red Lake River, as it usually has plenty of water to carry the logs down without much help.

M. E. Hyland, went to Thief River Falls yesterday to take Miss Ashbarner down to the hospital for medical treatment.

Walt McAndrass drove down to St. Hilaire to-day to visit his brother, Mike McAndress who is quite seriously ill.

A. D. Brown, of Neptune, was transacting business at Highlanding and improved the opportunity to give his subscription to THE SUNBEAM a boost yesterday.

Mike Holakt, of Deer Park, passed here this morning on his way to Kratka to get his plows repaired, so as to be ready for fall plowing.

Fire Warden Johnson will not accept as an excuse, "I did not think the fire would run," nor does he expect to have absolute proof before making an arrest, but will promptly take anyone into custody who is suspected of setting out fires.

D. P. O'Neil, of Thief River Falls, is asking you for your support for his election as representative in another column of this paper. We understand that he is going to start in on a vigorous campaign as soon he has finished his stacking.

After The Fire-bugs.

State Fire Warden Johnson has been spending the entire week in north of Highlanding trying to get the prairie fire, which has been raging north east of there, put out. He has ordered several of the farmers out to assist him and he is now trying to head the fire off at the range line between 39 and 40.

He was after the dredgers for failure to put a spark arrester on their engines and he is also keeping a sharp lookout for fire setters. Some arrests are likely to be made, as he is determined to follow up, catch and vigorously prosecute any one that is even suspected of having set a fire and allowed it to escape. The Red Lake Falls Gazette says that there are only six in the county jail, so there must be room for more.

Directors Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that there will be a meeting of the board of directors of the Red Lake River Transportation Co., at the store of Andrew Ellingson at Highlanding, on Monday, September 5th, at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. All directors are requested to be present.

A. D. Brown,
President.

We Have One in The 61st.

The Tribune-Herald, published at Chisholm, Minn., makes the remark:

"Some fellow who imagines he is running for the legislature in the 52nd legislative district has sent this office a statement of what he hopes to accomphish next winter. The author of the pamphlet shows eminent fitness for jury duty but he has no more business in the legislature than a skunk at an ice cream sociable."

We have a duck of the same caliber, who thinks he is running for senator in this, the 61st district; but our man has been in the senate once and the people are now "dead next" to his patent platform of promises and his failure of accomplishments.

County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican Nomination for County Treasurer of Red Lake County and respectfully solicit the support and votes of all who believe I will, if nominated and elected, run the office in an honest, effecient and economical manner. If elected I hereby pledge that I will run the office, to the best of my ability in an impartial, honest and businesslike manner.

At the Republican Primaries Sept. 20 1910.

Harry E. Ives.

Benefits of Music.

"Do you believe that music prevents crime?"

"To a certain extent," replied Mr. Sinnick. "When a man keeps both hands and his breath busy with a cornet you know he can't be picking pockets, attempting homicide or slandering his neighbors." Washington Star.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2.50 EVERY DAY SUITS UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.-- SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.

Leaving a Man Helpless.

"That statement made me think," said a veteran newspaper man to the Cincinnati Times-Star, "of the celebrated row between President Cleveland's colored man and Secretary Hoke Smith's colored man. The two were exercising their masters' horses out on a country road and got into a dispute as to what is the best thing in the world. Finally they made a bet of a dollar on it.

"'Well, what is de bes' thing in the world?' asked Cleveland's man.

"'Roas' possum and sweet taters,' said Hoke Smith's moke.

"'Whoa!' says Cleveland's man, dragging at the bridle. He jumped to the ground, seized Hoke Smith's man by the leg and dragged him to the dust.

"'Take that,' says he, lamming him on the neck, 'you miserable black rascal! You ain't leave me nuffin' to guess at!'"

A Tale of Heroism.

"I went for a bath yesterday," said an Auvergnat. "I had been in the water some time when I suddenly perceived an enormous shark advancing toward me with its jaws open. What was I to do? When he was a yard off I dived, took out my pocketknife and ripped up the monster."

"What! Then you are in the habit of bathing with your clothes on," said one of the listeners.—From the French.

Perplexing.

Territorial this first experience as sentry, going over his instructions—If any one comes along I say: "Halt! Who goes there?" Then he says, "Friend," and I say, "Pass, friend; all's well." But some silly ass'll say, "Enemy," and then I shan't know what to do. Rotten job, I call it.—Punch.

Liquidizing.

"Dry work this speechmaking."

"Well, I've drunk in every word you've said."

"Ah! Making a draft of my speech?" —Lippincott's.

A Pioneer Shipment.

The first shipment of wheat from Chicago via the lakes was made in 1838. The shipment consisted of seventy-eight bushels.

The Air Brake.

To forget the inventions of the hour is an impossibility. They are before one at every turn, and many of them contain potentialities vast and much discussed. For that very reason it is well occasionally to contemplate some invention of the past which works unremittingly and inconspicuously for the welfare of mankind. Consider the air brake. How many when they take a journey by rail ever take thought of the device which stands ready to insure safety from possible accidents? All are so used to sibilant noise below the cars that they never consider its portentousness. Yet by this application of the power of compressed air tens of thousands of lives have been preserved and railroad travel has been made more expeditious. All this is arrant truism; not a word of it but what has been said scores of times before. But we like to dwell upon the air brake as one of those typical inventions which are doing their work faithfully and humbly while recent creations get the glory and applause.—Collier's.

Hongkong the Luxurious.

Hongkong, with its luxurious hotels, its princely clubs, its rich and influential banks, housed in splendidly constructed and beautifully designed buildings; its shipyards and graving docks able to care for the largest vessels; its miles of warehouses bursting with wealth; its yellow sailed fleets laden with silks, tea, sugar and precious porcelains; its commerce almost as great as that of New York; its botanic gardens hung amid delightful villas overlooking a harbor that is a city in itself and that floats 10,000 sails; Hongkong, with its wonderful temples of ornate teak roofs, its idols of a hundred sects, its French cathedral, its forts, garrison and naval life, its Happy Valley race course—all at the end of white man's civilization. Supreme from the peak on which it rests, in well bred aloofness it looks askance at sordid Asia, whence it sprung.—W. J. Aylward in Harper's Magazine.

Just Talking.

Stella—I hear that Lizzie is talking of getting married again. Bella—I didn't know that she had been married once yet. Stella—She isn't. I said she was talking of it again.

How "Thon" Would Work.

"Thon" is the word which has been suggested for use as an English pronoun of common gender, a luxury which the English language has thus far had the fortitude to forego. It was considered suitable for English because it came from the Greek. Its use may be illustrated as follows:

If a parent desires to spank thon's (his or her, as the case may be) child thon (he or she) should take thon (him, her or it) across thon's knee. Then thon should remove thon's slipper, and after explaining to the child the reprehensibility of thon's conduct thon should apply the slipper to that portion of thon's anatomy which from time immemorial has been dedicated to that purpose.

It may easily be seen from the above how "thon" effects great clarification.—Lippincott's.

In Praise of the Eskimos.

Commander Peary in the narrative describing his discovery of the north pole devotes a very long chapter to the Eskimos, with whom he has had intimate dealings for eighteen years. He tells us that though they are savages they are not savage; that though they are without government they are not lawless; that though they are uneducated they exhibit a remarkable degree of intelligence. He assures us that they have no religion, yet he describes them as destitute of vice and ready to share their last meal with the hungry. He thinks it would be impossible to Christianize them, but they already possess the cardinal graces of faith, hope and charity, for "without them they could never survive the six months' night and the other rigors of their home."

Warned.

"She told me that I might hope."

"Better look out! I've known girls to say that when they intended to accept a chap."—Puck.

The Cavity.

Cholly—The dentist told me I had a large cavity that needed filling. Ethel—Did he recommend any special course of study?

Diversity of opinion proves that things are only what we think them.—Montaigne.

THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds. Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US. J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS, THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt.
Notary Public
ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money, To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell it.

Hover O. Follkedahl,
Highlanding Minn

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

[illegible]

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY,
Judges.

The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

THE GRAND PRIZE (the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

GET THE LATEST AND BEST

You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., PUBLISHERS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The "Redgeton" SEWING MACHINE.
ROLLER BEARING, HIGH GRADE.

Automatic Lift.

Save Money by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

National Sewing Machine Co. BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Wits and Wireless

By M. J. Phillips

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"I am going to marry Nellie Armstrong," announced Harry Leclair.

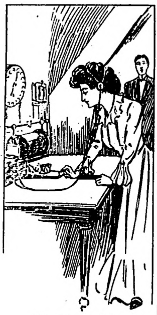
He looked just as his name sounds: he was handsome, with a very distinguished profile, large dark eyes and a well set up figure. But his fingers were much stained with nicotine from too many cigarettes. He dressed gracefully, devoting considerable time to his clothes—principally because he did nothing else.

"Are you?" queried Paul Schmitz, quietly and unbelievingly.

Schmitz was a civil engineer, whose rugged face, capable hands, rough clothing and high-laced boots indicated considerable familiarity with hard work and hard knocks. "Does she know it yet, Harry?"

Leclair, being a consummate egoist with no sense of humor, never knew he was being laughed at, and now he looked at Schmitz suspiciously. But the big man who was striding along beside him was very grave.

"Well, no," confessed Leclair, satisfied with his scrutiny. "But I'm going to ask her—maybe tonight. You see, I've had my fling, and I'm ready to settle down. I'm twenty-five; it's time for me to be getting a home of my own. And Nellie is the girl I've decided on."



The Reply Was Brief.

"You'll live with your mother, same as ever, I take it?" said Schmitz, bluntly.

Again Leclair shot him a distrustful glance. "Ye-es, I suppose so," he admitted, reluctantly. "Mother'd be in that big house all alone. Or else—"

"You'd live with your wife's folks," finished Schmitz.

"That question can be easily settled after we're married," replied Leclair, stiffly.

Schmitz always had exasperated him. They had grown up together and the "square-head," as he had privately termed Schmitz, refused to treat him with deference. Schmitz would not be dazzled by the fact that his old playmate was the village Beau Brummel—"Handsome Harry," his friends called him. To Schmitz he was still a worthless, lazy youngster, content to drift along, living on his mother's slender income.

"Anyway, I thought I'd let you know," Leclair said, with the slightest possible accent on the personal pronoun. He knew that Schmitz was interested—deeply so—in Nellie Armstrong. But in the calm sureness of better looks and more polished manners he had never given the engineer serious thought as a rival.

And yet his heart misgave him when he turned in at his own gate. How embarrassing his position would be had he overestimated his facinations! Or suppose Schmitz, warned by his foolish boastfulness, were to propose first!

"You told Paul you were going to ask Nellie to marry you?" echoed his mother, fretfully, as they sat down to supper. She had once been handsome, but bitter discontent had marred her features. "Why, Harry, I think you'd have better sense! You know how friendly they've been ever since the three of you were children!"

"But it was only friendliness," urged the youth. "He hasn't been near her home for a week!"

"He's always talking with her over the wireless," retorted the mother, her fretfulness increasing. "First he built that machine in his own house; then he rigged one up for Fred Armstrong, and taught him how to work it. Next, of course, Nellie learned it. They talk with it every evening. You'll let that girl and all her money slip through your fingers, as you've let every other chance slip, you lazy good-for-nothing."

"Hush!" commanded her son, with a frown. "Let them talk over the wireless! I'll end all that. Tonight he'll be a mile away, and I'll be there, beside her. Do you see?"

He spoke so confidently that Mrs. Leclair unwillingly was mollified.

Leclair dressed himself that evening with a good deal of care. But he hurried as much as possible, for he had been impressed in spite of himself by his mother's prophecy. The sun was just setting when he left his own home and turned toward the Armstrong residence.

His fears of Schmitz had been in vain, after all, he decided. When he passed the engineer's home, the fellow was sitting on the porch, enjoying an evening smoke. From a tall flagpole on the lawn to another pole on the highest point of the house the wireless antennae were strung. "If he hopes to gain any advantage over me with that rigging," thought Leclair, triumphant and contemptuous, "he's badly fooled." He dwadled comfortably along the way. When the wireless rigging at the Armstrong place came in sight, he smiled almost pityingly.

"Nellie is in the wireless room," said Mrs. Armstrong when Leclair inquired for her.

He knew the way to it, and passed into the house, up the broad stairs to the second story and thence up another stairway to the attic.

The big room, cut into queer sloping angles by the roof and lighted by dormer windows, was an attractive apartment. Especially was it attractive when graced by the presence of Nellie Armstrong. She was standing, a slender, girlish figure in white, at the wireless instrument which took up one end of the attic. The receiving apparatus was strapped over her fair hair. So intently was she listening to a message that she seemed not to notice Leclair's coming.

Presently she reached forward and began opening the key. Obedient to the trained pressure, the big spark leaped back and forth between the poles, snapping and crackling as it did so.

The reply was brief. When it was finished, the girl, with a gesture indescribably joyous and light-hearted, removed the receiver and turned to Leclair. The young man had never seen her more beautiful, and his heart beat quickly as he started forward, in tune to her mood. Her cheeks were flushed, her lips parted with a smile, and her eyes shone like stars.

Unconsciously she gave him both her hands and Leclair's brain swam with an intoxicating sense of victory. The proposal which he had secretly feared was going to be easy, after all. She was making it easy.

"Oh, Harry," she said, giving his hands a little shake, "I'm so happy! And you've always been a friend, so you shall be the first to know!"

Leclair's brain steadied suddenly as though he had been drenched with a bucket of water; his bounding heart sank forebodingly. He looked at her searchingly. "What is it?" he managed to ask at last, with dry lips.

The girl had noticed that a change had come into his manner, but she was too engrossed in what the wireless had told to see its true significance. Her head dropped shyly, and the color in her cheeks deepened.

"Paul has asked me to marry him," she said softly. "And I told him yes. Wasn't it clever of him to—to ask by wireless? Why, you aren't going?" as Leclair turned away. "Wait; Paul is coming right over."

"I can't" said Leclair, lifelessly. "I just dropped in for a minute to say good-by. I'm leaving town tomorrow."

Chamberlain's Resemblance to Pitt.

One of Sir Benjamin Stone's more frequent sitters has been Mr. Chamberlain, who, once speaking of his own portrait, said: "It has been remarked that I bear a resemblance to Pitt. I am afraid that my testimony to this resemblance would have little value. But if it could be alleged that any likeness existed between that great statesman, not bodily or mentally, but in his aspirations in his desire to be of use to his country, then I should be proud indeed." Perhaps the last photograph ever taken of Mr. Chamberlain was that by Sir Benjamin at the notable fetes in Birmingham to celebrate the great statesman's seventieth birthday. At the house of commons Mr. Chamberlain was ever ready to help his colleague, and on one occasion volunteered to go and hunt up the reluctant Michael Davitt and bring him to the spot for the purpose.—Strand Magazine.

Ancient Rug Weavers.

More than three thousand years ago, as tiles and marbles from Nineveh show, splendid fabrics were being produced for the adornment of the palaces of the kings of Assyria, and every oriental rug becomes a magic carpet when one realizes how through the long days of the long centuries these simple people have been weaving in with the colors of the jewel and the rainbow the sunshine of their own lives. How much of romance and happiness, how much of tears and sighing, have gone to the tying of the myriad knots or followed the flying shuttle on its journey to and fro!—New York Press.

Gives Motor Boat Instruction.

A school devoted exclusively to the study of motor boats has been started at New York.

HOW PURTELL GOT HIS START

Clever Little Third Baseman Says Its Hard to Play Ball but Harder to Sit on Bench.

(By WILLIAM PURTELL.)

My father was a ball player and I think he always wanted his boys to play the game professionally. He was an infielder and in his time one of the best and fastest men in the game. He played at Syracuse and with other eastern teams, but retired from baseball while still young, because he could make more money in other ways. The love of the game still was strong in him, and even up to the present time he is hard to beat.

I think he meant one of his boys to be a player, and when we were little fellows he used to take us into the yard and coach us and teach us the game, as it should be played.

I started playing with kid teams around Columbus, Ohio, my home, and then with the high school team. At night after a game I would talk the plays over with father and ask his advice as to how the plays ought to have been made. In this way I learned a lot and also became known among the fellows, because I could tell them things about the game. I pitched and played third for the high school team. I was scarcely more than a "kid" when I went to Decatur as a third baseman, or short stop. I did pretty well there and was much pleased when Columbus wanted me, as I hoped to play ball at home, where I could see the people and be patted on the back.

player is a pretty tough one for a kid starting out, and there were lots of bitter nights for me then, when I wanted to quit and run home. It was rough experience especially for a boy who has been praised and applauded in a school team, but it was valuable to me because it taught me the game and made me fight.

I did not stay in the minors long. Twice Columbus called me back and sent me away again, and then Chicago bought me and put me on bench duty. If playing ball is hard, playing on the bench is harder. I had a lot of that bench work, fretting my heart out because I couldn't be in there playing the game and longing for a chance to show them I could make good. They shifted me around in positions, too, which made it harder. One thing I learned was to jump in, do the best I could, obey orders and not make excuses no matter what happened. I was playing with older and much more experienced men, and I watched them and tried to learn from them. I found I could learn even from the worst of them something that might help me.

Billy Purtell.

I was nearly killed by a pitched ball, and for a time it shook all the nerve out of me. I determined to fight it out, and after a time was surprised to find myself less afraid than ever, and more determined.

NEW CURVE BRINGS SUCCESS

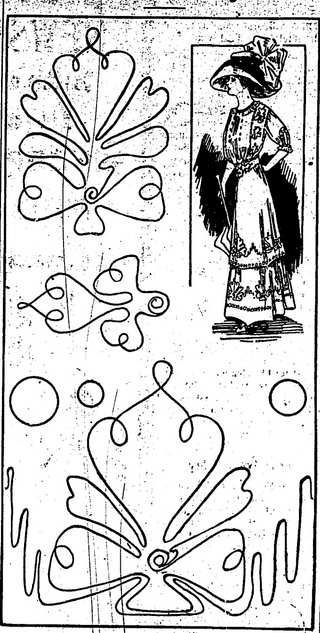
Wonderful Achievements of Russell Ford of Highlanders Due to Spitball Curve.

The wonderful success of Russell Ford, the star pitcher of the Highlanders, is due principally to development of a freak spitball curve. Lajoie was unable to find it the other day and did not get a single drive off the young architect. The regular spitball is thrown by covering the tips of the first and second fingers with saliva so that the ball will slip off those fingers and not take a rotary motion. The ball, therefore, gets its direction from the thumb and wabbles to the plate in a peculiar, jerky fashion. The only trouble with that curve is the inability of the pitcher to make it break "in" or "out" to the batter according to the wishes of the twirler. Ford has solved that problem by inventing a way of making the curve break in. Ford found that by moistening the knuckle of his third finger with saliva that the ball would slip off from the side instead of the tips of the fingers, and as there was no friction on the right side of the ball it would gradually drop "inside" of the plate. He controls it perfectly. He can also make the ball break outward by moistening the thumb.

Buffalo Team Crippled.

These are the handicaps under which the Buffalo team is laboring: George Merritt, broken right arm; Charles Starr, broken bone in right hand; Edward Sabrie, twisted ankle; Catcher Williams, two broken fingers.

In Embroidery



One of the favorite models for the summer gown is the smart linen affair braided or embroidered in white or a color. Usually the linens of a delicate shade have white braiding, and the effect is delightfully cool and summery. White linens, in accordance with the latest fancy, are done in a colored braid, and one of the most striking combinations is white with dark blue braiding, giving something of the Bulgarian peasant effect—and, of course, anything along the peasant costume lines is the ultra chic note this season.

These little braided frocks are ideal for the home dressmaker, as the cut of the gown itself is the simplest thing possible—the irregularity of the design demanding a very plain background to make a harmonious whole.

Therefore, any woman clever enough to make her own simple frocks can have a really charming creation by adding a little handwork.

The gown sketched is a French model whose lines are especially graceful and becoming. The original gown was of rose color linen, braided in the finest white cotton braid, with a dainty white frill at the neck and sleeves, and the hallmark of a Paris gown—that chic touch of black—at the neck. Tiny gold buttons finish the blouse at either side of the cluster of tucks on the front of the corsage, and are put on with fasteners so as to be easily removed for laundering.

The same design might be carried out in any colored fabrics and braid, to suit the fancy. Of course the most becoming shade should be selected.

The design in the upper left hand corner is for the shoulder pieces, which may be braided and then put on the gown.

The smallest of the three dots in the centre of the cut are for the edge of these straps, and are to be embroidered in mercerized cotton thread to match the braid. The same dot is used for the band on the edge of the sleeve, while the sleeve is trimmed with a row of the middle-sized dot, and this latter size is also used on the belt. The largest dot is for the skirt.

The small design is for the belt, one motif being placed on each side of the front, close together. The large design is for the skirt, placed as indicated in the sketch.

Transfer the design to the linen by means of carbon paper. The design is applied after the gown is carefully fitted and all seams and hems finished.

It does not take so long to braid a gown of this sort as one might at first imagine, and the result is well worth the effort.

WATCH FOB EASY TO MAKE

Remnants of Irish or Cluny Insertion Can Be Utilized for Its Construction.

The girl who is deft should make herself one of the new watch fobs of heavy lace that are dainty to wear with lingerie frocks. Remnants of Irish or Cluny insertion can be utilized.

The strips of insertion are folded over the gold, gilt or brass catch for watch and the end is pointed and finished in a white silk tassel, or if you have a military friend with one of gold strands such as are worn on swords. Thin lace fobs are lined with white or colored ribbon.

A small oval buckle is possessed by many girls from hat trimmings, or they can be bought very cheaply in gilt or colored enamels to match belt and stockings.

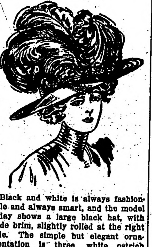
Ismit Embroidery.

Sounds like "kismet," but it isn't fate—simply reaction. Ismit embroidery, rapidly becoming very popular indeed for summer fancy work, is nothing more or less than the other side of the once fashionable shadow stitch. In other words, in working on sheer materials, make your shadow embroidery inside out, and behold the ismit stitch seemingly straight from the orient.

Eyelet Embroidery.

Centerpieces, waists, skirts, etc., done in eyelet embroidery often look drawn and pinched after washing. To cure this, punch the eyelets through with your embroidery stiletto after every laundering. The effect will be as good as new.

IN BLACK AND WHITE



Black and white is always fashionable and always smart, and the model today shows a large black hat, with wide brim, slightly rolled at the right side. The simple but elegant ornamentation is three white ostrich plumes.

Lace Over Gold.

An original idea is the sewing or crocheting of fine lace very tightly over large gold collar pins of plain pattern. The suggestion may be extended to all sorts of flat gold or silver jewelry, such as belt buckles, hatpins, etc. It would be very pretty, too, in an open pattern over the popular hand-painted china pins. An inexpensive set of pins may by this method be turned into very valuable and beautiful things.

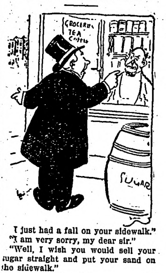
Cypress green, pewter graw and a delicate fawn shade are soft tints that are popular.

MUNYON'S
PAW-PAW
LIVER PILLS

I want any person who suffers with biliousness, constipation, indigestion or any liver or blood ailment, to try my Paw-Paw Liver Pills. I guarantee they will purify the blood and put the liver and stomach into a healthful condition and will positively cure biliousness and constipation, or I will refund your money.—Munyon's Homeopathic Home Remedy Co., 53rd and Jefferson Sts., Phila., Pa.

TRY MURINE EYE REMEDY
For Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes and
GRANULATED EYELIDS
Murine Doesn't Smart—Soothes Eye Pain
Druggists Sell Murine Eye Remedy, Liquid, 25c, 50c, $1.00
Murine Eye Salve, in Aseptic Tubes, 25c, $1.00
EYE BOOKS AND ADVICE FREE BY MAIL
Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

HEARD IN A GROCERY STORY.



I just had a fall on your sidewalk."

"I am very sorry, my dear sir."

"Well, I wish you would sell your sugar straight and put your sand on the sidewalk."

Selfish Youth.

"Youth is apt to be selfish," said Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins-Freeman, the distinguished novelist, at a Matuchen picnic.

"Woman in her youth," she went on, "is especially apt to be selfish. I'll never forget the story of the young man from Boston who stood in the center of Boston common in a downpour of torrential rain.

"As he stood there, soaked to the skin, a little boy in a mackintosh accosted him.

"'Excuse me, sir,' said the boy, 'but are you the gentleman who is waiting for Miss Endicott?'

"'Yes,' the young man answered.

"'Well,' said the boy, 'she asked me to tell you she'd be here just as soon as it clears up.'"

Tuberculosis in the Prisons.

The fact that 100.000 prisoners are discharged from the jails and prisons of the country annually, and that from 10 to 15 per cent. of them have tuberculosis, makes the problem of providing special places for their treatment while they are confined a serious one. So important is the problem that the Prison association of New York in cooperation with the State Charities Aid association, is preparing to inaugurate a special campaign for the prevention of tuberculosis in the penal institutions of the state, and will seek to enlist the co-operation of all prison physicians and antituberculosis societies in this work.

In the Suburb.

"What beautiful public building is that?"

"That isn't a public building. It's old man Savitt's summer cottage."

"And whose neat little cottage is that over there with the tower on it? That little one-story frame affair."

"That isn't a cottage. It's the First Episcopal church."—Life.

Cut Out
Breakfast
Cooking

Easy to start the day cool and comfortable if

Post
Toasties

are in the pantry ready to serve right from the package. No cooking required; just add some cream and a little sugar.

Especially pleasing these summer mornings with berries or fresh fruit.

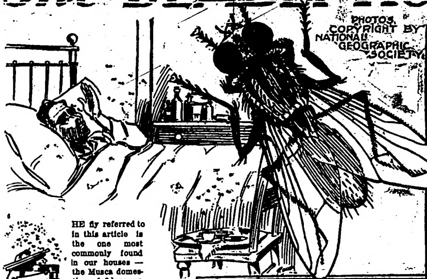
One can feel cool in hot weather on proper food.

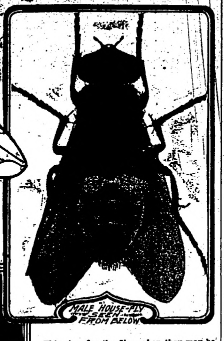
"The Memory Lingers"

POSTUM CEREAL CO., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

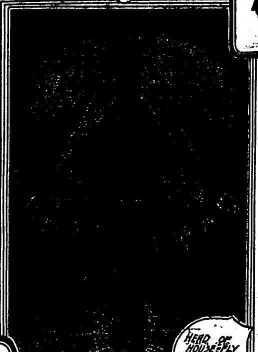
The DEADLY HOUSE-FLY

PHOTOS COPYRIGHT BY NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY





MALE HOUSE-FLY SEEN FROM BELOW



HEAD OF HOUSE-FLY SHOWING COMPOUND EYES

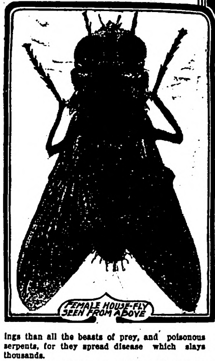
THE fly referred to in this article is the one most commonly found in our houses — the Musca domestica of Linnaeus.

Speaking broadly, man has made the house-fly; it has developed along with the human dwelling. If we had no closed-in dwelling places it is doubtful if the house-fly, as at present constituted, could continue to exist. It thrives simply because we afford it food, protection and breeding places.

The house-fly at first is only a little worm, wriggling his tiny grub-like form in some incubating pile of filth, usually the manure pile, the outhouse, or the mound of rubbish, or garbage in the back yard. In this condition he is easily killed, and it should be the duty of every person to kill him now. The house-fly could not exist if everything were kept perfectly clean and sanitary. Exterminate the fly-worms, do away with its breeding places, and there will be no flies.

The common house-fly is coming to be known as the "typhoid fly," and when the term becomes universal greater care will be exercised in protecting the house from his presence.

Files swallow the germs of typhoid in countless millions while feeding on the excreta of typhoid patients. As a result they spread a thousand times more typhoid germs in their excreta than on their feet.



FEMALE HOUSE-FLY SEEN FROM ABOVE

Flies kill a greater number of human beings than all the beasts of prey, and poisonous serpents, for they spread disease which slays thousands.

As soon as the fly comes out of his shell he is full grown and starts out in the world to make a living and if your home is not clean he knows it, for the fly can discern an unclean odor for miles.

As much as they like odors of filth they dislike clean smells, and where the former will attract, the latter will repulse them. A pleasant-smelling substance—the fragrance of flowers, geraniums, mignonette, lavender, or any perfumery—will drive them away.

Most of our diseases are caused by invisible germs that lodge and grow in our bodies, destroying our tissues or poisoning us with their excreta. These germs may be brought to us from some sick person by whatever is large enough to carry them, and has the opportunity. Combine this fact with what every one knows about flies, and we see at once the tremendous importance of flies as carriers of human disease germs.

Look closely at the picture of the fly resting on the glass and viewed from below. Look at the feet and observe that each of them is equipped with two claws and two light-colored pads. The fly clings to rough surfaces by means of the claws and to smooth surfaces by a combined action of the claws and pads. The fly's pads are covered with thousands of minute short hairs, sticky at the end. There is no suction—merely adhesion.

All his grown-up life the fly has to manage with sticky feet. Imagine our plight if the soles of our feet were sticking plaster, perennially renewing its stickiness!

To such inconvenience the fly is constantly subject, and it is this that has bred into him the habit of frequently preening himself, particularly his feet. These are constantly becoming clogged with adhering substances, and this contamination the fly must assiduously remove if his feet are to act properly in supporting him on slippery places. If this contamination is too sticky to rub off the fly laps it off, and it then passes off in his excreta.

The fly lays her eggs in the manure pile or other objectionable filth. All the germs—all the imaginable microbes—fasten themselves on the spongy feet. He brings them into the house and wipes them off. The fly you see walking over the food you are about to eat is covered with filth and germs. If there is any dirt in your house or about your premises, or those of your neighbors, he has just come from it. Watch him as he stands on the sugar industriously wiping his feet. He is getting rid of disease germs, rubbing them on the sugar that you are going to eat, leaving the poison for you to swallow.

This does more to spread typhoid fever and cholera infantum and other intestinal diseases than any other cause.

Disease attacks human beings only when they are brought in contact with it. For instance, you cannot get typhoid fever unless you swallow the germs of typhoid, and you do not swallow these germs unless they get on the food you eat, or in the liquids you drink, or on the glasses or cups from which you drink.

Intestinal diseases are more frequent whenever and wherever flies are most abundant, and they, and not the summer heat, are the active agents of its spread.

There is special danger when flies drop into such fluid as milk. This forms an ideal culture material for the bacillus. A few germs washed from the body of one fly may develop into millions within a few hours, and the person who drinks such milk will receive large doses of bacilli, which may later cause serious sickness.

Here are some valuable fly "dont's" for the housewife:

Don't allow flies in your house.

Don't allow your fruits and confections to be exposed to the swarms of flies.

Don't let flies crawl over the baby's mouth and swarm upon the nipple of its nursing bottle.

Strike at the root of the evil. Dispose of waste materials in such a way that the house-fly cannot propagate, for flies breed in horse manure, decaying vegetables, dead animals, and all kinds of filth, so look after the garbage cans, see that they are cleaned, sprinkled with lime or kerosene oil, and closely covered.

Screen all windows and doors and insist that your grocer, butcher, baker and every one from whom you buy foodstuffs does the same, and remember that a large percentage of flies breed in the stable.

There is more health in a well-screened house than in many a doctor's visit.

After you have cleaned up your own premises, inspect the neighborhood for fly-breeding places. Call the attention of the owner to them and, if he does not remove them, complain to the board of health.

Keep flies away from the kitchen. Keep flies out of the dining room and away from the sick, especially from those ill with contagious diseases.

To clear rooms of flies, carbolic acid may be used as follows: Heat a shovel or any similar article and drop thereon 20 drops of carbolic acid. The vapor kills the flies.

A cheap and perfectly reliable fly poison, one which is not dangerous to human life, is bichromate of potash in solution. Dissolve one dram, which can be bought at any drug store, in two ounces of water, and add a little sugar. Put some of this solution in shallow dishes and distribute them about the house.

Sticky fly paper, traps and liquid poisons are among the things to use in killing flies, but the latest, cheapest, and best is a solution of formalin or formaldehyde in water. A spoonful of this liquid put into a quarter of a pint of water and exposed in the room will be enough to kill all the flies.

To quickly clear the room where there are many flies, burn pyrethrum powder in the room. This stupefies the flies, when they may be swept up and burned.

If there are flies in the dining room of your hotel, restaurant, or boarding house, complain to the proprietor that the premises are not clean.

The hookworm is undermining the vitality of a section, but the house fly threatens the health of the world.

Pest and plague and fever follow in its filthy footsteps. Its victims are legion.

The mosquito carries the germ of yellow fever. The sting of the tsetse fly infects with the numbing virus of the slow but certain sleeping sickness.

But the house fly carries on its sticky feet the potent poison of a dozen deaths.

The snake warns by hiss or rattle, and, in defense, strikes to kill, and then is to be shot or clubbed or ground beneath the boot heel. But the malicious, annoying fly, satellite of sickness, maker of cemeteries, deposits its slow poison and buzzes away, ever busy, never still, always on its errand of distributing the venom of embryo disease.

It wasn't so long ago that the house fly was neither known nor understood. Screens were considered a luxury, not a necessity; a matter of comfort, not a contribution to health.

But that is not the case now. The fly has been studied, its habits noted, its germ-laden body inspected through the microscope and photographed. Bacteriologists, scientists, physicians know the house fly as it really is. They realise that incontrovertible proof has demonstrated that flies kill a greater number of human beings every year than all the beasts of prey and all the poisonous crawling things that live.

And it is the consensus of opinion that a campaign of education is essential to bring the general public to an appreciation of the truth.

These facts are known to every scientist. What is being done now is to carry these facts home to every householder, every person who eats in restaurants and lunchrooms and to every mother who watches her baby with an eye to warding off every possible danger. There is a great campaign being waged against the fly—"typhoid fly," as it is called, and Washington is the center of the campaign.

The war is being stirred up and urged by Richard B. Watrous, secretary of the American Civic association, which has covered the country with posters, circulars, booklets and even has taken up the moving picture film as a weapon against the pest and a method of popular instruction. The association pamphlets are simple and to the point. When one reads the four pages of fly literature, a deep disgust for the buzzing things is born, and another soldier in the anti-fly army has been drafted.

The accompanying photographs, magnified many thousand times, and more just as interesting, were made by Dr. N. A. Cobbs with a specially invented camera for the National Geographic society. Dr. Cobbs is making a special study of the nation's pest, as are other leading bacteriologists and scientists who have come to realize the importance of the work.

One of the odd things in connection with the campaign of education that is being conducted in many cities is the fact that the unpleasantness of the flies' habits has caused many a person to cease the description of the fly life and enter a sort of silent war. However, some cities and associations have issued enormous posters portraying the daily life of a fly. It is pretty bad. Several women have objected to seeing the posters, although it has been proven to them that the pictures are not overdrawn.

Moving picture films, showing the life and habits of the fly, have been shown in some of the large cities. These films were taken across the United States and shown in hundreds of cheap theaters and have been considered of great value in disseminating knowledge of just what the fly is and how much death and disease he can introduce into a house. In one of the cities protests were received from some rather delicately sensed ladies and the mayor ordered the films off the boards.

The chairman of that state board of health asked the reason and was told that protests were made. He then asked for the names of some of the protesting women.

He called on several, and learned that their feelings had been outraged by witnessing the daily life of a nasty fly, and they believed that the sight was too nauseating for the public.

Thereupon the state officer took the ladies out into their own back yards and kitchens and in more than one instance showed them where the fly was doing the same thing in real life that the moving films told of, and by that sort of work introduced some real war to Mr. Fly.

In every city bulletins are being issued showing how flies may be killed by the wholesale.

Two Seaside Views.

The Sentimental One—The beautiful beach was covered with shells this morning.

The Practical One—Yes; it's a shame to allow 'em to eat peanuts down there.—Yonkers Statesman.

NATURE'S SIGNALS.

The first indication of kidney disorder, is often backache. Then comes pain in the hips and sides, lameness, soreness and urinary troubles. These are the warnings—nature's signals for help. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used at the first sign.

Mrs. W. R. Cody, 402 15th St., Lewiston, Idaho, says: "I had a bad case of dropsy and bloated 40 lbs. in weight. My ankles swelled and I had to wear shoes two sizes larger than usual. I was nervous, restless and much run down. After using Doan's Kidney Pills I came down to natural weight and my kidneys became normal."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

On Some Ministers.

The worst o' these here shepherds is, my boy, that they reg'larly turns the heads of all the young ladies about here. Lord bless their little hearts, they think it's all right, and don't know no better; but they're the wictims o' gammon, Samivel, they're the wictims o' gammon. Nothin' else, and wot aggragates me, Samivel, is to see 'em awastin' all their time and labor in making clothes for copper-colored people as don't want 'em and taking no notice of flesh-colored Christians as do. If I'd my way, Samivel, I'd just stick some o' these here lazy shepherds behind a heavy wheel-barrow, and run 'em up and down a 14-inch plank all day. That 'ud shake the nonsense out of 'em, if anythin' vould.—Mr. Weller, Quoted by Charles Dickens.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Answering for Him.

Physician—And would you like to be a doctor, Jack?

Mother (while Jack is still hesitating)—No. no! The dear boy couldn't kill a fly.—Punch.

When Rubbers Become Necessary

And your shoes pinch, shake into your shoes Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. Cures tired, aching feet and takes the sting out of Corns and Bunions. Always use it for Breaking in New shoes and for dancing parties. Sold everywhere 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Woman's inhumanity to man makes countless divorce lawyers happy.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Isn't is shocking when you hear a nice man complain of anything?

He Had No Eye for Color.

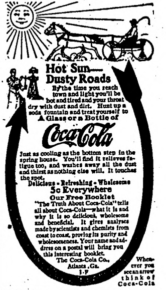
There came to the home of a Negro in Tennessee an addition to the family in the shape of triplets. The proud father hailed the first man who came along the road and asked him in to see them. The man, who was an Irishman, seemed greatly interested in the infants as he looked them over, lying in a row before him.

"What does yo' think?" asked the parent.

"Waul"—pointing to the one in the middle—"I think I'd save that one."—Everybody's Magazine.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules. Easy to take as candy.

And some people never appreciate a rose until they encounter the thorn.



Hot Sun—Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and dirt. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to A Glass or a Bottle of Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious - Refreshing - Wholesome

5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

1-F

Whenever you see an arrow think of Coca-Cola

DYSPEPSIA

"Having taken your wonderful 'Cascarets' for three months and being entirely cured of stomach catarrh and dyspepsia, I think a word of praise is due to 'Cascarets' for their wonderful composition. I have taken numerous other so-called remedies but without avail, and I find that Cascarets relieve more in a day than all the others I have taken would in a year." James McGune, 108 Mercer St., Jersey City, N. J.

Pleasant, Palatable, Potent, Taste Good. Do Good. Never Sicken, Weaken or Gripe. 10c, 25c, 50c. Never sold in bulk. The genuine tablet stamped CCC. Guaranteed to cure or your money back. 919

Northwestern Conservatory 40 Instructors 600 Students (26th Year, Opens Sept. 5, '10)

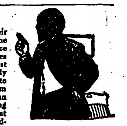
All branches of Music Art and Dramatic Art, Orchestral and Band Instruments. Normal Courses in Public School Music, Art, Piano, Physical Training, Domestic Science. Terms Reasonable. Catalog Free.

O. A. EVERS, Pres. Minneapolis, Minn.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., Minneapolis, No. 35–1910.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN



Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE
FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.

"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.

Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.

"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."

Yours truly, H. A. Wik.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.

"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."

Yours truly, Mrs. Richard Henry Ehinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.

"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."

Yours truly, Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.

Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910.

"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."

Yours truly, Geo. Paskewitz, Vesta, Minn.

Send for literature and ask the local Canadian Government Agents for Excursion Rates, best districts in which to locate, and when to go.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Block, Grand Forks, North Dakota
J. M. MAC LACHLAN, Box 116, Watertown, South Dakota
E. T. HOLMES, 315 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minnesota

MICA AXLE GREASE

Keeps the spindle bright and free from grit. Try a box. Sold by dealers everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

Federal Fish Farming

By HUGH M. SMITH
U.S. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIES

IT WAS nearly 40 years ago that the United States government first awoke to the necessity of conserving the aquatic resources of the country, and began those operations in behalf of fishes, fishermen and fish-eaters that have now attained such gigantic proportions.

Several of the states had already established their local fish commissions or boards when in 1871 congress took the initial step toward a national fishery service by the passage of a joint resolution creating the office of commissioner of fish and fisheries.

The early years of the bureau of fisheries were devoted to an investigation of the condition of the fisheries of the Atlantic coast, Great Lakes, and other sections; to studies of the interior and coastal waters and their inhabitants, and to exploration of the off-shore fishing banks. The cultivation of useful fishes was soon taken up throughout the country and quickly attained large proportions. The natural expansion of the work was materially augmented from time to time by acts of congress, and in a comparatively short time the operations came to have a very wide scope.

From year to year, as the importance of the work has become increasingly evident, additional hatcheries have been built, the capacity of existing hatcheries has been enlarged, the scale of the operations has been extended, and new kinds of fishes have been added to the output.

Today there is scarcely a phase of aquiculture, of the fishing industry, or of biological and physical science as connected with the waters, that does not come within the purview of the bureau.

It is conceived to be the better policy to expend a small amount of public money in making fish so abundant that they can be caught without restriction and serve as cheap food for the people at large, rather than to expend a much larger sum in preventing people from catching the few fish that still remain after generations of improvidence.

Public or government fish-culture in America exceeds in extent and importance that of all other countries combined. However, the neglect of some of the states to provide the minimum protection to certain species inhabiting interstate and international waters has not only negatived the fish-cultural work of the bureau and of the states themselves, but has practically inhibited it by preventing the possibility of securing an adequate supply of eggs, thus making desirable and necessary the placing of interstate and international waters under the jurisdiction of the general government.

At the end of the first ten years of the bureau's existence, the fishes that were being regularly cultivated were shad, carp, chinook salmon, Atlantic salmon, land-locked salmon, rainbow trout, brook trout and whitefish, in addition to which the propagation of several others had been undertaken experimentally. The list now is six times as long and the annual output is ten times the aggregate for the ten-year period ending in 1881.

The main energies are devoted to the important commercial fishes—shad, whitefish, lake trout, Pacific salmons, white perch, yellow perch, cod, flatfish and the lobster, which are hatched in lots of many millions annually. More widely popular, however, are the distributions of the fishes of the interior waters which are generally classed as game fishes. Although representing only about 10 per cent. of the output of the hatcheries, this feature of the work is very important, for it supplies choice kinds of fish for public rivers, lakes and ponds, and for fishing preserves and private ponds and streams in all parts of the United States. The fishes most in demand for these purposes are the land-locked salmon, the different species of trout, the grayling, the basses, the crapples, the sunfishes, and the catfishes, but various others also are handled.

Fish-cultural stations are established by special act of congress, and their location and construction are determined after a careful survey of the available sites in a given state. The usual buildings are the hatchery proper, a residence for the superintendent and his family, and necessary outbuildings. At some stations there may also be power house, foreman's or fish-culturist's dwelling, mess hall and stable.

The only permanent marine hatcheries are in Maine and Massachusetts, where the cod, pollock, flatfish, and lobsters are hatched in immense numbers. Other sea fishes that have in previous years been artificially propagated and may again come under the hand of the fish-culturist are the haddock, the scuppaug, the sheepshead, the sea bass, the mackerel, and the squeteague, some of which were hatched on the steamer Fish Hawk, in Chesapeake bay and Florida.

The fish-cultural work on the eastern coast streams was centered at six hatcheries and subhatcheries in 1909. At one of these the principal species handled is the Atlantic salmon, at four the shad, at three the yellow perch, at two the white perch, and at one the striped bass. In recent years the bureau has operated a shad hatchery on the Delaware river, and has detailed the steamer Fish Hawk for shad hatching in Maine, New Jersey, North Carolina and Florida. The central station, in Washington, is operated largely for experimental and exhibition purposes.

In order to counteract the effects of the very exhausting fisheries of the Great Lakes, the government has maintained hatcheries for many years, and now operates six belonging to the United States and two belonging to the state of Michigan. The fishes to which attention is given are those which enter most largely into the catch of the fishermen, namely, the whitefish, cisco, lake trout, and pike perch, the annual output of which now exceeds one and a half billions. Under arrangement with the Canadian authorities, two egg-collection stations for whitefish, cisco, and lake trout are maintained at points in Ontario.

While surveying a new "bank" on the coast of Alaska, the government steamer Albatross in 20 minutes made the experimental catch of cod and halibut shown in one of our illustrations. As a result of explorations of the Albatross on the Pacific coast, fisheries of great importance have been established there.

The hatcheries on the rivers and lakes of the Pacific coast are devoted almost exclusively to the various salmons. In California, where the bureau established a salmon hatchery as early as 1872, there is one central or main station, at Baird, on the McCloud river, with important collecting stations on two other tributaries of the Sacramento. In Oregon a central hatchery at Oregon City, on the Willamette river, has three subhatcheries on tributaries of the Columbia, in Oregon and Washington, and three subhatcheries on tributaries of the Rogue river, Oregon, in addition to several egg-collecting station.

The interests of the large salmon fisheries of the Puget Sound region are safeguarded by a hatchery on Baker lake, on the Skagit river.

A significant feature of artificial propagation on the Pacific seaboard is that in the Columbia basin the hatching of the acclimatized shad has begun on a small scale, and in the Sacramento basin the cultivation of the acclimatized striped bass has commenced under conditions which indicate that more eggs of this species may be obtained in California than in any of the states to which the fish is native.

The hatcheries in the interior regions constitute the most numerous class, and their output reaches the largest number of people. Their operations are addressed chiefly to the so-called "game" fishes, which, while caught mostly by anglers, nevertheless constitute an important element of the food supply. At these stations large numbers of fish are reared to the fingerling or yearling sizes before being released; for this purpose more or less extensive pond areas are required.

The fish-cultural work of the federal government has now attained a magnitude that cannot readily be comprehended, and is increasing at an exceedingly rapid rate. Especially marked has been the increase in the hatchery product during the past ten years, owing in part to the extension of operations at existing stations, and in part to greater efficiency of methods and appliances. The work during the fiscal year 1909 reached larger proportions than ever before, over three billion fish being produced and planted.

While the bureau does not lay undue stress on mere numbers and considers the vitality of the fish and the conditions under which they are planted as of paramount importance, the foregoing figures are certainly very suggestive and as a further statement of the magnitude of the fish-cultural work, it may be of interest to record that the aggregate output of the hatcheries from 1872 to 1909 was about 28 billion, of which over 13 billion represents the work of the past six years.

In making his original plans for the systematic investigation of the waters of the United States and the biological and physical problems they present, Commissioner Baird insisted that to study only the food-fishes would be of little importance, and that useful conclusions must needs rest upon a broad foundation of investigations purely scientific in character. The life history of species of economic value should be understood from beginning to end, but no less requisite is it to know the histories of the animals and plants upon which they feed or upon which their fod is nourished; the history of their enemies and friends and the friends and foes of their enemies and friends, as well as the currents, temperatures, and other physical phenomena of the waters in relation to migration, reproduction and growth.

In pursuance of this policy the bureau has secured the services of many prominent men of science, and much of the progress in the artificial propagation of fishes, in the investigation of fishery problems, and in the extension of knowledge of our aquatic resources has been due, men eminent as zoologists who have been associated with the work temporarily. Their services have been the services of specialists for particular problems, and through them the bureau has not only been able to give to the public the practical results of applied science, but has contributed to pure science valuable knowledge of all forms of aquatic life.

The importance to the fishing interests of the work of the bureau in connection with the economic fisheries is widely appreciated and freely acknowledged. The statistical inquiries of the bureau afford the only adequate basis for determining the condition and trend of the fisheries and the results of legislation, protection, and cultivation. Among the numerous special matters in which the bureau has benefited the fisheries the following may be mentioned:

By bringing to the attention of American fishermen new methods and new apparatus, new fisheries have sometimes been established and new fields exploited.

By the introduction of cod gill nets the winter cod fishery of New England was revolutionized. In a single season shortly after the use of such nets began a few Cape Ann (Gloucester) fishermen took by this means over 8,000,000 pounds of large-sized fish, and as much as $50,000 has sometimes been saved annually in the single item of bait.

By the dissemination of information regarding new fishing grounds important fisheries have been inaugurated. Thus when the abundance of halibut off the coast of Iceland was made known by the bureau, a fishery was begun which yielded from $70,000 to $100,000 annually to the New England fishermen.

Owing to the appalling mortality among the crews of the New England fishing vessels, caused in large part by the foundering of vessels at sea, the bureau many years ago undertook the introduction into the offshore fisheries of a type of craft which would combine large carrying capacity and great sped with enhanced safety. By correspondence, discussion in the daily press, personal interviews, exhibtion of models and finally by the actual construction of a full-sized schooner (the Grampus), with the requisite qualities, the bureau was enabled to inaugurate a momentous change in the architecture of fishing vessels; so that for a long time the New England schooners have been constructed on the new lines, with a consequent minimizing of disasters and a decided increase in efficiency.

In other fisheries and regions the bureau has likewise advocated improved types of vessels and boats especially adapted to local conditions, and has published plans and specifications embodying the results of studies of the fishing flotilla of the world.

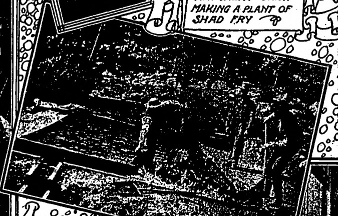
The results of the bureau's efforts in this line in saving life and property, in increasing the usefulness of the vessels, and in improving the quality of the catch as landed, cannot be estimated, but the beneficial effects may be partly appreciated when it is stated that during the ten years ending in 1883, when the old types of vessels were in use, there were lost by foundering from the port of Gloucester alone, 82 vessels, valued at more than $400,000, with their crews of 895 men, while during the ten years ending in 1907, the losses from this cause aggregated only a fourth as many vessels and men.

STRIPPING TROUT OF THEIR EGGS

HATCHERY CREW MAKING A PLANT OF SHAD FRY

REMOVING SHAD EGGS AT A STATION IN NORTH CAROLINA

TRIAL FISHING ON THE "ALBATROSS"



CATCHING AND SORTING THE BROOD FISH

INTERIOR OF A SHAD HATCHERY

A GREAT INVENTOR

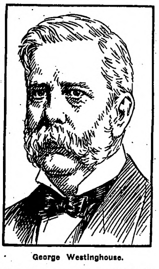
Activities of George Westinghouse Circle the Globe.

Genius Who Holds 15,000 Patents and Whose Air Brake Is in Universal Use on Railroad Trains of the World.

New York.—The recent retirement of George Westinghouse, for nearly twenty-five years head of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, recalls the career of this Napoleon of invention.

For many years the name of George Westinghouse has been a name to conjure with. The man has been a modern fulfillment of the Aladdin lamp idea. Everything he rubbed with his inventive genius became a wonder article; everything he touched turned to gold. First it was the famous air brake, that great appliance by which "he saved more lives than Napoleon lost in all his battles." Then it was the system of operating railway signals and switches by compressed air; after which came the incandescent lamp, the gas engine, the steam turbine, electrical motors and machines by the score, and a thousand other inventions that placed Mr. Westinghouse at the time of his retirement in control of the largest aggregation of patented appliances in the world. Fifteen thousand patents are filed away in his strong box. His activities circle the globe; there are Westinghouse plants in Russia, Canada, Great Britain, Germany and France. His parent plants are of course in or near Pittsburg, more especially Wilmerding.

To condense the career of this man, who ranks with Watt, Stephenson, Morse and Whitney, into a paragraph or two, the biographers tell us that he was born at Central Bridge, Schoharie county, New York, on October 6, 1846. A decade later his parents moved to Schenectady, where his father became in time connected with the prosperity class as owner of certain agricultural works. The tinkering son divided his attention between the school and the shop; when he wasn't masticating his books, he was monkeying with the buzz-saw. At fifteen he had invented and made a rotary engine. One day the notion struck him that he'd like to help Uncle Sam out in the navy. So he took a shot at the examinations and scored a hit, landing a job as assistant engineer. Before he reported for duty the Civil war had broken out. He enlisted in the Twelfth New York National Guard, re-enlisted later in the cavalry, and finally turned up on the high seas as an engineer on the gunboats Muscoota and the Stars and Stripes.



George Westinghouse.

After Gettysburg was fought and won, his thirst for more education landed him in Union college. Two years there were enough for him. The magic of machinery called him away from the academic life, and he found happiness again by taking up his old work in his father's factory. It was while working there that he invented the air brake. Railroad managers who first jeered at his idea of "stopping a train with wind" had to eat humble crow. In a short time the invention was in universal use and had revolutionized railroading, as locomotives could be constructed that would travel at a high rate of speed, so long as they had that little lever in the cab, which by a single turn of the engineer's wrists would bring the train to a standstill in half its length. In the United States all railroads are compelled by law to use the device, and this was adopted by congress and everywhere around the great curve of the world the "whistle of Westinghouse" air brake is heard.

His first prominence in electricity came with his purchase from Gaulard & Gibbs of alternating electric current patents. This was in 1885, and he met great opposition from public sentiment in trying to perfect and introduce this system for lighting and power making. At the time of the Chicago world's fair in 1893 he received the contract for lighting by making a bid of $1,000,000 under others. His shop in Pittsburg soon became the place where electrical experts of the world gathered. Tesla went there and received Westinghouse's financial and practical help in developing the induction motor.

Westinghouse built the first ten great dynamos for Niagara. He also constructed the dynamos for the elevated and subway lines in New York.

Historical Society

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1910. NO. 23.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Solve the Ciphers Used by Yeggmen

WE'LL LEAVE THE SAFE DIS TIME

WASHINGTON—Here is a unique receipt for "soup:"

"First, take about ten or a dozen imspwri bz xug, crumble it up fine and put it in a pan or wash bowl, then pour over it enough uswhohs (either chhx or aky) to cover it well. Stir it up well with your hands, being careful to break all the lumps; leave it set for a few minutes; then get a few yards of cheesecloth and tear it in pieces and strain the mixture through the cloth into another vessel, wring the sawdust dry and throw it away. The remains will be Lhal ugx uswhohs mixed; next take the same amount of water as you used of uswhohs and pour it in; leave the whole set for a few minutes."

It is the "soup" of yeggmen, whose particular business is robbing safes. A crude cipher runs through the rigamarole—merely a subdivision of the alphabet and the substitution of one letter for another. The first six letters beginning with A are substituted for the last six beginning with U, and so on, with the single exception that N is taken out of its turn and made the equivalent of G, an irregularity intended to protect the cipher from detection. But no cipher is proof against expert analysis: certainly not this one, which, though still used by "yeggs," nevertheless is known to the police, to post office inspectors and the treasury secret service people.

Translating, you find that to make the soup you take ten or a dozen sticks of dynamite and use either wood or pure alcohol in the manner directed.

Fewer depredations by yeggmen are reported this year than usual. Last fall a series of such crimes occurred and since that time apparently there has been a period of inactivity among these most dangerous of plunderers. The post office inspectors, whose contact with yeggmen is frequent, since the attacks are often directed against country post offices, hesitate to say whether there has been an actual reduction in their numbers; for experience goes to show that waves of crime seem to sweep the country after intervals of varying length.

The name is of gypsy origin, and among gypsies indicates a clever thief so the "yegg" is a wandering thief, generally a "hobo." As late as twenty years ago one tramp meeting another and desiring to be sure of his identity as a professional tramp, saluted him, "Ho, Beau." It was the password establishing at once a confidential partnership on a basis approaching outlawry. The "yeggs" generally are tramps, though not all tramps are "yeggs."

Blind Man Tells of Baseball Game

IMAGINE, if you can, one who has never seen the light of day, sitting in his accustomed place in the grand stand rooting with all his eenrgy for the success of the home team, and you can easily figure out just why Washington always supports a ball team, although her ball tossers have not finished in the first division during the last decade.

Eugene Brewerton, familiarly known to his friends as "Jack," has perhaps as wide acquaintance among the patrons of the national game at the capital as "Gabby" Street or Walter Johnson, and is unquestionably the most unique rooter who ever patronized the sport. "Jack" was born in Columbus, S. C., 24 years ago, and after receiving a public school education matriculated at the University of South Carolina. He came to Washington a few years ago to study law at the Georgetown University, and it is his ambition to become as famous a lawyer as the blind senator from Oklahoma, Thomas Pryor Gore.

But "Jack" does not believe in giving his entire attention to study, and, accordingly, he has found it to his liking to take in the ball games. Not only is he familiar with every characteristic of the members of the local team, but he knows as well the records and playing abilities of the visiting aggregations.

"I have often been asked how, as a blind man, I can enjoy a game. Why, there is nothing going on I don't get.

"It is my firm belief that all blind people have a sort of intuition, and everything that is going on around them makes a picture in their mind.

Government Prisoners Go in Style

I DON'T LIKE TO TRAVEL WITH THIS KIND OF COMPANY— THEY ARE TOO ATTENTIVE

"THE Leavenworth Overland Special" is a palatial Pullman car which runs every now and then from Washington to a certain rest cure out west with a stone wall around it. The tours are personally conducted and are rapidly becoming famous.

Every once in awhile your Uncle Sam runs across certain persons who, he believes, are leading a too active existence. A rest cure is what they need. Uncle Sam takes charge of them and sends them, after certain legal formalities, such as a trial and verdict are complied with, out to Leavenworth to recuperate.

With Uncle Samuel there is no class distinction. Deeds count. It doesn't matter whether he was a "man higher up" or not. He travels like one. He travels to the golden west in a Pullman, he has porters to wait on him and extremely attentive detectives to see that he is comfortable. He loils in plush swivel chairs and he dines in those neat little la carte Pullman buffets on chicken, porterhouse steak, and all the side dishes. He eats what he pleases and he does not tip the waiter, neither does he pay the bill. Uncle Sam attends to that. It is a delightful trip that is furnished him in his concluding days of freedom—days he is not likely to forget.

From Washington to Leavenworth is a trip of more than 1,500 miles. On every mile of the journey the wants of Uncle Sam's prisoners and guards are well catered to.

Attempt to Stop Infantile Paralysis

THE BABIES MUST BE PROTECTED
INFANTILE PARALYSIS

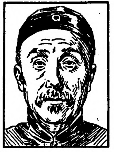
TROUBLED by the inroads the disease is making in some of the eastern states at the present time, the government has ordered an investigation into the epidemic of infantile paralysis. New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and the city of Washington, D. C., have felt the disease the heaviest this year, and the scores of deaths that have occurred among the little ones of that district has caused Uncle Sam to take some action.

Dr. Wyman of the Public Health and Marine hospital service, is the leader in the investigation, and he made the announcement this week that he believes the disease to be both infectious and contagious. Although the disease is often fatal, its appalling feature is that many children affected are permanently crippled or deformed, robbed of speech or hearing. In a word, infantile paralysis is not a slaughter but a mutilation of the innocents. The disease commonly attacks children under five years of age, but occasionally an adult is its victim.

Its shining mark at this minute in the east is William Hinrich, a pitcher of the Washington American league in Washington, and his entire right baseball team. He is in a hospital arm is paralyzed. At the present time there are over 500 cases of the disease in Washington alone, while Philadelphia and New York city reports even greater numbers. Nothing is known of the cause of the disease other than that it is believed to come from a germ, but even these have not yet been found. The disease usually appears during June, reaches its greatest prevalence during July and August and subsides in September.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

A VERY POPULAR CHINAMAN



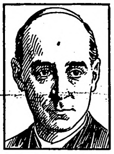
The opinion prevails that the appointment of Wu Ting Fang to be councilor to the foreign office will secure to his country sagacity, knowledge and adroitness not only, but also a profound sense of justice in dealing with other nations. Here he strove to keep China and the United States close friends. In his new position he may be trusted to labor for the peace of the world. If all Chinamen were like Mr. Wu, no demand could arise in any quarter for laws for the exclusion of Chinese. No other Chinaman ever was so popular in this country as is Wu Ting Fang. The fame was perhaps more nearly worldwide of Li Hung Chang, who gave Wu his first office, which became the stepping stone in the foreign and home service of the Chinese empire.

Born near Canton about 60 years ago, after training in the local schools, Wu went to England in 1874, where he studied law and was admitted as a barrister. On his return to China he took high rank as a lawyer while he was zealous in promoting modern enterprises and was the leader in building the first railroad in that vast domain. His career received a marked impulse from a visit to the United States in 1877. Five years later he became viceroy of the province of Chihli.

When, in 1897, he came to Washington as minister from China he at once won favor as a diplomat. His commission was addressed not only to the United States, but to Spain, Mexico and Peru as well. While he was welcomed at all the embassies in Washington beyond any other of their members, he was at home in all classes of society. His manners are elegant and he is a first-class "mixer."

His service as minister in Washington lasted for about seven years with a brief interval, and in 1900 he distinguished himself in a peace mission to Japan. His official receptions, if less formal than those of other chief embassies, were quite as elaborate and more largely attended. When he was recalled on the change of government in Pekin, regret was more general in Washington than a gap in any other embassy would have caused.

DIPLOMAT OF THE VATICAN



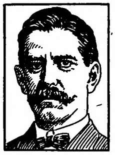
No man perhaps occupies a more prominent place in the international limelight today than the cardinal secretary of state of the Holy See, his eminence Rafael Merry del Val, whose diplomatic dispute with Spain has engaged world-wide interest.

The cardinal is a Londoner by birth and the blood of Celt, Briton and Spaniard flows through his veins. His father, who was secretary of the Spanish embassy in London when the cardinal was born, is descended from an Irish family which emigrated to Spain at the end of the 17th century, while his grandmother on the mother's side was a Miss Willcox, daughter of a former member of the British Parliament.

Cardinal Merry del Val was educated in England, Belgium and Italy, and won degrees in philosophy, theology and canon law. While a young man he became a protege of the late Pope Leo XIII and was sent by him on several important missions. He was one of the representatives to the Holy See at the jubilee of Queen Victoria, and at the funeral of Emperor William of Germany; and also represented the Vatican at the jubilee of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria and at the coronation of the late King Edward of England. In 1892 he was appointed Camerieri Segreto Participante, which is an office not unlike that occupied by the lords-in-waiting to a King and which entailed his taking up his residence within the Vatican itself. Previous to this he was appointed by the Queen Regent of Spain as religious instructor to her daughters and he prepared the present King, Alfonso, for his confirmation.

Shortly after the death of Pope Leo XIII the present pontiff appointed him secretary of state and he has had to deal with grave situations since in France, Germany, Spain and Portugal. He is a linguist, speaking English, Spanish, Italian, French and German fluently and is an indefatigable worker. He was created a cardinal in 1893.

VIRGINIA'S NEW SENATOR



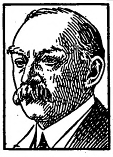
Claude A. Swanson, former governor of Virginia, has been named by Governor Mann to succeed the late Senator Daniel, Virginia's able representative in the upper branch of the national legislature. The term expires next March.

There was practically no opposition to the selection of Mr. Swanson. He was serving as a member of Congress when he was drafted by the Virginia Democrats a few years ago to run for governor. He will be a candidate for the full term to succeed himself. Both Mr. and Mrs. Swanson are social leaders in Richmond and Washington.

Mr. Swanson was born March 31, 1862, in Swansonville, Pittsylvania County, Va., and he has had a varied career. From college he went to work as clerk in a Danville grocery, later studied law, and five years after graduation was elected to Congress from the fifth Virginia district.

He was elected Governor of Virginia in 1905 by a larger majority than any governor has received since Civil war.

AUTHOR HONORED BY KING



When at Marlborough house the other day King George V. invested Thomas Hardy with the order of merit, the act was not perfunctory or inspired by political influence; it was a sincere tribute of admiration from a reader to a favorite author, for the king holds Hardy's works in high esteem and is said to be familiar with them all.

There is no indication at the present moment that the reign of George V. will be remembered especially for its contribution to literature, as were the reigns of Elizabeth and Anne, or as was the reign of Victoria. The great men of the Victorian era have all passed away, and now that they are gone a lower sky line gives prominence to some names that under earlier conditions, though highly rated by limited constituencies, would not have been seen afar. Were an educated reader asked today to name the leading English novelist his choice would be likely to fall upon Hardy, who began to be known to the general reader in the early seventies, and who is still writing, though on different lines from those of his earlier work.

He was born in 1840, and after a fair amount of schooling, including private tuition in Latin and French, and evenings at King's college, was articled to an ecclesiastical architect at the age of sixteen. He was prizeman of the Royal Institute of British architects in 1863, but at that date had begun writing verse. His first novel was published in 1865. In 1872 appeared "Under the Greenwood Tree," the next year "A Pair of Blue Eyes" and "Far From the Madding Crowd" in 1874, two years after his marriage to Emma, niece of Archdeacon Gifford.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Work of the Policewomen of Chicago

GEE! I BELIEVE I'LL GET PINCHED

CHICAGO.—Much interest has been shown in Chicago's "policewomen," but when they gather on a Friday noon for luncheon at Hull House before entering upon their regular weekly conclave there is nothing to distinguish them from any other earnest working women.

Later on, too, when the hour arrives for afternoon tea, in a large, attractively furnished assembly room, they sit and sip their tea and chat in the manner most highly approved for afternoon teas. Even the presence of two or three brother "cops" does not suffice to create any degree of policelike atmosphere; but then the brother officers, too, are attired in citizens' garb and handle their teacups as though this was their regular occupation.

Each of these women officers has her own precinct which she patrols—though the quiet manner in which she makes her daily rounds of inspection and investigation hardly warrants the use of the technical term. Each has her office and office hours where she may be found and her assistance obtained.

Why policewomen instead of policemen, the visitor starts to ask, but in the very beginning of the reports the question is answered, for the cases reported and discussed are nearly all considered in the light not of how criminals may be punished but how budding criminals may be reached and saved and how those contributing to their delinquency may be punished and prevented from continuing their destructive ways.

This regular salaried, badge provided group of officers, now a year old, is an outgrowth of the juvenile court committee and the Illinois Industrial association before that, when the Illinois juvenile court law went into effect in July, 1899. On June 4, 1909, the committee adopted the name of Juvenile Protective association, which through a series of local protective leagues directed by these salaried officers puts forth its whole efforts to secure the utmost protection for the youth of the city.

Boston Babies Are Born the Luckiest

IT IS BECAUSE OF THE ÆSTHETIC SURROUNDINGS OF BOSTON
EMERSON

BOSTON.—The baby that is born in Buenos Ayres has a better chance of living than if it had been born in any other of the world's large cities. In Amsterdam it would find figures more in its favor; but Amsterdam is not so big a town.

In the United States Boston has been the best place to be born if you want to stand a good chance of living to be at least a year old. In 30 years Boston has not averaged one death out of five babies born during the year.

Back in 1882 it came close to that average when 194 infants less than a year old died in every 1,000. But in 1887 there were less than 190, in 1891 the number went below 180, in 1893 it passed the 170 mark, in 1896 the 160 mark, in 1898 the 150 mark, and in 1909 it sank abruptly to 115 per 1,000.

"New York is making a record it may well be proud of," says the American Baby, "although its starting point in 1900 was at 203. Compare with that the record for 1908, 144, and bear to the babies the message of hope. Philadelphia began in 1900 with 173, diminishing this by 1907 to 159. And western cities, too; St. Louis is very low, and Chicago, admitting herself to be high, is promising important reductions.

In England, as a whole, with Wales included, the infantile mortality rate was 156 per 1,000 births in 1900; that of London, 154; in Scotland the rate ran about 150, and in Ireland a little higher. In the same year in Boston it was 147. In all there are sensible and important gains for the baby.

"In Germany Berlin is down from 220 deaths per 1,000 births in 1899 to 112 in 1907. Vienna from 196 to 144. Budapest from 167 to 155, Cologne from 251 to 195, while in Russia, Moscow has declined in the same years from 319 to 266. In French-speaking countries the news for the baby is most excellent, for Paris in 1899 was really leading the world at only 110, and by 1907 had decreased to 104, with Nice a close second at 118 to 105.

Loaded Cigar Costs Broker $200,000

CHICAGO.—A joke cigar the other day cost a La Salle street broker $200,000. Here is the reason: Two prominent young brokers and men about town have the habit of helping themselves to cigars in each other's vest on every possible occasion. On this particular day No. 1 decided to play a trick on his friend and got a loaded cigar, one of those nice ones that goes off like a roman candle and releases a spring, which breaks the cigar to pieces without injury to the smoker, but much to his surprise and discomfort. He decorated this miniature bomb with a band from a 50-cent cigar of a well-known brand and placed it conspicuously in his vest pocket.

He met his friend in the lobby of the La Salle hotel and, after greeting him, drew back his coat so as to display the cigar to advantage. No. 2 immediately spied the cigar and with a lightning pass, made perfect by long practice, was soon possessor of this tempting bit of tobacco.

"Ah!" he said, "I see you are smoking better cigars now. I'll smoke this for you later."

Just at this point a man from New York with whom No. 2 had a business deal on involving more than $200,000 joined the group. Shortly the New Yorker and No. 2 excused themselves to No. 1, and strolled away to transact their business.

They seated themselves at one of the tables in the lobby and No. 2 offered the New Yorker his recently acquired cigar. A match was applied in the usual way and the fireworks started. The cigar blew up as per schedule and, incidentally, the $200,000 deal blew up with it.

City to Have a Municipal Laundry

SURE— NOW WE CAN GOSSIP AND WORK AT THE SAME TIME
THIS CITY LAUNDRY IS A GREAT SCHEME ALL RIGHT

KANSAS CITY.—If the plans of the park board are carried out, Kansas City will have a municipal laundry, which probably will be the first institution of its kind in the United States. The board plans to build a laundry to be run by the city, where the women of the congested districts can do their washing and ironing under sanitary conditions, and with improved machinery. The park board has been discussing this idea for about three years along with the public bath proposition.

The idea has been suggested to the board and recommended that systems similar to those used in the municipal laundries of Europe be used.

George E. Kessler, landscape architect for the park board, studied the municipal laundries in Europe. He says it would cost about $30,000 to build a bathhouse and laundry according to general plans discussed by the park board.

Almost all the larger cities of Germany and France have the municipal laundries. In Berlin they are kept busy every day and are comforts to thousands of housewives. The laundries open early in the morning and often the women are standing in line with their bundles of clothes. Either they furnish their own soap, bluing, and other incidentals, or they are sold to them almost at cost by the city. The customers are required to pay for heat, water and light.

The municipal laundry is not a charity scheme and the poor women realise it. In addition to removing a burden from their shoulders a municipal laundry does much toward the prevention of disease. Where now the women often do their washing in dark cellars, a municipal laundry, run with all scientific principles, would prevent disease from spreading by means of clothes.

THE SUNBEAM.

W. G. HUNT, Publisher.

SUNBEAM. - - MINN.

THE DANGEROUS HOUSE FLY.

The city department of public health gives a timely and needed warning to those leaving the city for their vacations to avoid places where there are many flies. Those who follow this advice will avoid places which are uncleanly, which allow food and garbage to be so exposed as to attract and feed the flies, says the Philadelphia Press. They will avoid places where stables and dwellings are in near vicinity, as the exposed manure is the choice breeding place of thousands and even millions of flies. In other words, to avoid disease-conveying flies avoid places where they permit flies to breed and feed. Formerly the conditions which multiply flies and the flies themselves were considered objectionable but endurable. Now the patient toleration of flies is known to be a heedless trifling with the health and life of human beings. Disease germs are for the most part innocuous to man, until through some convenient medium they are conveyed to his system. This purveyor of disease is the fly. His guilt has been proved to a demonstration. His capacity for carrying on his feet from foul and putrescent sources the bacteria of disease has been recorded by gelatin plates on which he has been made to alight and have proven his guilt.

The raisin growers of Fresno county, California, are trying to promote the consumption of raisins by establishing "raisin day," on which all patriots who believe in patronizing home enterprise and consuming home productions are expected to indulge in raisin cakes and puddings, raisin bread, etc. The boys and girls will fall in line for this, and as they are the best consumers of things sweet, it would seem to be good policy to awaken the enthusiasm of young eaters. Parents are now busy striving to get enough of things more staple than raisins, which would be adopted generally if they could be made to take the place of meat, eggs and other products. Moreover, it is suspected that if all were to do as the raisin growers desire there would be a boom in the price as a result of the boom in the demand.

Smokers who are going to France should know that, now the French duties on tobacco and cigars have been increased, travelers entering France are allowed to bring into the country free of duty only ten cigars, 20 cigarettes, or 1⅜ ounces of tobacco, and this must be on their person, or in their hand luggage examined at the frontier. The customs officials are fully entitled to confiscate or tax any quantity of tobacco or cigars however small which may be found in the heavy luggage of passengers sent under seal to a terminal station (St. Lazaro or Gare du Nord) and examined there, and just now they are very strict.

The British commercial attache at Yokohama reports that there has been a sudden development at Tokyo and Yokohama in the use of solid rubber tires for jinrikishas, and the adoption of the new tire promises to become general in Japan. The utilization of rubber and its products for every conceivable purpose is so rapidly swelling the demand that there will have to be a corresponding augmentation of the annual crop or prices will bound to prohibitory heights. The world will shower wealth on the inventor who produces an artificial rubber that will give service approaching that of the genuine article.

Misfortune seems to follow the Zeppelin concern. Hard upon the recent disasters to several of the flying machines come the explosions in the works at Friedrichshafen, resulting in serious damage to property and the death of one man and the injury of a number of others. Still, German determination is of the holdfast order, and it is quite likely that there will be persistent effort toward perfecting the Zeppelin principle to the point where present perils will be minimized.

A man and his wife are demanding $150,000 because they were ejected from a New York hotel. People who have so often been told when applying for accommodations at New York hotels that there were no rooms left will extend sympathy to the ejected pair.

The city of Cleveland has just celebrated its one hundred and fourteenth birthday. People who remember when there wasn't anything but a schoolhouse and a grocery store there are becoming scarce.

A movement is on foot at Atlantic City to prohibit people from maintaining poultry yards inside the city limits. We have always been inclined to believe that cities were not intended for the purpose of stock raising.

RESOURCES OF NATION ITS PRECIOUS ASSETS

Theodore Roosevelt Tells Large Audience in Denver Why He Believes Control of Conservation by the Federal Government Usually Is Best.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 29.—Theodore Roosevelt found a topic to his liking and a sympathetic and often enthusiastic audience when he spoke on conservation this afternoon in the Auditorium. The address was delivered under the auspices of the Colorado Live Stock association, and the representatives of that body met the Colonel at the station, together with a committee of officials and the Spanish War Veterans. After a parade and a cowboy luncheon given by the Denver Press Club, the main meeting of the day was held. Later Mr. Roosevelt was the chief guest at a "round-up" dinner.

Favors Federal Control.

Colonel Roosevelt's address was largely an argument for federal control of natural resources. He said:

This country has shown definite signs of waking up to the absolute necessity of handling its natural resources with foresight and common sense. The conservation question has three sides. In the first place, the needless waste of the natural resources must be stopped. It is rapidly becoming a well-settled policy of this people that we of this generation hold the land in part for the next generation, and not exclusively for our own selfish enjoyment. Just as the farmer is a good citizen if he leaves his farm improved and not impaired for his children, and a bad citizen if he skins the land in his own selfish interest, so the Nation behaves well if it treats the natural resources as assets which it must turn over to the next generation increased and not impaired in value, and behaves badly if it leaves the land poorer to those who come after us.

In the second place, the natural resources must be developed promptly, completely, and in orderly fashion. It is not conservation to leave the natural resources undeveloped. Development is an indispensable part of the conservation plan. The forests, the mines, the water powers, and the land itself, must all be put to use. Those who assert that conservation proposes to tie them up, depriving this generation of their benefits in order to hand them on untouched to the next, miss the whole point of the conservation idea. Conservation does not mean depriving the men of today of their natural rights in the natural resources of the land. All it means is that we of this generation shall so use our rights as not to deprive those who come after us of their natural rights in their turn.

In the third place, so far as possible these resources must be kept for the whole people and not handed over for exploitation to single individuals. We do not intend to discourage individual enterprise by unwisely diminishing the reward for that enterprise. On the contrary, we believe that the men of exceptional abilities should have exceptional rewards up to a point where the reward becomes disproportionate to the service, up to the point where the abilities are used to the detriment of the people as a whole. We are for the liberty of the individual up to and not beyond the point where it becomes inconsistent with the welfare of the community. Thus our consistent aim is to favor the actual settler—the man who takes as much of the public domain as he himself can cultivate, and there makes a permanent home for his children who come after him; but we are against the man, no matter what his ability, who tries to monopolize large masses of public land.

State and Federal Control.

Now, to preserve the general welfare, to see to it that the rights of the public are protected, and the liberty of the individual secured and encouraged as long as consistent with this welfare, and curbed when it becomes inconsistent therewith, it is necessary to invoke the aid of the government. There are points in which this governmental aid can best be rendered by the states, that is, where the exercise of states' rights helps to secure popular rights; and as to these I believe in states' rights. But there are large classes of cases where only authority of the National government will secure the rights of the people; and where this is the case I am a convinced and a thorough-going believer in the rights of the National government. Big business, for instance, is no longer an affair of any one state; big business has become nationalized, and the only effective way of controlling and directing it, and preventing abuses in connection with it, is by having the people nationalize this control in order to prevent their being exploited by the individuals who have nationalized the business. All commerce on a scale sufficiently large to warrant any control over it by the government is nowadays inter-state or foreign commerce, and until this fact is heartily acknowledged and acted upon by both courts and legislative bodies, National and state alike, the interest of the people will suffer.

In the matter of conservation, I heartily approve of state action where under our form of government the state, and the state only, has the power to act. I cordially join with those who desire to see the state, within its own sphere, take the most advanced position in regard to the whole matter of conservation. I have taken exactly this attitude in my own state of New York. Where the state alone had power to act, I have done all I could to get it to act in the most advanced manner; and where the Nation could act, I have done all I could to get National action in the same direction. Unfortunately, in the east we have in this matter paid the penalty of not having our forest land under National control; and the penalty has been severe. Most of the states—although they are old states—have not protected their forests, each failing to act by itself, because the action was really the common concern of all; and where action is the common concern of all, experience has shown that it can only be profitably undertaken by the National government.

As a result of the impossibility of getting such wise action by the several state governments in the east, we are doing our best to get National legislation under which the National government, at the expense of millions of dollars, shall undertake to do as regards the Appalachians and White Mountains of the east what it is now doing in the Rock Mountains here out west. It would be both a calamity and an absurdity for the National government now to do in the west the very thing that at a heavy pecuniary cost it is trying to undo in the east. By actual experience in the east we have found to our cost that the Nation, and not the several states, can best guard the interests of the people in the matter of the forests and the waters, and that if it fails to attempt this duty at the outset it will later on have to pay heavily in order to be allowed to take up the work, which because it is done so late, cannot be so well done as if it had been begun earlier.

Water Power.

Take the question of the control of the water power sites. The enormous importance of water power sites to the future industrial development of this country has only been realized within a very few years. Unfortunatly, the realization has come too late as regards many of the power sites; but many yet remain with which our hands are free to deal. We should make it our duty to see that hereafter the power sites are kept under the control of the general government, for the use of the people as a whole. The fee should remain with the people as a whole, while the use is leased on terms which shall secure an ample reward to the lessees, which shall encourage the development and use of the water power, but which shall not create a permanent monopoly or permit the development to be anti-social, to be in any respect hostile to the public good. The Nation alone has the power to do this effectively, and it is for this reason that you will find those corporations which wish to gain improper advantage and to be freed from efficient control on the part of the public, doing all that they can to secure the substitution of state for National action.

There is something fairly comic in the appeal made by many of these men in favor of state control when you realize that the great corporations seeking the privileges of developing the water power in any given state are at least as apt to be owned outside that state as within it. In this country, nowadays, capital has a National and not a state use. The great corporations which are managed and largely owned in the older states are those which are most in evidence in developing and using the mines and water powers and forests of the new territories and the new states, from Alaska to Arizona. I have been genuinely amused during the past two months at having arguments presented to me on behalf of certain rich men from New York and Ohio, for instance, as to why Colorado and other Rocky Mountain states should manage their own water power sites. Now these men may be good citizens according to their lights, but naturally enough their special interest obscures their sense of the public need; and as their object is to escape an efficient control, exercised in the interest of all the people of the country, they clamor to be put under the state instead of under the Nation. If we are foolish enough to grant their requests, we shall have ourselves to blame when we wake up to find that we have permitted another privilege to intrench itself and another portion of what should be kept for the public good to be turned over to individuals for purposes of private enrichment. During the last session of congress bills were introduced to transfer the water power sites in the National Forests and the Public Domain to the control of the states. I cannot state too strongly my belief that these measures are unwise, and that it would be disastrous to enact them into law. In substance their effect would be to free these great special interests from all effective control. The passage of such a bill would be a victory of the special interests over the general welfare, and a long backward step down the hill of progress we have of late been climbing.

Our people have for many years proceeded upon the assumption that the Nation should control the public land. It is to this assumption of National outlook that we owe our wisest land legislation, from the Homestead Law to the Irrigation Law. The wise use of our public domain has always been conditioned upon National action. The states can greatly help, but the Nation must take the lead, as regards the land, as regards the forests and waters; and perhaps peculiarly in the case of the waters, because almost all streams are really inter-state streams.

Coal Lands.

The same principle applies with peculiar force to the coal lands, and especially to the coal lands in Alaska, whose protection and ownership by the Federal government is so necessary, both for full and free industrial development in the west, and for the needs of our fleet in the Pacific. The coal mines should be leased, not sold, and those who mine the coal should pay back a part of the profit to the people. It is the right and duty of the people to demand the most vigilant trusteeship on that part of that branch of the Federal government in charge of the fuel resources of the United States.

The Neutral Ground.

Remember also that many of the men who protest loudly against effective national action would be the first to turn round and protest against state action if such action in its turn became effective, and would then unhesitatingly invoke the law to show that the state had no constitutional power to act. Long experience has shown that it is by no means impossible, in cases of constitutional doubt, to get one set of judicial decisions which render it difficult for the nation to act, and another set which render it impossible for the state to act. In each case the privileged beneficiaries of the decision invoke the aid of those who treat the Constitution, not as a healthy aid to growth, but as a fetish to prevent growth; and they assail the advocates of wise and cautious progress as being opponents of the Constitution. As I have said before, I am a strong believer in efficient national action, where such action offers the best hope of securing and protecting the interest of the whole people as against the interest of a few. But I am emphatically in favor of state action, where state action will best serve this purpose; and I am no less emphatically in favor of cordial and hearty co-operation between the nation and the states where their duties are identical or overlap.

If there is one thing which is more unwise than another, it is the creation by legislative, by executive, or by judicial action of a neutral ground in which neither the state nor the nation has power, and which can serve as a place of refuge for the lawless man, and especially for the lawless man of great wealth, who can hire the best legal counsel to advise him how to keep his abiding place equally distant from the uncertain frontiers of both state and national power.

The Open Range.

I am here at the invitation of the Colorado Livestock association, and I desire to express my appreciation of their steadfast stand for decency and progress in the handling of public lands and national forests. They have met and overcome the unrelenting opposition of some of the most influential stockmen of the state; they have won because they have been right. I want to express also my appreciation of the work of the American National Livestock association. It has been one of the really important forces working toward effective railway regulation, while its support of the policy of federal range control has given it a large place in national affairs. As an old-time stockman I realize that the present order of things on the open range cannot continue, and that the sure way to protect the range itself, prevent the increase of big outfits, promote the equitable use of the grazing lands, and foster genuine homestead settlement, is to extend over the open range a system of range control somewhat similar to that now in effect on the national forests.

Whatever system of range control may be adopted in detail, there are two things it must not do. It must not handicap or exclude the small man by requiring him to spend more money for fences than he can afford, and it must leave every acre that can be settled by bona-fide homesteaders freely open to such settlement.

I do not believe that a single acre of our public lands should hereafter pass into private ownership except for the single purpose of homestead settlement, and I know that the stockmen stand with me in their desire to remove every obstacle from the path of the genuine homesteader, and to put every possible obstacle in the pathway of the man who tries to get public lands by misrepresentation or fraud. This is absolutely necessary on the agricultural lands. It is at least equally necessary on the mineral lands. It would be a calamity, whose baleful effect on the average citizen we can scarcely exaggerate, if the great stores of coal and other mineral fuels still owned by the people in Alaska and elsewhere should pass into the unregulated ownership of monopolistic corporations.

The Forest Service.

You progressive stockmen have stood heartily by the conservation movement, and with you have stood many others throughout the West, to whom large credit is due, such as the lumbermen in Washington and Oregon, the irrigators in California, and the supporters of the country life movement in and around Spokane. I want to make my acknowledgments in particular to the Colorado Forestry association, which has supported the forest work of the government with such unselfish zeal. The forest service has enemies because it is effective. Some of its best work has been met by the bitterest opposition. For example, it has done a real service by blocking the road against the grabbers of water power, and again by standing like a rock against the demands of bogus mining concerns to exploit the national forests. I have always done my best to help the genuine miner. I believe that one of the first duties of the government is to encourage honest mining on the public lands. But it is equally important to enforce the law firmly against that particularly dangerous class which makes its living off the public through fraudulent mining schemes.

Much of the opposition to the forest service, like much of the opposition to conservation, takes the form of direct misrepresentation. For example, the cry is often heard that the national forests inclose great areas of agricultural land which are thus put beyond the reach of settlement. This statement seems plausible only till the facts are known. In the first place, congress has specially provided that whatever agricultural land there may be in any national forest shall be open, under proper safeguards, to homestead settlement. And in the second place, when the opponents of conservation are asked to point out the great stretches of inclosed agricultural land on the ground and in the presence of experts, instead of in speeches in a hall, they fail.

Reclamation Service.

The National Irrigation Congress is to hold a session in the city of Pueblo late in September. I am keenly sorry that I could not have accepted the invitation to be present. I must, however, be in the East at that time. But since I cannot be present then to express my keen, long-held, and deep-felt interest in the reclamation of arid lands by the federal government, I desire to do so now. There is no more effective instrument for the making of homes than the United States Reclamation Service, and no government bureau while I was President had reached a higher standard of efficiency, integrity and devotion to the public welfare.

Like the Forest Service, the Reclamation Service has clashed with certain private interests, and has had to pay the penalty of its service to the public in the form of bitter opposition from those with whose profit it has interfered. The cry has been raised against it that the government must not do for its citizens at a less cost what private interests are ready to make them pay for at higher prices. Now, I believe fully in the private development of irrigation projects which the government cannot undertake. There is a large and legitimate field for such work. But the essential thing is to make homes on the lands, not to enable individuals to profit from the necessities of the men who make those homes. There is no more warrant for objecting to the reclamation of arid lands by the government than there would be to protest against the government for patenting agricultural lands directly to the actual settler, instead of through a middleman, who could make a profit from the transaction. The men who assert themselves at the cost of the community instead of by service to the community we have always had with us, and doubtless we always shall. But there is no reason why we should yield to them. The Reclamation Service has not done so, and that is the chief reason for the attacks upon it.

I don't think that there is one among you who is a better and more thorough-going westerner than I am. There has been no support given to the conservation policies so welcome as that which came from the west, and none in the west more welcome than that which came from Colorado. There are men and organizations in Colorado, and I mention Delta in particular, whose support of the conservation policies has been of the greatest value to the Nation. It has not always been an easy thing for them to stand for what was right, to stand for the real ultimate good as against the seeming temporary good; but they have stood for it steadily nevertheless.

From the standpoint of conservation the east has wasted much of its own superb endowment; and as an American, as a lover of the west, I hope that the west will profit by the east's bitter lesson, and will not repeat the mistakes of the east. The east has wasted its resources, it suffers from the effect of the waste, which now puts it at a disadvantage compared to the west, and it is sorry. Most of the capital and very many of the men now attempting to monopolize your western resources are from the east. The west should learn the lesson of the east's mistakes, and it should remember that conservation in the west will help the west first and most, and that the movement for conservation is most earnest, most vigorous, and most effective in the west and among western men. That is one strong reason why the conservation policy has come to stay.

RAINS BRING RELIEF

HEAVY FALL IN FIRE-SWEPT ZONE AIDS TENSE SITUATION.

TWENTY BODIES ARE FOUND

Latest Estimates Places Number of Dead at 200—Many Men Missing—Feared Death List Will Be Greatly Lengthened.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25.—Rain turning to snow in the high mountains, brought relief to a large part of Idaho, Montana and Washington districts that have been devastated by forest fires. The storm, according to reports from Missoula, has extended over an area of 100 square miles, taking in the Coeur d'Alene district.

The latest estimates of the loss of life in the fires places the number of dead at more than 200. The Italians and Austrians in the St. Joe valley, of whom many perished, were employes of logging camps. The list of government rangers dead, now 100, will probably be lengthened.

Twenty Bodies Recovered.

Avery, Idaho, Aug. 25.—The bodies of 20 forest service men who died fighting the fires near here have been recovered and brought to this city.

Government agents declare there is little hope for any of the missing.

Four negro soldiers of Company G, Twenty-fifth United States infantry, are among the missing and are believed to have perished.

Two Japanese employed in railroad work, who had been fighting the fires, emerged from the woods. They were severely burned and report that ten of their fellow laborers had fallen before the flames and were dead.

Hundred Dead Is Estimate.

Wallace, Idaho, Aug. 25.—Reports here show a death list of 100, with 200 men missing, as the result of the forest fires. While the cities of Wardner, Kellogg, Burke and Murray are threatened with disasters similar to the one Wallace suffered, the danger here is over.

The fire started all over the Coeur d'Alenes at the same hour and as reports pour in of dead victims being found in various unexpected places in the district the fear grows that many may have met death or fatal injuries who have not been missed as yet.

Flames Approaching Towns.

At Wardner and Kellogg, Idaho, fires are approaching the towns from two directions and are now only a mile away. At Burke, Idaho, the fire is three miles away, but coming down the canyon toward the mining camp. All the stores and mines near Burke have been closed and the men are out fighting the fires. At Mullan, Idaho, the town was saved by armed citizens, who forced every man to work : back firing. This back firing has cleared the mountain sides of dry timber and is expected to prevent damage in Mullan.

Near St. Mary's, Idaho, it is believed 50 homesteaders and their families perished. On Big creek survivors of the fire who arrived here say that seven men were crowded into a prospect hole five feet long. All were killed. Three men were killed near the hole by falling trees.

BLAMES SOLONS FOR FIRES

Gifford Pinchot Lays Forest Losses to Men in Congress Who Have Opposed Appropriations.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Gifford Pinchot of the National Conservation association and former head of the government forest service, in a statement issued here holds that the loss of property and life in the recent and present forest fires was unnecessary.

The disastrous results, he says, are traceable to the unpreparedness to deal with the fire system. He scores members of congress who have opposed appropriations for the proper equipment of forest rangers and in that connection names Senator Heyburn of Idaho, whose home town, Wallace, Idaho, suffered serious loss; Senator Carter of Montana, and Representative Mondell of Wyoming.

NAB ALLEGED ARMY CAPTAIN

Man Arrested at Eau Claire, Wis., Declares He Is Related to Sentor Ben Tillman.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 27.—A man giving the name of Benjamin F. Tillman, said to be captain in the Twenty-seventh United States infantry, was arrested here on a charge of forgery filed at Madison, Wis.

He says he is innocent and claims to be a nephew of United States Senator Tillman. The prisoner was in the uniform of a captain when arrested, had four other uniforms in his baggage and said he was on his way to Fort Snelling, Minn. He declared he was a victim of circumstances.

Robert J. Aley Resigns.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 26.—Robert J. Aley sent to Stokes Jackson, Democratic state chairman, his resignation as the Democratic nominee for state superintendent of public instruction to succeed himself, and the state committee selected Charles A. Greathouse of this city to fill the vacancy on the state ticket. Mr. Aley resigned in order that he might accept the presidency of the University of Maine.

MUNYON'S RHEUMATISM CURE

Has cured thousands and it can cure you. Relieves from the first. All Druggists, 25¢

W. L. DOUGLAS HAND-SEWED PROCESS SHOES

MEN'S $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00
WOMEN'S $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4
BOYS' $2.00, $2.50 & $3.00

THE STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS

They are absolutely the most popular and best shoes for the price in America. They are the leaders everywhere because they hold their shape, fit better, look better and wear longer than other makes. They are certainly the most economical shoes for you to buy. W. L. Douglas name and retail price are stamped on the bottom—value guaranteed. Fast Color Eyelets

TAKE NO SUBSTITUTE! If your dealer cannot supply you write for Mail Order Catalog.

W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

WE PAY YOUR RAILROAD FARE BOTH WAYS TO FLORIDA

Or we will pay two fares from your home to Florida one way. If you buy land in the Florida Homeland Company's Celery Farms tract we do this for you. Celery Farms Colony is a few miles from Sanford, in the richest truck gardening section of Florida. One thousand 10-acre tracts now only on sale at $25 an acre—$2.50 an acre down and $1.00 per acre per month until paid. When the 1000 tracts are sold there will be no other land at this price on Celery Farms. Lake and river transportation, best market, best soil, best climate, fish and game plentiful. Write today for copy of Florida Home Herald.

The Florida Homeland Company
499 Atlantic National Bank Building
Jacksonville, Florida

Northwestern Conservatory 40 Instructors 600 Students (26th Year, Opens Sept. 5, '10)

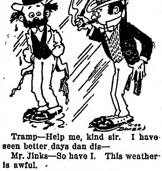
All branches of Music Art and Dramatic Art, Orchestral and Band Instruments. Normal Courses in Public School Music, Art, Piano, Physical Training, Domestic Science. Terms Reasonable. Catalog Free.

O. A. EVERS, Pres. Minneapolis, Minn.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

NOTHING DOING.



Tramp—Help me, kind sir. I have seen better days dan dis—

Mr. Jinks—So have I. This weather is awful.

Lemons Cure Malaria.

Lemons are said to be an infallible cure for malaria. This is the method of preparation: Take one lemon, wash thoroughly with a brush and hot water till all germs are gone, cut in very small pieces, using skin, seeds and all; cook in three glasses of water till reduced to one, and take this while fasting. A cure is generally effected within a week.

LACK OF MONEY
Was a Godsend In This Case.

It is not always that a lack of money is a benefit.

A lady of Green Forest, Ark., owes her health to the fact that she could not pay in advance the fee demanded by a specialist to treat her for stomach trouble. In telling of her case she says:

"I had been treated by four different physicians during 10 years of stomach trouble. Lately I called on another who told me he could not cure me; that I had neuralgia of the stomach. Then I went to a specialist who told me I had catarrh of the stomach and said he could cure me in four months but would have to have his money down. I could not raise the necessary sum and in my extremity I was led to quit coffee and try Postum.

"So I stopped coffee and gave Postum a thorough trial and the results have been magical. I now sleep well at night, something I had not done for a long time; the pain in my stomach is gone and I am a different woman.

"I dreaded to quit coffee, because every time I had tried to stop it I suffered from severe headaches, so I continued to drink it although I had reason to believe it was injurious to me, and was the cause of my stomach trouble and extreme nervousness. But when I had Postum to shift to it was different.

"To my surprise I did not miss coffee when I began to drink Postum.

"Coffee had been steadily and surely killing me and I didn't fully realize what was doing it until I quit and changed to Postum."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

PROGRESSIVE WEST IS PRAISED BY ROOSEVELT

Vigorous Speech by Former President Is Climax of Great Frontier Days Celebration at Cheyenne, Wyo.---Cattle Range Men Warmly Greet Their Old Associate.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 27.—The great virile virtues of the men who have built up the west formed the theme of a speech which Theodore Roosevelt delivered here today before thousands of those same men and thir successors. He arrived in the private car Republic abou 10:30 o'clock this morning and was at once taken in charge by a reception committee and a mounted escort of a thousand cowboys and cowgirls who shouted and cavorted as the former president and one-time ranchman alighted from the train.

Mr. Roosevelt's visit and the speech he delivered later in the day formed the culmination of the annual Frontier Days celebration which had attracted to the city thousands of persons from all parts of the west and a large number of tourists from more distant sections of the country.

Colonel Roosevelt's Speech.

Out in the open air, under the blue sky, a vast crowd assembled to hear the former president speak, and it heard one of the most important speeches he has made since leaving the White House. His address was as follows:

When, at the close of my hunting trip in Africa, I reached the borders of civilization, the first invitation I accepted was this, to visit the capital of Wyoming on the day when the people of the frontier came together to commemorate their achievements; I was glad it was so, because I have a peculiar feeling for the men and women of what used to be called the "Far West," and especially for those of the cattle country. For a number of years I lived on a ranch on the Little Missouri, sharing work and play, good fortune and bad fortune, with my neighbors; working on the round-up, serving as delegate from the Little Missouri round-up district to the Montana Stockgrowers' association, and even at times acting as deputy sheriff at my end of the county. I count those years as among the most valuable of my life, because nothing breeds such community of feeling as to work with one's fellowmen at their life tasks, and to learn to know their feelings by actually sharing them. The man of the west, throughout the successive stages of western growth, has always been one of the two or three most typical figures—indeed, I am tempted to say the most typical figure—in American life, and no man can really understand our country and appreciate what it really is and what it promises unless he has the fullest and closest sympathy with the ideals and aspirations of the west. The prime reason for this is to be found in the fact the westerner is so good an American. He is an American first and foremost; for this is the great lesson, friends, that all of us need to learn and to keep, the lesson that it is unimportant whether a man lives north or south, east or west, provided he is genuinely and in good faith an American, that he feels every part of the United States as his own, and that he is honestly desirous to uphold the interests of all other Americans in whatever sections of the country they may dwell.

A hundred years ago, when men spoke of the west they meant the country between the Alleghanies and the Mississippi. Fifty years ago the white man's west took in Minnesota, Iowa and Kansas, and then skipped across to California and Oregon. The country of the great plains and the Rockies, the country in which you whom I am now addressing lead your lives and do your work, has grown up within my own lifetime. I myself saw and took part in the closing years of the pioneer period, and it was my great privilege to work side by side with the pioneers—the ranchmen, the miners, the cow-punchers, the mule-skinners, the bull whackers—who actually opened up the country. I have seen the herds and flocks of the cattlemen and sheepmen supplant the game; I have seen the fortunate movement by which the small farm has tended gradually to take the place of the great unfenced ranch. I now travel in every comfort on railways across lands which, when I first rode across them, were still the home of the Indian and the buffalo; and I find cities where one can obtain not merely comfort, but luxury, in the places where thirty years ago there was not a building beyond a log hut or a doble house. The men who did this work were engaged in the final stages of conquering the continent; and it was their privilege to do one of the great works of all time, to do their part in the performance of an epic feat in the history of the progress of mankind.

West Stands for Progress.

I have used the word progress. The west stands for growth, for progress. So must the whole American people stand. A great democracy must be progressive or it will soon cease to be either great or democratic. No nation, no state, no party, can stand still. It must either go forward or go backward; and it becomes useless if it goes backward. Therefore I greet you, men of the west, and I stand for progress as all men must stand who are progressive.

The pioneers and their immediate successors won victory only by proving that they possessed the great, masterful qualities which lie at the foundation of National greatness. There are certain well-meaning men of intellectual cultivation, but lacking mental and moral robustness, who complain continually that they find American life, and especially the life of those American communities emerging from the pioneer stage, crude and without genius or beauty. Genius is a fine thing for a nation, but character is a still finer thing, and though beauty is good, strength is an even greater good. The men who have made this great republic of the west what it is, and especially the men who have turned it into a continental commonwealth, have possessed in the highest degree the great virile virtues of strength, courage, energy, and undaunted and unwavering resolution. Their typical leaders—of whom Abraham Lincoln, though the most exceptional, was the most typical—have possessed keen intelligence, and a character not merely strong but lofty, a character exalted by the fact that great power was accompanied by a high and fine determination to use this great power for the common good, for the advancement of mankind. The pioneer days are over, save in a few places; and the more complex life of today calls for a greater variety of good qualities than were needed on the frontier. There is need at present to encourage the development of new abilities which can be brought to high perfection only by a kind of training useless in pioneer times; but these new qualities can only supplement, and never supplant, the old, homely virtues; the need for the special and distinctive pioneer virtues is as great as ever. In other words, as our civilization grows older and more complex, while it is true that we need new forms of trained ability, and need to develop men whose lives are devoted wholly to the pursuit of special objects, it is yet also true that we need a greater and not a less development of the fundamental frontier virtues. These virtues include the power of self-help, together with the power of joining with others for mutual help, and, what is especially important, the feeling of comradeship, of social good-fellowship. Any man who had the good fortune to live among the old frontier conditions must, in looking back, realize how vital was this feeling of general comradeship and social fellowship. There are good men and bad men, in the new communities just as in the old communities, and the conditions on the frontier were such that the qualities of the good and bad alike were rather more strikingly manifested than in older communities, but among the men who tried to lead hard-working, decent lives, there was a feeling of genuine democracy, which represented an approach to the American ideal which we certainly should do everything in our power to preserve. We did not try to say that men were equal when they were not equal, but we did our best to secure something like an equality of opportunity and an equality of reward for good service; and moreover, each man expected to be received, and, on the whole, was received wherever he went, on the footing that his merits warranted.

Now so far as possible these qualities and conditions that bring about these qualities should be kept in the great states which are growing out of the old frontier communities. We need to strive for the general social betterment of the people as a whole, and yet to encourage individual liberty and set high reward on individual initiative up to the point where they become detrimental to the general welfare.

Wrong Doers and Wrong Systems.

In continually and earnestly striving for this betterment of social and economic conditions in our complex industrial civilization, we should work in the old frontier spirit of brotherly comradeship and good will. I do not mean that we should refrain from hating wrong; on the contrary. I would preach firey wrath against wrong. But I would not preach such wrath against the wrong-doer, save in those cases where his wrong-doing really is due to evil moral attributes on his part and not to a wrong or false system, of which he is almost as much the victim as the beneficiary. Sometimes a wrong represents the deliberate wickedness of the wrong-doer, in which case the remedy is to punish him, but sometimes it represents the effects of a false social system, in which case the right course is to alter what is false in the system. Both principles need to be kept in view as guides to our conduct, and it is necessary sometimes to work in accordance with one and sometimes in accordance with the other.

Before ending I wish to say a word on something which I believe should especially interest all men who live in the open country, and especially all men who during the past thirty years have lived and worked on ranches, or have done their life work in the wilder parts of our land, on the great plains or among the mountains. The phase of our national life in which the stockman, the mining prospector, were the chief characters, was not only a very important but also a very picturesque phase. Often such a phase passes without any great artist arising to commemorate it.

The old-time backwoodsman, for instance, the man of the back country who lived in the eastern forests through which the waters ran eastward to the Atlantic and westward to the Mississippi, passed away without any painter or sculptor arising who possessed at once both the keenness of vision to see what a vital and picturesque figure the backwoodsman was, and the genius adequately to present that figure. The artist who saw that picturesqueness of the backwoodsman lacked the genius adequately to commemorate it, while the artists of real ability unfortunately had their eyes turned towards Europe and lacked the robust originality which the novelist Cooper showed—to see where their chances lay to do a great work. But in our generation, for our good fortune a great artist arose who was capable of seeing and of recording the infinite picturesqueness of the life of the plains and the Rockies.

Eulogy of Remington.

Of course I speak of Frederic Remington. He was one of those Americans who by his achievements distinctly deserved well of America. He worked with pencil, with brush, with chisel, he was both a painter and a sculptor. His pictures and his few bronzes are equally good. When my own regiment, a typically western regiment recruited mainly from the men of the great plains and the mountains, was disbanded at Montauk Point, the officers and enlisted men joined in giving me Remington's "Bronze Bronco Buster," a gift which I thought peculiarly appropriate coming from such a body of men. In Remington's pictures all the most vivid and characteristic features of the western pioneer life which is just closing were set forth, and the commemorated forever the men of the plains and the mountains as they actually were. The cowboy is his favorite type, but the mining prospector, the frontier farmer, the man who guides ox-wagon or mule-team, the soldier, the Indian—all appear. Now I wish very much that these men themselves would in their turn provide a monument for the great artist the sum of whose activities represent such a feature of American achievements, and, above all, represents a commemoration of some of the most interesting figures that have ever appeared on the stage of American life. A statue should be raised to Remington by some really first class artist.

Here at Cheyenne in this gathering many hundreds of the men have come together who were themselves typical leaders in and representatives of the very life which Remington so portrayed that it will always live. I hope that these men will join together, arrange the appointment of a committee, and start to raise funds for the erection of such a statue.

AS IT APPEARED TO HER

Mrs. Oelrichs Evidently Didn't Think Much of Mr. Blank's Earning Capacity.

Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, the best-dressed woman in Newport, criticized very pertinently, at a recent dinner, the new dinner gowns of Paquin and Callot.

These clinging and filmy gowns are chiefly remarkable for the V-shaped back that they possess. The V—it is incredible, but it is true—opens all the way down to the waist line. At a gala performance in Paris given by the Metropolitan Opera company of New York—the most successful performance Paris ever saw, and one whereat $40,000 was gained for the Pluviose victims—many of the beautiful Americans in the $40 orchestra seats wore these daring gowns, and now at Newport they are often to be seen.

Mrs. Oelrichs stared at one with astounded eyes at a dinner, and her neighbor said:

"Isn't that new gown of Mrs. Blank's a dream? Old Mr. Blank is so devoted. They say that everything he makes goes on his wife's back."

Mrs. Oelrichs, her eye fixed on the gown's terrible V, said with a smile:

"Well, he must be making very little, then."

Practical Matching. 6

What the little girl with the 15 cents in pennies wanted was some red ribbon of a particular shade for her mother. She knew the shade, but she couldn't explain it and all she could say was, it wasn't that, no, nor that; it was deeper than that, and not so deep as that, and so on.

The mission was looking hopeless when suddenly she darted from the shop and seized a passing gentleman by the hand.

"Will you please come into this shop with me?" she asked innocently.

"Certainly, my chickabiddy," he replied, "if I can be of any use. What is it?"

The little girl replied not, but led the wondering stranger to the counter.

"There, miss!" she said, triumphantly. "Mother wants some ribbon the color of this gentleman's nose."

Divining Rod 200 Years Old.

Winslow W. Fifield of Medford, Mass., owns a metallic divining rod brought from England more than two hundred years ago by one of his ancestors. The rod, says Mr. Fifield, has been used successfully all over New England and in the western mining districts. It is attached to whalebone handles 12 inches long and weighs two ounces. The handles have inscriptions on them which are almost obliterated by age.

The person who brought the rod to America was Isaac Greenleaf, who settled in Massachusetts. The rod became famous as a finder of water. After marking the place of many springs the rod was used in California, Colorado and North Carolina for locating by men in quest of gold mines and other metals. One person who used it with particular success was a blind man, in whose hands the rod is said to have done marvels.

A Strong Preacher.

The minister's eight-year-old daughter was returning with her parents from church, where the district superintendent had that morning occupied the pulpit.

"Oh, father," asked the little girl, her face alive with enthusiasm, "don't you think Brother C. is a very strong preacher? I do."

Gratified by this evidence of unusual intelligence on the part of his offspring, the minister eagerly inquired into her reasons for her statement.

"Oh," replied the little miss, artlessly, "didn't you see how the dust rose when he stamped his feet?"—Judge.

The Counterfeit Southerner.

Of course, there are many counterfeits. A most amusing imitation is one that often passes for the typical southerner in New York. This satchel-mouthed braggart infests the cafes and demands attention by his abusing the waiter for offending his delicate sense of honor. "I hate a nigger, suh," he loudly proclaims, which is a sentiment that one never hears from those to the manner born. He haunts the theaters and parades the streets, since it is poor fun to practise his gentility in private.

He wears a wide black hat, mounts the table and yells whenever the band plays a southern melody. Such a pretentious caricature would be harmless enough, but for the ridicule he brings upon the south. Unfortunately, popular authors seem to accept him at face value and exploit him in novels or plays where a "southerner" is a necessary part of the stage machinery.—Everybody's Magazine.

Wasted Sarcasm.

The Philadelphia milk dealers who recently raised the price of their product to nine cents a quart and then lowered it again to eight appear to have been the subjects of a great deal of unjust censure. They announced at the time of the raise that milk could not be sold at eight cents without loss. Finding that the consumers would not pay the new price, however, they are continuing to sell at the old, thereby qualifying as genuine philanthropists. Every purchaser of milk at eight cents a quart will doubtless hereafter feel that he is an object of charity.

Hoodwinking Clergymen

When a small clique of men put up a scheme to harness the clergy of America and induce the ministers to, in turn "hitch up" the members of the churches, we should all take notice.

They couldn't harness the preachers in a bad cause except by deceiving them.

Ministers of the gospel are essentially and fundamentally honest but, like all men who work for the public good, they are at times mislead by false statements.

Trust them when they have exact truth to speak from.

Now for the story which should interest every one for we are all either receivers of wages or we pay to wage earners and the freedom of each individual is at issue.

In various papers the following statement has been printed. Read it carefully at least twice.

"Interest in Labor Sunday.

"Labor Sunday—the Sunday preceding Labor day—will be observed generally this year and in future years throughout the United States. This because of the American Federation of Labor declaration for the observance of that day. The numerous letters recently received at American Federation of Labor headquarters from ministers is an assurance that interest in the idea of giving special attention to the cause of labor from the pulpit one day in the twelve months is widespread. Our readers are urged to try to bring about an understanding in their respective districts with representatives of the church so that ministers will make addresses that may attract trade unionists to the churches in large numbers for the day. Ministers should say what they think on the occasion in order that their trade union hearers may put the right estimate as to where the church stands on the question of the organization of labor. The more the subject is discussed the better will it be for labor. Union ethics are sound. —American Federationist."

Observe that "Labor Union" men "are urged" to induce ministers to make addresses that will attract trade unionists to the churches "for the day." "Ministers should say," etc., and winds up with "Union ethics are sound;" observe the hidden threat.

This is clipped from the American Federationist the organ of Sam Gompers, et al.

This clipping has been sent to papers throughout the country and the Typographical Union men in the newspaper offices instructed to "urge" that it be printed.

That is one of the ways of the "machine."

It looks harmless so the papers print it.

But! Let's lift the cover and look under.

The hidden motive is as dangerous to the peace and liberty of the citizens as a coiled rattlesnake in the grass.

Organization by workmen to peacefully and successfully present their side is necessary and most commendable.

There are such organizations now rapidly winning their way to public confidence without strikes, dynamite or killing fellow workmen.

(Some facts on this matter a little further along in this article.)

We see here a demand on the ministers of God, that they endorse and help build up the strike-producing, boycotting and violent American Federation of Labor.

Think of the man of God who teaches brotherly love being covertly ordered to praise and help get new members for an organization with a record for violence, crime and murder done by its members the like of which the world has never seen.

Think of the thousands of women made widows and the increasing thousands of children left fatherless by the pistol, club, dynamite and boot heel of members of this Labor Trust.

Any one who recalls the countless murders done in the multitude of strikes in the past few years will agree this is no exaggeration.

Take just one as an illustration:

There were some thirty men murdered and over 5000, bruised and maimed in the Chicago teamster's strike.

There is seldom a day passes but somewhere in our country from one to a score of our fellow men are assaulted or murdered by members of this band.

Then remember the homes blown up or burned. The families hounded, the rioting, burning of street cars, wrecking of trains and attempted or successful killing of passengers.

The general disturbance of industry and the thousands of dollars forced from tax payers to pay extra police, sheriffs and militia to protect, even in a feeble way, the citizens from the mobs of members of the American Federation of Labor.

Then you will realize why the great peace-loving majority of over 80 million Americans protest against the growth of this crime-tainted organization comprising perhaps one and one-half million men, of which it is estimated at least seven-tenths are peace-loving citizens and are members by coercion and are not in sympathy with the three-tenths who have gained control and force their methods.

We find that a few designing men have seized control of the American Federation of Labor, just as some shrewd capitalists have secured control of some railroads and other interests and are now twisting and turning them into machines for personal profit and fame.

These men cunningly plan to force workmen to join and pay 25 to 75 cents a month in fees.

Various methods are used to "induce" workmen to join.

First, they talk of the "tyranny of capital" making slaves of workmen.

Then they work up enthusiasm about the "brotherhood of man" and other talk which experience has shown excites the emotions of workmen and they are induced to join and pay fees to the leaders.

The 5000 workmen in Battle Creek are, as a rule, free from the dictates of the great Labor Trust and still get the highest wages in Michigan. If they had yielded to the smooth talk of the agents of the trust and joined, they would pay in fees from $1250.00 to $2000.00 a month to the big trust and be subject to strike orders any time.

Now they save that and put the money into homes and family comforts

But the managers of the American Federation of Labor have worked hard and long to harness them.

The trust has sent small bales of money and last winter 18 "organizers" to tie up Battle Creek. They hired halls, gave picture shows, smokers, etc., as an investment, looking to rich returns when they succeeded in having them tied hand and foot.

But they failed and the last of these "organizers" left Battle Creek on May 1st saying "it's no use."

The workmen knew the record of this great trust and formed their own association to protect their rights and also to protect them from the big Labor Trust.

In Philadelphia some 4000 independent street car men, who mainly had families, had their own union and refused to join the big trust, preferring to be free to work or not as they pleased.

But the trust planned to force them into the fee-paying ranks, so a strike was ordered to compel the traction company to kick out these men and hire only Labor Trust members.

It was not a question of wages or hours but to push the free men out of their positions where they were earning good money to support their families. The strike was ordered, not to raise wages or reduce hours, remember, but solely to throw out members of an independent union and make places only for Labor Trust members, and thus show the independent men they could not earn a living unless they first paid fees to the trust managers.

Incidentally the people of Philadelphia must submit to no car service, rioting and bloodshed with millions in losses while these fee-hunting, notoriety seeking trust leaders were teaching the world that industry cannot be carried on except by workmen who first bend the knee, bow the head and pay fees.

How these men as strike leaders love to see their names in the papers each morning! It's meat and bread to their souls.

Then think of the lordly power, and don't forget the steady flow of money squeezed from the workman's hard earned pay enevelope.

But when these leaders "tie up" any industry no man can hold a job who refuses to pay fines even on trumped up charges, and steadily pay fees whatever they are.

The workman is absolutely at the mercy of this band of men who have secured and hold control.

Many and many an honest workman has raised his voice and appealed to his fellows to rise and throw off the yoke of Gompers, et al. But, as one writes, "At every convention of the American Federation of Labor, strong opposition comes up but at the critical moment the impassioned orator appears and most dramatically puts the spot light on the leader and covers him with a mawkish film of 'martyrdom' and the emotional delegates yell in delight, forgetting the instructions of the peaceful workingmen at home who desire to free themselves from the odium of membership under the great advocates of strike, boycott, violence and hate."

So we see the unequalled insolence with which these trust leaders propose to "induce" ministers to pull their chestnuts from the fire by preaching modern aggressive and violent labor trust methods.

There is a better way to secure justice for workers, as will appear further along.

Just a little diversion here.

I am charged with having first brought to the attention of the public some years ago, the name "Labor Trust."

A trust is a combination of men or organizations for the purpose of selling their product at a profit and restricting production to effect it.

We will say a large Oil Company gathers in smaller ones and thus controls production.

The Labor Trust "gathers in" local trade organizations and thus has power to say how much work each man shall do.

The Oil Company then fixes prices.

The Labor Trust does likewise.

The Oil Company may "use methods" to force an unwilling dealer to join.

The Labor Trust men go further and slug the independent man if he tries to sell his labor without paying fees and "obeying orders." They are both exactly alike in purpose, which, in both cases is entirely selfish to gain power and money for the leaders.

Certain Labor Trust members do not hesitate to use violence, dynamiting of property, burning homes of independent men and even murder to force obedience.

The Oil Company doesn't go so far.

Both are extremely dangerous to the welfare of people and communities, for power placed in the hands of a few men either representing Capital or Labor is almost always abused and the public suffers.

Remember, reader, that your safety lies in strenuous opposition to all trusts which try to ride over and dictate to the people.

Only by opposing their growth can you retain your personal liberty.

Now to ministers.

The average congregation is made up of about 90 per cent. of free citizens and much less than 10 per cent. of members of the Labor Trust.

The free citizen wants to hear words defending the rights and independence of the common man, free from the arbitrary dictates of any self-seeking organization either of Capital or Labor.

The merchant, lawyer, school teacher, doctor, clerk, farmer and workman rebels against any forcible stopping of trains, boats, street cars, or factories, for the prosperity of the community is entirely dependent on steady continuance of these things.

Men don't like strikes, boycotts, injured workmen or burned cars and factories.

A famous divine says: "These men may hate capitalists but their hate for other laboring men burns like a flame, eats like nitric acid, is malignant beyond all description."

Then we remember cases of acid throwing, eyes gouged out, children pursued, women stripped, homes destroyed, men murdered and the long, long list of atrocities practised by Labor Trust members on other human beings who cannot agree with the trust methods.

Now for the better way.

Workingmen are now organizing in the old fashioned trades union or "guild" way, affiliated with the National Trades and Workers Association whose constitution provides arbitration of differences with agreement for no strikes, boycott, picketing or hateful coercion of any kind.

This Trade Association has evolved from the experience of the past and is the highest order of Trades Unionism at the present day.

Under its laws it is not possible for the Hod Carriers Union or the Street Sweepers Union to order the school teachers or locomotive engineers to quit work in a "sympathetic strike."

If any craft finds injustice, the case is presented to properly selected arbitrators, testimony taken and the case presented to the public through the press. Thereupon public opinion, that greatest of all powers, makes itself felt and curiously enough a fair settlement is generally the result.

There is no strike, no loss of wages, no loss to the community and yet the faithful workers get their just treatment.

There are many details which have been worked out by men skilled in labor matters.

It will recompense any interested man to know these details which can be secured by a postal request for constitution and by-laws written to the National Trades and Workers Association, Kingman Block, Battle Creek, Mich.

Reader, look carefully into this great question of the relations of Capital and Labor and its successful solution. The new plan works and brings results for the members.

I became so favorably impressed with the trustworthiness and practicability of the leaders of this new labor movement that I gave the Association a sanitorium at Battle Creek worth about $400,000 and with about 300 rooms, to be used as a home for their old members and the helpless babies, sometimes made fatherless by the pistol, club or boot heel of some member of the violent "Labor Trust."

Suppose you attend church Labor Sunday and hear what your minister has to say in defense of the safety and rights of the common, everyday man.

Let me ask you to read again a portion of one of my public articles printed a few years ago.

"The people of the world have given me money enough to spend in these talks through the papers in trying to make better and safer conditions for the common people, whether the Postum business runs or not.

Scores of letters have come to me from work-people and others, some from union men recounting their sufferings from union domination and urging that their cases be laid before the public.

It will not answer for us to only sympathize with the poor, the oppressed, those who haven't power enough to drive off tyrants and resent oppression, we must help them tie the hands of the oppressors. Americans must act.

Some of my forebears in New England left comfortable homes, took with them the old flint locks, slept on the ground in rain and frost; hungry, footsore, and half clothed they grimly pushed on where the Eternal God of Human Liberty urged them. They wove for me and for you a mantle of freedom, woven in a loom where the shuttles were cannon balls and bullets and where swords were used to pick out the tangles in the yarn.

These old, sturdy grandads of ours stood by that loom until the mantle was finished, then, stained with their life-blood it was handed down to us. Shall I refuse to bear it on my shoulders because the wearing costs me a few dollars, and are you cowards enough to hide yours because some foreign labor union anarchist orders you to strip it off?

I have faith that the blood of 1776 still coursing in your veins will tingle and call until you waken. Then Americans will Act." "There's a Reason."

C. W. POST.

THE SUNBEAM.

BY W. G. HUNT.

Published every Friday, at Sunbeam, Red Lake County, Minnesota.

Subscription price $1.00 per year in advance. If not paid in advance $1.50

Entered as Second-class matter August 30 1905, at the post office at Sunbeam Minn under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879

Eastern Red Lake county are begining to get into the political game, Andrus Hanson, of Lillo having filed for the republican nomination for County Auditor.

Harry Ives, of St.Hilaire has filed for the Republican nomination for county treasurer. He was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of O. T. Tanberg, and as he has made a good official it would seem that he is entitled to another term.

Senator Hansons platform is at a variance with the platforms adopted by the northern Minnesota Developement Association held at Bemidji, and Crookston. But we don't suppose it will make any differance, as him and his platform will go to the same bone yard Sept. 20th,.

County Division.

The Thief River Falls News claims that we are making a campaign of misrepresentations, on the county division proposition, when as a matter of fact we are not making any campaign at all, and if there is being any organized campaign made against divison we have not heard about it. But we consider that the farmers should have the facts placed before them as they are, and not as the county division boomers are stateing them.

The Red Lake county court house will be completed and all ready to turn over to the county November 1st, and Red Lake county on that date will pay the cash for it and it will belong to the county as it is now. Then in this same month we elect a full set of county officials to go into them and attend to the countys business for two years. Now Mr. Taxpayer, do you want to go a little farther down on that ticket and vote to establish a new county, with another new court house to build and another set of county officers to pay?

We in the new county would no doubt be districted into new Commissioner districts according to population, which would of course be fair, but it would give three Commissioners to the city of Thief River Falls and the teritory surrounding it, while the rest of the county would have two, Now as the people of Thief River Falls have been bonding their city for public improvements what would be more natural than that they would want to bond Pennington county to its limit to build up some grand buildings in Thief River Falls. But says one: "We have farmers for our County Commissioners." Do not deceive yourselves by thinking that the town of Kratka and Highlanding will each of them have a county Commissioner, for they will not after the new county is organized.

We have no prticular objection to county division if the people of the north part of the county thinks they can afford it, but we think it would have been better to have waited a few more years, until the northern part of county had got better settled up and improved. Of course we are aware that this argument will not have any affect on some people that are looking for office, or some other rake-off, out of the deal but we believe in letting the common tax payers fully understand the situation, as it is.

Get A Free Home.

Come into the beautiful west and get a home of your own where wheat goes 50 bushels per acre. We can locate you on government land or sell you a fine farm cheap. Hurry! Send postage for full infomation now.

Montana Land Company.
Great Falls, Montana.

The Professional View.

An English physician of whom many stories are in circulation may not be as unsympathetic as a recent anecdote seems to make him. He is a specialist on all sorts of mental disturbances and the fits, spasms and convulsions which sometimes accompany them. One of his patients, a most excitable person, if suddenly alarmed or distressed, would fall into a curious comatose state from which she could not be roused until the effect of the shock had passed. The physician had been summoned again and again, but it always happened that he was away from home at the time, and before he arrived on the scene of action the patient had recovered. At last one night he was summoned and arrived at the house while the woman was still unconscious. He hurried upstairs and into the room where she was lying on the couch. He looked at her, and an expression of interest overspread his face.

"Now, this," he said in his most cheerful tone—"this is something like!"

Whistler's Ways.

It was Whistler's custom when drowsy to go deliberately to sleep, no matter where or what the circumstances might be. At one dinner party his gentle snore suddenly aroused his neighbor, who nudged him violently with his elbow. "I say, Whistler," he protested excitedly, "you must not sleep here!"

"Leave me alone!" snapped Whistler. "I've said all I wanted to. I've no interest at all in what you and your friends have to say."

One evening he was my guest at dinner at a hotel. Edwin A. Abbey was also there. Right after dinner Whistler went calmly to sleep. On the way to the theater he enjoyed another nap in the cab, and he slumbered peacefully through the greater part of the play. The next morning he blandly asked me: "What did Abbey have to say last night? Anything worth while?"—Century.

"Charms" In Cornwall.

Cornwall, England, is a county of "charms." "The passing of children through holes in the earth, rocks or trees, once an established rite, is still practiced in various parts of Cornwall," wrote Thomas Q. Couch about fifty years ago. "With us boils are cured by creeping on the hands and knees beneath a bramble which has grown into the soil at both ends. Children afflicted with hernia are still passed through a slit in an ash sapling before sunrise, fasting, after which the slit portions are bound up, and as they unite so the malady is cured. The ash is indeed a tree of many virtues. Venomous reptiles are never known to rest under its shadow, and a single blow from an ash stick is instant death to an adder. Struck by a bough of any other tree, the reptile is said to retain marks of life until the sun goes down."

Halley's Comet.

A French scientist declares that Halley's comet was known to the authors of the Talmud long before Halley came into existence. This French scientist quotes from the Talmud: "Two wise men of Palestine, Gambiel and Joshua, made a voyage on the sea. The first had brought with him bread to eat. The second one in addition had brought flour. When Gambiel had eaten all his bread he asked him for flour, saying to him, 'How didst thou know we should be so long on our journey that thou didst bring flour?' To which Joshua did answer: 'There is a very bright star which appeareth every seventy years and which deceiveth mariners. I have thought that perchance it might surprise us during our voyage, lead us astray and thus prolong our voyage on the sea; hence it is that I have provided myself with flour.'"

The Falkland Islands.

The Falkland islands are among the least known and most out of the way corners of the widely scattered British empire. They form a sort of British suburb of the south pole, some 500 miles from the antarctic end of America, Cape Horn. A former governor of the Falkland islands, the late Sir William Robinson, used to say that he would have committed suicide while there if he could have found a tree tall enough to hang himself on.—London Standard.

How Like a Man!

Mrs. Kocknoodle—Oh, Norris, if you would always be as good and gentle and kind as you are at this moment how happy we might be! Mr. Nocknoodle (losing his temper instantly and bellowing at the top of his voice)—Do you mean to say, madam, that I am not always as good and kind as I am at this moment?

Outdone.

Jones—Yes, sir; that boy of mine is a wonderful piano player. Why, he can play with his toes! Brown—How old is he? Jones—Fifteen. Brown—I've got a [illegible] who can play with his toes, and he is only one year old.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Candidate for Sheriff.

I desire to announce to the voters of Red Lake County that I will be a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff, at the primaries, on Sept. 20, 1910. Should you see fit to nominate and elect me I shall endeavor to carry out the duties of the office to the best of my ability,

Charles Fellman.

For Judge of Probate.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the nomination for the office of Judge of Probate on the Republican ticket. I earnestly solicit the support of the voters of Red Lake County at the primary election to be held September 20.

Ben Christianson,

County Treasurer.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican Nomination for County Treasurer of Red Lake County and respectfully solicit the support and votes of all who believe I will, if nominated and elected, run the office in an honest, effecient and economical manner. If elected I hereby pledge that I will run the office to the best of my ability in an impartial, honest and businesslike manner.

At the Republican Primaries Sept. 20 1910.

Harry E. Ives.

ALBERT BERG.

For Senator.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Senator for the 61st District, unequivocally endorsing the platform adopted by the Republican Convention, June 21st, 1910, and pledge my vote and best effort to legislation that will re-apportion the state justly and fairly and effective on or before January 1st, 1912, and without regard to the term of office for which I may be elected, should I be the choice of the Republicans of this District and be elected in the General Election in November next,

Albert Berg,
Spooner, Minn.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Representative for the 61st legislative district, comprising the counties of Clearwater, Beltrami and Red Lake and respectfully solicit your support at primaries, I pledge myself to the support of all measures looking to the best interests of my constituency and in the event of my nomination and election will at all times use every honorable means to further the interests of same. I heartily indorse the platform adopted at the Northern Minnesota Development Association meeting held at Bemidji, last March.

Iver A. Krohn,
Shevlin, Minnesota.

For Representative.

I hereby announce my candidacy as a candidate for the Republican nomination as a member of the house of representatives from the 61st legislative district [illegible] comprising the counties of Beltrami, [illegible] and Red Lake. If nominated and elected I pledge myself to use all my best efforts to secure the re-districting of the state, a mill tax for good roads, a liberal appropriation to advertise the resources of Minnesota and a county option law.

D. P. O'Neil.

Water Colors.

Water color painting was gradually raised from the hard, dry style of the eighteenth century to its present brilliancy by the efforts of Nicholson, Copley, Sanley and others. The Water Color society's exhibitions began in 1805 and may be said to mark the real beginning of modern water color painting. The great master, if not creator, of the art was the celebrated Turner, of whom we read so much in the works of John Ruskin.—Exchange.

For Sale.

A fine FARM, lying on the south bank of Red Lake River, one half mile south of the Highlanding creamery, for sale at a bargain, if taken at once. Inquire at this office.

10 15 NONE HIGHER

50 YEAR

McCALL PATTERNS

Celebrated for style, perfect fit, simplicity and reliability nearly 40 years. Sold in nearly every city and town in the United States and Canada, or by mail direct. More sold than any other make. Send for free catalogue.

McCALL'S MAGAZINE

More subscribers than any other fashion magazine—million a month. Invaluable. Latest styles, patterns, dressmaking, millinery, plain sewing, fancy needlework, hairdressing, etiquette, good stories, etc. Only 50 cents a year (worth double), including a free pattern. Subscribe today, or send for sample copy.

WONDERFUL INDUCEMENTS

to Agents. Postal brings premium catalogue and new cash prize offers. Address

THE McCALL CO., 236 to 246 W. 37th St., NEW YORK

As Usual.

[illegible] Dailey (to friend)—This is my [illegible] Freddy, this is Mr. Jack[illegible]

[illegible] I know. You're the man [illegible] had more money than [illegible]

The Greatest Historian.

By common consent the greatest of all historians is Thucydides, the Greek contemporary of Pericles and author of the history of the Peloponnesian war. One of the greatest tributes that can be paid to him is that, according to the estimate of a very able critic, we have a more exact account of a long and eventful period by Thucydides than we have of any period in modern history, equally long and eventful, and yet all this is compressed into a single volume. For concise, vigorous and yet intense presentation Thucydides has never been equaled. He is easily the king of historians.—New York American.

It Did.

"Do you know anything, doctor," said Mrs Finnikin, "that will put a little color into my cheeks? I am so dreadfully pale."

"Well, madam," replied Dr. Blunt, "perhaps if I tell you that you have a hole in your stocking about the size of a quarter it may have the desired effect."

Would Feel at Home Here.

"German prisoners are fed meat four times a year."

"How can his majesty the Geezer afford it?"

How Old They Were.

"I see you employ a number of old men."

"I do."

"How old are they?"

"Too old to be interested in canoeing or mandolins or race horses or girls or tennis. That makes them fine for work."—Washington Herald.

Rather.

The subjoined item appeared in a French newspaper:

"There was found in the river this morning the body of a soldier cut to pieces and sewed up in a sack. The circumstances seem to preclude any suspicion of suicide."

Customs and Habits.

Our customs and habits are like the ruts in roads. The wheels of life set us into them, and we jog along through the mire because it is too much trouble to get out of them.

Why She Didn't.

New Employer—But why did you leave your last mistress? New Maid Servant—Did you expect me to bring her along with me?—Cleveland Leader.

Yes we have plenty of LUMBER,

IN THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Windows and Doors. Lime and Brick.

☞ During the navigation season we in connection with Red Lake River Transportation Company will deliver lumber to any place on the Red Lake River between Thief River Falls and Little Oak, as cheap as it can be purchased at any railroad station in Minnesota.

THIEF RIVER FALLS LUMBER COMPANY.

D. N. WINTON,
Manager.

U. S. Mail.

The U. S. Mail, leaves Sunbeam, at 10.00 a. m. on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

Arrives on the same days, at 4.30 p.m.

Wm. G. Hunt, p. m.

Provide for the worst; the best will save itself.

Not Worth While.

"I notice that you usually tell the truth."

"Yes; I found that telling lies gets you into almost as much trouble."—Kansas City Journal.

The Feminine Pessimist.

The feminine pessimist worries because she is not as young as she once was; the optimist of the same sex rejoices that she is not so old as she will be.—Life.

Would you be happy? Be the thing you seem.—Horace.

PATENTS

Prize Offers from Leading Manufacturers

Book on patents. "Hints to inventors." "Inventions needed." "Why some inventors fail." Send rough sketch or model for search of Patent Office records. Our Mr. Greeley was formerly Acting Commissioner of Patents, and as such had full charge of the U. S. Patent Office.

GREELEY & McINTIRE
PATENT ATTORNEYS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

FOR NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, RHEUMATISM, BACKACHE, PAIN IN CHEST, DISTRESS IN STOMACH, SLEEPLESSNESS.

DR. MILES' ANTI-PAIN PILLS FOR Headache

TAKE ONE of the Little Tablets AND THE PAIN IS GONE.

DR. MILES'
Pain Pills

If you have Headache Try One

They Relieve Pain Quickly, leaving no bad After-effects

25 Doses 25 Cents Never Sold in Bulk.

THE LOCAL NEWS.

Do your Notary Public business at the SUNBEAM office.

Make your applications to make final proof and for farm loans at this office.

Jack Frost called on us, last Monday night.

The weather continues to be dry, and geting dryer.

E. K. Gjernes, the Garnes merchant will remove his store to Oakly, the new town site on the Soo, 5 miles south from Garnes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rolandson, of Roland were up here Tuesday looking up the potato market, but found them rather a light crop in this locality.

Lenard McAndress has a very sore toe as the result of his favorite mare "hell" steping on him Monday evenig. The wound although painful is doing well.

Henry Rodman is building a new stock barn on his Deer Park farm 20 X 60 feet. Adolph Lindberg and Jens Bolstad are doing the carpenter work for him.

We publish this week the first speech of Colonel Roosevelt, on his western tour. All of his speeches made on this tour will be published in THE SUNBEAM.

There has been a new post office established at Clearwater crossing, named Roland post office, with Otto Dahl as post master. The office will be supplied with mail by the Radney route.

Rasmus Bartleson, who has been employed in this office since June 1st, left for Chisholme Minnesota Monday, where he has accepted a position in the printing office, at a salery of $18, a week for a starter.

Glen Martz is up this week, with a crew of men making a survey of the Swanson ditch. He streightened out the section line between section 29 and 32 for a new road grade, which is to be built on that line.

Ed Rustad and Eddy Singer came over from McIntosh last Friday, to visit their Deer Park homes. They made the trip over from Lessor to Rhoda in 4 hours on bicycles. Mr. Rustad and Charles Erickson have their steam threshing machine at work near McIntosh.

We were mistaken in the name of the Sunsdahl living near Erie who had his hay burned, as it was Olof Sunsdahl that had his hay and barn burned, instead of Ole Susdahl. We learn that our informent was also mistaken, as to Mr. Omlind loosing any hay by fire, and we hope that they will not loose any in the future.

Ye editor transacted business in the towns of Deer Park, Equality, Garnes and Mayfield, on last Friday and Saturday, returning home Sunday. Although we were not out on county division business we did not meet a Pennington county man on the trip, but we did meet one farmer that used to be for division before he discovered what he was being "steered up against," and then he reformed.

The "picked up" base ball nine from Brunkeberg Kuebnel Erie, and Highlanding, played a match game of ball with the Lillo nine, at Highlanding on Sunday afternoon. We did not learn the score, as the tally keeper played out before the close of the game, but the best information obtainable places the score at 2 to 1 in favor of Lillo. We don't mean only 1 and 2 scors, but that the Lillo boys got twice as many as the other fellows. There was a large crowd turned out to see the game; among which were several ladies. The boys of both clubs acted the part of perfect gentlemen and the game was played without a single "chewing the rag" match. Herman Lillo and P. P. Farimer did the umpireing, which they did satisfactory.

Our school district fails to get a first grade teacher to open school next Monday, but expect to get one next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Singer drove over from Kratka Sunday afternoon, to call on friends and see the ball game.

Crookston is now being watched by the agents of Pussyfoot Johnson and they are likely to be placed in the dry list, on the next round up of "pussey foot"

Lattimore was down to Thief River Falls this week after another load of "County Division" whiskey, and if reports are true he did not need to bring a jug home. "Hic-hick—we are going have county hic—division and we hic—don't care for hic—expenses." Great stuff that!

County ditch surveyor Glen Martz found the outlet to the Swanson, Stolass ditch to be on the section line between sec. 29 and 32, as far west as Sunbeam creek, and from there into Red Lake River. This had ought to give us plenty of water to run a fishing resort in the spring of the year.

As the Eleven Towns wants the parties to give their name, who furnished us the information of two weeks ago, which led to the publication of our "Warning To Homesteaders," we will gladly do so, if the parties are willing to have their names appear in the paper, otherwise we will not. But we did publish the article at the earnest request of a gentleman, living up that way, who we think knew what he was talking about, and judgeing from the yell that came from the leven town "kennel" the shot must have struck a tender spot.

A Bear Story.

On Monday evening a large black bear was discoverd in the corn field of Walter McAndress, and the cry of "bear" aroused all around the place to activity. Glen Martz and his ditch surveying crew had just driven in for night and they joined in the chase, but Mr. Bear made good his escape into the tall timber. Walter McAndress shot at him twice, but he could not get into good range, on account of the bear being in the thick corn. Glen Martz got a good shot at him, but when he went to shoot, he discovered that he had lost the plunger to his gun. Martain McAndress got the closest to the bear, and when he got to the timber Mart was only about two jumps behind him, but he did not have any gun; but said he was trying to surround him and drive him back so the other fellows could shoot him. Charlie Clark met the bear on the south side of the grove and took a shot at him but it was geting to dark, and again he escaped. The bear came back this way yesterday swame the river just west of Sunbeam, and again made his getaway in safty.

Directors Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that there will be a meeting of the board of directors of the Red Lake River Transportation Co. at the store of Andrew Ellingson at Highlanding, on Monday, September 5th, at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. All directors are requested to be present.

A. D. Brown,
President.

NEWS! News!

Cut this out and paste it in your BIG hat.

SINGER BROS.

KRATKA, MINN

Is the cheapest and best place to Buy the Right Goods At the Right Prices

Clothing.

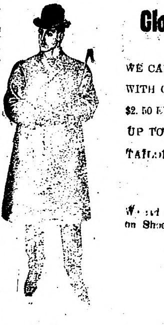
WE CAN FIT YOU OUT WITH CLOTHING, FROM $2. 50 EVERY DAY SUITS, UP TO FIRST CLASS TAILOR MADE SUITS

We can save you money on Shoes & Clothing.

Best Line Of Groceries, Flour and Feed. Feed Mill at Kratka. Highest market price paid for farm produce.

Yours For Business.—SINGER BROS.

Kratka Minn.



THE MERCHANTS State Bank,

OF RED LAKE FALLS MINN., WILL FURNISH Money to prove up at lowest rates, on privilege payments. Also furnish money to build School Houses, on District Bonds, Long time and low rates. Call on, or WRITE US.——— J. A. DUFFY, Cashier.

FARMS, THAT RAISE CROPS.

For Sale in Eastern Red Lake County.

☞ We have a few choice farms for sale on the banks of the Red Lake River, near the Highlanding Creamery, and in a school District with a first grade school. We have one of these farms, and no more, for sale at a bargain.

Call on, or address, W. G. HUNT,

Sunbeam Minn.

W. G. Hunt,

Notary Public

ALL KINDS OF LEGAL PAPERS DRAWN

It is not necessary to make long trips to the County seat, as I can do the business by mail for you.

Special attention given to Probate Court work.

I Have Barrels Of Money, To Loan On Land.

* * * *

List your land with me, I can Sell It.

Hover O. Follkedahl,
Highlanding .....Minn

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

CHARLES C. NOTT, Chief Justice.
LAWRENCE WELDON,
JOHN DAVIS,
STANTON J. PEELLE,
CHARLES B. HOWRY,
Judges.

The above refers to WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

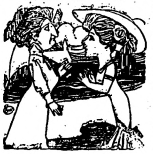
THE GRAND PRIZE (the highest award) was given to the International at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

GET THE LATEST AND BEST

You will be interested in our specimen pages, sent free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., PUBLISHERS, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

No Chance For His Suit.



"Ma, that young man whom you saw with me said he would lay all he had at my feet."

"And he had just come out of the surf! No, Emeline."

Real Easiness.

The Little Russians—those of the south—are said to be cleverer than the Russians of the north, but they are lazy. Just how lazy may be gathered from this quotation from Mr. Maurice Baring's book, "Russian Essays and Stories:"

"The Little Russian," said a Little Russian gentleman to me, "is so lazy that he will say to his wife: 'Little wife, say whoa to my horse. I have a pain in my tongue.'"

Grew Too Tall.

"I recall a case of genuine boneheadedness, mixed with enthusiasm, that cost a great many people a bunch of money," said an oil operator. "It was during the time when a big strike meant a drop in the price of oil. The foreman of a drill crew had been instructed by the employers to use a code in the event of oil being found. If it was a big flow he was to wire, 'Pine trees grow tall.' If, on the other hand the flow was small, 'Pine trees grow small' was to be the code message. The drill struck a gusher and the following message was sent by the ivory topped individual: 'Pine trees grow tall as hell, and she is flowing all over the derrick.' Of course there were a number of men about the exchange who could understand telegraphy, and the consequence was that the price of oil dropped about $2 a barrel in a few minutes."—Louisville Times.

QUEER WEDDING GIFTS.

One Couple of Mature Years Received a Pair of Coffins.

An Englishman extremely fond of hunting received as a wedding gift from an anonymous person a complete set of false limbs a set of artificial teeth and a couple of glass eyes, to procure all of which the sarcastic donor must, of course, have put him self to considerable expense. Accompanying these strange presents was a note wherein the hope was expressed that, by reason of the recipient's many falls while following the hounds, some or all of these substitutes might ultimately prove of use. As the bridegroom had incurred much enmity while holding office under his government, it was supposed that these gifts came from a disappointed office seeker.

A well known American writer received from a rival man of letters a scrap book wherein were carefully pasted and indexed many hundreds of clippings containing adverse criticisms touching the former's work, and a popular artist was presented with a set of elementary works upon self instruction in drawing and painting.

Some years ago in the west an elderly, crusty merchant on espousing a spinster of mature age was presented by an undertaker with two coffins for himself and wife, a letter which accompanied these ghastly gifts stating that they would, unlike most of the other offerings received, be sure to be of service. Naturally enough the bridegroom resented this singular if useful gift, and it took all the efforts of mutual friends to prevent a breach of the peace.

Like vexation was no doubt felt by an infirm octogenarian in Ohio who wedded a pleasure loving woman more than fifty years his junior. The present in this case was a large brass cage, "intended," so the inevitable accompanying letter stated, "to restrain the wayward flights of a giddy young wife who has married a decrepit old fool for his money."—Chicago Record-Herald.

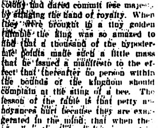
Just Talking.

Stella—I hear that Lizzie is talking of getting married again. Bella—I didn't know that she had been married once yet. Stella—She isn't. I said she was talking of it again.

The Sting of a Bee.

An eastern fable tells of a potentate who demanded that there should be brought to him the stings of a thousand bees killed because one of the colony had dared commit lese majesty by stinging the hand of royalty. When they were brought in a tiny golden thimble the king was so amazed to find that a thousand of the hypodermic points made such a little mass that he issued a manifesto to the effect that thereafter no person within the bounds of the kingdom should complain at the sting of a bee. The lesson of the fable is that petty annoyances hurt because they are exaggerated in the mind; that when they are seen in their actual proportions they are so slight as to merit only contempt. How much comfort would come to the majority of persons if they could but see the tiny size of the bee stings that lead them to acts of petulance, words of anger, expressions of reproach. The bee sting annoyances have caused lifelong breaches of friendship. They have broken up families and caused anger and resentment to take the place of love and fealty.—Baltimore American.

A Summer Don't.



"A woman cookbook writer warns people to beware of cocoanut cake that sags in the middle."

"Whose?"

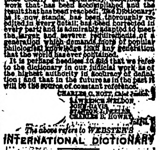
Benefits of Music.

"Do you believe that music prevents crime?"

"To a certain extent," replied Mr. Blunk. "When a man keeps both hands and his breath busy with a cornet you know, he can't be picking pockets or attempting homicide or slandering his neighbors."—Washington Star.

Intoxicated by Tobacco.

Giving evidence against a man on a charge of disorderly conduct at Bow street police court, a constable said that the accused behaved in a very violent and disorderly manner in Leicester square on Tuesday evening. He quarreled with a cabman, and eventually the witness took him into custody, believing him to be drunk. At the police station the prisoner denied that he had been drinking, and the doctor who examined him reported that he had chewed tobacco to such an extent that it had had the same effect upon him as alcohol.—Pall Mall Gazette.



The "[illegible]" SEWING MACHINE. ROLLER BEARING. HIGH GRADE.

Save Money by buying this reliable, honest, high grade sewing machine.

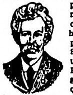
STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

National Sewing Machine Co.
BELVIDERE, ILLINOIS.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A CASE OF GRAVEL.

Tulare, Cal., Man Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.



Harrison A. Sturtevant, G and Mario Sts., Tulare, Cal., says: "I was in bad shape with kidney trouble. Too frequent passage of the urine compelled me to arise at night, my bladder became inflamed and I had excruciating pains in my abdomen. Soon after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, I passed a gravel stone three-quarters of an inch in length and variegated in color. After this my trouble disappeared."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

All the Difference.

The professor was delivering an eloquent address on cruelty to animals, and to illustrate how a little judicious forethought would eliminate to a great extent the sufferings that even small insects are subject to, said:

"As I was coming through the hall tonight I saw a bald-headed gentleman very harshly treat a little innocent house-fly which had alighted on his head.

"Now, if there was any justification for such bad temper, I would be quite justified in indulging in it at the present moment, for a fly has just alighted on the back of my head. I can't see it, but I can feel it.

"Possibly some of you can see it now; it is on the top of my head. Now it is coming down my brow; now it is coming on to my— G-r-r-eat pyramids of Egypt, it's a—wasp!"

If a man amounts to anything in a small town he soon begins to think he would amount to more in a big town.

Constipation causes and seriously aggravates many diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pellets. Tiny sugar-coated granules.

Best men are molded out of faults.—Shakespeare.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

A seal on a watch-fob may be worth two on an iceberg.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

The difference remember this—it may save your life. Cathartics, bird shot and cannon ball pills—tea spoon doses of cathartic medicines all depend on irritation of the bowels until they sweat enough to move. Cascarets strengthen the bowel muscles so they creep and crawl naturally. This means a cure and only through Cascarets can you get it quickly and naturally. 888

Cascarets—10c box—week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world—million boxes a month.

TRY MURINE EYE REMEDY
For Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes and
GRANULATED EYELIDS
Murine Doesn't Smart—Soothes Eye Pain
Druggists Sell Murine Eye Remedy, Liquid, 25c, 50c, $1.00
Murine Eye Salve, in Aseptic Tubes, 25c, $1.00
EYE BOOKS AND ADVICE FREE BY MAIL
Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

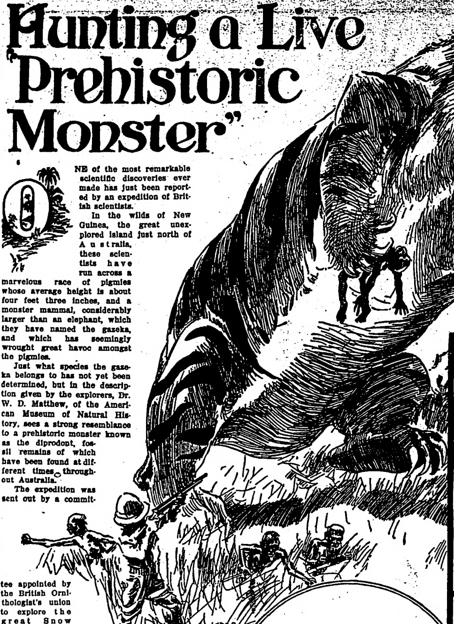
OLD SORES CURED

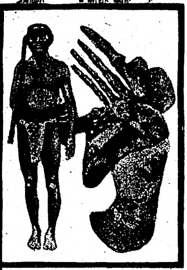
Allen's Ulcerine Salve cures Chronic Ulcers, Bone Ulcers, Scrofulous Ulcers, Varicose Ulcers, Indolent Ulcers, Mercurial Ulcers, White Swelling, Milk Leg, Fever Sores, all old sores. Positively no failure. By mail 50c. J. P. ALLEN, Dept. A8, St. Paul, Minn.

DEFIANCE STARCH—16 ounces to the package—other starches only 12 ounces—same price and "DEFIANCE" IS SUPERIOR QUALITY.

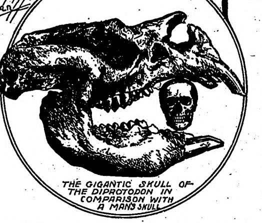
If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

"Hunting a Live Prehistoric Monster"





ENORMOUS FOOT OF "GAZEKA" RECONSTRUCTED FROM RECENT TRACKS



THE GIGANTIC SKULL OF THE DIPROTODON IN COMPARISON WITH A MAN'S SKULL

ONE of the most remarkable scientific discoveries ever made has just been reported by an expedition of British scientists.

In the wilds of New Guinea, the great unexplored island just north of Australia, these scientists have run across a marvelous race of pigmies whose average height is about four feet three inches, and a monster mammal, considerably larger than an elephant, which they have named the gazeka, and which has seemingly wrought great havoc amongst the pigmies.

Just what species the gazeka belongs to has not yet been determined, but in the description given by the explorers, Dr. W. D. Matthew, of the American Museum of Natural History, sees a strong resemblance to a prehistoric monster known as the diprodont, fossil remains of which have been found at different times throughout Australia.

The expedition was sent out by a committee appointed by the British Ornithologist's union to explore the great Snow mountains in Dutch New Guinea, and consists of several famous scientists, headed by Walter Goodfellow, the naturalist.

The expedition landed at the mouth of the Mimika river, on the south coast of Dutch New Guinea, in the early part of the year, and at once pushed into the interior. While ascending the Snow mountains, at an elevation of about 2,000 feet, the explorers came upon the tribe of pigmies, which are said to belong to that division of the human race known as the Negritos.

The importance of this discovery to anthropologists can hardly be overestimated, because it has always been a subject of controversy among the scientists as to whether Negritos existed in the Papuan islands.

The New Guinea savages, or Papuans, as they are called, are comparatively well known, but they are a very different kind of men to the pigmies just discovered. The typical Papuan is much taller than the average European, often attaining a height of seven feet, and is strongly built. The color of the skin varies from deep chocolate to nearly black. The nose is large and prominent, and a nose bar of shell, bone or wood is usually thrust through it. Both men and women go about entirely naked. Their houses are generally built on piles, and, as in Borneo, are often communal and of very large size, many families occupying one building, which may be as much as 700 feet long. Then there are remarkable houses built in trees and known as "dobbos," but these are used only to escape their enemies. Cannibalism prevails among the Papuans, although it is by no means universal.

The Negritos, on the other hand, which heretofore have been thought to occupy only the Andaman islands, in the Bay of Bengal, the northern portion of the Malay peninsula and the Philippine islands, are characteristically short, no adult standing over four feet six inches, while the women rarely exceed four feet. The average height is about four feet three inches.

The main features of this peculiar human type, apart from their diminutiveness, are the extraordinarily dark color of their skin, which approaches the color of a newly blackleaded stove, the extremely broad nose, the breadth of which is about equal to the height, and the frizzy hair, which grows in isolated peppercorn tufts all over the scalp. Their arms are unusually long, like those of the man-ape, and their mental qualities are sadly undeveloped, not one of them being able to express a higher numerical idea than three.

How these little people have been able to protect themselves against the many dangerous animals that infest the section, particularly the gigantic gazeka, which has just been discovered, is still a mystery, although they have shown remarkable ingenuity in the invention of weapons. One, for instance, is a variety of "spring gun" which might prove effective against almost any living enemy. It is made by setting a flattened bamboo spear attached to a bent sapling which is fastened to a trigger in such a way that it is released by the passerby stumbling against an invisible string stretched across the track. The spears are poisoned, either with the famous "upas" or some other similar vegetable poison, and a wound from one of them means almost instant death.

Whether such primitive defensive methods avail them against the huge gazeka is not known, but the chances are that they find safety in retreat.

According to the official reports, the gazeka is of gigantic size and fearsome aspect. It is black and white striped, has the nose of a tapir and "a face like the devil." Among the English inhabitants of the island, the animal is known as Monckton's gazeka, in honor of Mr. C. A. W. Monckton, a former explorer in New Guinea, who first reported its presence in the mountains.

Mr. Monckton, during his ascent of Mount Albert Edward, in the west of British New Guinea, discovered the huge footprints and other indications of the very recent presence of some tremendous monster that had evidently been prowling on the grassy plains surrounding the lakes on the summit at an elevation of about 12,500 feet. He followed the trail all day, and came upon the monster at dusk, just as it was devastating a settlement of the pigmies. The little natives were screaming and running for their lives, although they turned every now and again to aim their poisoned arrows at the brute.

Monckton let fire as soon as he was able to get in a proper position, and the huge gazeka at once turned upon him. As it reared upon its hind legs and pawed the air it looked to the hunter as big as a house, standing fully 25 feet high. Two of Monckton's bullets seemed to take effect, as a stream of blood flowed freely from the animal's shoulder, but before Monckton was able to reload the animal turned and fled. By that time it was too dark to follow him, and Monckton never had another opportunity to renew his pursuit.

None of the inhabitants was brave enough to repeat Monckton's attempt to capture the brute, and until the British expedition reached New Guinea he has prowled around with impunity, occasionally descending upon the rudimentary huts of the pigmies and destroying those who failed to fly in time.

The British explorers were aware of Monckton's experience, and in fact, it is believed that one of the principal objects of the expedition was to secure a specimen of the strange monster. It has long been known that there were many mammals in New Guinea still to be discovered, but just what they expected to find the scientists themselves could not tell.

New Guinea lies to the east of what is known as Wallace's line, an imaginary line defined by A. R. Wallace, on one side of which only placenta animals are found, while on the other only marsupials exist. No tapirs or rhinoceroses exist to the east of Wallace's line, which includes Australia and New Guinea, but about the period when the mastodon and the mammoth flourished in America a huge marsupial known as the diprodont is known to have existed in Australia. Fossil remains recently discovered leave no doubt as to its gigantic size, and, although there is, of course, no means of ascertaining its appearance in life, as it has been extinct for several thousands of years, the gazeka appears to bear a marked resemblance in form to this ancient monster.

That a few diprodonts could have survived to this day despite the extinction of the main part of the type, is not considered unlikely by the scientists, who point out that nature does not usually blot out a whole class of animals suddenly, but that, on the contrary, it is sometimes thousands of years before the last individual member of the type succumbs to the conditions which destroyed his fellows.

The British explorers are enduring many hardships in their scientific expedition. In New Guinea the temperature is never less than 114 degrees in the shade, and water is not always accessible. But if these ardent explorers really capture a living diprodont they will consider their labors well rewarded.

ONCE HOME OF FAMOUS SCHOOL

Ascending the hill slope of Indian Queen lane, one passes over a winding roadway through what was once a thickly wooded grove overlooking the Ridge road and the Schuylkill river, a quaint cluster of three houses now joined as one homestead. A tablet swings from the arch in one of its ancient doorways, stating that this was the home of Dr. Smith, the first provost of the college—afterward the University of Pennsylvania.

Although the structure known in these days as Dr. Smith's home now has the appearance of being one large building, it comprises what was originally three distinct houses, with quaint spring houses and outbuildings, the Philadelphia Inquirer says. The old records show that Dr. Smith built these three clusters of strange buildings on the hill nearly opposite the Old Falls tavern, among which was the octagon building and the vault in which his remains and others of his family were deposited immediately on the brow of the hill. The old "octagon building," which created much comment when first built because of its unusual construction, was called "Smith's Folly" in the early days, but its many-windowed recesses were the special delight of the celebrated university provost.

The residents of the Falls of Schuylkill find peculiar satisfaction today in the preservation of this old landmark because of its important association with the early education of this section. Not only was it the home of Dr. Smith, and made famous for its connection with the beginnings of the University of Pennsylvania, but because from this historic building there was introduced the famous Pestalozzi system of education which made its influence felt throughout the country.

Early historians state that it was about the year 1809 that there came to the falls a very singular character, Joseph Neef, a pupil of the celebrated Pestalozzi of Switzerland. He was induced to come to this country for the purpose of establishing Pestalozzi's system of education by William McClure, the philosopher, who endowed the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. Mr. Neef's school occupied the Smith property for many years; the octagon and connecting building were occupied as the schoolhouse and the adjoining buildings were used as dwellings. The school soon became large and flourishing, boys coming from all parts of the country to attend.

There are still among the residents of the Falls of Schuylkill those whose fathers or grandfathers attended the famous Neef school, and they delight in relating the stories handed down to them of the methods of study in the fine old groves surrounding the school building.

A Very Palpable Hit.

The Lady Golfer—Excuse me, sir, but have you seen my ball anywhere?

The Unfortunate Man—No, madam; but I can show you the exact spot on which it fell.—The Sketch.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

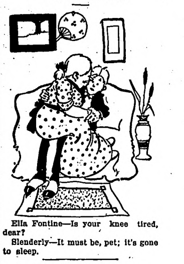
Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Head-ache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

ALMOST WORN OUT.



Ella Fontine—Is your knee tired, dear?

Slenderly—It must be, pet; it's gone to sleep.

Why He Was Sorry.

To impress on young children just what should and what should not be done and why, is among the most trying problems of parents, as evidenced by the recent experience of a West Philadelphia mother. Last Sunday she asked her small son, aged eight, to carry a chair for her from the dining room to the parlor. He started off willingly, but in the hall he tripped and fell. Amid the crash could be heard the boy giving vent to utterances that would have done credit to a pirate of ancient days. The mother was taken by surprise and was greatly shocked. She gave the boy a long and serious talk on the subject of profanity. This apparently did not make the right impression, for when she concluded the boy added to her discomfiture by exclaiming, "I am sorry I swore, mamma, but I forgot it was Sunday."

Little, but, Oh, My!

Senator Smoot of Utah tells a story on the late E. H. Harriman, which sounds somewhat familiar. He says that when the Salt Lake cut-off was completed Mr. Harriman took a large party of big railroad men out to it.

They had their pictures taken at the right spot scenically. Mr. Harriman stood at one end of the group. When the pictures were printed and the photographer brought them around the railroad men examined them.

"Why," shouted one of the guests, "where's Mr. Harriman?"

"Do you mean that little chap that stood at the end?" asked the photographer. "Why, I cut him off."

There Are Reasons

Why so many people have ready-at-hand a package of

Post Toasties

The DISTINCTIVE FLAVOUR delights the palate.

The quick, easy serving right from the package—requiring only the addition of cream or good milk is an important consideration when breakfast must be ready "on time."

The sweet, crisp food is universally liked by children, and is a great help to Mothers who must give to the youngsters something wholesome that they relish.

The economical feature appeals to everyone—particularly those who wish to keep living expenses within a limit.

Post Toasties are especially pleasing served with fresh sliced peaches.

"The Memory Lingers"

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

LARGE LAND GRAB

PROMINENT MEN OF STATE INVOLVED BY WHITE EARTH RESERVATION PROBE.

80 PER CENT OF LAND INVOLVED

Near "Warpath" Scare When Indians Gather for a Big Pow-Wow to Consult Government Agent.

White Earth. — The judicial department of the United States government has almost completed its investigation of the 2,000 alleged land grabbing cases on the White Earth Indian reservation and ex-Judge E. H. Long, of Washington, made a rapid and secret visit to district attorney's office with ample evidence to begin legal proceedings against numerous prominent citizens near the reservation. Eighty per cent of all the land on the White Earth Indian Chippewa reservation is involved in this scandal.

Hurrying from the nearest and remotest parts of the Chippewa Indian reservation fully 300 Indians came to the White Earth agency with the hope that they would hold a council with ex-Judge E. H. Long and other officials of the judicial department from Washington, D. C. But the red men were doomed to disappointment, as the investigations had advanced to such an acute stage that it became necessary for Judge Long to visit and consult C. C. Houpt, district attorney, in regard to the manner of proceeding and the time to begin action against the alleged numerous offenders. This made is impossible for Judge Long to be at the council.

Wanted to Meet "Big Judge."

These Indians had expressed a desire to meet ex-Judge Long and he tacitly promised to come in friendly manner and listen to the Indian orators and chiefs with their complaints against the white land grabbers and the ignoble manner that their land had been transferred from them by the aid of half-breeds.

Agent Howard expected Judge Long and had sent messages to the chiefs and braves telling them of the impending council of a friendly nature. So the Indians came in from far and near with their complaints. Agent Howard had a big feast ready for the "Great Lawyer."

Indians Have A "War Dance."

When the Indians were informed that Judge Long would not be present they were so displeased they immediately put on their feathers and war paint and danced their war and scalp dances into the small hours of the night. The famous Squaw dance was given about 10 o'clock at night and several of the government officials, agency employees and white people were given a great sight by the performance of these famous dances.

How Lands Were Grabbed.

Indians have gone singly and in groups with their complaints against prominent white men, residents of towns near the Indian reservations, who have taken their lands by trickery. Full-blooded Indians who have no legal right to sell have been persuaded to sign documents purporting to come from Indians who were not full-blooded Indians. Minors also have been caught in the various schemes of land men to sell their lands through their parents or guardians. Lands worth from $25 to $100 per acre have been sold for as little as $100 for 40 acres, and in some cases old Indians have signed their rights away to agents for from $100 to $300 for lands worth thousands of dollars.

Several of the Indian employes say that if certain men at Detroit, Mahnomen, Ogama, Aubon, White Earth and other places get their deserts the jails will have a few more inmates this fall.

SAFE BLOWERS ARE ARRESTED.

Men Wanted for Eagle Bend Depot Burglary Caught at Paynesville.

Paynesville. — Special Officer Davis of the Great Northern Railroad, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Chisholm of this place, arrested here three men charged with having burglarized the Great Northern station at Eagle Bend Thursday of last week and blowing open the depot safe. The men were known as Little, Frank Striney and Eddy and had been following a carnival though they were not connected with it.

The men arrested were taken to St. Cloud where they will have a hearing. The arrest is deemed an important one, it being stated that the men are wanted in other places for previous crimes.

NORMAL SCHOOL CLOSES.

St. Cloud Institution Ends Successful Summer Term.

St. Cloud.—The St. Cloud normal school closed and seventeen young people received diplomas for having completed the various courses of the normal. The attendance at the summer school has been the largest since the summer school has been started. For the first term it was over 500, and for the second term of six weeks the attendance was [illegible]

DULUTH CATHOLIC POLES LOSE.

Court Awards Decision to Bishop in Church Controversy.

Duluth.—That no Catholic congregation is really Catholic unless that congregation adheres strictly to all the rules of the church is the gist of a decision handed down by Judge Dibell, of the district court in the case of Anthony Konecmy against August Kolenda.

The trouble arose over the fact that a portion of the congregation of the West End Polish Catholic church quarreled with the bishop and ousted the priest whom he had appointed to the church.

The bishop refused to appoint another priest to fill the vacancy and another dispute arose over the title to the property. The trustees permitted services to be held by other than a regular priest.

The judge stated that judgment may be entered for a writ of injunction enjoining the trustees from causing or permitting religious services other than those provided for under the creed and faith of the Roman Catholic church and under the auspices of a duly ordained priest to be held.

LABOR EXHIBIT READY.

Commissioner Will Show Pictures Of Safety Devices.

St. Paul.—W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, has at his office a number of photographs and other material which will constitute the department's exhibit at the state fair. The prevention of accidents will be the object of display. Mr. McEwen will have 200 photographs showing the use of safety devices in factories. The pictures are large in size and the safety devices are marked in red.

A number of printed mottoes and warnings have also been prepared. Some of them are placards such as the department wants employers to post in their factories, and others are mottoes for the education of employers and the general public.

Several large cards, as big as the top of an office desk, covered with clippings from newspapers of accidents that might have been prevented, will constitute a feature of the display.

"It will cost the department $500 to make the exhibit, but if we can save one life or one limb the state will be amply paid for its expenditure," said Mr. McEwen.

MINN. LEADS P. O. BANK DEMAND

Over Ten Per Cent of Applications Come From This State.

Washington, D. C. — Minnesota is leading in the demand for postal savings banks. More than 10 per cent of all the applications received at the treasury department have come from there. The bulk of all the applications comes from the territory west of the Mississippi.

While the West is leading in the demand for postal banks, the East is leading in applications from other banks that want to be depositories of the funds. For every postal savings bank which has been asked for in the East there are two private banks asking to be named as depositories of postal money.

The New England states are credited with only a little more than 4 per cent of the demand for the new banks.

The difference in the sentiment is well illustrated by comparing New York and Oklahoma. The Empire state has applied for eight banks and Oklahoma to date wants 11. Pennsylvania, however, has 34 applications. There have been none from Delaware or Rhode Island.

RICHES FOR STATE.

Suit To be Tried Involves Ownership Of Deposits Under Lakes.

Hibbing. — Several millions of dollars worth of natural resources are involved in a case which will be brought by the state of Minnesota to determine the ownership of the ore deposits under the beds of lakes in the range country. Property worth $25,000,000 will be saved to the state if the state wins, according to state officials.

Attorney General Simpson and his assistant, C. Louis Weeks, came to Hibbing on the same train that brought Governor Eberhart and the members of the state drainage commission. The attorney general, his assistant, State Auditor Iverson and Governor Eberhart conferred with Frank Willis, state mine inspector, concerning the case. A visit was made by the officials to Long Ear lake, where the mine which is being used as the test case is located. Millions of tons of ore in this lake alone will be saved if the state wins. There are many such lakes on the range.

Boy Drowned Near Winona.

Winona. — In full view of several young ladies with whim he had gone in bathing, Eugene Case, aged 14, a camper, at Minneowah, the fashionable summer resort a few miles below Winona on the Mississippi, was drowned. He stepped off the end of the dam into deep and treacherous water and was swept to death.

FIRES IN MINNESOTA.

Cut Over Lands Near Swan Lake Ablaze and Settlers in Danger.

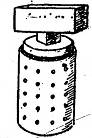
Hibbing.—The train crew running between this place and Grand Rapids on the Great Northern report the cut-over lands in the vicinity of Swan lake, about twenty miles west of here, all afire, and the few settlers in danger of losing all their homes. With the clouds and smoke it is so dark here that all over the city the electric lights are on in both business houses and residences.

The DAIRY

HOW TO MAKE CHEESE HOOP

Old Peck Measure Without Bottom and With Holes Punched in Sides Is All Right.

For a cheese hoop, an old peck measure, without a bottom and with holes punched in the side for drainage, is all right. Any tin or wooden receptacle, however, may be used. The illustration shows how the curd may be pressed. Before placing the curd in the hoop, line in with cheese cloth, one piece the size of the bottom and another around the side. Turn the upper edge of the hoop and fasten it tight. Then pack the curd firmly in the hoop, and put a piece of cloth on the upper end and hold it over tight. Next, put a regular board on top that will closely fit in the hoop, then put a block of wood or stone on the board and on the block place a receptacle containing stones. Make the pressure slight at first, but after an hour rearrange the cloth and make the pressure heavier. The pressing should be finshed by the next day. Do not press in too cool a place, but keep the temperature about 50 degrees.



Cheese Hoop.

KEEPING TAB ON DAIRY COWS

Simple Records Easily and Quickly Made by Which Every Farmer Knows Animal's Standing.

(By MILLER PURVIS.)

There are some things which have been said over and over so many times that I sometimes think it a waste of time to mention them again, but as I am traveling about the country I see so many proofs which show that these things are not commonly practiced that I feel as if those who write for the farmer's benefit should try to emphasize old truths as well as expound new ones.

We have been talking about balanced rations so long that it would seem as if every dairyman would feel the necessity of using a ration which would produce the best results, yet I doubt if five per cent of the cows of the country are fed in the most economical manner and I often find examples of the most costly kind of feeding, although the owners think they are feeding at the lowest cost.

It should be remembered that low-cost feeding is not usually the cheapest feeding. In fact, the lower the cost of feeding a cow the lower the revenue from her. The economy of feeding a given ration is not to be determined by the initial cost of that ration, but by the result it produces.

If by increasing the cost of the daily ration 50 per cent we can increase the revenue any more than 50 per cent all the increase above that figure is clear profit which cannot be charged with anything for labor or interest on investment because these items of cost are not increased by the better system of feeding.

The only way to determine whether a cow pays a profit to her owner is to keep a record of her performance as a milker and to know what is costs to feed her.

The cost of feeding may be very closely approximated without keeping an individual account, but to know to any degree of certainty what she returns to her owner the milk she produces must be weighed and tested. Without putting a cow to the rigid test of weighing her milk and determining its quality, either by churning separately or putting samples through the Babcock tester, no one can tell whether she is a profitable animal to keep.

I would be surprised to hear that one in 100 owners of five or more cows in this country could make any sort of an intelligent test of her value as a money maker.

It would be considered foolish for a merchant to buy a barrel of sugar without asking the cost of it and selling it by guessing at the weight of each sale.

Such a proceeding carried out in all the lines kept in a store would spell ruin in a short time, yet this is the way many dairymen do business.

Keeping a record is a very simple operation. If all the pails used in milking are made to weigh the same, which easily can be done, it is only necessary to keep a milk sheet tacked up in the cow stable where it will be handy.

When the cow is milked hang the pail with the milk in it on the hook of the scale, note the weight on the sheet and when the month is ended subtract the weight of the pail as many times as there are weighings and the remainder is the total weight of the milk [illegible]

STUNG BY BASE INGRATITUDE

Bowery Denizen Seemingly Had Right to Be Indignant at Old Friend's Attitude.

"You remember dat guy, Jim Burke?" asked an irate Bowery denizen. "He's dat stiff dat's doin' time up der river—Sing Sing—boiglary—ten years. Well, you know all I done fer dat stiff. When he was pinched didn't I put up der coin for der lawyers? Didn't I pay der witnesses? Sure I did. De oder day I t'inks I'll just go an' see dat mutt just t' leave him know his frien's ain't tied de can on 'im. So I drives out to d' jail and goes into d' warden's office and he says I gotter send me card in. Me card! D'ye get dat? Well, anyway, I writes my name on a piece o' paper an' a guy takes it into Jim Burke, an' what d' you t'ink dat stiff tells dat guy to tell me?"

"I've no idea," said the listener.

"He tells him," concluded the angry one, "t' tell me dat he ain't in!"—From Success Magazine.

One Record Made by Women.

Through the activity of women, in the anti-tuberculosis campaign, sanatoria and hospitals for the treatment of tuberculosis have been erected; traveling libraries have been circulated, posters, circulars and other kinds of literature have been distributed to the number of millions of pieces, thousands of lectures have been given, large sums of money have been secured, hundreds of needy cases have been helped; tuberculosis work has been started in many communities where no movement had existed; and millions of women have learned the dangers and methods of prevention of tuberculosis. The work of the women extends from the drawing-room of the rich to the homes of the poor, and embraces all classes, including the factory girl and millionaire. During the coming year a special campaign of lectures to women will be carried on in all parts of the United States.

IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA

"No tongue can tell how I suffered for five years with itching and bleeding eczema, until I was cured by the Cuticura Remedies, and I am so grateful I want the world to know, for what helped me will help others. My body and face were covered with sores. One day it would seem to be better, and then break out again with the most terrible pain and itching. I have been sick several times, but never in my life did I experience such awful suffering as with this eczema. I had made up my mind that death was near at hand, and I longed for that time when I would be at rest. I had tried many different doctors and medicines without success, and my mother brought me the Cuticura Remedies, insisting that I try them. I began to feel better after the first bath with Cuticura Soap, and one application of Cuticura Ointment.

"I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and have taken four bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and consider myself well. This was nine years ago and I have had no return of the trouble since. Any person having any doubt about this wonderful cure by the Cuticura Remedies can write to my address. Mrs. Altie Etson, 93 Inn Road, Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 16, 1909."

Pipe Gives Cadet Typhoid.

Midshipman Smith, who was stricken with typhoid fever on the Indiana at Plymouth, England, contracted the disease, it is said, from smoking a briar used nearly a year ago by his roommate at Annapolis who had a bad case of typhoid. This theory is taken as proof that concentrated nicotine cannot destroy a typhoid germ. The medical department of the navy will examine into the theory with the result that midshipmen of the future may confine themselves to their own pipes.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

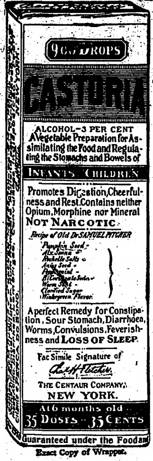
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

English as She is Spoke.

Chinatown Visitor—John, sabee, see screen—how much sabee want for him?

The Chinaman—What's the matter with you? Can't you speak English?—Judge.



900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
NOT NARCOTIC.
Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER
Pumpkin Seed
Alx. Senna
Rochelle Salts
Anise Seed
Peppermint
Bi Carbonate Soda
Worm Seed
Clarified Sugar
Wintergreen Flavor
A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.
At 6 months old
35 DOSES — 35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food and

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

WESTERN CANADA'S
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
1910 CROPS
Wheat Yield in Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and some of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

THEY SENT FOR THEIR SON.
Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 5th, 1910.
"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here." Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.
Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.
"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car up here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."
Yours truly, H. A. Wix.

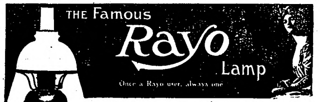
WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.
Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.
"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country; so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Landis, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place. My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Zimmer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Ebinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.
Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.
"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."
Yours truly,
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.
Vesta, Minn., July 24th, 1910.
"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rates to Ponoka, Alberta."
Yours truly,
Geo. Paskewitz,
Vesta, Minn.

Send for literature and ask the local Canadian Government Agents for Excursion Rates, best districts in which to locate, and when to go.

CHAS. PILLING, Clifford Block, Grand Forks, North Dakota
J. M. MAC LACHLAN, Box 116, Watertown, South Dakota
E. T. HOLMES, 315 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minnesota



The Rayo Lamp is a high grade lamp, sold at a low price.
There are lamps that cost more, but there is no better lamp made at any price. Constructed of solid brass; nickel plated—easily kept clean; an ornament to any room in any house. There is nothing known to the art of lamp-making that can add to the value of the RAYO Lamp as a light-giving device. Every dealer everywhere. If not at yours, write for descriptive circular to the nearest agency of the STANDARD OIL COMPANY (Incorporated)

MSB
Minnesota School of Business
THE GATEWAY TO SUCCESS
You should select a school as carefully as you would a savings bank. This school has proven its value by a successful existence of over thirty years. It is ready to train you for success. Its catalog is free.
54 S. 3rd Street, Minneapolis, Minnesota
GROVE A. GRUMAN, Secretary

Everywhere in the world men shave with the Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery —the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.
PAXTINE
TOILET ANTISEPTIC
Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.
A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.
THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

PUTNAM FADELESS DYES
[illegible] more goods brighter and faster colors than any other dye. One 10c package colors all fibers. They dye in cold water better than any other dye. [illegible] Write for free booklet—How to Dye, Bleach and Mix Colors. MONROE DRUG CO., [illegible]

Centennial Celebration of Mexico

By C. Piquette Mitchel

IT IS indeed fitting that under the able administration of that Grand Old Man of Mexico, Gen. Porfirio Diaz, Mexico should celebrate her centennial of independence and her early struggles for freedom and liberty. He, whose forceful military policy, whose familiarity with the pulse of his people, and whose consummate statesmanship have given his country a sound government and placed her on a financial and commercial footing with the old world, will preside as chief executive over the commemoration of the man and events which made it possible for Mexico to reach the present high state of civilization which she enjoys.

As the human sacrifices of the Aztec king, Montezuma, gave way to the bloodless offerings on the altar of the Fair God who foretold the coming of the Spanish conquerors, so the spirit of independence finally subdued the successors of Cortez and his hardy band.

The law which excluded Spaniards born in Mexico from equal rights with those who were immigrants and the consequent repugnance and jealousy which arose between the two parties, together with the alienation of the clergy and the removal of their influence in the enforcement of government decrees, which necessitated the use of more forcible measures, the granting of commercial monopolies, and the severity exercised in dealing with cases of treason, all worked to the establishment of a feeling of discontent and the growth of revolutionary sentiments.

PORFIRIO DIAZ

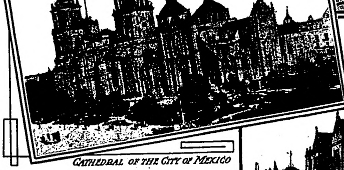
NATIONAL PALACE MEXICO CITY

But it was left to one of the clergy, a priest of the city of Dolores, Father Miguel Hidalgo, to give these sentiments outward expression and to raise the flag of rebellion against the mother country. Father Hidalgo was the second son of Christobal Hidalgo y Costilla and Ana Maria de Galiaga, and was born on the Hacienda Corralejo in the state of Guanajuato on the eighth of May, 1753. His early years were spent on the farm of which his father was the manager. As he grew older he pursued his studies of philosophy and theology at the College of San Nicolas, and about 1778 he came to Mexico City to receive the sacred orders and the degree of bachelor of theology. He served as pastor of various parishes, and on the death of an older brother was transferred to the City of Dolores, where he worked for the enlightenment of his people in the arts and sciences and the encouragement of agricultural and industrial pursuits. He first introduced in that district the cultivation of the grape and the planting of mulberry trees for the breeding of the silkworm. He, moreover, established a crockery factory and a brickyard and constructed a tannery and other commercial institutions. All this, together with his generosity, made him much beloved by his parishioners and especially the Indians, whose language he was familiar with. Being fond of music, he taught them to play and formed an orchestra among them, giving all his energy to the greater civilization and progress of his country.

In 1809 there was formed in Valladolid a conspiracy which had for its object the assembling in Mexico City of a congress to govern New Spain in the name of Fernando VII., in the event that the mother country should fall to the arms of the French, which without serious intention might probably lead to the independence of the country. The uprising was planned to take place on December 21, but being discovered, all the conspirators were imprisoned. However, there being but little evidence against them, they were soon given their liberty.

The conspiracy being suppressed in Valladolid, sprang up in Queretaro with renewed strength. Here it received protection from the corregidor, or mayor, of that city, who furnished many recruits, pending the time when secret action would be no longer necessary. At this time Hidalgo became enlisted in the cause of the conspiracy; but it is not known by what motives he was influenced. He had had numerous discussions with his friend, Ignacio Allende, regarding independence, but with no more serious object on his part than pure argument and without thought of taking any active part in the movement. Allende, however, was quick to interest himself in the cause, although warned by Hidalgo that the originators of such enterprises seldom enjoyed the fruits of them. But in the month of September, 1810, Hidalgo received a letter from Allende at Queretaro asking him to come to that city on a matter of much importance. He went, but was little impressed by the people he met, as they were without resources and of small importance, and he returned to his home somewhat disgusted with his visit. However, another letter from Allende pictured the state of affairs in such encouraging words that he decided to give his time and energy to the cause. He had made in the town 25 lances and placed himself in communication with the drum major and two sergeants of the battalion of Guanajuato in order that they might secure some troop for the revolution. His efforts, considering the short time which he had, were most successful; but, unfortunately, the conspiracy reached the ears of the authorities and many were imprisoned. Hidalgo sent immediately for Allende, who arrived in Dolores on the night of September 14, and the whole of the next day was spent in conferences without any decision being reached as to the best course to pursue.

Meanwhile Joseft Ortiz, the wife of the corregidor of Queretaro, being an ardent believer in the revolutionary movement, sent a messenger to the town of San Miguel el Grande, so that Allende should be informed of the news. Not finding Allende, who had been summoned by Hidalgo, the message was delivered to another conspirator by the name of Aldama, who left immediately for Dolores, arriving there at two o'clock in the morning of the sixteenth. He found everybody asleep in the house of the priest, but awaking Allende, both sought the room of Hidalgo, who immediately arose and exclaimed: "Gentlemen, we are lost; there is now no other recourse but to attack the Spaniards." To which Aldama replied: "Sir, what are you going to do? For the love of God, what is to be done?" After this several hours were spent in vain discussion. Hidalgo now showed his greatness. He did not think of flight, although on account of his sacred profession he could easily have found safety. But he preferred to fight for his principles and his convictions. Knowing full well that his companions were in prison and the thread of the revolution had been snapped, without troops, without arms, he preferred to face almost certain death, remembering his warning to Allende, that seldom the originators of such undertakings enjoyed the fruits of their efforts.



CATHEDRAL OF THE CITY OF MEXICO

Hidalgo then, with his brother, Allende, Aldama and eleven other men left his house fully armed and proceeded to the jail, and, threatening the mayor with his pistol, demanded the release of his fellow-conspirators. His demands having been complied with, he now had 80 men, whom he armed with the swords of the soldiers of the regiment of the queen, which were delivered to Sergeant Martinez.

It was Sunday and earlier than the usual hour for mass. Hidalgo, however, summoned the people of the town and the farmers from the surrounding country, from whom he secured by his eloquent words about 300 followers. A march was made to Rincon, which was taken without resistance, and many Spaniards were made prisoners. Then proceeding to San Miguel el Grande, he surprised the garrison and obtained arms and money. Meanwhile his march through the villages had augmented his ranks with people of all classes, principally Indians with machetes. He had found at one place an image of the Virgin of Guadalupe, which was attached to a lance and borne aloft as the future banner of the revolution, while the battle cry became "Long live the Virgin of Guadalupe and death to the Spaniards!" And yearly General Diaz gives this "grito" at eleven o'clock on the night of September 15, as he stands with his venerable head bared and rings the great bell of the National palace, to the enthusiastic applause of his people gathered in dense throngs in the public square, or zocalo.

On September 21 the insurgents marched through Chamacuero and entered Celaya, sacking the houses of the Spaniards and securing such money and arms as they could lay their hands on. Here Hidalgo was proclaimed general by a congress of the people, and Allende was placed second in command.

JUAREZ (THE AMERICAN) COLONY, CITY OF MEXICO

Hidalgo then set out for Guanajuato with about 50,000 men, and when he reached the city he found that the Spaniards had taken refuge in a large and strong building which had been used as a granary. Here the royalists had brought the government treasury and their private wealth, fortifying themselves as best they could. After a bloody conflict the place was finally stormed and taken and most of the inhabitants put to the sword. The houses of the city were pillaged and the destruction of property was general. Although Hidalgo issued an edict and attached grave penalties for the offenders, he was powerless to prevent the excesses committed by the undisciplined masses. After order had been finally restored Hidalgo turned his attention to the manufacture of cannon for his troops and the minting of the silver bars, from the many mines in that vicinity, which had been captured in the city.

Meanwhile the government prepared to combat the revolution and through the medium of the church sought to gain control over the minds of the lower classes, an edict of excommunication being issued by the the bishop of Michoacan against Hidalgo, Allende and Aldama. To counteract the effect of this on the minds of the people, Hidalgo published an answer, declaring his firm adherence to the doctrines of the Catholic faith and calling upon all to resist their oppressors.

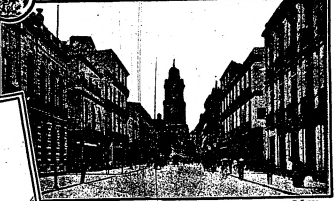
On the eighth of October Hidalgo commenced his march to Valladolid, intending at first to attack Queretaro. Hearing of his coming, the authorities of Valladolid deserted the city and the army of insurgents was received by the citizens with great ovation.

On October 19 Hidalgo marched toward Mexico City and was met at Las Cruces by the royalist forces under command of Lieutenant Coloned Trujillo, who was surrounded by the insurgents and forced to cut his way through the enemy's rear and retreat to Mexico City. The battle cost Hidalgo about 2,000 in killed and wounded, and instead of advancing on the city he determined to retreat, being influenced in his decision by the news that General Calleja had left San Luis Potosi with reinforcements. The retreating insurgents and Calleja's forces met at Aculco; the former, however, with but little fighting, continued their retreat, leaving in the field their baggage and artillery. Hidalgo, with reduced forces, retired to Valladolid, while Allende posted himself at Guanajuato and was attacked and badly defeated by Calleja, with great loss in killed and wounded.

Hidalgo, meanwhile, repaired to Guadalajara with his reorganized army and was received with great pomp by the people of the city. Here he organized a form of government with Ignacio Lopez Rayon as secretary-general.

CHAPULTEPEC CASTLE RESIDENCE OF PRESIDENT DIAZ

In January, 1811, Hidalgo moved from Guadalajara with the largest army that was ever under his command, meeting the much smaller force of the enemy under Calleja at the bridge of Calderon, about 35 miles from the city. The defeat of the royalists was turned into victory by a series of misfortunes, which, by the explosion of their ammunition wagons and the setting fire to the fields in their front, compelled the insurgents to retreat in great disorder. This was the beginning of the end of the brilliant career of Hidalgo. He fled with other insurgents northward and surrendered his command to Allende. At Saltillo it was decided to flee to the United States and to enlist the sympathy of this rising republic. But on the way they fell into an ambush planned in the interest of a counter revolution by a discontented revolutionary colonel by the name of Elizondo. Hidalgo and Allende were captured, tried and condemned to death, Allende being shot as a traitor on May 26, 1811, and Hidalgo on July 31. And thus perished a noble and brave man, Mexico's first and grandest champion of liberty.



AVENIDA CINCO DE MAYO MEXICO CITY

To celebrate these stirring events of one hundred years ago, instead of erecting temporary exposition buildings at great cost, the money will be used in permanent improvements throughout the republic.

The program for September in the capital city will include the dedication of many new public buildings, monuments and parks, a great civic and military parade, a historical pageant, fireworks displays, balls, garden parties, free theatrical performances, and many other features. To assist in her centennial celebration, Mexico invited all of the nations of the world with whom diplomatic relations are maintained. The response was hearty and sincere, most of the nations sending special diplomatic representatives and not a few of them are represented by warships riding at anchor in the Mexican ports.

France, Germany, and China signified their intention of presenting Mexico a lasting memorial on the occasion of this centennial. The first will return the silver keys to Mexico given to the French on their entry into the capital, Germany will erect a monument to Humboldt, while China will give a suitable gift. Other nations will contribute in a substantial way toward commemorating the period.

MARRIAGE 2,300 YEARS OLD

Most of us make the acquaintance of Egypt in the splendidly dramatic story of Joseph and his brethren, and so come to look on Pharaoh and his people as gloomy and malign persecutors, fit only to be swallowed up in the Red sea waves, writes Charles Johnson in Harper's Weekly. Or we read of the graves and sober monuments of the Nile valley, with their perpetual reminders of death and the kingdom of night, with the result that we are hardly prepared to realize the gay and lightsome side of ancient Egyptian life or to credit the thought that these tomb builders could ever break into a smile. But there was a side of gayety and of charm, and just as we are finding that so many of our deeper and more philosophical thoughts go back to the people of the Delta, so we are beginning to discover the originals of all our jokes in the buried cities of the Nile.

That ladies were not unduly oppressed in the land of the Pharaohs we may gather from this marriage contract from a fourth century Demotic manuscript:

"I," says the lady Isis, "take thee as my husband. Thou makest me thy wife and givest me in token of dower five-tenths of silver. If I discharge thee as my husband, hating thee and loving another more than thee, I shall give and return to thee two and a half-tenths of silver, of which thou gavest me as my dower; and I cede unto thee of all and everything that I shall acquire with thee, one-third part, as long as thou art married unto me."

Not even Chicago or Reno can boast of a franker contract than that, and there is something wonderfully naive in the idea of the good lady Isis "discharging" her lord on the ground that she hates him and loves another better. The sum she returns him, as part of her now canceled dower, is about equal to a silver dollar.

THE BLIND SENATOR

Marvelous Career of Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma.

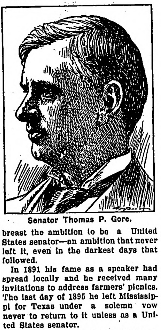
How He Won His Fight Against Poverty and Adversity, and Achieved His Early Ambitions in Spite of Obstacles.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—No man in public life today has had a more remarkable career than Senator Thomas Pryor Gore of Oklahoma, whose charges of attempted bribery in connection with the sale of Indian lands stirred the country and brought about investigation by a congressional committee. Marvelous almost beyond belief were the struggles of this blind man—blind from early youth—to reach the great goal of his ambition—a seat in the senate of the United States.

Senator Gore was born on a farm in Mississippi in 1870, later being taken to the village of Walthall, when the latter was created. At the age of eight one of his eyes was jabbed out by a playmate. But he still had one good eye left and his grief was forgotten when some friends told him one day that he had been appointed a page in the Mississippi legislature. This career was, however, ended three years after the first accident by a fate so cruel and unusual that it would have crushed the spirit of ninety-nine boys out of any hundred in the land. While experimenting with a toy cross-bow, he himself shot out his remaining eye.

He was now totally blind, and had to give up his pageship. For the next five years his chief diversion was to hear his sister and mother read to him. Then a normal school was opened at his home town, and he entered, his lessons being read to him at home and by his schoolmates.

A debating society was organized in this school and the blind boy joined and displayed a wonderful aptitude for debate. One day a companion found an old volume of the Congressional Record. Going to an old stable the companion would read to him the speeches of the lawmakers at Washington and then there entered Gore's breast the ambition to be a United States senator—an ambition that never left it, even in the darkest days that followed.



Senator Thomas P. Gore.

In 1891 his fame as a speaker had spread locally and he received many invitations to address farmers' picnics. The last day of 1895 he left Mississippi for Texas under a solemn vow never to return to it unless as a United States senator.

That year in Texas was a hard one. Gore threw himself into politics with passionate energy. Again and again the family was reduced to the verge of physical suffering. Yet year after year they kept up the fight for existence without complaint. Nor did the blind lawyer once despair of reaching the senate, writes James Creelman in Pearson's Magazine.

When Mr. Bryan was nominated at Kansas City in 1900 Gore found his way to the crowd that surrounded the convention. He managed to live in Kansas City for six days at a total cost of $3.50. No one who heard his voice ringing out over that scene of national enthusiasm was permitted to know, or even suspect, his poverty. Then he obtained an engagement in South Dakota to speak during the state and presidential campaigns. In this way he picked up $1,000 and with it went back to Texas and married.

The Gore's—including his father and brother—decided upon going to Oklahoma. In April, 1902, Gore managed to go as a delegate to the territorial convention that was to choose a delegate to congress from Oklahoma, and was given a seat in the territorial senate. That summer the blind man had another terrible struggle to keep alive. One day in June he had only eight cents left. He held a war council with his wife to consider what they should do with the eight cents. It was decided that the money should be spent on postage in an effort to secure speaking engagements. The political fight had to be kept up at any cost.

The fight for a seat in the United States senate was now pressed systematically. Gore spent the year 1903 in widening his acquaintance, attending picnics, barbecues and county fairs, lecturing for anything from $5 to $25, shaking hands with the crowds and smiling his way into their hearts. His friends wanted him to abandon his ambition for a time and run for congress. "It is the senate or nothing," he replied.

Gore won his fight in the primary election and was elected to the United States senate by the legislature, drawing the short term. In 1908 he was reelected.

MINNESOTA
HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

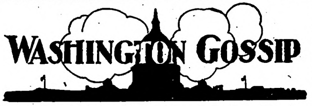
THE SUNBEAM.

VOL. X. SUNBEAM, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1910. NO. 24.



WASHINGTON GOSSIP

To Test New Mail Device for Trains

